221 and 223 Market Street

Just Below Beale—the New Block.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.

MANUFACTURERS OF—

Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes,

211 and 213 California Street.

Safes made for church and other uses. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

SAN FRANCISCO NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

Boats and Trains will leave San Francisco as follows:

WEEK DAYS

7.00 A. M. to Denverton, from Washington street wharf, for Denverton, Fulsbaum, Santa Rosa, Cloverdale, Ukiah, Willits and way points. Saturday will arrive in San Francisco at 5 P. M. This train connects with stage at Cloverdale for Geyserville, Skaggs Springs, Stewarts Springs, Mendocino City, Kingsport and the Geysers.

4.50 P. M. for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg and way points. Connections made from Sonoma and Glen Ellen by stage at Schellville.

SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.

8.20 A. M. (Sundays only), the Denverton from Washington street wharf, for Cloverdale and way stations. Returning, will arrive in San Francisco at 6 P. M.

ARTHUR HUGHES, Gen. Manager. PETER J. MCGLYNN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD

Boats and Trains (on San Francisco as follows:

7.00 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) from Washington street Wharf, for the town of Sonoma. Glen Ellen and Way Points.

SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

8.20 A. M. Sundays only, the Denverton from Washington street wharf, for Cloverdale and way points. Round Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 Glen Ellen, $1 50.

ARTHUR HUGHES, General Manager. PETER J. MCGLYNN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt.

WOODEN MANTELS

R. HERRING,

Manufacturer of

Fine Furniture, House, Bank and Office Fitting,

405 and 407 FOURTH St., San Francisco.

DESIGNS FURNISHED '82

$5 to $200

Address Prices & Cts., Portland, Me.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

JOHN SULLIVAN,

NORTHEAST COR. OF SATTERY AND JACKSON Sts., offers to make to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS, at from.....$9 to $10 00
California Leather Boots.....$8 00
French Calf Oxford Ties.....$5 00
California.....$6 00

Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order. Persons in the country ordering Boots and Shoes to the amount of Twelve Dollars or more, will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the expense cheaper light. I sell Boots and Shoes at MY ONE MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C.O. Positively one price.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.

SANTA CLARA - - - CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of providing for young ladies an equal training in a moral and intellectual education. One feature in particular that should recommend this academy, is the influence exercised upon the pupils to views and habits of economy and to render useful members of society in after years.

The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.

Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, payable in advance.

Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once. Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding...$50 Vocal and Instrumental Music from extra charge.

French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE

SANTA CLARA,..... CALIFORNIA

This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasium, fronting on the Alameda. It possesses the complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable Cabinets of Natural History and Geology. It has Telegraphic Connection with the City of San Francisco, 37 miles distant. A new building 165x60 has just been finished, that serves nothing to be our equal.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Literary and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of Linen.....$250 00
School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Bedding, per session of ten months.....300 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.,

1a3 President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.

Conducted by the Christian Bros.

Fifth and Jackson Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING and Day School for Young Gentlemen. Its object is to unite the comforts and adequate of home with the advantages of a regular Catholic College.

Parents and guardians, desirous of sending their sons to a place where they will be safe from the evil influence of bad company, and be instructed in all the branches of a thorough English education, can rely on the most assiduous attention being bestowed in provide for the comfort of the boarders.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board and tuition (French and Spanish included), $300 00
Music, Drawing, Dancing, Gymnastics, Use of Bed and Bedding.....$50 00
Washing.....$50 00
Stationery.....$10 00
Physician's Fee.....$10 00
Physician's Fee (if required).....$10 00
Bills are presented and are payable at the close of each half session, or in advance.

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (each in advance)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Classes.....$8 00
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Classes.....$10 00
Tuition in the 5th and 6th Classes.....$12 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes.....$15 00
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Intermediate Classes.....$18 00
Music (Vocal and Instrumental), Dancing, Drawing, Private Elocution lessons, extra charges, as in Boarding School, lessons in French and Spanish are given throughout; no also in Flute and Violin.

N. B.—A private mortuary is furnished gratuitous, for the convenience of those residing in distant parts of the city.

School of the Holy Cross

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF CHARITY of the Cross, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. For terms, apply to the Sisters.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1865, AND IN 1869 placed under the Patronage of the Blessed Virgin. For further particulars apply to

THE PRESIDENT.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,

SAN LUIS OBISPO - - CALIFORNIA.

BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES, conducted by the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

For particulars address the Sister Superior of the order.

SISTER RAYMONDA CERMADILL, 3m3

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Bros.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSical course receive the degree of B.A. the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

Ample space is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our languages receive special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Use of Bed and Bedding.....10 00
Day Students.....60 00

Music and Drawing form extra charges. For further particulars address

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,

RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated (the healthiest in the pleasant) and accessible from the City by the Steamers navigating the Sacramento and Sacramento rivers. The grounds are devoted to the health and comfort of the pupils. The building is large and well adapted to the purpose. Beautiful scenery. Pupils of all permanent will be received at any time, and accommodated with board, lodging, and washing.

Pupils received at any time during the term, and will be charged from the time of their entrance. The scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five months each, the first to commence January and ends in June.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.

BOARDING PUPILS.

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$115 00
Washing.....$10 00
Use of Piano.....$10 00
Singing in class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework do not form extra charges.

DAY ACADEMY.

Terms per month, in advance.

Senior Class.....$8 00
Primary Class.....$ 00
Preparatory Class.....$ 00
Music, Guitar lessons, with use of instrument.....$ 00

Pupils for sessions be received. For further information apply to

M. M. CAMILLUS, Preceptress

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and located in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The scholastic year commences on the first Monday in August, and ends the first Thursday in June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly.)

Board and Tuition.....$
Washing.....$
Use of Bedding.....$
Use of Piano, in the Academy during recreation will be charged $20.
Drawing, Painting and Music are extra charges.
The expenses on package not to pass must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed as above.

SISTER SUPERIOR.

Convent of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary,

GILROY, - - - CALIFORNIA

BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, CONDUCTED by the religious sisters of the H. I. and I. H. of M.

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

URSULINE ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

The Fourth Annual Session begins

AUGUST, 1884.

For Prospectus and full particulars, Address

SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINES,

Santa Rosa, Cal.

BEATTY'S cases 17 stops $125. Pianos, $75. Factory running day and night. Organs free. Address Daniel Beatty, Washington, N.J.

Only One Fault.

I was riding through a country town in Vermont, when I noticed a concourse of people in the churchyard, evidently concerning an open grave.

I said:

"There is a funeral to-day."

"Yes—Stephen. He was one of the largest hearted men I ever knew. We all had something to Stephen."

"Then he added in a tone of regret: He had but one fault."

The light fell in pencil rays through the trees. I sat enjoying the refreshing coolness.

The man resumed the subject: "If he had good abilities, Stephen had. We sent him to the legislature three times. They thought of nominating him for governor. "But," he added sotto, "Stephen had one fault."

I did not answer, I was tired and watched the people slowly disperse, leaving the sexton in his military work.

"A very generous man Stephen was. Always visited the sick—he was feeling—when anyone was in trouble. The old people liked him. Even the children followed him in the streets.

"As good man indeed," said I.

"Yes, he had only one fault."

"What was that?" I asked. Intemperance!"

"Yes, somehow. He didn't seem to resist it at last. He got habited and had to drink more. His wife died on account of it, kind of disappointed. His children not had the right bringing up turned out badly. He had to leave politics. We had to let him aside from the church, and his life habits brought on paralysis, and we had to take him to the poor-house. He died there, only forty-five. None of his children were at his funeral. Poor man, he had only one fault."

The ship had only one leak, but it went down.

"Only one fault."

The temple had only one decaying pillar, but it went.

"Only one fault."

Home goes, wife lost, family ruined, honor forfeited, social and religious privilege abandoned, broken health, poverty and the poor house.

One fault—only one.

"The seats are at last beginning to recognize their anomalous position. The story I told that a Scotch clergyman at Ayre received, "(1) Lord, bless the Established Church, and the Free Church, and the United Presbyterian Church, and all the churches—Then knowest the various nicknames, Lord, by which they are called—bless them all."

—The ground will soon be broken on Sullivan Street, New York, for a new Catholic Church for Italians. It will be built by the Franciscan Fathers. St. Anthony's Church on that street must soon be abandoned, as the lease of the building has almost expired.

MONITOR MENTION.

—Dr. Charles A. Clinton, has opened a branch office at 10 Larkin street, opposite New Hall's Hotel. Office hours 7 to 9 p. m.

—Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724½ Market street.

—Best hard cocoanuts 10 cents at Smith's store 20 Post street.

—Class carpets with Chinese Washing Powder.

—C. F. Tatje, dentist, 108 Market street, corner of Ellis.

—You will not have your stomach if you drink Damiana Bitters.

—Ladies' dress with (Odorin Vita) oil. It will cure headache.

—Prepared by a lady. Adults or children for all English diseases. Antidotes Vaccinosis, 212 Pine street.

—Ladies' dress with (Odorin Vita) oil. It will cure headache.

—Ladies can obtain at San Francisco will Odorin Vita Oil. That's right. 100,000 people use it. That's right. It is a perfect cure and recommended by the medical profession. Your druggist keeps it.

—A large stock of old and new books, including history, law, medicine, poetry, and fiction may be found at Sanborn's bookstore, 536 Pacific street.

—Dean & Co. 1128 Market street. Agents for Ladies' Kid Gloves and other choice makes. Prices at 90 and 100 less than any other house. Kid gloves of every description.

—Dress Dressmaker, 804 Howard street. Measures taken at her place, or by letter. Perfection, fitting, finishing and all Household Articles. Business ladies.

—Mrs. Walker & Co., fine watches and jewelry, 1 Kearny street. Watches and clocks repaired. Orders and fancy stores.

—E. and Co. Sutter street, warranted as good as any in town. Teeth fillings, $1. Dr. Simms, Dentist, 205 Market street.

—F. M. Lyons, carpenter and builder, 453 Third street, near Bryant, Plans and office fitting and general jobbing promptly attended to.

—Wholesale Piano, at Gerard's, 532 Sutter St. Mary Joseph Joseph of Notre Dame says: "I recommend Wholesale Pianos as great class, very much of new and second hand pianos; my instalments; new organs, $60.

—The Peacock House, corner of Kearny street and Sacramento street, under the proprietorship of Mr. J. W. Decker, continues to be one of the best comfortable hotels in the city. The rates for board and room ranges from $1 50 to $2 50 per day by the week. The accommodation, attendance, and country readers will find the Peacock cheap, central and comfortable.

—The National Surgical Institute, 213 Bush Street, is the Western Division of the N. S. Institute of Indianapolis and Philadelphia, which has established for the cure of all deformities and diseases, diseases of the spine, hip, knee, and joints, crooked limbs, club feet, paralysis, and fistula. Call and see patients, and our success in the cure of spine, deformities, and diseases, and if failed.

—Mr. John Lambie, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of Ayre & Co., in the Linwood Employment Office, 20 Geary street. This firm was established in 1850 and the extensive business they have built up will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lambie who has at his command the best facilities for supplying families in the city or country with the most competent and reliable household, agricultural, mechanical or laboring help of any nationality desired by employers. Just drop a postal to John Lambie, 106 Geary street, etc., describing the kind of help required and your wants will be faithfully attended to satisfactorily.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

A Cure for Heart Disease.

Dr. Bagner Heart Tonic has been proved to be a sovereign cure in thousands of different cases. It is the opinion of an eminent physician who has made a specialty of the treatment of all diseases of the heart, that Dr. Bagner Heart Tonic is one of the most valuable remedies yet discovered for palpitation, intermittent and generated in cure any case either functional or organic. J. J. MACK & CO., Wholesale Agents, S. F., are agents for the Pacific Coast. Druggists.

—A positive cure for dyspepsia, drink Damiana Bitters.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Trade Mark. Do Every Ration.

THE BEST TONIC

PHYSICIANS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT.

This preparation, combining Iron with pure Bitters, is offered to the public as a tonic for Weak Stomachs, Want of Appetite, Indigestion, Weak Muscles, Pains and Fevers and Neuralgia. It is the most powerful tonic for Invalids, Children and Females.

It strengthens the muscles, and gives new life to the nerves.

It will not blacken the teeth, cause headache, nor produce constipation, as other Iron medicines do.

It is a complete substitute for Malaria, Chills and Fever, Intermittent Fever, Lassitude, Want of Energy, Loss of Appetite, Nervous Prostration, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and Kindred Diseases.

It is recommended by all who have used it, and to those who need a tonic it is invaluable.

Enclose 2c stamp for Lithograph Trade Card.

Prepared only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.

JOHN WIELAND - - - PROPRIETOR

SECOND STREET, NEAR POLSOM.

Amount of Beer sold in 1863, 62,013½ barrels. mr29

ROOT BEER

Is the Healthiest, Pleasantest and most Delightful Drink in the Market.

IT HAS ALL THE BEST QUALITIES OF CHAMPAGNE, and is a Temperance Drink. It is made from roots, herbs, etc., and is a most delicious and healthy beverage. Ask your grocer for it. Ask your druggist for it. Ask your druggist for it. Ask your druggist for it. Ask your druggist for it.

ST. JOHN & CO., 11 Harlan street.

TAILORS.

John Kavanagh,

MERCHANT TAILOR

6 New Montgomery Street,

PALACE HOTEL, S. F.

The Making of Clergymens' Cassocks a Specialty

N. SWEENY,

MERCHANT TAILOR

41 Second street,

Opposite Jessie street. - - - - - San Francisco

Cassocks and Clerical Clothing a Specialty.

M. FITZPATRICK

—IS—

The BOSS Tailor,

Of the Pacific Coast.

109 FOURTH STREET,

Bet. Mission and Howard. - - - - San Francisco

Every Requisite for Funerals furnished at the Lowest Rates and to the Best Manner.

THOS. FLANAGAN. M. J. GALLAGHER

FLANAGAN & GALLACHER,

UNDERTAKERS,

No. 20 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.

EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

UNITED UNDERTAKERS

—AND—

Embalming Parlors,

27 and 29 FIFTH ST.

Telephone No. 2107.

NATHANIEL GRAY. C. E. WRIGHT. J. A. CARPENTER.

N. Gray & Co.,

UNDERTAKERS,

641 Sacramento Street.

EMBALMING.

Metallic Burial Cases and Caskets

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. HENLEY'S CELERY BEEF IRON

(Vitaline Extract) Or Wonderful Nutritive and Invigorating

A FABULOUS DISCOVERY.

Worth Millions to the Human Family—Celery as a Cure.

The habitual daily use of this vegetable is much more beneficial to man than most people imagine. The writer, who is familiar with the medicinal properties of this valuable plant, has noticed on various occasions some marvelous cures effected by the use of celery. Persons who have long stretched out their heads they shook like aspen leaves, but by a moderate use of celery have become as strong as nerve as eight men. We know of many others to be cured of paralysis, and of a host of other ailments, that we received of Dr. Henley, of Portland, Oregon, a bottle of "Celery, Beef and Iron." We find that it is a fact that the ingredients of this celery, beef and iron are the very best we prescribed to be absolutely so what it is represented to be, and we feel that it is a great discovery and an invaluable remedy. We would advise our readers who are suffering from nervous prostration, or any other form of nervous debility, to procure a bottle of this celery, beef and iron. For sale by druggists. Price, $1 per bottle.

MANUFACTURED BY

TUTHILL, COX & CO.

(Successors to Dr. W. HENLEY.)

537 City Street, bet. Montgomery, and Kearny.

SAN FRANCISCO.

WHITE STAR LINE

U. S. AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS,

Between New York, Queenstown and Liverpool.

These steamers are built of the largest and fastest vessels afloat and noted for the regularity of their sailings and the speed, safety and comfort of their passengers. Steamers sail from New York every Wednesday, at 10 a. m., for Queenstown and Liverpool, as follows:

Baltic, Wednesday, Feb. 20, 10 a. m.
Adriatic, Wednesday, Feb. 27, 10 a. m.
Celtic, Wednesday, March 5, 10 a. m.
Baltic, Wednesday, March 12, 10 a. m.

For other dates and further information apply at the office, 1 Broadway, New York.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST.

IS OPENED AT ELEGANT, MARON STREET, 320 Post street, Pacific Coast, with its former Faculty and courses of instruction.

RAZORS!

FOR $1,000

I WILL MAKE A BETTER RAZOR AND MORE OF them in the same time that any man IN THE WORLD

My own make guaranteed.....$2 5
My Guard Razors warranted not to cut the beard while shaving.....$ 1
My Gold English Razors.....1 00
Best English Razors.....1 50

Sent C. O. D. to any address.

M. PRICE,

415 Kearny Street.

Grinding and Repairing.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,

PRINCIPAL OFFICE,

648 MARKET STREET.

BRANCHES,

1152 Market and 212 Dupont Sts.

LAUNDRY,

12th St., bet. Folsom and Howard, S. F. Cal

DANIEL SHEERIN,

STONE AND MARBLE YARD,

Cor. Broderick and Ellis Sts.,

Contractor for

IRISH INFLUENCE IN AMERICAN PROGRESS.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

America lasted longer, Ireland, like the colonies, would have achieved independence. She was encumbered by England as one of the colonies in the Rebellion) and every battle won in America by the rebels, native and foreign, illuminated the Irish hill-top and forest from the towers some consecutive night. The history of Ireland and the history of the colonies was blended during the Revolution.

IRELAND WAS THE ONLY ALLY AMERICA HAD FROM THE BEGINNING:

the progress of her struggle was watched with anxious solicitude and its triumph was hailed with the wildest joy. The interest of Ireland in the cot-zone was not merely that of hope for her own independence, it was the interest of reason and hope.

For more than a century before the breaking out of the Revolution the Irish race had been harrying in a thick and increasing tide the colonies. The numerical magnitude of the emigration it will never be possible to ascertain. That it began as early as 1640 is indisputable; that it became more and more copious is certain. Whether the emigrant, actuated by a generous impulse, was sold to planters not yet in possession of the land, whether he was transported by the man-hunt with one of the numerous bands of kidnapping agents, or whether he was induced by the terms offered by trafficking agents of New England ministers who were in urgent need of labor; or whether he voluntarily assented to hard to seek in the colonies the bread and earth, of sustenance, denied him there by that broken law which made colonial trade and industry, chilling commerce, and stunning labor manufacture,—in whatever way he reached the colonies, he disembarked a jaded bearer of hatred of the tyrant, of constitution; and in Irish immigration there was no harassment for American Tory

The economist Anderson, who was engaged upon a library on the colonies when he heard of the skirmishes of Concordville, declared that for colonies possessing part of colonial interests augmented the growth of the population, he thought the virtues of the climate and soil of America, in comparison, were nothing. He contended that the population of the colonies, which in 1700 was about 200,000, and that between that and 1800 there had been a population added to it. From unquestionable data it will hardly be disputed that the climate, fertility and colonial antipathy, the Irish in America, at the time of the Revolution, have been far below 10,000. But the Revolution Acts of 1829, applicable to Ireland and the Irish, had not yet passed the statute of the one man; and therefore, for a considerable, the political influence of the Irish was comparatively slight from England, one accession of Irish to the American population followed England. It is certain that of many tens of thousands of the Irish people who without which no commanding force and of the British constitution in Ireland, may be depicted the power of the Irish people in the colonies. Indeed, it does became the conviction of the British people and (the indeed that is early as 1676 to assist the families imprisoned by the King Philip war. It was an Irishman who was president of the society for "Propagating the Propagation of the Gospel in New England" in 1677 to Robert Boyle was Irish and an "Hibernian" was one of the trustees and subscribers of the Christian-Indian Society. It was an Irishman who has that, in the city of Cork, William Penn, had supply such comfort to the British constitution. He assisted an embroidery (then which Lord Bacon) by his prior service, the amount of money that annually exported from this country is at least five million dollars. In 1851, when there were several million less of the race here than there are now, the amount exported was the enormous sum of nine hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds. Two million dollars is a low estimate for the yearly remittance from Ireland to the relatives and friends of the Irish in America must have deprived the Irishmen and their children of at least two hundred million dollars to pay rent, tax and support the British constitution in Ireland. The property secured to the Irish States, should have remained in the United States, if it is a just tax. Five million dollars a year is a cruel and unjust burden for the British constitution to lay upon Irish labor in the United States. It will probably be better for Ireland and England if the Irish people given therefore, and to remove the cause of poverty in Ireland, and the poverty of Irish publicist.

IRELAND SENT A THOUSAND POUNDS TO THE NEW ENGLAND PURITANS

These fastidious persons who complain of Irish agitation in the United States should show more reasonableness if they attached their sympathy to the cause of the Irish people. It may be of more importance to them that the Irish people should have less to say about the affairs of Ireland, than that the agitation should be made to the British people, and that the labor of a portion of their fellow-citizens should be taxed to pay a pirate's toll to a foreign government; that they may as well make up their minds to this simple truth: the Irish race will continue agitation, in whatever part of the world its people may be found, until Ireland shall have achieved its national independence. And the race will employ, in the phrase of Mr. Gladstone, all the resources of civilization to that end. The agitation does no harm to the American Republic. A tax of five million dollars a year sent from the American Republic to Ireland is a substantial injury to the Republic. Let the action of Irish agitation in the United States contemplate the serious injury and pay with their fellow-Americans of Irish origin in repairing the injury. The material interests of the Republic imperatively require the expulsion of the British government from Ireland, in order that the latter may cease to be a burden upon the United States.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE LEAGUE IN THE UNITED STATES

is a positive Americanizing influence and subordinate to the Republic, because it helps to remove the effects of English misrule and the prejudices, thereby increasing their usefulness as American citizens. Let us examine for a moment the political and social ideas the native of Ireland has gained from the British constitution. He has learned from that symbol of Anglo-Saxon Christianity that it is the duty of every man to hate his fellow-man, to fear God, if his fellow-man's religious convictions differ from his; and that it is his right, if he have the power, to deprive his fellow-man of liberty, property, and life, on account of that difference. The Irish National League brings face to face the Protestant and the Catholic, and all others, in the name of their motherland, and teaches them to live together in harmony, and to adopt in stead the principle of toleration and brotherhood. The British constitution has taught the Irishman that adamantine hate has taught his fellow-man in order to source his ascension. In the Irish National League that infamous doctrine is repudiated, and its members learn to value education as a right pertaining to every member of the human family. The British constitution has taught the Irishman that the Irishman is a dog and a mean a claim upon the respect of his fellows, and that the Irishman being is born with a hereditary right to the labor of his fellow-man. The British constitution has taught the Irishman that labor is base, degrading, ignoble. The National League teaches him that labor is the noblest thing on earth, and that the laborer has the first right to live of the results of his labor. The British constitution has taught him that childhood has no rights and old age no sacredness, for he has constantly seen infancy and naked into the kitchen, youth condemned to ignorance and unrewarded toil, and tottering age left to die on highways, or treated like felons in workhouses. The National League insists on the rights of childhood and the sacredness of old age

Poetry.

THE SUPPER OF ST. GREGORY.

A tale of Roman exiles to tell
To enclose, night-worn travellers still,
Who passed beneath the majestic roof
Of Gregory on the Celian Hill.

One day before the month came down
A league, stretching empty palms,
Fainting and fast sick, in the lame
Of the Most Holy asking alms.

And the monk answered: "All I have
In the pouch and jug of wine I give.
The silver cup my mother gave,
In Christ's name take them it, and live.

Years passed, and, called at a by hour
The pastoral crook and keys of Rome,
The poor monk in St. Peter's chair,
And the covered lord of Christendom.

"Prepare a feast," St. Gregory said,
"And let twelve beggars come to sup,
And beggars enter, and not children,
As someone it was he spoke, with the cup."

"I asked this feast," the Pontiff spake,
"To strengthen but if need be idlers,
I bid the wretches, for the sake
Of Him who bade the Lord and maker."

Amazed at such a feast the servant ran,
Like Ely who on Gennesaret wed,
Or Elijah on where the Chebrons stand,
Where form was the Son of God.

"Know ye, then," he said, "my gift of old?"
"Why, I have but twelve," said he,
The Pontiff marvelled to behold,
Once more his gaze upon the cup.

"Thy prayers and alms have risen, and blessed
Thy family, and the flower of heaven,
Thy cup, and thy cup, and thy alms,
Whatever thou asked shall be given."

My master, said the Pontiff, Gregory hid
With his twelve guests in make amend
Prayer on behalf of God's poor child with the
Their eyes of fish and sent the Lord.

The old time passed by and the Year was the Pontiff, Gregory, Fled,
Telling it day and year again
On your Passion's fastened wall.

Literary Miscellany.

Rose of Cercelle.

A JUVENILE CATHOLIC STORY IN THREE CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER II.

And God did not forget the solemn promise he had made in that moment of danger. Not only did he disconcerted his foes in the public court, but he gradually withdrew from the society of his former friends and companions of Madame Bouvier with his family. As he no longer neglected his work, he earned more money, and Jane's old clothing was laid aside for five dresses procured had paid the poor woman; her now, and that two bright red roses bloomed on her pale cheeks.

"I will go home and wait and pray," said Jean Jane to herself. "God knows what I best."

Four years passed and Rose was seventeen. Ah! how peacefully the time had flown! Rose was happy and happier than the preceding one, for each as it passed away left positive record of its flight. Rose was not, but not remarkably so, and she was so beautiful as the flower whose name she bore.

At this time the husband's father died after a short illness. The poor old grandmother was left to the care of Rose for all her other children were far away.

Ambrose begged her to come and live with him, but the proud woman refused. She was too old a tree to transplant, she said. Or, if she was to be cut down, she would prefer the stump of her native hill to Versailles. Also her health required incessant care.

The two cottages were situated at some little distance from each other, ten minutes walk or so, and Jean Jane could visit the aged woman frequently in the course of the day. But her could also be left alone at night or for a few hours, if Jane could with safety go to sleep and neglect her charge? As and grew, the time for the difficulty, Jean and listened to her parent's conversation on the subject and the said quite simply but firmly:

"Father, dear, don't worry about grandmother! I will go and live with her and take care of her."

The aged dame had not known what to say; he hesitated between his love for his old mother, and his deep affection for his child. Jane was afraid that Rose was not strong enough for though better than the true four years ago, then symptoms which had despaired her mother still remained.

But Rose laughed at her tears and persuaded her father that she would be and most could possibly be so good.

The poor dame consented, though unwillingly, and Rose went to her grandmother's. Jean was left alone with joy in him the she told that Rose was coming to live with her.

"Did Ambrose propose it?" she asked of her daughter-in-law.

"No, mother, it was the child herself who fastened upon it."

And so Rose took up her abode in the little cross nest her grandmother's roof, and she within call at night.

"Come hither, child," said the aged woman when after placing in order the few necessaries she had brought with her, Rose came into the usual sitting-room. "Come hither, child, and let me tell you that you have gladdened the only wish I had left unsatisfied. But I shall not take advantage of your affection. I do not wish the last of your bright youth be passed by the bed-side of a sick old woman. I will make haste and die soon to set you free."

"Oh grandmother! how can you talk so?"

"Do you hear, Ambrose? She scolds me already."

"She is right, mother; why speak of dying?"

"God disposes of us, my son; when He wills, I shall be ready to go to Him. Now, Rose, you are mistress here. My cottage and everything in it is yours. I have there in that cottage two pieces of fine linen. You can begin to make your trousseau."

"My trousseau, grandmother?"

"That's a good idea, mother," said the smith. "She is seventeen, and is a year or so was most think of marrying her. Must we not, Rose?"

The girl appeared not to have heard the question, for she only replied

"I shall stay with my grandmother until she dies, and then I shall belong to the husband of my choice."

The task which Rose had undertaken was neither rough nor difficult, but it required great care and patience, for, like all aged persons, Mrs. Dervier was exacting, rough, we must say, unwittingly.

She wished her grandaughter to be comfortable, and yet she could not help showing what a pleasure it was to have her about her in her room. So Rose only left her for a short time in the day to take the fresh air which was absolutely necessary for her.

When the weather was fine, Rose and the old lady sat together in the garden. Now the garden was rather large for the size of the cottage to which it belonged, and was cultivated with care. It had been her grandfather's delight to have plenty of the vegetables and flowers, and Rose did all she could to keep them in order. There was one spot, however, which claimed her special care. At the end of a path, between two large trees, towering above them was a beautiful gentle pillar, upon which was a statue of the Madonna. Around the pedestal of this statue Rose had planted her choicest flowers, and on a bench in the shade she and her grandmother passed the summer afternoons.

For half an hour or so she would read aloud; but when the old lady fell asleep, she would recite her beads, or sat gazing in meditation on the image of the Virgin Queen.

All the neighbors around knew that Rose loved flowers, and they gave her seeds and roots to plant in her garden. But Rose had gathered with her most abundant harvest from the garden of a rich farmer of Cercelle, their nearest neighbor. In fact, their gardens were only divided by a hedge.

Now the farmer had a son named Charles aged twenty-two, who not only admired Rose's flowers but Rose herself. He knew that she was good as she was beautiful, and rightly judged that a dutiful daughter would make an affectionate wife. So he brought more and more flowers to the foot of the statue.

He father perceived that Charles was much attracted in the garden than in the fields, and that a large opening had been made in the hedge exactly opposite the bench of the Madonna. Jean, and, to tell it, a beautiful lily which he had seen that morning in his own garden was now lifting its graceful head and its delicate bell-shaped flower, that looked down upon it from the top of the pedestal.

"Oh! oh!" said the farmer to himself, "now I understand my son's new fancy for flowers. But it is not likely in particular that he is fond of, nor indeed, nor cousins, it is the Virgin Queen to whom he is bending her mother in household duties. He is a good young man, and I wonder if there were times when her mother's worldly eye perceived that the gloomy was formed, and, in fact, the young man's affection was reciprocated. Well, I shall find out, and if it is so, I shall not oppose it."

It was not that a large half reported to him that Jane discovered her little daughter's case and her constant meditations.

"What are you great thinking of, child?"

"Of God and the angels, mother."

"Of God and the angels, mother."

"Of God and the angels, mother."

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1884.

Some Meaningless Cant About "Modern Catholicism."

Last week a friend called our attention to an editorial under the caption of "Topics of the Time" in the current issue of the Century magazine, and he inasmuch as the writer thereof represents a large class of intelligent people outside the Catholic Church, we think it both interesting and profitable to our readers to apply the rule of truth and logic to the article in question in order to discern how difficult it is for non-Catholics to write correctly with truth whenever they undertake to instruct the Church as to what course she should pursue in order to please the Protestant element and to keep abreast of the times in what is fashionably known as nineteenth century progress.

The editor of the Century is of the opinion that the recent celebration of Luther's anniversary has developed a taste for historical study, and that it has also opened the eyes of thinking people to the fact that Luther was only a factor in the Reformation, and not the sole prime cause thereof. The facts developed during the recent celebration "have made it plain," says the Century, "to multitudes that many political and intellectual causes had been long conspiring to bring on the crisis of which he was the hero." This is an admission which few greatnesses of the mediæval class of Congregationalists, Methodists, and Presbyterians will admit, as they are so dazed in their hero-worship that they have become demented in their ideas concerning the true worth of admiration in Luther.

The writer in the Century next presents his opinions concerning the Catholic Church, and here is where he gets into a hopeless tangle from which it is impossible to extricate himself.

"It is known," says the Century, "by most of the adherents of Leo XIII. that the Church of Christ of this day and of this century is a very different Church from that of which Gregory Nazianzen, Leo XIII. is for most country and kind of "man" in the world about this Church, who unanimously proclaimed him; that in Leo's letter, he has nothing to say of the Church which Christ founded, and which, in the Gospels, he is represented as promising to be with us all days."

Is it not somewhat strange that this so-called "knowledge" should be confined to "the religious of Leo," who form but a very small and insignificant fraction of the "modern Catholic world? What wizard-like subtle discovery that the Catholic Church had departed from her well-known "Gospel-mandate" by what course of reasoning—or from what "unknown source—have the "religious of Leo" discovered that the Church founded by our Lord—and with which he promised to abide forever—was not so perfect when He formed it as modern centuries ago as it is this month when the Century thinks it meets that it is "a very different Church from that out of which Luther went"? Assertion is not proof, and until the "religious of Leo" point the wizard-like cause the Church of to-day differs from the Church founded by our Divine Redeemer, and also the world's Redeemer, and also the world's Redeemer vanished. His promise—will have to consider in the merest "cant" any ordinary non-Catholics may make upon what they call "modern Catholicism."

The "religious of Leo" are very likely to be the sworn enemies of Pope Leo X., hence their assertions against him being of no value, their prejudice against the papacy and their passionate love for Luther—their evidence is not likely to possess any very powerful influence upon an impartial public. By virtue of the exalted office Pope Leo X. became the target at which all the enemies of his age were leveled, because he was the reigning Pontiff when the Reformation made rebels out of obedient Religious, and proud apostates out of humble priests. Every changeling who desired to prevaricate a reason for his apostacy, or to his faith, polished the falsifying finger of scorn at the then reigning Pontiff and said: "Behold the cause!" In this way the character of Pope Leo X. has come down to us encased with the slime of vipers whose victims lunge much deep into the breast of the Pontiff than the wounds inflicted on him by the bows. Detraction of the Vicar of Christ was a ready passport into the friendly graces of the Reformers. Luther had the ear in this respect, and all the pack of parrots that followed in his wake pulped their epaulets.

Of all that pertained to the plant-lands of spiritual power as the Vicar of Christ, Pope Leo X. possessed every single family designated by the Son of God to St. Peter, as was possessed by his predecessor. Almighty God did not give even to the chosen Apostles the same qualities of mind and heart, but he endowed us from all spiritual graces which were unknown to other mortals. And as it has ever been in the long line of Pontiffs in His Church, not one of whom has ever written a word, which the Church pronounced to be false, from the divine Pontiff entrusted to their keeping. It is more cant, therefore, for Protestants to think they make a point against the Catholic Church by drawing invidious comparisons between the Pontiffs of the Church, as they might as well try to establish the fact that the deduction of one of the Apostles militated against the perfection of Christianity. Hence the Century's comparison between the Tenth and the Thirteenth Leo possesses no importance to entitle it to further consideration.

The assertion that "a constant reformation in discipline, if not in doctrine, has been going on in the Church," is half true and half false. Of course it will not require a great amount of erudition to be convinced that it requires more "discipline" to regulate the spiritual duties and the temporalities of 300,000,000 of Christians embracing every nation in the whole world, than it did to govern the first Christians when the walls of Jerusalem encircled the whole faithful in the fold of Christ. Hence the Century has added nothing to the world's stock of knowledge by this piece of prudery. But when that magazine says that "a reformation in doctrine" has been going on within the Church it blasphemously intimates that Almighty God left His Church imperfect, and that the creature man can bring to perfection a work which the Creator God had left unfinished! The absurdity—to say nothing of the blasphemy—of such a proposition might be somewhat developed by the inmate of a mad-house, but coming from the intellectual head of an American magazine, it only shows how truth-blind men become when they view the Church of Christ through Protestant spectacles!

It is somewhat singular with what tenacity those who know little or nothing about the Catholic Church, cling to the false idea that they are capable of rebuilding and reforming her so as to make her perfect in all her parts. The Century, however, is not at all abashed by the paucity of its information concerning the Catholic Church, as it proceeds after this fashion:

"Doubtless, there is still much that needs to be changed, in this every Roman Catholic will assent.

There are a million of "intelligent" Roman Catholics in the Eastern States, and we challenge the Century to produce a dozen practical Catholics within a radius of a hundred miles of New York who will assent to the assertion over their own signatures. This author method of injecting Catholic aspirations into false propositions is neither new nor creditable to non-Catholic controversialists, but it is done for the purpose of strengthening a falling fabric by stealing Catholic timber to support it. What constitutes an "intelligent" Catholic? In this whose education causes him to be constantly criticising and carping against the Church of Christ, or is it not rather one who fulfils his duty of knowing, loving, and serving God; this life so as to be happy with Him in a next? True "intelligence" has the power to make saints, while false "intelligence" plunged Lucifer and his allies into the everlasting fire of hell. There is a good deal of "cant" in the world about this factor called "intelligence," and non-Catholic writers seem to forget that it was a gift from God to man so that he might comprehend His omipotence and His works with greater scope and reverence.

Intelligence was not given to man for the purpose of having him deny God's existence: that he might pick flaws in the firmament of God's glory, or cause him to set up idols in place of the Creator God. Regarding divorce laws are based upon the sophistry of our Blessed Saviour, while the separation of man and wife, the consequent destruction of the family, and the demoralization of society—are the sole results of that system of religious error which outcropped in the much-vaunted Reformation.

Here again the note must turn to the true vocation of Christian faith to save them of the leprosy of sin engendered through their disobedience. "Come to Me all you that labor and are heavy burdened and I will refresh you," says the Church of God to all who are sick of sectarianism and other systems of religious chaos, but first cleanse yourself in the healing waters of baptism so that you may enter into the body of Christ pure and undefiled.

The writer in the Century next returns to his pet proposition for "unity" after this manner of reasoning:

"In spite of all true practical and sentimental agreements, there are still vast differences between the Roman Church and the Reformed. Differences that reason cannot entertain, and that good feeling cannot set aside. There never can be unity between these separated Churches while these differences take place in the beliefs of each, and compose them. Is there any prospect of such change? Is there any Protestant people who would consent to return to their principles so binder than from intellectual obedience, or any Roman Catholic people who would consent to accept that the identity and unity of the Church of Christ, and to put the emphasis upon those elements of character about which they can be in entire unity. But what can be said of the Roman Catholic Church, which, in the Nineteenth Century, and all its traditions, irreformable on the fatal assertion that it is the only religion of Christ, Papists and of bigoted Protestants; but it is safe to predict that the Roman Catholic Church will see reasonably resist the light of science and the spirit of the age, and that it will not do it. Yet all these influences already; it is sure to feel them and be moved by them.

The writer of the foregoing sentiments has evidently lost sight of the fact that Almighty God is perfect in all His works, and we also fain to understand that a religious system which is subject to "any changes which increasing light may require," is nothing more than a human system of error by which no man's salvation could ever be secure. "Thou art Peter," said our Blessed Redeemer, "and upon this Rock I will build My Church," showing thereby that change is not impossible in His Church, for the reason that it was a perfect Church on an indestructible foundation from the first moment of its formation by the Divine Will of God. On the other hand, those sects formulated by spoiled monks, lascivious monarchs, and religious cranks of all grades of incontinency, are so many weather-vanes upon the face of the world which are blown forward or backward according as the wind of man's whim listeth. With such overshadowing systems of human wickedness the Church of God can have no fellowship, or they never so loudly for help or they disappear in the darkness of Materialism with which they have enveloped themselves.

Another very silly idea which seems to possess many otherwise intelligent non-Catholic writers is that possible impression that the Bible is known only to American Catholics! The Century, in this respect, is as blind as the average less enlightened preachers who pervert truth because above are paid the wages of sin. The Century says:

"Many of the Roman Catholics in this country have the Bible in their hands; it is not denied them, and there is light by which to read it."

This is certainly the sense of ridiculous nonsense, and we are sure when assured that an American magazine should printout the Papacy, nor Calvinism, nor Trinitarianism, nor any other secondary Christian dogma that is open to trial. It is the main question whether there is any such thing as religion—whether there is a creation God, and a life beyond the grave, and a free will and a moral law. There is no difference between Protestants and Roman Catholics stand together; and their agreement, so far as it goes, ought to be recognized and emphasized."

This constantly recurring desire for "union" with the Church of Rome shows how thoroughly the world is in the Protestant sects. After three hundred years they find the garden of sectarianism choked up with weeds, the fruit of infidelity, they next look over into the well-kept pastures of the Catholic Church, from which all the weeds are cast out, and they ask help to purify the ground which has become covered with tares and thistles because it had not the founder of Christianity to cultivate it. Protestantism has ceases to be scared at the monstrous growth of Materialism and the abortive of Agnosticism which it has introduced into the world, but the Church of God is not distressed by the poisonous weeds of Protestant propagation. She is ever willing to take sheep and lambs into her fold, but they must be first purified before they can enter. She is truly "the way, the truth, and the life," hence she can never compromise her Creator by cohabiting with religious error. "He who is not with Me is against Me," says our Blessed Redeemer, and the Church says the same to those sectarians who are continually sighing for a loan of the Catholic cross. The Century, therefore, need not flatter itself that there will be any veiling process in the present or in the future by which the Church will compromise with falsehood or the angel of truth join hands with the angel of darkness. The millenarians will disappear before such an impossible state of affairs can be consummated, as there can be but one Church of Christ—one fold and one shepherd—in the world so long as this world shall last.

One of the phases of the difference between the Catholic Church and the Reformed is that the Church has presented by the Century:

"In certain matters of discipline, vitally affecting the life of the family and society, Protestant Christianity has been compelled to follow the Roman Church, and to accept laws high ground. The Roman Catholic marriage and position respecting marriage has been adopted in the law of the New Testament than those of the Reformed churches have been. There is an increasing effort at the present time to bring the practice of the Protestant churches into a little nearer to the Roman Catholic standard. In contending against the Mormons, both the Catholic Protestants and Catholics are stand together."

The writer is only half-hearted in his study of the Catholic Church. The reserve of "religious of Luther" is very apparent in every paragraph. The Catholic Church not only "takes high ground" in all that pertains to the family and society, but she commands with the authoritative voice of God. Regarding divorce her laws are based upon the sophistry of our Blessed Saviour, while the separation of man and wife, the consequent destruction of the family, and the demoralization of society—are the sole results of that system of religious error which outcropped in the much-vaunted Reformation.

Here again the note must turn to the true vocation of Christian faith to cure them of the leprosy of sin engendered through their disobedience. "Come to Me all you that labor and are heavy burdened and I will refresh you," says the Church of God to all who are sick of sectarianism and other systems of religious chaos, but first cleanse yourself in the healing waters of baptism so that you may enter into the body of Christ pure and undefiled.

The writer in the Century next returns to his pet proposition for "unity" after this manner of reasoning:

"In spite of all true practical and sentimental agreements, there are still vast differences between the Roman Church and the Reformed. Differences that reason cannot entertain, and that good feeling cannot set aside. There never can be unity between these separated Churches while these differences take place in the beliefs of each, and compose them. Is there any prospect of such change? Is there any Protestant people who would consent to return to their principles so binder than from intellectual obedience, or any Roman Catholic people who would consent to accept that the identity and unity of the Church of Christ, and to put the emphasis upon those elements of character about which they can be in entire unity. But what can be said of the Roman Catholic Church, which, in the Nineteenth Century, and all its traditions, irreformable on the fatal assertion that it is the only religion of Christ, Papists and of bigoted Protestants; but it is safe to predict that the Roman Catholic Church will see reasonably resist the light of science and the spirit of the age, and that it will not do it. Yet all these influences already; it is sure to feel them and be moved by them.

The writer of the foregoing sentiments has evidently lost sight of the fact that Almighty God is perfect in all His works, and we also fain to understand that a religious system which is subject to "any changes which increasing light may require," is nothing more than a human system of error by which no man's salvation could ever be secure. "Thou art Peter," said our Blessed Redeemer, "and upon this Rock I will build My Church," showing thereby that change is not impossible in His Church, for the reason that it was a perfect Church on an indestructible foundation from the first moment of its formation by the Divine Will of God. On the other hand, those sects formulated by spoiled monks, lascivious monarchs, and religious cranks of all grades of incontinency, are so many weather-vanes upon the face of the world which are blown forward or backward according as the wind of man's whim listeth. With such overshadowing systems of human wickedness the Church of God can have no fellowship, or they never so loudly for help or they disappear in the darkness of Materialism with which they have enveloped themselves.

Another very silly idea which seems to possess many otherwise intelligent non-Catholic writers is that possible impression that the Bible is known only to American Catholics! The Century, in this respect, is as blind as the average less enlightened preachers who pervert truth because above are paid the wages of sin. The Century says:

"Many of the Roman Catholics in this country have the Bible in their hands; it is not denied them, and there is light by which to read it."

This is certainly the sense of ridiculous nonsense, and we are sure when assured that an American magazine should printout

THE MONITOR.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1884.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES.

MR. T. J. KINSELLA will visit during the next week the following priests in Alameda county on the interest of the Monitor: San Leandro, San Lorenzo, Hayward, Pleasanton, Dublin, Sunol, Alvarado and Livermore.

MR. JNO. P. EAGAN will visit each and every house and other place in Oakland, Alameda and Contra Costa in the interest of the Monitor.

We ask our friends to treat these gentlemen when these gentlemen call on us and to disappoint them. Any favors extended to them will be duly appreciated.

DECISIONS OF ROMAN CONGREGATIONS.

Stations of the Cross.

I. DUBIUM—Utrum ad stationes Via Crucis ante a diu.

The following important question has been submitted to the Sacred Congregation of Rites by the Bishop of Perigueux:

Can the Indulgences attached to the Stations of the Cross be gained more than once on the same day, that is, as often as the devout exercise is repeated?

The Sacred Congregation answered: That from the documents in their possession it does not appear likely that it can.

Ex decretis non constat Indulgentias pro pia exercitia Viae Crucis semel tantum lucrari quotiam profanum piam exercitium iterantur.

Roma 16 Jan. C. Ind., 1883.

II. STRAND EDICTUOUS MAIN COUNTS.

The General of the Order of Friars Minors, being convinced from an "Instruction" which appeared in the Acta Sanctae Sedis, that many Stations of the Cross must have been illegally erected, and that the Indulgences will be in re-erecting them, and the consequent loss of the Indulgences, and the Indulgences, and the Holy Seat to make good all defects which, up to the present time, have been committed in the erection of the Stations of the Cross.

Rome on the Feast of the Purification, 1883.

Fr. Jerome Gigli, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites.

Fr. Jerome Gigli, Secretary.

Fr. Jerome Gigli, Secretary.

Fr. Jerome Gigli, Secretary

A MILLIONAIRE'S RISE.

John W. Mackay's Jump from the Position of Bartender to that of a Bonanza King.

Among the numbers of men who have leaped from comparative poverty and obscurity in this country, in the past half century, says the Louisville Courier Journal, none stand out more prominently than John W. Mackay, the California millionaire, who is now living in Paris. His name is known all over the continent, and the vast project of laying another cable across the Atlantic, bringing the other continents into instantaneous connection with ours, with which he is so greatly identified, brings him before the world again. To them he is, with his career during the last few years and inventing his immense wealth and splendid surroundings, it seems almost miraculous that, within the memory of comparatively young men he was poor and obscure, without a dollar in the world. Although much has been written and told about him, but few persons are acquainted with his early life, and the fact that he was once a resident of this city has never been made public. As a reporter was passing down Main street, yesterday, in a gentleman standing on the corner of Twelfth street remarked: "Yes sir; that building over there, pointing to the house on the north-west corner of Twelfth and Main. Upon the reporter's replying in the affirmative, he continued: "I suppose it would surprise a number of people to know that Mackay once lived there, a saloon. The story was not generally known, as he was not a man of wide acquaintance, and when he left the city he thought of him died out. Of those who used to drink drinks from his hands across the counter, but few recognized him in his new splendor.

"Along about 1849 Mackay came to this city in company with one or two others in search of employment. He was a young man, strong, active, and willing to work at almost anything that would afford him a good living. An old two story frame building stood there on the corner, and the front room had been used as a saloon. The proprietor closed up a few months before, however, and the building was left vacant for a season. Mackay had some little money, and on the location was favorable, he resolved to start a bar-room there. He made a bargain with the proprietor and secured the place, opening up shortly a very large, for the room and its fixtures would be in strong contrast with the saloons of the present day, with their gilded counters and fancy bar posts. The walls were covered with a simple coat of white paint and the counter was a long narrow one made of pine-boards. Behind it was a shelf on which set some bottles and glasses. His coming was not taken much notice of, and many of his friends were taxed to inquire who he was, or from whence he came. He was an energetic and industrious man, and he soon had his business on a paying basis, and his short figure and ruddy face could be seen at all times behind his bar. He soon built up a very good trade, but he was not exactly what would be, it was evident that he was not intended for a bar-tender, his manners, his conversation, his, so to speak, his general deportment, would not allow him to turn up.

"The long-looked for day finally arrived, and he started for California. Hide exploring then came about because so full to his feet was awaiting him. In 1849 the gold fever was at its height, and every day emigrants were hurried for the Pacific coast to reap the harvest of gold which they expected so awaiting them. Mackay was one of the first persons in this city to be infected with the fever, and he endeavored to induce a number of friends to go with him. A party of about twenty-five was finally made up, and he was one of the leaders in it. He said his property interests were small at that time, and that was the best heard of him until he journeyed through the plains of California.

"I was," said the gentleman, "in California at the time of his arrival there, and watched his career with considerable interest. His first partnership was with Flood and O'Brien, and they were very fast friends. They were at that time keeping a saloon in the Bonanza and Mackay worked in the saloon. The two dabbled a little in stocks in the California and the Consolidated Virginia, and he worked in both of them. He was a very shrewd man, tolerably well educated, and had some little knowledge of civil engineering. He clearly saw that money invested in the stock of other of those mines was sure to bring good results, and every dollar he could save was invested in that way. All his business Flood and O'Brien went in with him, and the three purchased stock in 20 a share. Soon afterward it rose to $7, and gradually increased to $12. In the meantime the excitement was great, and almost before they knew it they were wealthy men. Mackay then lived in a frame house on Sutter street, and his figure became a familiar one to the frequenters of the place.

"He was not married then, but not the slight attention he paid to the young lady. This is itself is a little romance and illustrates his character. Some time before he became acquainted with her and was the daughter of Major Hungerford of New Orleans. Hungerford's family had moved to Nevada City, where her husband died soon afterward. He was a poor man and left his wife and children in rather destitute circumstances. Mackay heard of them some months later, and started a subscription for the widow's benefit, contributing liberally himself. He was then worth millions. He sent the widow's heart that she should come to this city to have her children. The two young and pretty with a delicate face and charming ways, had captured Mackay's most susceptible heart, and she was quite one and of short duration, and soon the pretty widow found her married with his. Mackay was then a rich man, but he kept widening his field of action, and in connection with Flood, O'Brien and Fair, he established the Nevada bank, and Louis McLaine went from Baltimore to manage it. Since that Mackay's career has been familiar to almost every reader. Unlike the majority of men he does not forget his friends, and he has kept Flood, O'Brien and Fair in good positions. He is a member of the Catholic church, and helped to establish an orphan asylum for the children of that denomination in Nevada, to which he still contributes. He is always ready to give for charity's sake, and is affable in public and courteous to everybody.

—A Baltimore clergyman, in the north of Europe attended recently a lecture description from some evening entertainment, he asked him to remain for the night. At dark the clergyman added, he went to my room the same, while he were orders to have his conversation with the stranger, in the other entered the room, the clergyman's wife asked him if he had for her husband, and, noting the point blank which was in the lady's face, brought the full weight of his shoulders, emphatically: "I take that for asking me why I married a drunkard."

—The sale of an article in the adoption in of merits. Dandelion Bitters have large sales.

—Un Chinese Washing Powder.

BOOKS BOUGHT AND SOLD, AT A. DOUBOUCH'S 1006 Montgomery street.

The Spanish Cathedrals.

The Spanish Cathedrals are the admiration of travellers, who are surprised to learn that the names of their architects are unknown. No one knows the name of the architect of the famous Cathedral of Seville, built in 1440. Count Montalembert says: "The immortal cathedrals had their plans drawn by men of genius, who disdained to leave to their names, they did for God and their brethren too much to love glory." Hence, too, that cry of noble sorrow—"How is it that in hearts so humble there is so proud a genius! Frederick O'Zanam, Professor of History in the University of Paris, and the founder of the Society of St. Vincent of Paul, standing in the chapel of Our Blessed Lady, in the Cathedral of Burgos, (founded by St. Ferdinand in 1238,) exclaims: "O Blessed Lady of Burgos, Queen of all Catholic cities; yes, truly, thou art all beautiful and greatest—public or of dawn. Since the sole thought of thee drew down grace and beauty into these works of man, Barbarians rushed forth from their forests, and seemed like incendiaries made only to destroy; but thou didst render them so docile that they bowed their heads and yoked themselves to chariots heavily laden, and become obedient to sweet chanters to thy name. Thou didst render them so patient, that they did not accost the sculptor spent in chiselling arabesque porticoes, galleries and spires for thee. Then didst render them so bold, that their boldness soared in height far beyond the loftiest monuments of the Romans, and at the same time so chaste, that those mighty creations, peopled with saints, breathe naught but the purity of immaterial love. Then didst conquer with the pride of those haughty peoples, who abhorred labor as much as of serfdom; then didst disarm many hands that knew no glory save in shedding blood; instead of a sword thou didst give them a trowel and a chisel, and then didst sustain them for three hundred years in thy fields of peaceful labor. O Notre Dame! how nobly has God rewarded the humility of thy handmaid! In return for the poor house of Nazareth, where thou didst lodge His Son, what magnificent abodes He has given thee!"

INSURANCE.

FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE

UNION INSURANCE COMPANY
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS,
ESTABLISHED IN 1861.
Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.
CAL. H CAPITAL.....$750,000 GOLD.
PAID SATISFACTORY SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES, SOLID SECURITY.

DIRECTORS:
SAF FRANCISCO:
R. Bryant, Nicholas Landa,
Jas. Phelan, John Parrott,
Moses Heller, James Moffat,
J. Ralston, J. Rosenfeld,
M. G. Cohen, M D Sherman,
J. Sachsen, Ignacio Sanchez,
Daniel Meyer, Gustave Touchard,
Leon Gerson, J. Kohl,
Antoine Borel, Geo C Shaller,
Gustave Touchard, J H Dudley,
Joseph Sadler, Charles Deane,
Jas. Lick, Jas. Moffitt,
T Lawrence Pearl, William Scholle,
Jas. Moffitt, Jas. Mesnier,
N B Stone, J O Eckler,
A. D. JULIUS,
GUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
Vice-President.
A. G. RITTER, Vice-President.
JAS. D. BAILEY, Secretary.
GEO. C. BONNER, Secretary.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY
OF SAN FRANCISCO.
FIRE AND MARINE.
Capital fully paid.....$200,000 0
Assets January 1, 1884.....$86,275 34
Losses paid since organization.....$54,287 44
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
405 California Street, S. F.
JOHN N. WISE, President.
CHAS. A. LATOS, Secretary.
JEREMIAH DEASY, Our Solicitor. Office also at 115 Third street.

MISCELLANEOUS.

M. VULICEVICH
Importer and Wholesale Dealer in
FOREIGN & DOMESTIC FRUITS!
427 Front Street, 427
FRESH ARRIVALS OF HOLIDAY GOODS
100,000 LEMONS
And Upward Of Other Choicest Fruits. Full assortment of all kinds Domestic and Foreign Fruits.

HOTELS RESTAURANTS ETC.

WESTERN HOTEL,
212-14 Broadway Street.
JOHN HIGGINS, : : Proprietor.

CHAS. R. SCHMIDT. C. S. BUSH
BROOKLYN HOTEL,
BUSH & SCHMIDT, Prop'rs.
BUSH ST., bet. Montgomery and Sansome
We by leave to publish the public that we have leased the above well known and popular resort, recently kept by Jos. Cavalier, Building, and all the necessary adjuncts of a first-class Hotel, at our expense of over $10,000.
The Building itself has been re-modeled to suit the requirements of the times.
We have added to the establishment a spacious Ladies' Dining Room, with the best of cooks in the employ of Maud Chef, will be ever ready to attend to all the wants of our patrons.
Terms—$1.50, $1.00 and $1.50 per day. A liberal reduction made to permanent guests.

THE CATHOLIC BOOK HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
Is happy to announce to the Catholics of the Pacific Coast that he has now opened—in connection with his San Jose Establishment, a Branch House at
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Where he will keep constantly on hand
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
—OF—
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
—COMPRISING—
Miscellaneous and Controversial Works, Prayer Books, Etc., Etc
SHEET MUSIC
The Largest Stock on the Coast.
Sole Agent for Messrs. Dunigan's Sons, P. A. Sheridan, and other Music Publishers.
Catalogues for Priests, Religious Institutions and Colleges furnished on application.
PIANOS AND ORGANS!!
CRUCIFIXES, CROSSES AND STATUARY.
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In French, Spanish, German and English; at all prices from 15 cents to $25.
Orders by mail from any portion of the Pacific Coast promptly attended to and filled at LOWEST CASH PRICES.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
The Catholic Book House of the Pacific Coast,
737 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
And First Street, San Jose, California

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy.
THE LATE ARCHBISHOP WOOD, OF PHILADELPHIA, Had a LUMINOUS CRUCIFIX, and said, "It is a Great Incentive to Devotion."
Address Orders to
A. WALDTEUFEL,
General Agent for the Pacific Coast,
737 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
And First Street, San Jose, - - California.
RELIABLE CANVASSERS WANTED.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL.
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,
Respectfully announce that they have opened
THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—WITH A LINE OF—
GENT'S "&" BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.
Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.
CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And late with JOHN & CO.

ESTABLISHED 1855.
J. O'KANE,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN
HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,
And Everything necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.
Boots and English Saddlery a Specialty
Single Harness from $18 a set.
Repairing promptly attended to.
767 MARKET ST
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

O'BRIEN & WARD'S
Male and Female
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.
MALE DEPARTMENT, 610 Clay Street
FEMALE DEPARTMENT, 606 Clay Street.
Always to be Had—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Meals, Free Hands, Teamsters, Farmers, General Laborers, Dairymen, Gardeners, Sawyers, Quartz Miners, Stable Men, Hostlers, Porters, Chambermaids, Private Families and restaurants, all desiring reliable Female Help, without any charge to employers. Employment agency offices for ladies at 606 Clay Street.

JAS. R. KELLY & CO
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF PAINTS,
OILS and GLASS
221 and 223 Market Street
Just Below Bonte—the New Block.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.
Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes, 631 and 633 California Street.
Safes made for church and other use, second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

SAN FRANCISCO & NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD
Boats and Trains will leave San Francisco as follows:
WEEK DAYS.
7.00 A. M. via Donahue, from Washington-street Wharf, for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Cloverdale, Guerneville and way points. Returning, will arrive in San Francisco at 7 P. M. This train connects with stages for Highland Springs, Kelseyville, Ukiah, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, and Willits.
4.50 P. M. via Sausalito, from Market-street wharf, for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Sonoma, Fulton and way points. Returning, will arrive in San Francisco at 9 A. M. On Saturdays this train leaves at 4.20 P. M. Saturdays only: 8.00 P. M. Returning, will leave Sonoma at 6 A. M.
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.
8.30 A. M. Sundays only, via Donahue, from Washington street wharf for Santa Rosa, Sonoma, Glen Ellen and way stations. Round Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 00; to Glen Ellen, $1 50.
ARTHUR HUGHES, Gen'l Ticket Agent. PETER J. MOLLYNS, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt.

WOODEN MANTELS
R. HERRING,
Manufacturer of
Fine Furniture, House, Bank and Office Fittings.
423 and 425 FOURTH St., San Francisco.
DESIGNS FURNISHED ☞
$5 to $20 per Mantel.
Address Drawers 2 C., Portland, Or.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
JOHN SULLIVAN,
NORTHEAST COR. OF PATTERY AND JACKSON sts., offers, as made to order the best French Calf Leather Boots, at from.....$6 to $8 00
French Calf Oxford Ties.....$4 00
Calfskin.....$3 50
Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order. Persons in the country ordering Boots and Shoes to the amount of twelve Dollars or more, will be allowed a reduction of one per cent., so as to make the expense charge light. I sell Boots and Shoes at MY OWN MANUFACTURING ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C O D. Patronage one price.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA - - - - CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords the opportunity of procuring for young ladies, at a trifling expense, a moral and intellectual education. One feature in particular that should recommend this Academy, its influence accrued to form the pupils to views and habits of economy and to render them useful members of society in after years.
The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Use of Bedding, Use of Bed and Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding...$50 00
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA..... CALIFORNIA
This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive, shady play-grounds, covered gymnasiums, recreation halls, a museum, a philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Commerce. Since its foundation the latter is now building 186x60 feet just both finished, and will be ready for use in August.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Literary and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, for the scholastic year.....$ 10 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches, Washing and Mending of Linen, Use of Bed, Schoolbooks, medical attendance and Medicine, Bath, etc., per session.....$ 150 00
Use of bed, per session.....$50 00
For further particulars, address the Director of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 914 Hayes street, San Francisco.
REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.
President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Fifth and Jessamine Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School for boys of the age of from five to twelve years. Its object is to combine the amusements and enjoyments of home with the advantages of a superior education.
Parents and guardians, desirous of sending their sons to a home in Boarding School, can rely on their being well cared for, and the instruction properly fitted to place their talent in the rudiments of a liberal education.
Candidates received at any time during the year, but not for a shorter period than one term of five months.
TERMS:
(Payment in U. S. gold coin, and invariably in advance)
Board, Washing and Tuition, per term of 5 months, $100
Bed and Bedding, per term of 5 months, $10
Entrance Fee (payable but once), $5
BRO. LASCIAN, Director

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
THOSE WHO HAVE COMPLETED THE CLASSical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Graduate of Accounts.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical knowledge in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercise of the rudiments in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric will be found invaluable to a correct style in the mother tongue.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Use of Bedding.....10 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated on an eminence, commanding a magnificent view of the Valley of Sacramento, and the Sierras in the distance. The location is remarkably healthy, and the Academy is easily reached by the Steamers from the bustle and comfort of San Francisco, the romantic grounds are extensive and well adapted for recreation, and the buildings are spacious and well ventilated. The course of instruction combines a thorough English education with the Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$150 00
Instrumental Music.....50 00
Washing.....50 00
Bed and Bedding (private rooms).....20 00
Staying in class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework are not free, but extra charges.
DAY ACADEMY.
Terms per month, in advance.
Senior Class.....$ 15
Intermediate Class.....$ 12
Primary Class.....$ 10
Music, Piano, vocal, use of instrument.....$ 10
Music, Guitar lessons, with use of instrument.....$ 10
Art of embroidery be required. For further information apply to
M. M. CAMILLUS, Superiors

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND, - - - CALIFORNIA.
CONDUCTED BY
The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Yerba Buena and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect on the lake. The building is supplied with all the modern improvements—the expense having been spared to provide for the comfort of the pupils.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included), $200 00
Washing.....$ 20
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....$ 20
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1851, is chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of other Collegiate Institutions in the United States.
References required. For terms and particulars address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE,
Twelfth and K streets,
SACRAMENTO.....CAL.
A LIMITED NUMBER OF BOARDERS RECEIVED. Every facility for acquiring a sound Christian education, and, at the same time, enjoying the comforts of a Christian home, is here afforded.
Terms, $150 per annum. Washing, $10 per dozen. For prospectuses apply to REV. GEORGE GERBERON, Director.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,
Golden Gate Ave. San Francisco
CONDUCTED BY
THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.
THIS ACADEMY PLEASANTLY SITUATED IN the Western Addition offers every opportunity to obtain a thorough and comprehensive education. The Spring Session will open on Monday, January 7th. For pupils may enter at any time. All communications should be addressed
SISTER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME
THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1868, chartered in 1878 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Hayes street, opposite the Old Mission Church.
The course of instruction embraces all a thorough education should comprehend.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per annum.....$200 00
SEVERAL CHARGES:
Piano, with use of instrument per annum.....$ 50 00
Vocal Music, Class lessons.....$ 10 00
Vocal and Private lessons.....$ 20 00
Drawing, per season.....$ 10 00
Painting in Water Colors.....$ 10 00
Painting in Oil, per lesson.....$ 10 00
Use of Piano for Practice.....$ 10 00
Graduating Fees.....$ 10 00
Physician's Fees (in case of sickness).....$ 10 00
Bills are presented and are payable at the expiration of each half session. In advance.
SELECT 1ST SCHOOL.
Terms per month (cash in advance.)
Tuition in the 1st and 2nd Collegiate Classes.....$ 15
Tuition in the 3rd and 4th Collegiate Classes.....$ 12
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes.....$ 10
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Preparatory Classes.....$ 8
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes.....$ 6
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Intermediate Classes.....$ 5
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes.....$ 4
Music (Vocal and Instrumental,) Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons form extra charges, as in Boarding Schools, but in no case are French and Spanish are given gratuitously, as is done in Pubs and Fancy Schools.
N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished at moderate rates, for the convenience of pupils residing in distant parts of the city.

School of the Holy Cross
A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF CHARITY, Cedar St. Santa Cruz Co., Cal. For terms, circulars, apply as above.
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN JOSE.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING EVERY facility to parents and guardians, desirous of sending their sons to a home in Boarding School, can rely on their being well cared for, and the instruction properly fitted to place their talent in the rudiments of a liberal education.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Use of Bedding.....10 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated on an eminence, commanding a magnificent view of the Valley of Sacramento, and the Sierras in the distance. The location is remarkably healthy, and the Academy is easily reached by the Steamers from the bustle and comfort of San Francisco, the romantic grounds are extensive and well adapted for recreation, and the buildings are spacious and well ventilated. The course of instruction combines a thorough English education with the Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$150 00
Instrumental Music.....50 00
Washing.....50 00
Bed and Bedding (private rooms).....20 00
Staying in class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework are not free, but extra charges.
DAY ACADEMY.
Terms per month, in advance.
Senior Class.....$ 15
Intermediate Class.....$ 12
Primary Class.....$ 10
Music, Piano, vocal, use of instrument.....$ 10
Music, Guitar lessons, with use of instrument.....$ 10
Art of embroidery be required. For further information apply to
M. M. CAMILLUS, Superiors

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,
SAN LUIS OBISPO - - - CALIFORNIA.
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR THE Education of Young Ladies.
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING EVERY facility to parents and guardians, desirous of sending their sons to a home in Boarding School, can rely on their being well cared for, and the instruction properly fitted to place their talent in the rudiments of a liberal education.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Use of Bedding.....10 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is chiefly in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 1st of August, and ends about 2 1st of June.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly).
Board and Tuition.....$150
Bed and Bedding.....$ 20
Washing.....$ 20
Traffic Permissible at the Academy during recreation will be charged $20.
Painting, Drawing and Music form extra charges.
The Repremium on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed with stamp.
SISTER SUPERIOR.

Convent of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary,
GILROY, - - - CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, CONDUCTED BY the religious sisters of the B. V. M. and I. H. of M. For terms, etc., apply to the
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

URSULINE ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
The Fourth Annual Session begins
AUGUST, 1884.
For Prospectus and full particulars address
SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINES,
Santa Rosa, Cal.

BEATTY'S CHARTS 27 inches BY 36 inches. Pictures, 22 inches BY 28 inches. Factory: Rooms 1 and 2 Masonic Temple, Washington, D. C.

Child Murder in Copenhagen.

A shocking state of affairs is discovered in Copenhagen, the Danish capital, by a call for contributions towards the erection of an orphan asylum in that city. "Over 2,000 illegitimate children are annually born in Copenhagen," says the extraordinary document, the author of which is a well-known clergyman. "Bad enough this," he continues, "but unfortunately the fact that according to declarations published under responsible auspices, thousands of these children are formed out in the air and die under the most scandalously miserable conditions. Within the last few days we have seen examples of the sort of protection the law affords these poor waifs. In six months a single worthy couple in this city have "expedited" five of these children, four of them fortunately to the cemetery. When a step was put to this interesting industry at last it was not because the children had been "expedited," but because there had been fraud and forgery in the money transactions in which they were summarily disposed of. In another case a "father" so maltreated an adopted child that it died within twenty-four hours after he had been paid 450 kroner expressly for "expedite" it. How many such cases are there in Copenhagen that are never discovered or punished?" The population of Copenhagen is about 250,000; in 1882 the total number of children born in the city was 9,054, and those born out of wedlock constituted more that one-fifth of the whole. It is proposed to establish not only an infant asylum, but a society as well for the support and maintenance of a properly guaranteed system of outside nursing of the waifs."

—On Dec. 17th, the remains of Sister Gabriel, of the Nuns of Mount Presentation Convent, Middleton, were laid in the cemetery adjoining the convent.

MONITOR MENTION.

—Dr. Charles A. Clinton, has opened a branch office at 147 Larkin-st., (opposite Hyde,) for the sale of his celebrated Cure for Catarrh, "Catarrhal Powder." Price, $1 00 per package, including nasal syringe and full directions for use. Sold by druggists, or sent by mail, on receipt of price, by Dr. C. A. Clinton, 1102 Market St. San Francisco.

—Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724½ Market street.

—I can beat someone 50 cents at Smith's store 510 Post street.

—Clean carpets with Crimean Washing Powder."

—You will not have sour stomach if you drink Dandelion Bitters.

—Assist himself with Chloride Vital oil. It will cure the worst of pain.

—Pupils wanted by a lady. Adults or children for all English branches. Academic Department, 212 Post Street.

—Over 100 druggists in San Francisco sell Quinine Oil. That's right. 100,000 people use it. That's true, too. $2,000 prizes it and recommends their friends use it. Price 50 cents. Your druggist keeps it.

—A large stock of old and new books, including theology, law, medicine, poetry, and diction may be found at Mack's bookstore, 104 O Farrell street.

—New Parchmoine, 604 Howard street. Money saved for any length of time, on Clothing, Furniture, Jewelry, Bedding and all Household articles. Business private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. Corner Kearny and Geary streets.

—If a set for teeth—warranted as good as can be made—Tooth Filling, $1. Dr. Hinman, Dentist, 842 Market street.

—F. M. Lyons, carpenter and builder, 433 Third street corner Bryant. Store and office fitting and general jobbing promptly attended to.

—A full set of Teeth, $10. Gold Fillings from $1; Silver, 50 cents. Extracting Free. Use gives W. H. CLARK, Dentist, 117 Kearny Street.

—Wheelock Pianos, at Gibert's, 352 Sutter St. Sole Agent for Jonathan Nelson Notes Organs, and as recommended Wheelock Pianos as first class, easy stock of new and second-hand pianos, easy instalments; new organs, $40.

—The French Hotel, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under the proprietorship of Mr. J. W. Dodge, continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. The table is supplied with the choicest food that the market affords by the week. The accommodations are the best, the attendance unexcelled. Give the French chop, cuisine and accommodations.

—The Mail and Newspaper Business, 22 Bush street, is the Western Depot of the N. A. Union of Letter Carriers, and Newsboys. It is also intended for the sale of all determinable and valuable specimens of the rubbish, bibs, bows, and all jewelry combined Rubs, club ties, parapluie, gum shoes, Rubbers, Gaiters and Leggins, and confection for young Dons. Expressions given and solicited, and all information.

—Mr. Jules Lambla, favorably known to many of our readers, has dissolved with the firm of Ross & Co., in the General Employment Office, 27 Geary street. The firm was established in 1876 and the extent of business they have built up will be seen by a reference to the Ads. Mr. Lambla who has all the connections and facilities for the transaction of business, and who is a gentleman of the most consummate and reliable business ability, will be assisted by a competent lady of many years experience, and will be pleased to see his friends at the new office, 27 Geary street, where he will be ready to receive applications for help of every description, and to supply the wants of the business public.

—The Catholic Printing Store.

Buy your prayers, mirrors, crucifixes, holy rosaries, medals, etc., at Sadlier's, Kearny, near Sutter, S. F. Catalogue, 125 French street.

—Dandelion Bitters regulate the stomach and is the best tonic.

—The famous Cologne of FRICHTING is now for sale by all druggists. Wholesale Agents for the Eastern States, Wheelock and Sutton Drug, corner of Kearny and Bush streets, corner of Kearny and Sutter streets, and Sutter and Kearny streets, and Sutter and Montgomery streets, and Sutter and Kearny streets, and Sutter and Montgomery streets, and Sutter and Kearny streets, and Sutter and Montgomery

THE CALIFORNIA MISSIONS.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

ers. At one time it was thought that an attack was to be made on the little garrison at Loreto. This caused fears of an uprising among the numerous Indians. The place never had less than 400 Indians. The place never had less than 400 Indians. The place never had less than 400

Poetry.

ON THE MORNING OF SAINT SCHOLASTICA'S PRAYER.

By Cardinal O. Donnelly.

Tho, an old Italian nuns
Sacred notes have in unison,
In her cell at Mount Celio,
But fabulation the Solon.

And hardly late, grave and careful,
Shall of pensive, stern and strict,
Holding converse, grave and prayerful,
Sacred has brother Benedict.

Spake he slowly: "Evening fallen,
Light so bold be lot of lowly,
Let the bell be Compline called,
Brethren sister, we must part."

Spake she pleading: "O my brother!
Long the morning we have had talked
Of the Lord, Eternal Father,
Now of virtues, poor and vexed."

"Nay!" he smiling, "Sister, nay,
"My little sister, ask no more,
Hours we have spoken of the Lord,
Now the vesper their Eternal hour."

Then, for at years their elder,
Sister, he, in gentle chiding,
"Lo! I call upon that Warner
Who, in Sinai, spoke to Moses."

"Lo! I call on Thee, my Jesus!
And we bend you knee and pray
Of Thy tender Heart to plead,
Thy not to us be wrathful."

Sweet the words her lips let forth,
Sweet their echoes dwell in ally
Of the Tender Heart to plead,
Thy not to us be wrathful.

Sweet the words her lips let forth,
Sweet their echoes dwell in ally
Of the Tender Heart to plead,
Thy not to us be wrathful.

"Go!" he said, "Sister, go!
Pray for us, for we are sinners!
Ere I call on Thee, my Jesus!
Ere I call on Thee, my Father!
Ere I call upon that Warner
Into meadows I go out
Where the sun, the Lord's Eternal Ever in the Lord's Eternal."

"Go! I call on Thee, my Jesus!
And we bend you knee and pray
Of Thy tender Heart to plead,
Thy not to us be wrathful."

Sweet the words her lips let forth,
Sweet their echoes dwell in ally
Of the Tender Heart to plead,
Thy not to us be wrathful.

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1884.

CIRCULAR FROM ARCHBISHOP ALEMANY, D. D. P.

The following Circular was read to all the Churches in the Archdiocese on Sunday last:

To THE CLERGY AND LAITY OF THE DIOCESE.

San Rafael, Sir.—The preparations for the various parts of the Diocese indicate that God has blessed its priest for its flock, for the present, an abundant supply of rain. Therefore it is humble and earnest work to Him for this delightful in hear our prayer, please hold in the Mass of next Sunday, the collect, "Pro Petendo Imbre," in the Missal, or, in the Breviary of Sunday, "Ut det nobis pluviam temperiem." Let each one in Vespers, and Lauds, and Prime, say it.

Yours in Christ,

J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

San Francisco, Feb. 26, 1884.

REGULATIONS FOR LENT.

FOR THE DIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO.

1.—All the WEEK DAYS of Lent, from Ash Wednesday (February 27th) till Easter Sunday, are fasting days of penance, on one meal, with the allowance of a collation morning and evening.

2.—The precept of fasting implies the abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed in the Diocese of San Francisco at the principal meal, in all the Wednesdays and Fridays, Ash Wednesday, the Thursdays and Saturdays of Lent, the Holy Week, the Vigils of St. Joseph and of the Annunciation, and the Feast of St. Joseph when it falls on a week day, except the days when Easter Week falls in March, except the days when Easter Week falls in March, except the days when Easter Week falls in March

ACCURACY AND HONESTY.

What General Spinner says of Women as Gaolers.

Although hundreds of women hold positions of financial trust in this country, we have yet to hear of one of them being guilty of embezzlement or defalcation, says the Albany Journal. The evidence clearly sustains the positions of those who believe that women are qualified morally, physically and intellectually, for the handling of money in stores or in banks. General Spinner, who first introduced women into the United States treasury as clerks and accountants, left on record a striking testimony to the efficiency and honesty of the sex, and no one ever had a better opportunity to study the question than he did, for he had at one time 1000 women under his direction, engaged solely in the handling of money. He has often that they count more accurately and rapidly than men, that their ability to detect counterfeits proved to be superior to that of any of the opposite sex, and that they were quicker to detect a false entry and more accurate and careful

A Strange Debate.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH DISCUSSED IN NEW YORK.

MGR. CAPEL HER CHAMPION.

More than a Match for "Preacher," Jew, and Infidel.

A remarkable and interesting discussion was held at the meeting of the Nineteenth Century Club, of New York, in the parlors of Mrs. Cortlandt Palmer on Tuesday evening, recently. Monsignor Capel by invitation was personally and informally to address upon the Catholic Church, comments upon which she has been her constantly. His presence was thus rather "discussed" than criticized by the Rev. J. M. Wise, the rabbi Gotthold and Mr. Thad. Stevens Williamson, the Free Thinker and infidel orator. The subject was announced to be "Why I am a Catholic." The Monsignor was given fifteen minutes in which to reply to the critics. The papers were crowded with refined and thoughtful ladies and gentlemen, and the discussion was followed with the keenest interest.

Mr. Cortlandt Palmer, who presided, said that he had known Monsignor Capel for many years, and had been his guest in London. He was a man of great eloquence, and of the most earnest character. Here to this it might be said of the Church, he claimed, was that in which people gift of his policy was concerned, was the Church of individuality in the liberty of thought and action, of intellectual and spiritual development. Mr. Cortlandt Palmer then introduced the Rev. Mr. Wise, the discussion, and: "The four great religions." He had lists to be too profitable and too Roman Catholicism, the rest of early Christianity, the Church founded upon a basis of individual right; Judaism, the foundation of the other sects and different creeds, and all that it has not for head and corner stone Christ, Buddha or Mahomet; and Christianity is the result of universal thought. The great question of the century was, "What shall we do to be saved?" Mgr. Capel was a man of great learning and ability.

A CATHOLIC STANDPOINT.

Mr. President: You did me the honor to invite me to a dinner before the Nineteenth Century Club the Christian on which the ladies of the Church of Christ; then to other that statement to be freely discussed, I take, finally, to state the discussion by a reading of a text. The Holy Ghost, speaking by the mouth of the inspired writer, says: "Brethren, stand upon the ways and see and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and you shall find refreshment for your souls." Brethren, I will speak unto you, and I will speak unto the earth, and the Lord will hear my words. The ingle of Protestantism became immediately the Roman Catholic body in the shape of ethical impulse. The Protestant reformers received impressive three more which that were absolutely essential to the continued existence of that body. Thus, in a very broad sense, the Protestant Reformation was a Renaissance. That begotten of organic Christendom which Christian doctrine declare essential to each individual soul—it was born again. But as the new birth does not destroy the personal characteristics in the individual, so neither did it in the Church as a body. The Roman Church still loves authority most; the Protestant still loves liberty most.

I define Protestantism to be a spirit or temper of mind which loves reality and is true to duty.

Strictly speaking, there is no Protestant Church; I use it there, strongly as any Catholic Church. The Christian Church is one entire, and a part of it is dominated by the spirit of liberty, another part is dominated by the spirit of authority, and this is the real distinction between Protestants and Catholics. The spirit of liberty is liable to abuse which we call anarchy; the spirit of authority is subject to an abuse which we call despotism. Hence to form and to reform has always been the instant business of mankind. The Catholic Church, commissioned to erecting itself into an institution, the Protestant body is chiefly concerned in infusing the ethical and religious spirit into all social and civil institutions. The real Protestant Church is the free communwealth with the religious and ethical life beating in all its veins; and its achievements of Protestantism, as then with men, are the marvel and glory of the world. The logic of Protestantism is moral evidence, but to charge the confessed defects of civilization to Protestantism is to forget both human history and human nature. And to propose to remedy these defects through Romanism is like proposing to cure a disease of vision by extracting the eye. The remedy for twilight is daylight, not independence. So far as this question of Protestantism forgets itself and scandals its friends by attempting to govern mankind by the principles and by the methods of Rome, it fails in everything save in stimulating the protesting spirit. Protestantism is not the successor of Rome in this governing the world. Rome is not its only successor in that business. The world is never to be governed any more by the Italian method while it remains worth governing at all.

But there can be no greater mistake than in assuming that the exercise of private judgment leads to nothing but sectarian strife and confusion. It leads to sincerity and sincerity leads to solidarity. What leads to anarchy and tyranny is insincerity, false profession, half-belief, and "unshakeable" belief. It may well be, as has been said, two or three thousand years too early yet to have a complete creed, but it is not too early to believe that this is God's world, not the devil's; that it has a divine reason for being; that truth and love are at the heart of it; that all he sees destroyed; and that goodness, justice, and righteousness are things which forever and always triumph and endure. In one form or another these beliefs have been the world's renovators, and they have not obtained out of the sky, but on a ladder of fire! A free unity in the creation, a spiritual self existence in man, and reward of her perfected faculties; it means when he is ready for it, and it cannot be entered before that time. I dismiss Protestantism, then defined, the world's great hope. Thank God! There is a hopeless work around and ahead of us, but—

Tell me the storm is this who hears
A deeper voice across the storm.

RABBI GOTTHELD'S VIEWS.

Mr. Palmer was followed by the Rev. Mr. Gotthold, of the Temple Emanu-El, who said: "The Quakers, whom I consider the nearest and truest ideal of what seems to me to have moved the soul of the founder of the Christian Church, represent, as no people ever did, the idea of the divine kinship and man, and, inspired by this, they swept away all formality and placed themselves in communion with the Eternal Spirit, Publishing also—and I ought to say I am sorry for that—the ministry [laughter] giving it as much a clear and such a beautiful idea but should plead none to it; it would be a loss to humanity. Then there are the Unitarians that worship nature. I think that Unitarianism is culture and the spirit of Christianity. [Laughter and applause.] Looking at a body like the Wesleyans, and then see the organization and power of the religious idea, and without any claim to authority we see what the religious idea is capable of in that line. Then looking at the great Church whose representative we have with us tonight, we see what that Church is able to achieve under one head; we see that it is capable of inspiring a large number of men to renounce all claims to the enjoyments of life, surrendering themselves entirely to that idea. The world has never seen an organization like that, and no one who remembers her great deeds of charity can ever forget what service she is rendering to humanity. I confess that I meet one of these Sisters of Charity wandering up and down on her holy mission, I, in thought, take off my hat, and only regret that charity, that bright guardian angel of man, should be obliged to walk the earth in these sombre garments and not in those bright, cheerful colors to which their deeds and kindness of heart entitle them. [Applause.]

Brethren, then, to Mgr. Capel's argument, he said it was a bold assumption for him to say that man had his kinds of religion. He had not faith enough to accept such a claim. "We must at last," he continued, "in the last resort, all come home to the reason; for even supposing we are directed by the Church, she cannot go with us into all the work of our lives to tell us what to do, and we must search out for ourselves. Then the reverend lecturer made an assertion that God created all men to be saved. I wish to agree with the greatest respect, but the contrary opinion, viz.: that God did not create all men to be saved, but rather to be lost forever, seems to be something that all-loving God would do—evil. I will not use the term, but that God should create all men to be saved. He created some to be lost! If so, I think that God is some that would rather be with the lost than with the saved. If the Church teaches that God say that all people had not only been created to be saved, but will and must be saved, that would be a concession. I must not forget that I stand as the representative of that faith which is outside of the Church, and when the reverend lecturer insisted on the necessity of the sacrifice and expounder of the divine truth, it seems to me that on the ground of the Old Testament Israel is that witness and that exponent, and if he ask for any external proof we cannot point to the Jewish people; yet they have no concession mind; we are scattered over the face of the earth, and we are still a persecuted race. Only one stage is upon us, and that is upon the brink of every Israelite—the stamp of unparalleled misfortune for the truth as we understood it. We have borne witness. Our trust lies in the word of God, not indeed within the Bible, but in the hearts of men throughout the whole world, and that men will ultimately come to the truth as we see it; that is our only hope.

It seems to me that is several important points the Roman Catholic Church stands to-day on the same basis that the old Jewish Church stood in the Christian dispensation, against the Pharisees of old in this that, by their traditions, they made the word of God of no effect. But I feel to see how the charge can be maintained by the Catholic Church; traditions in the very sense of the authority she claims, declaring the Bible not only unintelligible, but positively misleading, without the light she alone is commissioned to shed upon its teachings.

Dr. Gotthold, rabbi Gotthold told the story of a man in Egypt, who was attacked by robbers, from his sanctuary was flung, instead of pursuing, had turned and ran to the opposite direction, until he came to the gate of a barrel guarded. "Let him go where he will," said he, "I shall finally catch him at the barrel." I shall say to him, "My brother, then hast struck me. I am stunned, I am sick, I am in a strong enough for that, but I will not. I will go to the Caliph and he could banish them. I might call upon Almighty God to send down curses upon them for that wrong, but I will not tell thee what I will do."

When the time comes, when we both shall stand at the gate, and I shall stand at the portals of Paradise, then by my faith I shall say: "O God, I will not go into Paradise unless this brother goes with me." The Universal Church is not one that goes into Paradise alone or refuses to have the gate opened for all men, and the members of that Church desire that all men shall go into the presence of God along with him."

THE CHURCH OF THE WORLD.

Mr. Thaddeus B. Wakeman was the next speaker. "There is but one church," said he, "that can be rightly called Catholic, and that is not a theological but a scientific and humanitarian church. As men realizing in different ages have joined together politically and formed States, the same arrangement should be made for religion. The people who found religion, recognizing that the idea of religion is the outcome of the people and has not been forced upon them. The religions were all very useful in their day and they are useful still but their day is past. The old Tory adage that no gentleman should discuss religion or politics is a foolish one to be revived under the circumstances. No one should leave the 'church of the world,' to which those who have been taught nothing belong, as well as those whose scientific attainments have made belief in the creeds impossible. Religion is a necessity to some people, and I believe that religions will last only as long as they are needed. All of them have done good work in the past, and some of them have ceased to become universal. Once in a while an educated man who is sentimental or a woman who is still more sentimental will be converted to Rome, and the majority will not be taught. The principal promise made by Mgr. Capel cannot be proved. There is no proof to offer that God will save all men. He is not immortal, and the other points were given as indisputable which because they cannot possibly be proved. What Agnostics need is the ardently to stand up for their convictions."

MONSIGNOR CAPEL'S ANSWER.

Monsignor Capel triumphantly answered the objections to the discovery of which we have been unable to get a detailed report, and, after other things, to finish the argument, he said: "I have really received no reply to my argument. I am sorry gentlemen who spoke having thought that a little rhetoric and a few verses would pass for discussion. If the charges made against the Roman Catholicism were true, I would leave the Church. What better proof can there be of corruption than that no priest in New York remains under 200 a year. We profess security and the foundation of individuality. If the scientific people are to have a church, it is one which is to become universal, what will become of the masses?" He then said the reason of the prominent scientists in the Catholic priesthood.

SECULAR COMMENT ON THE DEBATE.

The New York World has said editorially of this debate:

"Mr. Cortlandt Palmer, who is understood to be least decidedly of the Roman view of things, must now acknowledge that in the lift arranged by him Mgr. Capel easily walked away with such champions as Mr. T. B. Wakeman. In any such intellectual conflict at that on Tuesday night the skilled dialectician has all the advantage. The priest had the formulated statements of a thousand years at his finger's ends. The Agnostic was disorganized and wholly negative. Mgr. Capel touched on several issues where he said that the assertion that there was no God could mean nothing. The assertion carried the burden of proof, and he seemed to have put upon him to demonstrate the non-existence of a Deity.

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM— IRELAND.

A Silver Jubilee.

The Presentation Convent at Strathfully, Queen's County, was the scene of unusual joy and festivity on Wednesday, January 23rd. On that day was celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of Rev. Mother Mary Elizabeth Bastable's elevation to the holy religious. The immense gathering did not prevent the attendance of a great number of friends, and love to the dearest and most worthy of all. The number and variety of the presents showed the deep and sincere respect entertained for her. The address, which the children of the school presented to the venerable lady, was accompanied with rare and costly gifts.

Another Interesting Birth Centenarian.

It appears by the Belfast Morning News that Mr. Thomas Gordon, of Ballymena, celebrated his 100th birthday on the 20th, that attended by his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, to the number of 50. Mr. Gordon is in good health and spirits, and is able to read without spectacles. Catholic and Protestant joined in the festivities, and it was a day of great rejoicing. Mr. Gordon's father was a native of Donegal, where he died at the age of 100 years. He was a man of great strength of mind and body, and was a Catholic. He was a man of great strength of mind and body, and was a Catholic. He was a man of great strength of mind and body, and was a Catholic

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

GOLDEN ABBEY.

BY J. R. G.

(This splendid old state built in the thirteenth century, and finished by Henry VIII. is annexed to Dr. Tupper's story, instead, to return as now at present seen, and orphaned the river Lodd from its left bank!)

Here let me rest—The voices of the world,
The shock and hurrah of man's enterprise,
Dull not the ear—Like a streamless fount
When cliffs lie o'er, softly the daylight dies;
The stars look lovingly from pensive skies;
And with a sending hush, sent in their God's sanctified one, the moonlight glorifies
The shrine reviving in her loveliness
Time's touch, the wreck of war and wintrous rude menace.

This hermit cellicle hall fitting cement,
The quiet monastery—Yet all hues array
Of human life, in its mingling with the dream
Of the mind's wandering—Lo! the shadowy
Of Gothic architecture, with its pillared aisles
Lost in the gloom, and with its arches lost
In New Forty, the west alongside the lowlands,
Hamlets and cottages, and the Lodd, with its Meadows and noble Dunsfold—The boys from Eton, and Windsor, and Hampton Court,
Were taken in by Henry whenever Glory Queen,
Wanted of Knight's Order to be dubbed
Knights, which provided for by the Catholic Reformation;
Which provided for by the Catholic Reformation;
of the Lion. A message having been sent to the Lord's palace, a gown supplied, with a knight fitting pallet, was promptly dispatched to the Lord's palace, and the boy was then taken by a progress and pulsed complete hold of the Lion, and knighted, and at about fifty time and
and other dames on the array dwell because of the greatness, and to be blind because of
by the vast. But Stanmore summer was and north dark, and hoarse of Sonnet during
of the vessel. As viewed by the large crowds of Windsor, and Eton, and Hampton Court
on both sides of the Thames, even at a distance
Clarence was on fire, and the boy was
Clarence was on fire, and the boy was Windsor Castle, and at about fifty time and
and other dames on the array dwell because of the greatness, and to be blind because of
by the vast. But Stanmore summer was
and north dark, and hoarse of Sonnet during
of the vessel. As viewed by the large crowds of Windsor, and Eton, and Hampton Court
on both sides of the Thames, even at a distance

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1886.

The Month of St. Joseph.

The Church has special devotion to St. Joseph during the month of March, and as Christian perfection is obtained by being in accord with the Church in all her devotional exercises, we desire to remind our readers that devotion to St. Joseph is sure to be rewarded by special graces obtained for one whom the Church has ranked as her Universal Patron.

As our love for the Blessed Virgin is based upon the fact that she was the Mother of the Son of God, so we must love and honor St. Joseph as the protector and guardian of our Blessed Mother; as the one chosen by Almighty God to guide the Holy Virgin, and to shield and defend the holy Infant Jesus; as the Immaculate God Man was "subject to all things" to the protection and authority exercised by St. Joseph.

In order to help to an humble way of appreciating the beautiful devotion to St. Joseph, we send to each subscriber this week a most important sermon; a few footing, and a beautiful poem; and if by his Grace we shall be pleased to send them as many copies as they may desire for free distribution among family or school members, or other Catholic children or adults.

The Sermon is a most able, excellent production which St. Joseph compels the author of the Church, it is well to reflect that God has given the honor of having his name linked with that of the Blessed Mother and the Immaculate Mother of God in the position which we make in our prayers. Every Catholic knows the Hail Mary, "Blessed Mary, Mary, and Jesus, I give you my heart and my soul." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, assist me in my last agony." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, may I die in peace in your blessed company." And then from the wonderful life of St. Joseph's Holy Family which the Creator of heaven of God, and the highest name of Mary, we can learn some idea of the angelic dignity which Almighty God has conferred upon this great saint in Heaven.

The daily recitation, therefore, of the short prayer and the corresponding aspiration which we should make this month, will guide us all who follow this plan, to a more spiritual life; besides, it will create a spirit of devotion towards Joseph, the Holy Family which will not only be a great help in the sight of God, but which will intensify in the Heart of Mary Immaculate, the love of God; and compassion which she feels for the souls of the children of the Church who totally shut from the spiritual order who care for or ever have the spirit of that holy household wherein dwelt a God Incarnate and a Virgin Immaculate. "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, in all your temporal needs, and he will do it." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, in all your temporal needs, and he will do it." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus."

What a pity the Presbyterian who penned this paragraph was not present in that upper chamber of Jerusalem to preach the Apostles upon the folly of preaching one faith, one baptism, and one Lord Jesus Christ! Her work would be more consistent with Calvinism it would have been more in the first Christians divided up into Petrine, Paulinic, Matthewites, Johnites, Thomasites, and Jamesites, than to have obeyed the commands of God by bringing them all under the shadow of the Cross!

In the Apostolic times there was but one Christian organization, yet there was neither "schisms, jangling, or strife," and if the Lord, in His great mercy, would now vouchsafe to the spiritual vision of our "subject in all things" to the authority exercised by St. Joseph, what would be the result?

In order to help to an humble way to appreciate the beautiful devotion to St. Joseph, we send to each subscriber this week a most important sermon; a few footing, and a beautiful poem; and if by his Grace we shall be pleased to send them as many copies as they may desire for free distribution among family or school members, or other Catholic children or adults.

The Sermon is a most able, excellent production which St. Joseph compels the author of the Church, it is well to reflect that God has given the honor of having his name linked with that of the Blessed Mother and the Immaculate Mother of God in the position which we make in our prayers. Every Catholic knows the Hail Mary, "Blessed Mary, Mary, and Jesus, I give you my heart and my soul." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, assist me in my last agony." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, may I die in peace in your blessed company." And then from the wonderful life of St. Joseph's Holy Family which the Creator of heaven of God, and the highest name of Mary, we can learn some idea of the angelic dignity which Almighty God has conferred upon this great saint in Heaven.

The daily recitation, therefore, of the short prayer and the corresponding aspiration which we should make this month, will guide us all who follow this plan, to a more spiritual life; besides, it will create a spirit of devotion towards Joseph, the Holy Family which will not only be a great help in the sight of God, but which will intensify in the Heart of Mary Immaculate, the love of God; and compassion which she feels for the souls of the children of the Church who totally shut from the spiritual order who care for or ever have the spirit of that holy household wherein dwelt a God Incarnate and a Virgin Immaculate. "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, in all your temporal needs, and he will do it." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus."

The Adoration of Protestant Disunited.

One of the marks by which the Catholic Church is known to be the Church of Christ is her Unity. She is one in God under one Shepherd—Christ our God. The Church has many members, and its life-blood flows through every member of the body, yet they have all only one motive; one Heart which feeds them, and one determination which binds them. No body of Christians can be entered to the Catholic Church, and at the same time, be one with it. No Christian can be Christ's while not one visibly a portion of it. In the unity which shows forth the unity of God, the Church is one in God with all those who are in Christ, and in Christ, until some men's minds become so perverted by the Babel-confused tongues of Babylon that in their frenzy they were driven into infidelity. And now, when Apostates and Infidels and Christians honeycombed with materialism and rationalism, have in different ages are rapidly dwindling to do by the preachers of Christ's Gospel and their disciples are thinking each other with the idea of uniting than that congregated sectarian error is so much more desirable than Christian unity.

Truth—like God—is one, and cannot be divided, while error is shamefaced and Janus-faced. It can be tortured into a thousand shapes in order to disguise its real character and to mislead the souls of men into the modes of fatum. Look at the diversity of Protestant sects, and what do we have that they represent a common stock of contradictions. Side by side in every city of the Union, we find sectarian meetings—where religious theories are avowed and carried out that are as widely apart as the poles of the earth. The very Lord's Day is a bone of contention—Christ's time; the Commandments of God are still the battle-field of debate; the Bible itself is an apple of discord which divides and distracts. There are so many shuttlecocks for the battledores of Biblical cranks who think themselves more inspired than Peter or Paul, and wiser than the Church of Christ. It is very wonderful, that men would issue a creed from such conceited, and yet so ignorant, a spirit of religious untruth and enter the one true Church of God, or the female Christianity forever! Man's conscious feeling of poverty of faith in all spiritual matters; he must feel confident that the Church has a right to be a competent to hold his soul to God; he must know and feel his faith in all its fullness, or, lacking that, he is only a half-hearted Christian at best, and he other advocates to the light of Catholic faith are also outside into the ranks of the enemies of all truth.

This has been the history of the world since forty first lifted its hydra-head therein; and when the Ocoland undertaken the shameful task of telling Protestants that their multitudinous and meaningless sects are so many little brigades in the army of God, it only makes a smile of derision or contempt from those who are familiar with the history of Christianity from its very foundation. The so-called Reformers were—to a man—deserters from God's army to represented by the Church on earth, hence they are only recognized as rebellious renegades by the true soldiers of Christ who guard the sanctuary of the Catholic Church. The unfortunate Independent of the Reformation errors may pretend to have the courage of the true soldiers of Christ, but as one of the Fathers of the Church well said: "O, Protestantism, where are thy martyrs?" Go even of contradiction not worth dying for can only be a chance at best, and a religious theory that never yet has been able to turn a pagan nation into a Christian nation must be handicapped with some human error which makes it unrecognizable by Almighty—but most assuredly it is not Christian.

The next objection brought against Christian unity by the Occident is thus set forth:

"It is better for them of like views and tastes and methods to meet together for the worship of God, and work together for the promotion of His cause in other organizations than to try to do the work in one great organization where there will be a constant conflict and jangling and strife."

What a pity the Presbyterian who penned this paragraph was not present in that upper chamber of Jerusalem to preach the Apostles upon the folly of preaching one faith, one baptism, and one Lord Jesus Christ! Her work would be more consistent with Calvinism it would have been more in the first Christians divided up into Petrine, Paulinic, Matthewites, Johnites, Thomasites, and Jamesites, than to have obeyed the commands of God by bringing them all under the shadow of the Cross!

In the Apostolic times there was but one Christian organization, yet there was neither "schisms, jangling, or strife," and if the Lord, in His great mercy, would now vouchsafe to the spiritual vision of our "subject in all things" to the authority exercised by St. Joseph, what would be the result?

In order to help to an humble way to appreciate the beautiful devotion to St. Joseph, we send to each subscriber this week a most important sermon; a few footing, and a beautiful poem; and if by his Grace we shall be pleased to send them as many copies as they may desire for free distribution among family or school members, or other Catholic children or adults.

The Sermon is a most able, excellent production which St. Joseph compels the author of the Church, it is well to reflect that God has given the honor of having his name linked with that of the Blessed Mother and the Immaculate Mother of God in the position which we make in our prayers. Every Catholic knows the Hail Mary, "Blessed Mary, Mary, and Jesus, I give you my heart and my soul." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, assist me in my last agony." Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, may I die in peace in your blessed company." And then from the wonderful life of St. Joseph's Holy Family which the Creator of heaven of God, and the highest name of Mary, we can learn some idea of the angelic dignity which Almighty God has conferred upon this great saint in Heaven.

The daily recitation, therefore, of the short prayer and the corresponding aspiration which we should make this month, will guide us all who follow this plan, to a more spiritual life; besides, it will create a spirit of devotion towards Joseph, the Holy Family which will not only be a great help in the sight of God, but which will intensify in the Heart of Mary Immaculate, the love of God; and compassion which she feels for the souls of the children of the Church who totally shut from the spiritual order who care for or ever have the spirit of that holy household wherein dwelt a God Incarnate and a Virgin Immaculate. "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, in all your temporal needs, and he will do it." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Jesus," as St. Teresa says, "and Jesus will bring you to Mary, and Mary will place you in the Heart of Jesus." "Go to Joseph," as St. Teresa says, "and Joseph will place you in the Heart of Jesus."

Hemphill's New System of Sectarian Mathematics.

For a long time we have been looking for a mathematical variously in the shape of a man who could subtract a greater from a lesser quantity and still have a remainder. To most people of ordinary minds this would seem to be an impossible task, but we who have watched the true inwardness of Protestant preachers for many years, have come to the conclusion that nothing is impossible to a preacher when he essays to wipe out of existence the Catholic Church.

Rev. Joseph Hemphill belongs to that famous, rhetoric chess of reading preachers who have no regard for what they say regarding a system which they hate because Hemphill represents the spirit of truth. Hemphill is a man of his creedless calibre, are not really responsible, rational beings, for the reason that prejudice and bigotry has unsettled their reason, and their reasoning is the result of blind passion.

To prove this fact it is only necessary to refer to a recent discourse delivered by Rev. Joseph Hemphill, in which he set out to define the difference between the Catholic Church and Protestantism, and this is the opening paragraph in which he puts the case before the house:

"It was claimed that the Protestant Church and the speaker, "was the Catholic Church of the Protestant." Was the Catholic built upon the Rock of Ages? Was the Protestant Church, and was claiming that the Catholic Church was the Protestant? Was the Church should be billed. The two Churches differed in several points. We are told to search the Scriptures. In the Catholic's opinion the Scriptures were not to be read by the people, for fear they would be led astray. Protestants believed that God's word was for people to hear, or they would not have given it to them. The Catholic claimed that the Church was a divine institution, and was equal to God's Word. The Protestant believed that God's word was equal to God's Word. The Catholic claimed that the Church was the gates of hell."

Here's a pretty bottle of fish fresh from the nest of one who—by way of parody, we suppose—claims to be a Christian! The beefed of ever-to-be-pitied people, who had to listen to such Hemphillian hash must be truly pitiable if they accept such gospel without "fear and trembling." Hemphill, forsooth, says a mountebank or a maniac, would be tempted into the minds of his hearers the self-destructive fallacy that the Catholic Church was "a parasite" upon the Protestant Church, and that the Church was founded on Protestantism! This is certainly the original idea, and it has outlived God, gospel, and good sense to substantiate it. Hemphill's argument for the foundation of a freshly fanatic fend with frenzy, and who is to be sensational at the expense of truth, history, and Scripture.

Mr. Hemphill seems to work himself up into a great agony of passion against the Catholic Church because, indeed, it will not "take a parasite" as they wished," but "get protoschismal grower very convenient, easily forgets that he is asking the Catholic Church to commit a blunder which many of the Protestant sects, even, have the good common sense to avoid! A Quaker, Presbyterian, a Lutheran, or a Methodist, is not permitted to believe as they wish, but they must conform to the tenets of the sect they are in communion with, and when they sneer to put Mr. Hemphill's principle into practice they are forthwith excommunicated from further fellowship.

Now let us, in all candor, ask Mr. Hemphill what kind of a stress he would create out of a body of Christian wheels in such person believed just as much of a little of the Christian theory as he wished? It would be a sort of religious concubinism which would be known by the ridiculous cognomen of an undenominational Church, or a religious What is It? In Mr. Hemphill view then Almighty God! Yet the source of all wisdom and truth tells us in words that cannot be exploded away: "Unless you believe and are baptized you cannot be saved." The same infinite source of all knowledge also commands us to "Love the Church" and to believe all she teaches, and nowhere in the Scriptures can Mr. Hemphill, or any other lecturer of truth, discover a single text by which to prove the power of such individual to retain as little or to reject as much of the commands and teachings of God and His Apostles as may seem suitable. "He who is not with Me is against Me," says our Blessed Redeemer, thereby signifying that we must accept, without mental reservation, all the teachings of the Church, because a divided heart is fatal to God.

Mr. Hemphill's congregation must have a nice conception of the Pope if they were gullible enough to believe the blasphemous assertion of their teacher (save the mark!) when he told them (as reported by the Ville) that the Pontiff "made the people of his Church believe that he was equal to Jesus Christ." It would be almost needless to refute such ridiculous nonsense were it not for the fact that "all the fools are not dead yet," and there may be some persons who would think the charge true because the Mormons had not shattered it with a shot from its battery. In all the long lies of Popes, from Peter to Leo, there is not one of them who ever arrogated to themselves the divine position so blasphemously charged against them by hallucinated Hemphill. Every Catholic knows this, and the non-Catholic who pretends not to know it is either stupidly ignorant or the victim of wilful prejudice.

Mr. Hemphill closed his parody on truth by calmly assuring his astonished audiences that "Catholics claimed to have the power of opening the gates of hell." Well, perhaps it might be a good thing for Mr. H., and other heretics, if they did possess that power, because Catholic charity has not boasted "I hope, Father," said a Protestant parson to a Catholic priest one day after a convivial meeting, "that when you go to Heaven you will get the keys from St. Peter so you can let in." "Indeed, sir," replied the priest, "you should rather hope I might secure the keys of the lower place, because they I would let you out!" And it is in this spirit that we wish, for the sake of all unfortunate sinners, that Mr. Hemphill's remaining had a grain of reason in it, but the Christ teaches that "out of hell there is no redemption," consequently it is only one of Mr. Hemphill's hallucinations to insinuate that the Church has any power to open the gates which will only be closed upon all those who preserve in bearing false witness against their neighbor—a fact Mr. Hemphill may well meditated of if he will only study the Scriptures a little more and slander the Catholic Church a little less.

The Malignity of Harper's Magazine.

The most unscrupulous and malignant pulpit-foe of the Catholic religion in America are the Harper Bros., the publishers, in New York. In alpha publications having their name they hide every opportunity to insert Protestant Catholic Church in a light before the world, and the Catholic who patronizes their publications, and who willingly encourage their media through reading them, is a coward who is unworthy the name of Catholic. A friend sends us a leaf from the March number of the magazine publishing a pictorial sketch of book makers, in which is find the following foul and libelous conception of some Connecticut Protestant ministers:

"A gear Irishmaster by dying is one of the most common ones, appeared a with a return from the Protestant Episcopal Church in the last December. The wish was readily conferred, and Mr. Gallagher's remains were laid in an amazing equipment. The priests, decked in their vestments, sprinkled holy water on the coffin, and then, amidst a light window over the grave, sang a long Latin dirge, and then proceeded to the grave, lower, and then performed the last office of the Church. The priests then left the grave, and the Protestant ministers, who had stood by, now came forward and read the burial service of the Church of England. The Protestant ministers, who are Protestant Episcopalians, are not to be blamed for the fact that "all the fools are not dead yet," and there may be some persons who would think the charge true because the Mormons had not shattered it with a shot from its battery. In all the long lies of Popes, from Peter to Leo, there is not one of them who ever arrogated to themselves the divine position so blasphemously charged against them by hallucinated Hemphill. Every Catholic knows this, and

The Flagrant falsehoods of Maline Marvin.

The day has gone by when Protestant preachers can procure brown paper battery by preaching Biblical sermons to their flocks, on the "Sabbath day," they are now repelled—in too many instances—to put on the paint and powdered cosmetics of the town and get off stale slanders about "Popery," or sine manufacture malignant falsehoods about the Church—in order to attract that attention by their pulpit-sermons which they cannot command through plain, practical, Christian preaching.

A certain outstanding author in Portland paints himself up like a barber's pole every "Sabbath" and "goes for" Popery with the flash of a pyrotechnist after a pots de fois gras! Like all harlequins who substitute stale jokes for fresh humor, Marvin the maniac makes mention at the Church of Rome and then grins through his horse collar in order to excite the risibilities of his audience. To pay any serious attention to such a ministerial moonshiner would be beneath the dignity of any decent journalist. There are Peter Funks among fanatics who are sent too low in the scale of respectability to deserve any notice save such as incident bummers might receive from the boot-toes of gentlemen. The congregation that is compelled to listen to such stupid vapourings as Marvin mouths at them must comprise more than a little Christians, and the paper that prints his disreputable diatribes under the caption of "Divine Food" should be swept with a dirty broom from the decorations of every Catholic home in Portland.

The only reason we notice this crazy conceit is because several of our Portland subscribers have sent us marked copies of a half-dead daily sheet containing a disgraceful sneer, under the heading, "Divine Food," a blasphemous title for what should be appropriately called "Flip-flaps for Fools and Fanatics."

Marvin's monkey-shines can have only a temporary effect, and that is to disguise all decent, conservative Christians among his congregation, so that they will turn away from a teacher who parades such a poltroon preacher in his pulpit, and from a shameless editor who blasphemy, cant, and calumny are the Christian doctrine doled out every Lord's Day. So far as the Catholic Church is concerned, she has nothing to fear from feeble-minded moonlembs like Marvin. All Catholics can do is to hold their noses whenever they are overtaken by the offensive effluvia of such slander-lovers, and, like shrieks, and pray for the poor, pitiful people who are so ignorant as to encourage such a shameful parody upon Christian preachers.

Like all traitors who have raved and raged against the Church of God all ages, Marvin's race will soon be run. His pyrotechnic bolting will soon pall upon the public taste, his fanaticism will cease to tickle the ears of his evangelical brethren in error, and then the poor, played-out preacher will be forced to pull up stakes and seek "fresh fields and pastures new."

Gladstone's Franchise Bill.

The Franchise Bill introduced into the British Parliament by Premier Gladstone seems to be very acceptable to the Irish parliament members, and if it becomes a law it will enable the Parnellites to greatly augment their power through the election of additional representatives. In prospecting the measure, Mr. Gladstone gave this seemingly candid explanation why it should receive the support of the majority: "To introduce separate franchise bills for England, Ireland, and Scotland, with the prospect of carrying the English and Scotch bills, and leaving the Irish bill to take its chance, would be altogether impracticable. The arguments in favor of a uniform bill were unanswerable. Nothing could induce him to abandon such a bill. A redistribution of Parliamentary constituencies must follow reform of the franchise. If the two questions were embodied in the same bill, it would prove fatal to both. He entrusted his supporters not to endanger the success of the bill by proposing additions. The measure is greatly extending the franchise and placing the voice of boroughs and counties upon an equal footing, would increase the voting power of the United Kingdom about 2,000,000, of which the number England would furnish 1,000,000, Ireland 500,000, and Scotland 200,000. This result was certainly surprising to him. If the House took a broad view of the matter, enfranchisement must be considered desirable. The measure was worthy, and as voters under the Constitution were the strength of the Constitution, if these measures should become law, then their constituents would form a compact mass, who would rally to the support of the Constitution, which would be stronger than ever."

The principle opposition to the bill will come from the English Liberals, who do not relish the measure, which will result from Irelandand Scotland, and thereby lessen the influence of the English members. We hope the franchise may be extended, not only because the measure is based upon justice towards the people, but also because it will give Ireland a representation of ninety members in Parliament, and with such a patriotic phalanx at his back Parnell can emulate Gratitan in his demand for Irish independence.

The Pope's Recent Encyclical.

The text of the Encyclical of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII., to the French Bishops—already alluded to in the subjoined—is published a few week ago—has been published. It is the Pope speaks to the French people of how true their ancestors were to the Faith and he cautions the Bishops to redouble their vigilance in the presence of the schemes of sectaries, whose plots notoriously threaten religion, but are equally dangerous for the State. The attention of God from the Coalition—a monstrous thing, indeed, even to Pagans—will be a source of evil to the Church of France, it is added, shows that those alternations of prosperity and decay through which the Church of France people remained faithful to religion or revolted against it. It is easy to avert all such ills by observing the precepts of religion, whether as regards the family or the State. As to the family, the children of Christians must be instructed in the precepts of the faith. To separate education from instruction is to contend that infancy must remain neutral in the subject of duties towards God—a false, disastrous system, leading to atheism. Parents must, therefore, see that their children receive religious instruction, and must in the schools with nothing injurious to their faith; and must be required by both divine and natural law. The Church has always recommended such religious, and condemned those that are neutral schools. To obey the Church in this is to conduce to social salvation, for it is the only way of forming citizens capable of fulfilling their duties.

The Pope then speaks of the laymen devoted to the Church, whose merits he extolls, and whose action he encourages. He also speaks of the merits of sacrifice of the clergy, and says that all these results will be accentuated by emulation and preservative activity. Learning must be assuredly developed among the clergy; the authority of the Bishops must be cared for all, especially for the priests, and as to the laymen devoted to the Church, who are in a position to serve religion effectively, by word or by pen, they must multiply their efforts, but in cultivated action, observing the words of the Bible would be realized: "Woe to anyone devious doctrinator. With this important object, it is necessary, in order to preserve unity, to encourage private opinion, it must be done willingly for the common weal. Catholic writers must spare no efforts to preserve concord in everything. Their rule must be—filial obedience towards their Bishops, without whose wish they ought to undertake nothing. Lastly, all ought to redouble their fervor and their prayers, in order that mercy may prevail over Divine anger for the salvation of France.

—The Chronicle styles Bishop Dwenger's refusal to permit the body of a suicide to remain interred in a Catholic cemetery "religious intolerance." We would like to inquire what kind of "intolerance" it would be to refuse to bury the body of Kalloch in the same vault with the deceased proprietor of the Chronicle? Then the Chronicle would be on the other leg and the Chronicle would not think the Catholic Church so "intolerant," after all, in reserving her consecrated ground for those only who die in her communion.

—Special services for colored Catholics are held regularly on Sunday evenings in the cathedral at Richmond, Va.

OUR OLYMPIA LETTER.

Progress of the Faith in the Northwest—Bishop Gross Returns to New Ashangy—Full Description of the Sacred Bishop, Etc.

OLYMPIA, W. T., February 24, 1886.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

DEAR SIR—For past the week the people of Olympia and vicinity have been able to indulge in morning and sleigh-riding. During a few days it seemed as if the elements were determined to keep the sport of the season from us, regards our "City of the Sound." But we got our sleigh ride, and it was returned. The snow is gone, and spring has opened up in all its glory. Spring plant seeds are coming up out of the ground, and everything is in a state of life. The ice has disappeared from our harbor, and the boats are now plying between Olympia and Tacoma. The Olympia Tacoma Stage Line has been blessed by a visit from the Sacred Bishop of Nesqually, who has been on a visit to the Sound for the last two weeks. The Bishop is a very pleasant gentleman, and he has made a valuable friend of the Sound. Mr. Gross is a man with a most antidiluvian reputation for sanctity, and he has lived up to it. He is the National Consul of the League of Sacred Hearts, and he has a vote of thanks from the Sound and Washington Territory for his services in the cause of the Sacred Heart. The object in the visit of the Bishop to the Sound was to dedicate a church at Ashangy, and many others being present, he was pleased if the Bishop was present, to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Immaculate Conception. The building is 40 by 80 feet, with fresh frescoed walls, and is well seated throughout. The altar is a very beautiful piece of work, and is the work of Mr. Campbell, of your city, who, I understand, has been made by him at the request of the Bishop of Olympia, the planning by Mr. Patrick of Tacoma, and the work by Mr. Campbell, of Olympia. The first and second stories are divided by a large and well-finished cornice, which gives a very pleasing effect. The altar is a very beautiful piece of work, and is the work of Mr. Campbell, of Olympia

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. T. FRASER . . . EDITOR

—PRO-CONCLUDITE—

ANSWERS to Leisure Hours No 79.

1st—The Pen. 7th—Heart.
2nd—OPTICIANS
SERENADED
BEECHES RECALLS
AWELTS CALLS ERRED SEAS
S
8th—ATTENATION
TURMALINE
TRONING
EMOTIVE NATIONS ANE
ING
OR
E
3rd—"The Maid of Poetry." 9th—Gunpowder.
4th— C
O M PAR REPEAL PILOT
BRIGHTAL PICTURE
CURMUCLAR MASTERS
MASURED ROUTERS
BALEF TREND
ALEF ANT
R 10th—Death.
5th—Pasty. 11th—STAMMODICAL
ASTRONOMER
ABSOLISES
ABSOLVES
6th—Tyrant. 12th—T
TOPS PENCILCED
OAS TORTICOLLIS
ORE ATTRITION
ERRED VELLETS
ALEF DEVILTRY
S DIN
TS
Puzzle by "Leisure Hours" No 72 were solved by Mrs. M. O. Connell, A. M. Martin, Lark, Rosalie, Maud Eldon, Thos. Moss Lon. Collins, Jas. Fitzpatrick, Jas. Lynch, Jas. Fraser, Peter Flynn, Hugh Gallagher, Jas. Hynes, Symmons, Thos. Cullinan Lad—Quando.
Correct lists of Puzzles by C. M., S. A. M., and Will J. Ass—Much eleven solutions.
ANSWERS LXXVIII.
1ST HOUR.—PYRAMIDAL.
Where is the Maid of Malines, A, E, A, is to name, 3, 4, 5, 6 in the world. A, 6, 7, is identification.
Answer—Margaret of Parma, Duchess of Parma.
2ND HOUR.—LAST ANAGRAM.
Answer—A Tender Mother, A Lover, A Soldier, A Mariner, A Traveler, A Preacher, A Anchorite, Death, Time, Eternity.
DOUBLE ACROSTIC.
1. Nonsensical statements. 2. Absence of reproval. 3. Consisting of granite. 4. Threatened. 5. Loose flowing garments like Scots. 6. Hollow. 7. Roman poet, A. C. 65. 8. One hundred thousand. 9. Geographical prefix meaning strength. 10. A letter.
Brooklyn, N. Y. N. OBIN.
☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.
TWIST-TWIN.
HIBERNIAN MURPHY.—One more left.
I SCHOLAR.—Sent answer to N. Orin.
THE MYSTIC TRIFFIT.—Sorry for the prophet! (pro-fit.)
N. OBIN.—Another batch would meet with a speedy insertion.
INDEX TAB.—Your proposed half squares have been published before. Square and diamond accepted.
SOLITAIRE.—The only correct answer to the Sh. Hour (Squares), in No. 73, was received from Sphinx.
WILL I AM.—Please send me your authority for saying that the Charade (11th, Hour) in Leisure Hours No. 56, is not original with Gen. E. Norris, and I will investigate the matter.

Sphinx Mission.

Sh-1—Boston—Lobsh-ster.
"The Mystic Supreme is out."
Admirers are going to spend a few weeks among the green groves of Fields.

Sphinx Mission.

Sh-1—Boston—Lobsh-ster.
"The Mystic Supreme is out."
Admirers are going to spend a few weeks among the green groves of Fields.

Sphinx Mission.

Sh-1—Boston—Lobsh-ster.
"The Mystic Supreme is out."
Admirers are going to spend a few weeks among the green groves of Fields.

Who only values pleasure of a day;
Thoughtless girl!
The time will come when she will lady;
Giddy girl!
She'll see the error of her way's all lady;
Foolish girl!
Dialton, O. TOM A. HAWK.
12TH HOUR.—BALF SQUARE.
To Squibob.
1. Nonsensical statements. 2. Absence of reproval. 3. Consisting of granite. 4. Threatened. 5. Loose flowing garments like Scots. 6. Hollow. 7. Roman poet, A. C. 65. 8. One hundred thousand. 9. Geographical prefix meaning strength. 10. A letter.
Brooklyn, N. Y. N. OBIN.
☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.
TWIST-TWIN.
HIBERNIAN MURPHY.—One more left.
I SCHOLAR.—Sent answer to N. Orin.
THE MYSTIC TRIFFIT.—Sorry for the prophet! (pro-fit.)
N. OBIN.—Another batch would meet with a speedy insertion.
INDEX TAB.—Your proposed half squares have been published before. Square and diamond accepted.
SOLITAIRE.—The only correct answer to the Sh. Hour (Squares), in No. 73, was received from Sphinx.
WILL I AM.—Please send me your authority for saying that the Charade (11th, Hour) in Leisure Hours No. 56, is not original with Gen. E. Norris, and I will investigate the matter.

Sphinx Mission.

Sh-1—Boston—Lobsh-ster.
"The Mystic Supreme is out."
Admirers are going to spend a few weeks among the green groves of Fields.

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No 72 were solved by Mrs. M. O. Connell, A. M. Martin, Lark, Rosalie, Maud Eldon, Thos. Moss Lon. Collins, Jas. Fitzpatrick, Jas. Lynch, Jas. Fraser, Peter Flynn, Hugh Gallagher, Jas. Hynes, Symmons, Thos. Cullinan Lad—Quando.
Correct lists of Puzzles by C. M., S. A. M., and Will J. Ass—Much eleven solutions.

ANSWERS LXXVIII.

1ST HOUR.—PYRAMIDAL.

Where is the Maid of Malines, A, E, A, is to name, 3, 4, 5, 6 in the world. A, 6, 7, is identification.
Answer—Margaret of Parma, Duchess of Parma.

2ND HOUR.—LAST ANAGRAM.

Answer—A Tender Mother, A Lover, A Soldier, A Mariner, A Traveler, A Preacher, A Anchorite, Death, Time, Eternity.

DOUBLE ACROSTIC.

1. Nonsensical statements. 2. Absence of reproval. 3. Consisting of granite. 4. Threatened. 5. Loose flowing garments like Scots. 6. Hollow. 7. Roman poet, A. C. 65. 8. One hundred thousand. 9. Geographical prefix meaning strength. 10. A letter.

Brooklyn, N. Y. N. OBIN.

☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.

TWIST-TWIN.

HIBERNIAN MURPHY.—One more left.
I SCHOLAR.—Sent answer to N. Orin.
THE MYSTIC TRIFFIT.—Sorry for the prophet! (pro-fit.)
N. OBIN.—Another batch would meet with a speedy insertion.
INDEX TAB.—Your proposed half squares have been published before. Square and diamond accepted.
SOLITAIRE.—The only correct answer to the Sh. Hour (Squares), in No. 73, was received from Sphinx.
WILL I AM.—Please send me your authority for saying that the Charade (11th, Hour) in Leisure Hours No. 56, is not original with Gen. E. Norris, and I will investigate the matter.

Sphinx Mission.

Sh-1—Boston—Lobsh-ster.
"The Mystic Supreme is out."
Admirers are going to spend a few weeks among the green groves of Fields.

THE CATHOLIC BOOK HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Is happy to announce to the Catholics of the Pacific Coast that he has now opened—in connection with his San Jose Establishment, a Branch House at

737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Where he will keep constantly on hand
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
—OF—
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
—COMPRISING—
Miscellaneous and Controversial Works, Prayer Books, Etc., Etc.

SHEET MUSIC
The Largest Stock on the Coast.

Sole Agent for Brainard's, Sons, P. A. North, and other Music Publishers.
Catholic Music Books, Hymns and Masses, Complete and for Cathedral services.

PIANOS AND ORGANS!!
CRUCIFIXES, CROSSES AND STATUARY.
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In French, Spanish, German and English; at all prices from $1 cents to $25.

Orders by mail from any portion of the Pacific Coast promptly attended to and filled at LOWEST CASH PRICES.

A. WALDTEUFEL,
The Catholic Book House of the Pacific Coast,
737 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
And First Street, San Jose, - - California

REGULATIONS FOR LENT.

FOR THE DIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO.

1.—All the week days of Lent, from Ash Wednesday (February 20th) till Easter Sunday, abstinence is a commandment, with the allowance of a moderate collation.

2.—The precept of fasting binds also that of abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But, by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed, in this Diocese during Lent, except on the following days, to wit: the Wednesdays and Fridays, the Ember days, the Thursday and Saturday of Holy Week, and the Eve of the Feast of St. Joseph; on which days there is no leave to use flesh meat, except by dispensation from the respective Pastors, which they are hereby authorized to grant in cases of necessity. All Sundays are also days of abstinence, but not of obligation. The Holy See restricts the use of flesh meat to one meal on the day in which abstinence is observed, except for those employed in heavy labor, and for all on Sundays.

3.—The prescription as to fish and flesh meat at the same meal is forbidden in Lent, even on Sundays.

4.—It should be carefully observed that, according to an answer of the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, to the Bishop of Tarentum in 1866, and to the Bishop of Ireland in 1877, the Holy See has never consented to have allowed the use of milk, butter, and still less, of cheese, in this ecclesiastical province, for those belonging to the peculiar condition of the faithful in the Province, the Holy See has kindly consented to tolerate it in the use of milk, butter and cheese in a small quantity, says, however, expressly, that persons not bound to fast are not subject to the above restrictions, nor to abstinence from eggs.

5.—The use of lard or other fat condiment is allowed in Lent and throughout the year, except on Ash Wednesday, Ember-days, the Eve of the Annunciation, the last four days of Holy Week and the Eve of Pentecost, of the Assumption, of All Saints and of Christmas. On Good Friday eggs and all lactiferous substances are forbidden throughout the day.

6.—Some prayers, at option, are recommended during Lent, particularly on those days in which flesh meat is used.

7.—Lent being a penitential time, the Pastors are requested to lay before the Faithful the importance of Christian mortification, and also the grievous obligation of complying with their Easter duty, which may be fulfilled from the first Sunday of Lent, they will frequently and earnestly impress upon their respective flocks the necessity of attending, before all other things, to the salvation of their souls, and they will exhort them to the faithful discharge of their Christian duties, the only thing that can secure to us the everlasting happiness of heaven.

+ J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

FOR THE DIOCESE OF GRASS VALLEY.

1. All the week days of Lent, from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday, are fasting days of precept, on one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation.

2. The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But, by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed in this Diocese during Lent, except on the following days, to wit: the Wednesdays and Fridays, the Ember days, the Thursday and Saturday of Holy Week, and the Eve of the Feast of St. Joseph; on which days there is no leave to use flesh meat, except by dispensation from the respective Pastors, which they are hereby authorized to grant in cases of necessity. All Sundays are also days of abstinence, but not of obligation. The Holy See restricts the use of flesh meat to one meal on the day in which abstinence is observed, except for those employed in heavy labor, and for all on Sundays.

3. The prescription as of fish and flesh meat at the same meal is forbidden in Lent, even on Sundays.

4. It should be carefully observed that, according to an answer of the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, to the Bishop of Tarentum in 1866, and to the Bishop of Ireland in 1877, the Holy See has never consented to have allowed the use of milk, butter, and still less, of cheese, in this ecclesiastical province, for those belonging to the peculiar condition of the faithful in the Province, the Holy See has kindly consented to tolerate it in the use of milk, butter and cheese in a small quantity, says, however, expressly, that persons not bound to fast are not subject to the above restrictions, nor to abstinence from eggs.

5. The use of lard or other fat condiment is allowed in Lent and throughout the year, except on Ash Wednesday, Ember-days, the Eve of the Annunciation, the last four days of Holy Week and the Eve of Pentecost, of the Assumption, of All Saints and of Christmas. On Good Friday eggs and all lactiferous substances are forbidden throughout the day.

6. Some prayers, at option, are recommended during Lent, particularly on those days in which flesh meat is used.

7. Lent being a penitential time, the Pastors are requested to lay before the Faithful the importance of Christian mortification, and also the grievous obligation of complying with their Easter duty, which may be fulfilled from the first Sunday of Lent; they will frequently and earnestly impress upon their respective flocks the necessity of attending, before all other things, to the salvation of their souls, and they will exhort them to the faithful discharge of their Christian duties, the only thing that can secure to us the everlasting happiness of heaven. By this prescription they will hold religious exercises in their churches several times a week, according as their pecuniary means permit.

+ EUGENE O'CONNELL,
Bishop of Grass Valley.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
☞ VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy.
THE LATE ARCHBISHOP WOOD, OF PHILADELPHIA,
Had a LUMINOUS CRUCIFIX, and said, "It is a Great Incentive to Devotion."
Address Orders to
A. WALDTEUFEL,
General Agent for the Pacific Coast,
737 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
And First Street, San Jose, - - California.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,
Respectfully announce that they have opened
THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—OF—
GENT'S "n" BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.
Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.
We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible
CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell.
And See Our Joints & Co.

ESTABLISHED 1855.
J. O'KANE,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER OF
HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,
And Everything Necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.
Boots and Rubber Saddlery a Specialty
Single Harness from $10 a set.
☞ Repairing promptly attended to.
767 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for horses, the robe in all the principal theatres and horsemen on the Pacific Coast.

D'BRIEN & WARD'S
Male and Female
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.
MALE DEPARTMENT, 618 Clay Street
FEMALE DEPARTMENT, 901 Clay Street.
ONLY TO BE HAD AT THE ABOVE FIRST-CLASS OFFICE
A Help, Farm Hands, Gardeners, Dairymen, Sawmill Hands, Shepherds, Teamsters, Laborers, and Married Couples for private families and ranches. Also, good reliable Female Help, such as Cooks, Nurses, Housemaids, Seamstresses, Waiters for hotels at 618 Clay street.

JAS. R. KELLY & CO
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
PAINTS, OILS and GLASS
221 and 223 Market Street
Just Below Beale—the New Block.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.
MANUFACTURERS OF—
Hall's Patent Fire-Burglar Proof Safes,
511 and 513 California Street.
Safes made for church and other uses. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD
Boats and Trains will leave San Francisco as follows:
WEEK DAYS.
7.00 A. M. via Tiburon, from Washington street wharf. Connecting at Tomales with Tomales and Petaluma Stage Line, for Tomales, Bodega, Russian River, Stewarts Point, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Lakeport, Ukiah, Kendrick, Natrona Hulda, Willits, Longvale, Laytonville and Cummings.
4.50 P. M. via Sausalito, from Market street wharf. Connecting at Cloverdale with Stage for Point Arena and Navarro.
A. W. On Saturday this train will run through to Ukiah, arriving at 8.30 P. M. Returning, will leave Cloverdale on Monday at 8 A. M.
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.
8.20 A. M. (Sundays only), via Sausalito from Washington street wharf, for Cloverdale and intermediate points. Returning leaves Healdsburg at 1 P. M. Arriving at Sausalito at 5 P. M. Cloverdale, $1.50 Healdsburg, $1.25. Saturday night tickets good to leave Healdsburg at 6 A. M.
ARTHUR HUGHES, PETER J. MCLYNN,
General Agent. Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agt.

WOODEN MANTELS
R. BERRING,
Manufacturer of
Fine Furniture, House, Bank and Office Fittings.
459 and 461 Pacific Street.
☞ DESIGNS FURNISHED ☜
$5 to $20 Saving by Purchasing Direct from Factory.
Office and Factory, 459 and 461 Pacific St., Portland, Me.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
BOOTS AND SHOES.
JOHN SULLIVAN,
NORTHEAST COR. OF BATTERY AND JACKSON streets, office to make to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS, at from..... $9 to $9 50
California Leather Boots..... $8 00
French Calf Oxford Ties..... $4 00
California..... $3 50
Boys' and Children's Boots $3 00 made to order. Persons in the country ordering Boots and Shoes to the amount of Twelve Dollars or more, will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the express charges light. I sell Boots and Shoes of MY OWN MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C O D. Patronize only one price.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA . . . . CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of procuring for young ladies, at a trifling expense, a moral and intellectual education. Great features in particular that should recommend the Academy, is the influence ever exerted to keep the pupils in view and habits of accuracy and to render them useful members of society and of home.
The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $85
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA
This institution, established in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privilege of conferring degrees. It occupies buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, and is the oldest institution of learning in California. It contains complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable Cabinets of Natural History, Chemistry, etc., practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Commercial Business. For the latter a new building 100x40 feet has been finished, that have nothing to be desired.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$ 12 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches, Washing and Mending of Linen, Bed and Bedding, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of ten months.....$50 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.
REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.
ia3 President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Fifth and Jackson Sts. OAKLAND, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School for boys under the age of fifteen years. Its object is to secure to its pupils a thorough Christian education, combined with the best literary advantages.
Parents and guardians desirous of sending their sons or wards to Boarding School, need only visit this Academy, to be convinced that it possesses all the requisites which interest central in the conducting system of Catholic Institutions.
Students are received at any time during the scholastic year for a shorter period than one term of five months.
TERMS:
(Payable in U. S. gold coin, and invariably in advance)
Board, Washing and Tuition, per term of 5 months, $150
Medicines and Medical Attendance.....10
Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....10
BRO. LASALIAN, Director

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
FURNISHED WITH COMPLETE APPARATUS and courses receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.
The Commercial course has been established in accordance with those who wish to receive a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, one department receives special attention. The daily exercises in Elocution, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and criticised by the class room.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half yearly in advance):
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Day Students.....60 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Charity, is beautifully situated on an elevation in the pleasant, healthy town of Rio Vista. The grounds are remarkably large, the building new, and well furnished with all that modern improvement and the comfort of the pupils demand—groups are classified, and well adapted to their wants. The course of instruction is that of the State of California, and includes the use of the useful branches of a solid education.
Pupils received at any time during the scholastic year. Terms date from the date of entrance.
Pupils admitted for a shorter time pay a portion of the term only, the fees to commence January and end in June.
Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$125 00
Instrument Rent.....5 00
Washing.....20 00
Vocal Music (private lessons).....20 00
Instrumental Music (private lessons).....20 00
Drawing, Painting and Fancy Work form extra charges.
DAY ACADEMY.
Terms per session, in advance:
Entrance Fee.....$5 00
Tuition (Primary Class).....20 00
Music, Piano lessons, with use of instrument.....40 00
Music, Guitar lessons, with use of instrument.....40 00
☞ No extras to be required. For further particulars apply to

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND, - - - CALIFORNIA.
CONDUCTED BY
The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Webster and Jackson and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect on the lake. The hotel is supplied with all the modern improvements and every convenience being spared to provide for the comfort and health of pupils.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish in School) $250 00
Washing.....20 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....15
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

COLLEGE
OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1851, chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of similar College's Institutions in the United States.
Patronage required. For terms and particulars address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE
Twelfth and K streets,
SACRAMENTO.....
A LIMITED NUMBER OF BOARDERS CAN BE received, who will be required to bring with them—not, at the outset, but when, enjoying the confidence of their parents, they shall deem it expedient—Bed, Bedstead, Table, Bedding, Bedding, Towels, etc. For particulars apply to REV. CONSTANT.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,
Golden Gate Ave. San Francisco.
CONDUCTED BY
THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.
THIS ACADEMY PLEASANTLY SITUATED in the Western Addition offers the most desirable advantages for the education of young ladies. Its new and spacious buildings have been erected with every modern improvement for the comfort of its inmates. Its course of instruction embraces all the branches of a solid and refined education.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, $300.....
EXTRA CHARGES.
Piano, with use of Instrument per month.....$ 1 00
Vocal Music, Private Lessons.....
Vocal Music, Private Lessons.....
Drawing.....
Painting in Water Colors, per session.....
Painting in Water Colors.....
Tuition in French, Spanish, Latin, Greek, Italian, Music, Dancing, French, Fancy Work, Crochet, Needlework do not form extra charges.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERS to young ladies advantages for pursuing their studies to receive a solid and refined education. Founded in 1851, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and empowered to confer the degrees and honors usually conferred in the Institutions of the United States.
It occupies large buildings, with extensive shady and spacious play grounds, and possesses every requisite for a healthy, agreeable and attractive home. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a solid and refined education.
Pupils are received at any time during the scholastic year, and are classed according to their proficiency.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, $300 per annum.
EXTRA CHARGES.
Piano, with use of Instrument per month.....$ 1 00
Vocal Music, Private Lessons.....
Drawing.....
Painting in Water Colors, per session.....
Tuition in French, Spanish, Latin, Greek, Italian, Music, Dancing, French, Fancy Work, Crochet, Needlework do not form extra charges.
For further particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

ST. ANTHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES
OAKLAND.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of Mercy. The building is in the healthy and most desirable portion of Oakland. The scholastic year commences on the 1st of August, and ends on the 1st of June.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly)
Entrance Fee.....$10 00
Washing.....
Pupils remaining at the Academy during the vacation will be charged $20.
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Lady Superior, or to the Mother Superior.

Convent of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary,
GILROY, - - - CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, CONDUCTED by the religious sisters of the B. H. and M. For terms, etc., apply to the
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

URSULINE ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES
The Fourth Annual Session Will Open
AUGUST, 1884.
For Prospectus and full particulars, Address
SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINES,
Santa Rosa.

BEATTY'S CABINET ORGANS $125. Pianos $175. Factory: Cor. Mission and 16th streets, San Francisco. Address DANIEL BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

MONITOR MENTION.

Dr. Charles A. Clinton has opened a branch office at 1008 Leavitt street, opposite New City Hall. Hours—1 and 7 to 8.

— Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 1284 Market street.

— I have sent numerous St. cents at Smith's standard street.

— Clean carpets with Cleaner Washing Powder.

— You will not have some stomach if you drink Hostetter's Bitters.

— Annual church suits (Fabric Vinciant) it will cure a case of pain.

— Apply central to a lady. Advice on children for Dr. Fowler's Scientific Concentrated Food. Price 25 cents. Your druggist keeps it.

— A large variety of old and new books, including Dr. Medical, poetry, and children's books, at Bancroft's bookstore, 721 Market street.

— Dr. Pierce's Pellets, 1004 Howard street. Medicines are brought at time, do Cleaning, Furniture, Bedding and all Household Articles. Business strictly.

— J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and jewelry. Watches and clocks repaired. Opposite Grand Opera House.

— If a set for teeth—warranted as good as can Tooth Filled, $1. Dr. Simon, Dentist, 25 Market street.

— M. Lynn, carpenter and builder, 633 Third street, near Harrison. Shop and office fitting and general jobbing promptly attended to.

— A full set of Teeth, $10. Gold Fillings from $1. Extracted without pain. Dr. Lynn, W. H. Dentist, 1182 Market, 12 Every Hour.

— Dr. William D. McNally, late resident physician of the Lying-in Hospital, Dublin, Ireland, has resumed his practice at 1008 Powell, near Pacific. For the latter a new building 1004-10 Jan has been finished, that have nothing to be desired.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$ 12 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches, Washing and Mending of Linen, Bed and Bedding, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of ten months.....$50 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.
ia3 President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Fifth and Jackson Sts. OAKLAND, CAL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School for boys under the age of fifteen years. Its object is to secure to its pupils a thorough Christian education, combined with the best literary advantages.

Parents and guardians desirous of sending their sons or wards to Boarding School, need only visit this Academy, to be convinced that it possesses all the requisites which interest central in the conducting system of Catholic Institutions.

Students are received at any time during the scholastic year for a shorter period than one term of five months.

TERMS:

(Payable in U. S. gold coin, and invariably in advance)

Board, Washing and Tuition, per term of 5 months, $150
Medicines and Medical Attendance.....10
Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....10

BRO. LASALIAN, Director

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

FURNISHED WITH COMPLETE APPARATUS and courses receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established in accordance with those who wish to receive a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, one department receives special attention. The daily exercises in Elocution, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and criticised by the class room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance):

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Day Students.....60 00

Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Charity, is beautifully situated on an elevation in the pleasant, healthy town of Rio Vista. The grounds are remarkably large, the building new, and well furnished with all that modern improvement and the comfort of the pupils demand—groups are classified, and well adapted to their wants. The course of instruction is that of the State of California, and includes the use of the useful branches of a solid education.

Pupils received at any time during the scholastic year. Terms date from the date of entrance.

Pupils admitted for a shorter time pay a portion of the term only, the fees to commence January and end in June.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.

BOARDING PUPILS.

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$125 00
Instrument Rent.....5 00
Washing.....20 00
Vocal Music (private lessons).....20 00
Instrumental Music (private lessons).....20 00
Drawing, Painting and Fancy Work form extra charges.

DAY ACADEMY.

Terms per session, in advance:

Entrance Fee.....$5 00
Tuition (Primary Class).....20 00
Music, Piano lessons, with use of instrument.....40 00
Music, Guitar lessons, with use of instrument.....40 00

☞ No extras to be required. For further particulars apply to

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND, - - - CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY
The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Webster and Jackson and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect on the lake. The hotel is supplied with all the modern improvements and every convenience being spared to provide for the comfort and health of pupils.

The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

(Payable half yearly in advance)

Board and Tuition (French and Spanish in School) $250 00
Washing.....20 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....15
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

COLLEGE
OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1851, chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of similar College's Institutions in the United States.

Patronage required. For terms and particulars address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CATHOLIC
Mutual Beneficial ASSOCIATION
—OF THE—
Archdiocese of San Francisco.
President - - Rev. J. H. McNally.
Total Benefits paid to date - - $65,351.00
Assets - - - - - - - - - - $4,648.21
Total Membership to Jan. 7th, 1884 - 1,638
This organization offers the surest, safest and cheapest mode of life insurance extant. It includes the flower of all Catholics between the ages of 18 and 50 years, and it has received the approbation of the Most Reverend Archbishop, D. D., and been commended by the Catholic Clergy and Laity. Its rates are cheaper than any Assessment or well as its sister institutions of the same.
☞ Copies of the Constitution and By-Laws can be had by calling at the office of the association, Rm 113 Montgomery Block, or addressing the undersigned, where the desirable will be in attendance every evening (except Sundays) from 7½ to 9½ o'clock, and where all information relative to the Association may be obtained.
☞ All Letters containing Postal orders, Drafts, etc., or remittances of any kind should be addressed
EDWARD GILSON, Secretary,
1510 Jones Street.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND - - PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,015½ barrels.
ia26

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief. Pamphlet free. Sold by druggists. Dr. J. Hamilton, Sole Proprietor, 1 Kearny st., San Francisco. Medical Dr. BEERSTECKER.

ROOT BEER
IS IN THE HEALTHIEST, PLEASANTEST AND MOST Delicious Beverage Made.
IT HAS ALL THE FIRST QUALITIES OF CHAMPAGNE, without its expense or ill effects. In three Pints, 25 cents; quarts, $1 50 per dozen, delivered free to any part of the city. Order of a Grocer with H. T. ST. JOHN & CO., 14 Stevenson street.

TAILORS.

John Kavanagh,
MERCHANT TAILOR
6 New Montgomery Street,
PALACE HOTEL, S. F.
The Making of Clergymens' Cassocks a Specialty.

N. SWEENY,
MERCHANT TAILOR
41 Second street,
Opposite James street.....San Francisco.
Cassocks and Clerical Clothing a Specialty.

M. FITZPATRICK
—IS—
The BOSS Tailor,
Of the Pacific Coast.
109 FOURTH STREET.
☞ Go there for your CLOTHES. You are sure to find a good fit and a low price.

UNDERTAKERS.

ATKINS MASSEY,
UNDERTAKER.
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKER. Business Parlors, 1017 Market, opp. Stevenson. Residence attached. Telephone No. 3.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once. It produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It is perfectly harmless. It regulates the bowels, and relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa, whether from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Dr. Wolcott's Cure for Heart Disease.

Strongest Heart Tonic has been proved to be a special remedy for all forms of heart disease. It acts on the heart but not upon the system, so that persons who have made a life long study of the heart, and who are the most eminent men of science, principles and practice, have pronounced it the most valuable remedy for all forms of heart disease, and recommend it in preference to any other remedy. Sold by all druggists everywhere. Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Address, Dr. Wolcott's Cure Co., 104 Sansome street, San Francisco.

A Positive cure for a Cough, Cold, drink Damiana Chocolate.

BOILS BROUGHT OUT SOLD! Dr. Bee's Blood Antidote.

A. BOURGOIN
A CARD.

Mrs. Jackson, being informed from England, as well as from the Eastern States, that her Cure for Deafness is now received on the 3d of every month, at 1 P. M., at her

The Propaganda.

HISTORY OF THIS WORLD-RENOWNED INSTITUTION.

THE PROPOSED CONFISCATION OF ITS PROPERTY.

The Robber Government of Italy.

CATHOLIC CHURCH OF THE GLOBE

had been the recipient of the bounty, the tender care and solicitude of the Holy Pontiffs and of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda.

The Urban college was the speedy outgrowth of their liberality and zeal of Pope Urban VIII. It was primarily designed to educate and supply native priests for the missions and to train converted from the ranks of infidelity, subject by schism, the Christianity of the Eastern Church, under the baleful shadow of the Ottoman. The Urban College came to its means and resources of all that time grew up and ground and under its care spiritual and temporal prosperity, the fruit and the pruning roots of other and Western colleges established in the city, or dotted to European and, in course of time, to American shores.

THE ALUMNI OF THE PROPAGANDA

are, and always have been educated, fed and clothed in primary style—in a style equally of Roman dignity and Christian spirit and manliness—" free, gratis, for nothing." The students of many other colleges—that of our own United States among the number—received their education there on the same terms. The Urban College has more than once given martyrs to the cause of Christ, priests and bishops to every country under the sun. Not to mention Cardinals Wiseman, Wood, Reisach, and O'Connor, Lipski, Hohenlohe, and a whole host of Princes of the Church, the glories of our predecessor and the majority of our doctors have spoken for, and at the expense of, the Propaganda.

The students of this truly Catholic institution represent

EVERY NATIONALITY UNDER THE SUN.

The cross that fell on the builders of the Tower of Babel, to some extent, perhaps, by a miracle, or in the days of the Apostles, the gift of tongues, which the Holy Ghost so completely by the College of the Propaganda, to be some of Christ's Church. So that we need to fear not that the Pontiff of the Epiphany to run one of every language, by the Pontiff, and by charity to study of the kindly of the Propaganda, and the Pontiff, and only the Propaganda did, exhibit such an opportunity and such a capacity. Rightly with all her prerogatives, and, yet, that this company under by establishing a similar school at Malta. It ended in a miserable decree.

The Propaganda printing establishment has always been unique in the civilized world. It sent forth hundred Bibles, tendered, hitherto, in fact, all sorts of useful books, and, in Mohammedan lands, the only religious literature was provided with his sanction and at his cost. Not the least striking of them. The first books of many languages that ever ever printed in types issued from

THE PROPAGANDA PRESS.

When attention was boasted in Ireland this month of the Catholic Union types and set about supplying Irish books as early as the year 1848. According to Sangster's dictionary, "The Propaganda is provided with types for printing in forty-eight different languages." Not that so many types in the press at any one time, but the Propaganda prepares always kept abreast of the times, and all modern improvement. It boasts of its press from the whole world at the Paris exhibition of 1878 received the highest prize on the Immaculate Conception did honor to the Pope and to the press.

The Propaganda spent millions yearly in the cause of religion and civilization. Independent of its means, it has established hosts of priests, Pope, Cardinal, bishop and prelate. The Propaganda Cardinals, Archbishop Doyle established out of his mission revenue. In a very prominent place in the hall of the Propaganda there stands a mural tablet, commemorative of the bounty of a certain Bonaparte, who plied her needle and her spinning wheel for years and of a long Italian nobleman who left to the same institution all and his wealth. All also went to help Christ's cause through the hands of the Congregation of the Propaganda. The same Christ who stood in admiration of the widow in the temple and eulogized her and her mite will take equally good care of the modern widow and her mite. Will He overlook the Propaganda and gifts and their announcers? It is a reproach, also, that Italian Catholic property has never yet gone down in direct line beyond the Propaganda.

Only hatred for the truth

THE GOD'S CHURCH

—could possibly induce anybody to shut or close the Propaganda. Religious spirit, science and civilization and letters should claim the consideration of every intelligent man, and should open our eyes to the spirit that now animates the so-called patriots of Italy.

Change the case and put our Supreme Court for the Italian Court of Cassation and Harvard for the Propaganda. What a howl of indignation would arise—and justly arise—against the sixty Vandals who, in spite of the sixty sitting, and ride the horse in drawing covers around the arena. Hue grand a Vandals who to unhoist a spotlight Yankee girl, dubbed for the benefit of some conglomerate name of Italy, pointing upon one foot, the other high in the air, and upon the pedled back of a fiery steed, while from the flying banner of Bonaparte the motto was dust few, so though in jest.

Verily, however, as were the powers of these fantastic democratic, they could not accomplish either impossibilities. Two bounding chargers they, indeed, have handled, at one and the same time, a foot upon the back of each. But to ride in the same manner two raching horses, each circling in the opposite direction—that feat has never yet been promised upon the most inflated of Pope's bills.

But, the thing, or something similar, has been done, or attempted, at last; and behold, it is the same Italian Bonaparte, Monsieur Loyson, who appears as the performer. Catholicism and Protestantism are certainly not scurrying together. The doctrine, for instance, of infallibility and that of Private Interpretation cannot travel side by side. And yet, we find Monsieur Loyson actually trying about to bring once Catholic and Protestant. It is this that he is quoted by the Mobile Register:

"In the beginning, the speaker thanked the rector and the congregation for the privilege granted him to address them. He doubted, he said, if he could add much to what had already been said upon this subject. He had been asked always two questions by those who were anxious to discover his faith: "Are you a Catholic?" "Are you a Protestant?" He answered, and he did it with modesty, that he hoped he could lay good claim to be both.

STRENGTH OF M. LOYSON'S TITLE TO "GALLICAN."

Monsieur Loyson, for himself and his political following, lays claim, it seems, to the title "Gallican Church." Webster defines "Gallican" as "pertaining to Gaul or France." It is well known that when a word or general adjective of this character is applied to some particular object, it is so to distinguish that object, according to its kind, in, above all others, entitled to it. For instance, in France many thousands speak German, and other thousands speak Italian and yet neither the Italian nor German can justly designated as the French language. So, when we speak of English history, we do not and in mind the particular chronicles of the thousands of refugees who fled to England during the Reformation, during the dreadful days of the Revolution.

And now, Monsieur Loyson admits that France is essentially Gallican. He proposes return themselves to omens taken as overwhelmingly Gallican. In view of such facts, and of the pitiful dimensions of his so-called Church, is it not a piece of effrontery on the part of the Holy Father, and of his following, to attempt to take into them—the Church—a designation as the Gallican Church?

WHAT IS PECULIARLY ATTRACTIVE IN THE REFORMED

There have been heretics and other heretics—Gnostics, Manichees, Albigenses, Unitarian, and so on through an almost endless list. It would seem that there should be by this time an exhaustion of possible heresy; a difficulty of assuming some theological or ecclesiastical position so absolutely fantastical that no preceding heretic had ever thought of assuming it. Nevertheless, even at this day, Monsieur Loyson has managed, when cast from the Catholic fold, to alight upon a position so absolutely novel that he has ever prevailed to assume.

The peculiar attraction of this new teaching's creed is its absolute independence of Protestant Reformation. Protestants, we have seen how he is, as he claim, at one and the same time, Catholic and Protestant. Other heretics, who have gone before, have denounced celibacy as anti-Christian and anti-social. Not so Monsieur Loyson, celibatary a virtue as compared to it. But "a Protestant Church without celibacy is but a "noble and valuable institution;" and "the Protestant has had, when already of age, sufficiently shown that the exercise of that noble and valuable institution, we do claim claiming the privilege of repudiating his wife and family." Celibacy, then, is a

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

SONG OF DEATH.

I love the young and beautiful,
I love the old and gray,
And some time I shall prove this love,
By taking them away.

They shall take note a land,
The home of all the blest,
Where all is peace and happiness,
Where holy souls find rest.

Here they will dwell in peace and love,
Together, and forever;
Whatever shall meet their stake,
And with him we'll be never.

Others again I'll take away,
To a land of dark despair;
Where they shall never see their God,
Nor behold the heavenly air.

Ah! yet be with unwilling hands,
I shrink from this decree;
Yet I must do my duty, God
And leave—must meet their doom.

Ah! alas! hard, hard mortals—
Oh! I weep for them in pain
For those you in least expecting me
Will be taken as your gain.

San Francisco, March 1, 1884. CHARITER.

HANDY.

(AN ODE OF THE SITHERS.)

In heaven hallowed square the sheed is the kitchen
Her sleeves were rolled up, and her cheeks all
Her hair was rolled neatly; when I, indiscreetly,
Was standing with Handy Handy was leaning
the dough.

Now, who could be neater, or brighter, or sweeter,
Or who look so charming, or generally so tender,
As Handy, sweet Handy, while leaning the dough?

How dainty the pound it, and squeezed it,
And pinched, and patted it, now quick and now slow,
Ah, who but that madame I've paid for in cash—
Twas only a the was kneading as well as the dough.

At last, when she turned for her pan to the
She saw me and blushed, and said shyly;
Or my bread I'll be spoiling, in spite of my
Sir, I'm Handy.
If you stand here and watch while I'm the dough.

I longed for permission to stay. She'd not
The seven hours spent only "No sir! not Handy." Ah, Handy, I'd be long in Handy
May spend over 20 years with Handy
the dough.

I'm dreaming, sweet Nancy, and can you in fancy,
Your lover, Nancy, and can you in fancy
Ah, yes, yes, yes, in a dainty kitchen
Where Handy, my Nancy, stands kneading
the dough.

THE IRELAND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION.

This society was established in 1869, in the city of Dublin, Ireland, and the object of Mr. Power is to assist, with its inspiration from the "Sons of Ireland," and to encourage industry, and to encourage all industrious people, including our sons and daughters, to be good and honest people, and to encourage the good work of the Irish people, and to encourage the good work of the Irish people, and to encourage the good work of the Irish

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1884.

Polygamy Outside of Utah.

Before Congress assembled the public were daily informed by telegraph that the first of how much interest Senators and Congressmen were manifesting in the "Mormon Question," and how many Constitutional amendments were to be offered, and how many bills were to be presented to Congress for the purpose of putting an end forever to the Utah Zion's polygamy. Well, Congress has been in session now some time, and not a step has been made on the mooted to capture the Mormon Zion, and we are safe in predicting that this session of Congress will pass away—like the many that have preceded it—and Mormonism will continue to live and flourish. This, at first glance, may seem rather singular, when polygamy is admitted by all to be a vastly demoralizing and iniquitous evil. But people do lose sight of the fact that there is a wide-spread polygamy of a different kind among the non-Catholic portion of the population of nearly every State in the Union, and as Congress is empowered by Informus, it stands to reason that the Gentile Mormons outside Utah will protect their co-demons in Utah. Here, at least, better is the reason why has divorced two husbands—and is living with the third—than the Mormon who has three wives? How much more moral is the man who deserts two or three wives in the Eastern States and cohabits with a third woman, and, still, in California, then a Mormon who lives and dies with his four wives around him! If there is any difference, assuredly it is in favor of the lesser sinner—who pretends to be a sinner, and who, while the former fossil pretends to a morality that he possesses not. In the States of Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut and Rhode Island there are more polygamists of the divorced kind then there are in Salt Lake City. Yet no statesman has yet thought of introducing into Congress an amendment to curtail the demoralizing course of the American people. Divorce, it is admitted by pulpit, press, and people, is an evil that will eventually ruinate society, annihilate the family, and ruin the morals of the entire nation. Yet it is countenanced. Yet, while people are passing the civil press, and while our Washington statesmen are obtaining public notice by Mormonism and Mormons, the Divorce Courts are helping to open society a host of male and female scoundrels, who are wrongly understanding the sacredness of every household. Why, it is idle, therefore, to talk about legislating Utah Mormonism out of existence so long as another kind of polygamy is practiced by the people outside the territory of the jurisdiction of the Union. An immoral people cannot purify an immoral country, and immoral divorces can find a remedy, and protect, it is useless to talk about cleansing out the Augean stable in Utah, especially as the people who are expected to perform the task live lodging and feasting in a better than they love religion and virtue.

Some New Sects of Protestant Decay.

The revelations developed by the new between Parson Newman—Gessel's fashioning Connect-inspector—and his fashionable flock, have opened the eyes of a large number of people to the rotenness of Protestantism.

It was at first thought that it was rather inconsistent in here in Methodist preacher fill the pulpit of a Congregational Church; but modern Protestantism possesses the positivity of having a proto-psychic kind of mind, and, as it has long ago detached from Methodism to Mormonism, and fitted to cover any new-fangled system of sectarian folly. When Gessel was molding in Washington Parson Newman was his pet preacher, and when Gessel moved to New York he missed his favorite's pulpit ministrations on Sunday. So a plan was concocted by which Parson Newman was to be hired in order to keep Gessel Gessel well filled with the food of life and feasting off with the living values of salvation. Then Newman was installed as the "star" actor on the Madison avenue stage, with Gessel for stage manager. It was as great a man as General Grant cannot have sensible people to accept Newman's gospel, hence the meeting-house became deserted and the public credulity had become satisfied that Newman was more of a politician than a preacher. The deacons are the dabs going up to nearly $50,000, and at length had not cent to pay for door for Gessel's obtrude, they very naturally concluded that the salary of the "star" preacher should stop, and some other "star" occupy their pulpit. Then began the war which has filled the columns of the Eastern press for a month, and which has revealed the interesting fact that Parson Newman cannot be held amenable to any sectarian authority, for the reason that the Congregational body cannot control a Methodist preacher, and the Methodist body cannot supervise the services of a Congregational Church! Is Newman still "holds the fort," with Gessel's crowd to keep the deacons at bay? And this is a part of this sinful, scheming, sectarian system which some people are simple enough to call religion!

—Ten new churches have been dedicated in this diocese since the year 1880; 10 priests have been added to the number of clergy, and three new seminaries have been opened. The Catholic population has increased about 15,000.

—At St. Peter's Catholic Church, Lowell, Mass., Archbishop Williams recently confirmed nearly 700 persons, a result of the fortnight mission of the Jesuit Fathers. Fathers Maguire and McDonald who conducted the mission, received over twenty converts into the Church.

Curious Sermon by a Calvinist Preacher.

Familiarity with the fickleness and inconsistency of Protestant preachers has made us suspicious of their sincerity in all they say for or against Christianity or the Church of God. Hence we always accept with many reservations the reflections of this class of bricklayers, who blow hot or cold according as the spirit of good or the spirit of evil moveth them.

Rev. A. L. Lindsley is the pastor of a Presbyterian sect in Portland, Oregon; a teacher of religion, in a regular backwoodsy Calvinist of the John Knox school. He believes in Calvinism, pure and undiluted, and would serve some of the modern mild-mest-makers of that "advanced school" of Protestantism precisely as Calvin served Servetus, only that the world is too enlightened in these day to permit of such demonstrations of burning zeal for the supremacy of sectarianism.

A few Sundays ago Dr. Lindsley preached a sermon which—to say the least—is certainly very remarkable, coming, as it did, from a Calvinist who looks upon the Catholic Church as containing all the vices and none of the virtues known in religion. And if the ideas represented in the following extracts are the candid, religious views of this preacher, we think it is time his congregation were coming around for his successor, as he has evidently receded from the Calvinistic pest, and exhibits decidedly "Romanizing" tendencies in his most recent theological developments.

What, for instance, must have been the astonishment of Dr. Lindsley, when he opens as he thus squashed what is known as the "New Theology" among sectarian thinkers who imagine that they can improve the plan of Christ by pulling, patching, or plastering it over with some sectarian element of their own concection! Alluding to the numerous but very intelligent sect of individuals, Dr. Lindsley thus scored them:

"There is certain of the new theology which that the eternal consequence of the Old and New Testaments have modified the doctrine, or so done in the second text, and impaired their force in the first text.

"Its implication of the subject must be obvious. If changes are needed which alter the substance of Christ's teaching, the inference is just people in the Churches ought to know it, and have their minds prepared, because, and all Christian people should acquaint themselves with the Bible, and be able to give a reason for the hope they have and conform their lives and teachings to them.

"This is, to a Catholic, at least, rather a singular manner for a Calvinist minister to avoid out his other "Christian" brethren from the sectarian circus. Pray, good Doctor, have not the sect-makers of the nineteenth century just as much authority to make new sects and change the doctrines of Christianity as their predecessors had in the fifteenth century? What was cause for Calvin should be reason for the founder of the Campbellites, and if Brown and Luther had a right to and if divorce can be repealed in Sunday, be pealed, it is useless to talk about cleansing out the Augean stable in Utah, especially as the people who are expected to perform the task live lodging and feasting off with the living values of salvation. Then Newman was installed as the "star" actor on the Madison avenue stage, with Gessel for stage manager. It was as great a man as General Grant cannot have sensible people to accept Newman's gospel, hence the meeting-house became deserted and the public credulity had become satisfied that Newman was more of a politician than a preacher. The deacons are the dabs going up to nearly $50,000, and at length had not cent to pay for door for Gessel's obtrude, they very naturally concluded that the salary of the "star" preacher should stop, and some other "star" occupy their pulpit. Then began the war which has filled the columns of the Eastern press for a month, and which has revealed the interesting fact that Parson Newman cannot be held amenable to any sectarian authority, for the reason that the Congregational body cannot control a Methodist preacher, and the Methodist body cannot supervise the services of a Congregational Church! Is the Newman still "holds the fort," with Gessel's crowd to keep the deacons at bay? And this is a part of this sinful, scheming, sectarian system which some people are simple enough to call religion!

"Pious church members boast and praying men whose most earnest desire was to get possession of the Bible, and walk in the light of the full, clear, harmonious and rational communications of this truth as it is in Jesus.

"It is, therefore, that all these innumerable sects and sects and sects and long sentimental studies resulted only in imperfect or erroneous views of the truth, or that if it pure at this late day seems very that it should all be revised, and some of the doctrines omitted, and others added, or altered that you could not tell them from counterfeits!

"Yet, my hearers, it is reserved for our age to be taught that the Bible is imperfect and that the old theology is false!

This is the reasoning, our readers will please remember, of one who is a follower of Calvin, yet who is forced to hold up to his congregation the picture of the One, Holy, Catholic, Apostolic Church in order to show them what a sham sectarianism really is! Assuredly, when Dr. Lindsley thus describes the Church of the living God, he could not mean any other than the Catholic Church, with whom our Blessed Redeemer promised to abide for "all days," so now let us ask Dr. Lindsley in what way "the most intelligent" portion of any Christian community can "improve" upon the intelligence of the infinite or review the immutable laws of God!

Our Calvinistic preacher must have been in a decidedly "Popish" mood when he wrote out the sermon under consideration. This is proved by the following extract, which could with equal truth be uttered by a Catholic as by a Calvinist:

"What God taught or by revelation was complete in the sacred writes. But this was not to teach any system of nature in a scientific way. What God makes us in the book of nature is in forever unfolding, and we shall continue to learn the lesson of this book while the world lasts. This vast distinction is often overlooked."

We beg to remind such non-Catholics as may be fond of charging the Church with being opposed to scientific progress, that Dr. Lindsley has drawn the line between theology and science in a manner far more suitable to Catholic ideas than they can probably be to many Protestants. Here is another rap at "advanced thinkers" and rationalists which must have made some of Dr. Lindsley's sect squirm in their seats:

"Our age is very prolific in theology by rational wrestling of the subject of the revelation, by criticism, which is destructive. Any one can overthrow his shill or caption upon the creed of the ancient writers, or upon other records. For there is no miraculous power given to every man of faith to overthrow or turn from perversion or abuse. As other writings were inferred from what the Bible never meant to say, so the Bible must have been put upon the rack, torn and distorted to make it mean what it never meant. If the Bible is not the word of God, what is it? Is it doubtful and uncertain that it never was the one idea of revelation?

There is, however, another view of this subject which Dr. Lindsley's mind has failed to grasp, and it is one that shows the inefficiency of sectarianism to sustain itself in all that pertains to the Scriptures. If, as Dr. Lindsley declares, "there is no miraculous power given to the words of Scripture to save them from perversion or abuse," is there not in this fact fully established the necessity for some authoritative and infallible power to define the legislative man the true meaning of the many mysterious passages in the Scriptures? Judges are elected to decide on the meaning of common law, and could it be possible that God would leave man with a book all-important for his soul's salvation, and about which a thousand questions could arise, and, and yet have no to supreme court from whose decisions there could be no appeal! Ordinary common sense should teach sectarian that Almighty God is too just, too merciful, too considerate to leave man in the darkness of doubt regarding his salvation, hence He said to the first Pontiff of the Catholic Church and his companions: "Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and behold I am with you all days—even to the consummation of the world."

This is the God-given commission received by the Catholic Church, and this is the charter which has created her as the supreme visible authority on earth to pronounce judgment upon the meaning of the Scriptures and the whole Christian system with the infallibility of God Himself! No Protestant sect possesses such a power. God did not so to Luther, Calvin, Campbell, Smith, Brown, Luther, could create a sect and call his sign Lutheran, why Dr. Lindsley may, with just as much assurance and illegitimate authority—fall out with his fellow-heretics, form a new sect of his own, and call them Lindsleyites! Hence we see the integrity of Protestant preachers when they talk about their co-errorists as being wrong and their sect as the infallible.

Dr. Lindsley, true to his Calvinistic training, could not conclude his curious sermon without "making Rome howl," even in a small way, hence he proceeded to enlighten his people, in his own very peculiar way, upon the nature of a creed, as if Calvinists, and Protestants generally, stood a Continental sect about the binding force of what most of them look upon as the fabulous creations of "the Roman Church." Here is the Doctor's dissertation on this point:

"Now, let us consider what a creed is. A creed is a summary of the essential truths of religion, brief and very comprehensive, which can be easily learned, easily remembered and repeated. There are several of these creeds which have come down to us from the early Christian centuries. The one which is most extensively used is called the Apostles' creed. Another, which is shorter, has been traced to the early Roman Church before the Papacy began.

"This creed is incorporated with all the confessions of faith of the Churches in Christendom. As to the doctrines which it contains, it cannot be abridged without destroying, and there is no necessity for its enlargement.

"These creeds contain the substance of divine truth, in a condensed form, which is contained in the revelation of God, and as time and its advancement of civilization can take away from the Bible its power, we add to their efficiency, and thereby there is no occasion for a New Testament.

No, Doctor, there is no need for a "New Theology," but there is need—in your sense—of a little old-fashioned truth in order to convert your fanatical error regarding the Nicene Creed! The Council of Nice was convened in the year 325, by Pope Sylvester, who had about thirty predecessors in the Chair of St. Peter, yet Dr. Lindsley believed his heaven by falsely telling them that this creed was adopted by the Roman Church before the Papacy began! It is no wonder that non-Catholics know so little about the truth of history, or the doctrine of the Catholic Church, when their thriving teachers thus keep them in the dark even about matters that are so susceptible of proof as any mathematical proposition.

But what curse a sectarian for a creed, when even Calvinistic preachers prefer enemy to Christian truth? Those Protestants who recite the creed wherein they say that they "believe in the Holy Catholic Church, the communion of saints, etc." only laugh in their sleeves at those who are credulous enough to think that they mean what they say by such words. Hence, what is falsely known as the "Christian sentiment" of our age, has rejected all creeds, and men have come to consider that individual belief is all-sufficient, no matter how distorted or how absurd such views may be.

Creeds, Ceremonies, and Sacraments are looked upon by non-Catholics as useless trumpery fit only to figure with the conclusions and other so-called "obsolete inventions" of the Catholic Church; hence, Dr. Lindsley only loses his breath whenever he speaks to his brethren about creeds in which they have no belief. Yet he should not falsify the record, all the same, because only for the Catholic Church neither the Apostles' Creed, nor any other creed, would ever have become known to nineteenth century Christists.

We have asserted that a great many Protestants care nothing whatever for the binding force of creeds, and for fear some reader might imagine this was a mere prejudiced opinion on the part of the MONITOR, we will ask Dr. Lindsley to turn his eyes down Portland's streets in a southerly direction to where his co-Protestant Congregational minister, Marvin, holds forth, and hear him as he thus discards and disdains all the creeds that ever emanated from Apostolic or other authorized source. Here is an extract from a Portland paper:

"There was rather a stormy meeting of the First Congregational Church at Portland, Wednesday. Rev. Frederick Marvin, it is stated, resolves and continues to resolve to come into the Church without repeating them to sign the creed. Mr. Marvin insists that the Church creed is out of date; that no intelligent man in this day and age could consent to its teachings, and that unless he were permitted to resolve persons into the Church without such signature to the creed he must resign. After a three hours' debate he was unanimously invited by a vote of seventy-six to resign."

This paragraph clearly upsets Dr. Lindsley's theory, and shows plainly that as the years roll on Protestantism is departing farther and farther from the plan of Christianity as laid down by our Blessed Redeemer and perpetuated by the Catholic Church. Hence it is only a question of time when Rationalism will supplant Protestantism in every portion of the so-called civilized world.

Protestantism in Polynesia.

It would contribute much to their mental development if those non-Christian Pagans in Polynesia possessed a single divine attribute would give a casual glance over the missionary history of the world, and learn therefrom that sectarianism has been far more of a curse than a blessing to every people among whom it has been introduced.

Take, for instance, the Sandwich Islands, and, after more than sixty years of Protestant rule, and, yet, it is the opinion of many, called and ruled by the very men who went among them as pretended missionaries of the Cross. In 1844 there were 130,000 Christian Protestant propagandists in Polynesia, and it cost about a quarter of a million dollars annually to keep them heavy-hatching hirelings in the field. And what have they accomplished? They stole the lands of the native; they set up a system of government in which presidents hold the principal offices, and they laid the corner-stone of their propagandism by persecuting and trifling Catholic priests. These facts may all be verified. Instead of behold the lands stolen from the Kanakas still in the hands of the relatives of American Protestant missionaries, even down to the grandchildren of the former—or the designing political persons who introduced new governmental schemes by which, which is a happy cross between that of a hospital and a religious. It is always of black, the chief hanging is long, straight fold. The body is usually covered with a black cloak, the sleeves of white stuff demurely crossed. She wears a black veil, which is fastened on a stiff white cross to her lips. Across her head, and, in front, a band of white stuff, a little stuff, which you may accept in lieu of the sun's rays, and which, in the sun's rays, is a good peculiarity of war.

SOMETIMES IN FOR A THIRD-TOLD TALE.

And unless he originates a new outcome—pale ale, for example—he will be laughed at by nine minutes.

Pere Hyacinthe and his Catholic Protestantism.

By the aid of an elaborate "circular" prepared and printed for the use of the American press by a cunning pair of personal-hatching adventurers, the readers of the city dailies have been duly informed of the arrival in this city of Mr. and Mrs. Loyson and their ten year old son. But this information unfurnished Pere Hyacinthe's visit this city merely as a Propagandist of some new-fangled invention of religious error, the Monitor has been allowed to let his public in Protestant ennoe unmolested, but when he purposely mislends the public by asserting that he is still "a devout Catholic," it is only fair to inform our readers that he is the face of this turn-coat, and his present position defined so that no person may be deluded by his disguising falsehood.

Charles Loyson is nothing more than one of those disgusting and useless weeds which the Pope throws over his garden wall occasionally. He was ordained a Jesuit, and Friar whose head was turned by the pride which resulted from too much "puffery" of his sermons in the Church of Notre Dame, Paris. In one of his sermons Pere Hyacinthe advanced some principles which were not in accord with Catholic doctrine, and thus having been brought to the notice of the Sovereign Pontiff, he called the attention of the Superior-General of the Carmelites to Pere Hyacinthe's heterodox opinions, and demanded that they be retracted. Like all men carried away by the demon of pride, this unfortunate Protestant preferred to lose his faith sooner than recant his error. He was, therefore, justly and deservedly excommunicated from the Church and expelled from the Religious Community he had disgraced. Like Luther, he sought a wife to console himself for the loss of his vocation; he married a woman—a Protestant, of course, and he could not get inside the gates of that earthly paradise from which he had been expelled, hence he commenced to build up for himself a kind of well-dressed hoodlum shed! turned out as the product of public schools, and, as a matter of course, he adopted the fashion prevalent in its locality can be all of every other section of America who public schools prevail.

"As a preacher, he was pulled with mouth, he passed a school house in the city to a school house, and he was pulled with a school house outside! When I was a boy in school I was pulled with a school house in the city, I was grown person. How is it now? Why, I am pulled with a school house in the city, my second school house. The library is pulled in the school house. Young Americans are pulled with a school house, and they are pulled and pulled and pulled, and pulled and pulled, and pulled and pulled,

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. E. SEAFE - - - - EDITOR

All articles of the Editor, Contributors, or Correspondents, devoted to social and religious entertainment and amusement, intended for publication, address all communications to the Editor,

FRANCIS J. McCOMB,
80 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-GONOSTIC—

Answers to Literary Hours No 24.

1st.—SATANICALLY. 7th.—Apod.
2d.—Ode. 8th.—HORSEHEAD
3d.—ORPHEUS. 9th.—ORTHOEPY.
4th.—ORTHOEPY. 10th.—PARADISE
5th.—PARADISE. 11th.—INFINITE
6th.—INFINITE. 12th.—SONG
13th.—MONDEGO

14th.—Cypsela. 19th.—Tap-knot.
15th.—Pip. 20th.—EWERED
16th.—PIP. 21st.—ACTOR
17th.—PINION. 22d.—ACTOR
18th.—PINION. 23d.—QUARTER
24th.—QUARTER
25th.—QUARTER
26th.—ACTOR
27th.—ACTOR
28th.—ACTOR
29th.—ACTOR
30th.—ACTOR
31st.—ACTOR
32d.—ACTOR
33d.—ACTOR
34th.—ACTOR
35th.—ACTOR
36th.—ACTOR
37th.—ACTOR
38th.—ACTOR
39th.—ACTOR
40th.—MASSACRING
41st.—SCREENING
42d.—SCREENING
43d.—SCREENING
44th.—SCREENING
45th.—SCREENING
46th.—SCREENING
47th.—SCREENING
48th.—SCREENING
49th.—SCREENING
50th.—SCREENING
51st.—SCREENING
52d.—SCREENING
53d.—SCREENING
54th.—SCREENING
55th.—SCREENING
56th.—SCREENING
57th.—SCREENING
58th.—SCREENING
59th.—SCREENING
60th.—SCREENING
61st.—SCREENING
62d.—SCREENING
63d.—SCREENING
64th.—SCREENING
65th.—SCREENING
66th.—SCREENING
67th.—SCREENING
68th.—SCREENING
69th.—SCREENING
70th.—SCREENING
71st.—SCREENING
72d.—SCREENING
73d.—SCREENING
74th.—SCREENING
75th.—SCREENING
76th.—SCREENING
77th.—SCREENING
78th.—SCREENING
79th.—SCREENING
80th.—SCREENING
81st.—SCREENING
82d.—SCREENING
83d.—SCREENING
84th.—SCREENING
85th.—SCREENING
86th.—SCREENING
87th.—SCREENING
88th.—SCREENING
89th.—SCREENING
90th.—SCREENING
91st.—SCREENING
92d.—SCREENING
93d.—SCREENING
94th.—SCREENING
95th.—SCREENING
96th.—SCREENING
97th.—SCREENING
98th.—SCREENING
99th.—SCREENING
100th.—SCREENING

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No 24 were solved by A. Sutter, "J. E.", Sparrow, Adgeth, Jasper, Ivan, Ada, Ada, Ada, Ada, Ada, Ada, Jasper, Pyro, Scarlet, Hand Lens, Bramble, Cellar, Cellar, Cellar hovering the settlements, and guided by two friendly Indians, which dashed at them and almost exterminated them with their chief, Tenaya. A few of this red men still frequent the place, but their number is insignificant. They belong to the so-called "Digger," and are a wretched-looking set. Although the tribe had a name for every prominent feature of rock, mountain, and cataract, they have mostly disappeared, being land of unpronounceable jabbering, which is Greek to their present name for the valley, but what it signifies cannot be certainly known. Tenaya ("great grizzly bear"), which, is now commonly used, was the name applied by the Indians to the principal waterfall. The whites gave other appellations to the noblest features of the landscape, whether they are an improvement or not may be questioned, but they are better than many of those conferred elsewhere by the rough early pioneers. Bridal Veil, Virgin's Tears, Cathedral Spires, Cloud Rest, Mount Lyle, North Dome, Sentinel, etc., are the most of Nature's handiwork, while El Capitan is a very opprobrious Spanish title for the noblest mass of granite in the world. This better the native called Tutokanoe, in imitation of the sound cry, which enter the valley in winter over the rock. The most beautiful of their names is perhaps that applied to the fall now known as the Bridal Veil—Pohono, meaning the wind-spirit, this name being conferred by the tribe of Indians spared by the air which itself sets in motion.

A PRIEST AT THE YOSEMITE.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

THREATENING FOR SINGULAR REGULTS

for his indulgence, we retired to our nest of rest, and the next morning at nine see us on horseback on our way to the Mariposa trees three dollars a day each, and the guide, and three days, Pike rode in advance, wishfully and silent like his savage predecessor; we followed in Indian file, the narrow trail over the plain, and down along up the plain amongst the prickly bushes, and then up by the side of a rocky chasm, crossing a tree of hemlock, and you probably feel made by wild beasts in their search of the pragle. Our ponies were so devious at them of the mountain, and the fantastic shapes of the rocks, we advanced in wind, and the great talents are not equal, and descending to personal matters, where we are more likely to be understood and to make ourselves interesting, we would remind our readers that while height of descent and mass of water are important elements of beauty, yet the setting of these enhances their greatness and impressive power.

Niagara is unrivalled for might, solidity, grandeur. Yosemite possesses these qualities, but combined in such various and colossal but well-proportioned surroundings as to give the effect of sirlsomn, beauty, and grandeur. The highest cascade in Europe is the Gavarnie, in the Pyrenees, but it is too thin and small to compare with the one we speak of. Of the Staubach Fall in Switzerland the same may be said. The fall of the Aar in Handeck and the Voring Foss in Norway may be compared to ours for height and quantity of water. But while Niagara and Zambesi, in Africa, excel in magnitude, no locality on earth yet discovered nowhere in such a magnificent amphitheatre, and, but they are better than many of these conferred elsewhere by the rough early pioneers. Bridal Veil, Virgin's Tears, Cathedral Spires, Cloud Rest, Mount Lyle, North Dome, Sentinel, etc., are the most of Nature's handiwork, while El Capitan is a very opprobrious Spanish title for the noblest mass of granite in the world. This better the native called Tutokanoe, in imitation of the sound cry, which enter the valley in winter over the rock. The most beautiful of their names is perhaps that applied to the fall now known as the Bridal Veil—Pohono, meaning the wind-spirit, this name being conferred by the tribe of Indians spared by the air which itself sets in motion.

THREATENING FOR SINGULAR REGULTS

for his indulgence, we retired to our nest of rest, and the next morning at nine see us on horseback on our way to the Mariposa trees three dollars a day each, and the guide, and three days, Pike rode in advance, wishfully and silent like his savage predecessor; we followed in Indian file, the narrow trail over the plain, and down along up the plain amongst the prickly bushes, and then up by the side of a rocky chasm, crossing a tree of hemlock, and you probably feel made by wild beasts in their search of the pragle. Our ponies were so devious at them of the mountain, and the fantastic shapes of the rocks, we advanced in wind, and the great

WE HAVE NOT SPACE FOR DETAIL

to describe the exquisite beauty of the Bridal-Veil fall on the Yipple's Trail, but turn to Mirror Lake, a wide place in the stream above and down in the valley, which reflects the mighty rocks and the rising sun with greatest coloring. The water is shallow, and we can see through it, and down over two thousand feet in the space of two miles, reminded of each other by one and two plated cutlerets, which are wonderful for volume and continuing power. A thousand-foot parapet of granite, broad-high, runs along near the edge of the Yosemite, and down in the valley, which looks as if left purposely for visitors. Cathedral Spires, which rises from one hundred four hundred feet into a vast basin about a mile in diameter, while the rocky pinnacles are thousands of feet all around you and shut into an abyss below, raising to your imagination Dante's description of hell. Fingers could be approached for its volume and majesty, but the cities Niagara can not approach the sublimity of this scene. Niagara brings a common mental up to the level of the great Maker, and we can grasp and know what we now have presented to our view. We cannot rise to Dante's Paradise or Milton, you forged rocks of vast height reminding Force home to memory; nor the Northern Dome, which lifts the eye from the invisible into a toy church; nor the Half-Dome, seemingly split in two and one part of it buried in some tremendous disturbance of nature. But "Who not yet proved how lofty words may? To fix one spot of Beauty's heavenly ray?"

Before abandoning a task that would

HOW OF TO KNOW THE PRESIDENT of the Hudson. They are three hundred feet high (the second, and Cathedral Spires) Mirror Lake is twelve hundred feet above the valley, and the rocks are perpendicular Capitan Rock, solid and massive like the head of a whale, and the rock is bright and brilliant, and is

"Hills in awful form,
Giraffe from the world, and sublimity leave the down!
Through the heated the rocky fields are opened,
Heaven's hidden entire on the head."

It can be seen sixty miles of above all the intervening hills. Adjacent to it fall the cross two hundred and fifty stream is four feet wide and two feet deep, rolling into Cathedral Spires, and down the valley. The water feet falls fifteen hundred feet in a pretty solid column, shifting on a ledge or two, and then, the water, but really very deep, then sinks its angry way in a series of cascades, and at the foot of the fall, a quarter hundred feet down to another abrupt shelf, from which it plunges four hundred feet, and the last in three thousand very strikingly under the wind, is beautified by the sunbeams, which it reflects, so great that it cannot be broken into spray, it over-hangs and feet wide when it reaches the level

TO RETURN TO OUR OUTLOOK ON GLACIER POINT.

There being no ladies in our party, Rev. Cooley left us to take care of ourselves, and we therefore lost most of the entertainment experience which we will paint with a graphic pencil of one of our lady-readers which we describe in his own words. "As a part of the usual programme," this writer goes on to say, "we experimented as to the time taken by different objects in reaching the bottom of the cliff. An ordinary stone, tossed over, remained in sight an incredibly long time, but finally disappeared, and about the middle distance. A handerchief with a stone tied in the corner was visible perhaps a thousand feet deeper. Even a large, empty box, watched by a field glass, and not to be trusted to the accommodation of the valley floor. Finally the bandlord, whom but was just back of the edge of the cliff

Poetry.

LINES

SENT WITH A WREATH OF SHAMROCKS TO AN EXILED BROTHER.

I send across the ocean, dear brother, ~~~~ this
A little wreath of Shamrock picked from the Irish Isle;
Oh! wear it in thy bosom, the Sowerkiss little spray,
Despite the Saxon's laughty scorn, upon St. Patrick's Day.

Full many a Shamrock shall be sent to many an exiled Irish,
As offerings to those brave hearts that never's passe have left,
Oh, may it bring to their lonely hearts a little spark of joy
Without injury,
As often from their lonely cell to wind upon St. Patrick's Day!

Then from our poor old motherland this tender
And sweet upon thy bosom for thy loving sister's
Poor emblem little contrasts that erstwhile
Were lighted Ireland's hopes we built on our St. Patrick's Day.

MELAMPE.

MY IRISH HOME.

BY REV. P. A. VEALY.

"Dulcius ex asperis dictum, qui mens mens nervus." Nos. Ep. L. 11, 27.

Where my days might wanton, as
Where the mountains green, the valleys fair,
The meadows green, the valleys fair,
By ash and hawthorn, by the rippling rill
Or flowers make my heart expand
Where the sweet birds sing their lays
Or balmy breezes sweet and blest,
Where the sun shines warm and bright
Or the moon and stars shine mild and bright

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19, 1884.

The Feast of St. Joseph.

This day is a great festival in the Church, it being the feast of St. Joseph, Spouse of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and Patron of the Universal Church. There is no saint in the calendar whose life presents more characteristics upon which Christian people may, and especially Catholic fathers—as would their lives with greater profit to their souls, than that of St. Joseph. His position, as Head of the Holy Family, kept him conversant every day; their poverty made manual labor a necessity, and up to within a few years of his death St. Joseph worked at the carpenter's bench in order to provide for those committed beings whom God had entrusted to his care.

The life of St. Joseph is familiar to nearly all Catholics, but the manner of his death, the honor paid to him by his adorable Son and the Blessed Virgin, are not so widely known as they should be for the edification and enlightenment of our souls, hence we give the following extract from a work that should be more widely read and known; we allude to the Divine Life of the Blessed Virgin, by Mary of Jesus of Agreda, a work that the surgeons all other lives of the Blessed Mother of God, and which can be read with great profit in every Catholic household.

The eighteenth chapter of the Divine Life of the Blessed Virgin is devoted to an account of the sickness and precious death of St. Joseph, from which we give the following edifying narrative:

"The suffering and pain consequent upon the indisposition of the holy Patriarch continued to increase with his years, and the holy spouse was obliged to redouble her attentions, for he could not support alone, but also that she might be able to procure some comforts for him. She frequently conversed with the angels, and always learn how to live as they may gain the happiness of sharing in God's glory with the Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, and the other beatified spirits of Heaven.

Presbyterian Failure at Proselyting.

Did anybody ever see a Spanish Presbyterian? We never did, but we can imagine what kind of hybrid it would be. It is as natural for a Spaniard to be a Catholic as it is for an ocean to form an oak. And so the "converting" a Spaniard from Catholicity to Presbyterianism, the change would be like inviting a seal from heaven to spend a summer in hell! The cold, Calvinistic prayer of the praise-God-here-because Presbyterian not can never suit the warm blood of sunny Spain, hence we are not astonished to learn that after four years of constant proselytizing among Spanish children, in place, catechups, and adults, the whole Presbyterian sect on this coast have succeeded in persuading to their special creed an average of seven persons a year! In order to accomplish this rather scanty result, it takes all the sectarian machinery of four churches, four preachers, their wives, aunts, cousins, and mothers-in-law, as well as the despotic influence of every Presbyterian in California—who is humoughtered after those Spanish pervert, whom they look upon as so many "brands plucked from the burning." But the Spanish people, like the French, Italians, and Mexicans, are Catholics or nothing. It would be just as unnatural to try and change a Presbyterian preacher into a priest, as it would be very rarely performed—as it would be to make a Catholic from Madrid, Florence, or Paris, into a prospective Presbyterian.

There are perverts and perverts. Some are made by parchment; others are honeycoated into the sect by the sweet-scented odor of an unobtrusive Sunday school teacher—a kind of Presbyterian preacher in petticoats! But the fact that with all their poking, and pulling, and praying—such as it is—Demons the only prayer of the wicked don't avail much) the whole Presbyterian sect in California have succeeded in entrapping less than a hundred hungry flies into their spider's web of sectarianism, proves conclusively that the Spanish element in this State stands by the faith of their fathers with a fidelity that is honorable to their race and the ancient traditions. They value their religious convictions above money and beyond price. No Presbyterian palaver can seduce them; no smiling Sarah-Jane Scripture-reader can make renegades out of them; hence we advise our badly-sold Presbyterian friends to close up at least three of their four meeting houses, and rent the other one to some other religious racket, as they are very evidently paying about $1,000 a head for Presbyterian perverts from Popery, when they can "convert" Chinamen for about seventy-five cents a piece!

In these utilitarian days, Protestantism—in every other form of organization—must pay a profit in order to keep it alive, but this system of proselytism is the deadest thing in the fanatical fools! One pervert a year for four preachers! What kind of drones are these in the devil's workshop! Wake up, Brother Brandy! Arouse then, Brother Roberts! Hoop ho! Brother Harris! And to Brother Adams! Rouse! Rouse! well and suitably apply the well-known Spanish proverb: "Tal dicho al hacha hay que frado." As the saying means—"Between saying and doing there is a great distance"—a fact those fanatical preachers who set out to make Presbyterians out of Castilian Catholics have long since discovered—to their great cost and their consequent failure as proselytors.

Russia and the Vatican.

ROME, Feb. 28.—The second between Russia and the Vatican is complete. A Russian Minister to the Vatican will be appointed. The vacant post will be filled at the coming session.

Two Kinds of Methodists Contrasted.

In every denomination of Christians there are different grades. Some possess enough of the divine grace to serve God according to the light vouchsafed them, and not be tempted by the temptation of the senses; secondly, they shall receive particular grace to deliver them from sin; thirdly, they shall obtain a true devotion to the Blessed Virgin; fourthly, they shall have a good and happy death, and in that all-decisive moment be defended against the assaults of Satan; fifthly, they shall be delivered, when expedient for them, from both affections; sixthly, if married, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventhly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; eighthly, if married, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; ninthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; tenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; eleventhly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twelfthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fourteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventeenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; eighteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; nineteenthly, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; twenty-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirtieth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; thirty-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fortieth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; forty-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; fifty-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixtieth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; sixty-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventieth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-first, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-second, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-third, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-fourth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-fifth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-sixth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-seventh, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-eighth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; seventy-ninth, they shall be blessed with offspring; twentyfold, they shall have all temporal necessaries; eighteenthly

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. J. BRANE . . . EDITOR

All courses of the Monitor are carefully invited to participate. Answers will be acknowledged and solved by the department. Address all communications to

HOPE HOMESWEET,
100 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PUZZLE-PHOLICS.—

Answers to Literary Blocks No 198.

1st.—Shakspeare. 7th.—Poet.
2nd.—Byron. 8th.—Lowell.
3rd.—Longfellow. 9th.—Milton.
4th.—Whittier. 10th.—Cowper.
5th.—Holmes. 11th.—Longfellow.
6th.—Bryant. 12th.—Tennyson.
13th.—Pope. 14th.—Lamartine. 15th.—Longfellow.

—ASTROLOGICAL PROGNOSTICATIONS—

Aries. Libra.
Taurus. Scorpio.
Gemini. Sagittarius.
Cancer. Capricornus.
Leo. Aquarius.
Virgo. Pisces.

5th.—Sun-shine. 11th.—Dove-brown.
6th.—Beryl. 12th.—Timber.
7th.—Beacon. Modesto.
8th.—Beacon. Modesto.
9th.—Modesto. Modesto.
10th.—Modesto. Modesto.
11th.—Modesto. Modesto.
12th.—Modesto. Modesto.

Puzzles by Professor Hopper "No 3 Constellation" by Jupiter, L Brewer, J. G. M., "37, M.", Hesperus, "Ida," Mizpah, "Pepin," Lark, Mac, Hazel Eyes, Bramble, Ida C., Lady Flower, Gem

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN OAKLAND.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

ness and order. Attentive ushers quickly seated the incoming throng. After a medley of a medley by the orchestra, "The Wearing of the Green," the curtain was raised and the second gem on a pleasing tableau. At the front of the stage a spider's desk, draped in the American colors, footed upon the stage: Rev. Father King, Rev. Father McSweeny, Rev. Father Beck, Rev. Father Lagan, Rev. Father Kirby, Rev. Father Brennan, Brother Sabin, F. Scully, John Lynch, J. F. Clark, Lawrence Nolan and others. And from the stage the view was picturesque: the great house jammed; into after hours; all happy and on the alert; the shamrock and the green ribbon at the right and left—here, there and everywhere.

The President of the Day, Lawrence Nolan, soon after the curtain's rising, advanced to the front, addressed the vast assemblage briefly, and then announced and introduced the Orator of the Day, John P. Irish. He said, after the applause had subsided:

You have met to signalize by its observance an anniversary of the highest import, not only to your country and your contemporaries, but to the world and mankind.

The annual idea that pervades this day, the supreme historical fact, is the peaceful mission and permanency of eight religious revolutions and the impermanency of civil revolutions, the same, in a word, by which St. Patrick converted to Ireland to Christ and its Pontiff, and made Ireland a religious kingdom. No heralds trumpeted his landing, no troops of horsemen, no armies marched by his side. Around his lowly pillow an angel in no mailed armor stood guard and to supply his table and his pretens, no mounted troopers pounced upon the land's peaceful industries. He came not to make war; but to proclaim the peace of God. A thousand and five hundred years have spent by since he slept. All over the great States have been carved out by the sword, have decimated and slaughtered. The Empire of Charlemagne, which bestrode a continent from the Baltic to the Adriatic lasted only until his grandchildren were provoked enough to quarrel for its mastery. Of those who followed Patrick, not a few buried under numerous deposits of contempt, strange laws and strange tongues. Greece has forgotten the tongue in which Homer sang, and the laws which swayed to the lips of Demosthenes still fill their straw bloom with the honey of Hymettus, but it is for the regalement of a foreign Prince who rules in Athens. The Turk and the Bagdad of Mahomet are lost to their former glories and live only in the embalmed lies contained in a prophet to false as his master. But in the blanked hate of Ireland prayer and Patrick's name are as fresh as the morning in which Patrick preached the gospel, and the freedom he bestowed on the power and ground's breadth from its allegiance to the Empire of God!

Upon that land fell, seven centuries ago, the record of human revolution, to bound a civil government, and on upon the same soil the world has witnessed the endurance of religious religious revolution and the failure of a civil change by force to perpetuate a most unwelcome.

The violence revolution has driven by crime to delve out the peaceable religious change. Them have been forbidden God's worship. The lamp of learning has been by crime quenched in blood. Famine has gnawed and exile has followed, and yet, but in the midst of all connection, murder, and the ancient and fury of seven hundred years of war, the land of Ireland has upheld the standard of the prince of Peace.

I know that men cry down Irish politics. I know that it is the habit of a small number to decry Ireland's right to have an opinion. But the nation of Ireland in this day is the course of liberty, and the man who brings liberty to Ireland, while the man who brings liberty home Ireland, is a traitor between the left of the Ocean and those which the chance attempted to enslave, Ireland is going on. It is forward to battle, and when any man deserves it, I shall be the loudest to cry hurrah. Let the strife go on until Ireland is restored to her place among nations and is endowed with a never liberty.

It is said that we who are gathered to-day are haters of Englishmen. We are not. We are haters of tyrants, and we hate oppressors. If England is a tyrant we hate her not because she is England, but because she is a tyrant. We resent the oath of a citizenship in this country from an Irishman, knowing that the greatest pleasure of his life is the chance to renounce an allegiance to the crown of Great Britain which an upon him like a yoke.

Ireland said that Castle government be substituted by constitutional government, and it will be found that it was denied by gentlemen in this country. Then let Irishmen do as their forefathers did, strike for an independent nationality, for self-government and in the language of Grattan and Emmet, and of Sheridan and Curran, speak the sentiment which will find her in the struggle.

An enthusiastic ovation followed Mr. Irish's address, which Miss Mary Davis, attired in a green satin dress, court train, square corsage, with down by Ireland, sang the charmingly several choice selections.

In the appropriate recognition of the poem, delivered with spirit, power and feeling:

A WAIL FROM OVER THE SEA.

BY S. C. WHITE.

A humanless wail comes from far o'er the ocean,
The wild heart's heavy moan for a lost home,
While lonely, bleeding hearts, with the wildest emotion,
Cry out to the blest—"We are starving again."

Will ever the tempest, the cold rain in falling,
The dark clouds of rose long in pale o'er the sky,
O, God! to the grave, or Thine eye are calling,
Thy children, forsaken by Thy mighty hand.

The night is upon us with all its pale danger,
The lonely wolf howls in the forest by the brake;
We lie at the feet of the landlord and stranger,
Hoping for mercy, but find none for pity.

We plead, but to vain, with our eyes wet with tears,
The nobleman frowns and away we must go,
Without shelter or food for our children to-morrow,
Unpitied, homeless and out in the snow.

No free lights the hearthstone where joy used to be
Every spark of delight from the old home is fled
Our hearts are bowed down without rest-time to be
We pray while our children are calling for bread.

Pale and thinner we see their cheeks growing
Thinner and whiter, till all is at rest;
A mother's heart-pang and father are flowing,
With her hunger-pain darling cold, cold on her breast.

Vainly we cry for some sign or some token,
From human or angel, sister, or God,
Who left us to weep when our hearts were sign broken,
Left homless and tears for the land of the free.

And have you forgotten the tone once left empty
Who think of you during, the far, far away?
Men, on the other shore, with your kindness
For you, in our hearts, we have ne'er ceased to pray.

Dream like days from the homes we so cherish,
From the land where our hearts are and ground
Since were born—
Like stars we pray and like dew we need
Pitiful.
While tyrants look down on our anguish with Scorn.

And this is our land, our dear native island,
That true Irish hearts will no'er cease to adore;
The outcasts we wander, through valley and Highland,
And stare as in bosom—we love it the more.

O, Erin! loved land of the poor and forsaken!
Few long next you lingers the sorrow and pain!
Most Freedom still sleep—will she never awaken?
To free, my country, from tyranny's chain.

After another rendition by Prof. Davis and his kids, James M. Ward recited "Beaconsfield's Address," delivered a humorous speech on "Women," and sang several comic songs, bringing down the house at each effort.

Miss Minnie Titel, a talented little lady, then made her bow and executed several songs and dances amid great applause. But "I'll meet Her when the sun goes down," and "The Dude" pleased particularly the juveniles in the audience.

After another intermission, in which the orchestra exhausted the repertoire of patriotic Irish melodies, came the closing event, the comedy of the "Irish Doctor."

RELIGIOUS SERVICES IN OAKLAND.

Alluding to the religious services in honor of St. Patrick, in Oakland, the Times of that city, says:

"The Church of the Immaculate Conception celebrated St. Patrick's Eve, on Sunday, with annual brilliancy (for the London season). The principal feature was a sermon preached by the Rev. Father McSweeny, which was equal, and perhaps superior, to any sermon that has been heard in our city on St. Patrick's Day. The text he took, in his inimitable manner, was the text of the Jubilee, in which, in almost breathless and intensely eager, and many leaving the church with a feeling that there is a bright future in prospective for our talented and zealous pastor, and the same, in a very humble way, remarks, not only to appreciate, but to embody the Christian spirit of the Jubilee, which, in the words of the Rev. Father King, consists in the Holy Ghost." The Rev. Father King celebrated High Mass, and the Jubilee Mass was sung by the efficient choir, on which occasion Mr. L. E. Chaboya sang the offertory for many weeks (in consequence of illness).

KNIGHTS OF ST. PATRICK.

A Banquet on the Palace Hotel—The Toasts and Responses.

The Knights of St. Patrick gave their ninth annual banquet, at the Palace Hotel Monday evening. The hall was hung with the national colors and American and Irish flags, and twining festoons of shamrock and evergreen, interspersed with the emblems of the order, the harp, Shillelagh, Jasper, Hessian, John Sullivan, Judge Hoskins, Judge Conroy, Judge Tuthy, Joseph S. Kelly, Robert J. Tuthy, R. J. Cuttle, J. A. Dennan, Daniel Sullivan, Col. J. Ryan, Jr., Dr. Stanley, John Kearney, Thomas Kavanagh, Jr., Theodore Finnegan, W. Worden, Jr., Thomas H. Brown, Jr., Dr. Stanley, Philip Hammond, Capt. R. R. Brown, George Sullivan, Jr., Dr. Charles Stanley, Jr., Dr. Gendy, Mr. Farrell, Wm. Rabsch, Wm. H. Cameron, H. Rankin, Mr. Graham, D. O'Neice, Jr., Thomas M. H. Graham, Jr., Thomas Kelly, J. Smith, W. F. Hogford, R. W. De Lacy, M. Ryan, Jr., Thomas Ryan, Jr., Thomas Ryan, Jr., James Andrew, Rankin, Jr., Thomas Gibbons, Jr., Thomas Gibbons, Jr., Thomas Gibbons, Jr., R. W. Tuthy, Jr., J. O'Connor, T. F. Reardon, Jr., Thomas Ryan, Jr., Irvin, D. Shaw, James Cudell, T. Brady, M. Hanson, Peter Gennon, Thomas Brown, James O'Brien and Matt O'Donnell.

Congratulations were received from Archbishop Riordan, Brother Rotelle of St. Mary's College, Father Kennedy, W. E. Brownson, the Consul General of Chile, all of whom responded to toasts given in their honor, and received from the Knights of St. Patrick of Boston.

After the good things on the beautifully laden board had been partaken of, President, T. J. Tuthy, in a few appropriate remarks, gave the following toasts, which were responded to:

"The Day we Celebrate," was responded to by Judge Hoskins, President of the Knights of St. Patrick, who in a few appropriate remarks gave the following toasts:

"The President, Knights of St. Patrick (applause)—I have been honored with the task of responding to the toast of the Day, and at the time allowed me it is an impossible. I will endeavor to obey the committee's wishes as sincerely possible to do justice to a subject like this, and to state a time. My by proposed to be like blades of grass among the rich flowers of eloquence which I have with my hearers this night, and "The Day we Celebrate" must be voted over by the same which with the absence of my gifted friends will shed around us a gloom.

In every land which passed under the sun in its diurnal round, hours to-day there were Irish hearts that quickened in their palaces—there were Irish hearts that beat with joy in the cottage of the Mother-land some up—the memory of the past, and the hopes of the future, expected, never to return," but, above all, the future though long delayed, yet at last seemed to be about to be realized.

"The St. Patrick's Day—The day we celebrate." This is the day for joy—one to be long, long remembered, long after the sullen of Erin smile in the sunshine of prosperity, long after the smoldering camp fire, to speak the storied tale of the Irish heart, long after the world shall that the Night shade of their sorrows will be lighted by the Morning Star of Hope.

"This is St. Patrick's Day! What a beautiful day! Can any be blamed for being glad of the natural day with that of the Supernatural?

In the spacious congregations into which congregations into the human soul on indelible mark of consolation and immortal in the principles of virtue and truth, the Celtic race is a notable among all the other nations. Ireland's warm, rich blood of Ireland, whether at its fountain head, or flowing out to communicate the life-exercise of other nations, has in all ages made man to admire and love the noble spouse, to thrill with enthusiastic zeal, to enhance the Christian spirit, to inspire the sublime meditation, to live in truth to their lives, and to be their friendships and to have them to wear a cross-smile in their souls that too sometimes light and warmth, and to be to every where upon which it beamed.

"The Republic of the United States, was connected to by Mr. James E. Kelly, who in a very appropriate speech, in the Republic enjoyed by the citizens of the Republic. The Republic of the United States, was the source of their prosperity. The extraordinary progress in the arts, literature and manufactures and material wealth was treated with marked ability. It was the prize of every citizen that every land which still was obtained honorably. The enemies of Republican institutions must submit to the idea that universal suffrage would prove the destroyer of the republic. The toast was responded to by the remarks of the orator of the day.

"Ireland's Nation" was responded to by Mr. Thomas Brennan, the distinguished representative of the Irish National League, as follows:

MR. BRENNAN'S SPEECH.

It is, I think, well that there should be one day in the year in which Ireland's sons and daughters the whole world of Ireland's sons and daughters, and in the hearts of the world, and believe in the Ireland's sons and daughters, and in the hearts of the world, and believe in the Ireland's sons and daughters, and in the hearts of the world, and believe in the Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

A LAMENT.

"Shun, fugitive betimes, sweet."

Could I but blunt the keen edged sythe
Of Time, ah me, how glad I'd be!
Could I but clean life's footing trim
From fowling in the thyme-clad way;
Could I but ease the burdened mind
And slight the harvest of regret;
Could I with youthful gambols find
The zest of him whose eye is set
Yale, rain my wish and grief as vain.
Time sees Eros, nor some again.

Unfathomable seas with Mammon's power,
Dashes the crew of mortal wind,
The stream of life's fortune its tower,
And hence to its goal—the great winds,
Its weary heart, storm-shattered lies
Can give but transient relief;
The aged liver, furrowed by Time's ploughing sore,
Nothing can awaken, where years have been a clod.
Here he opened the inclosure and found a short note written in a style of chirography decidedly French, although the wording was idiomatically English in follows:

MY AUNT: It is not with out a withdrawing that I write this. My dear mamma, who is dead since two years, did call me quite ill, and she should feel. So is her sorrow passed over. I did much for a year in a family who have added away in Europe, and since six months have made my confinement with a Boston merchant's family. My home is with the dear good ladies of the Sacred Heart, where I was so long as a pupil, but I do not desire to impose myself upon them any longer. They are very kind and try to me, "Mary" dear mamma and my heart say "No, it is not right, be a burden to my good aunt, and I must work to live." So, my aunt, I send this letter to you, in thinking that maybe you would either not accompanying. Have you not some young daughter of your own that could instruct? Your sister in sorrow,

COMMANCE DISC DOYNE GRAHAM.

New Orleans, June 3, 1862.

The old gentleman read his handwriting vigorously after reading this, and then folded the note up carefully and placed it in the breast pocket of his coat. On turning the letter over to put it in his pocket, he came upon another P. S. which had escaped his eye:

"Dear dessuse! we there over such an unfortunate! I only enjoined to tell the manners of James' iniquity that he should marry a Boston girl, and I have always Paint into the family. Dese-dessuse indeed! Much "Dies" has to do with it; I do believe that she has had nothing to sem-plain of in his treatment of them, however much he may have misbehaved the guns they were playing. But he always grew very deaf while they remained.

The service terminated with a sermon, a very short sermon, which rarely lasts more than a quarter of an hour, as every one attends the church he likes best, and as there are many to choose from—Heaven knows how many, there is no fashion of the age, and no agreeable. The sermon is generally a little long, because it is the last one, and has rendered still more tiresome to listen to by being read. It is a fine morning, and the land clergy think I am going to remember their sermons, when they cannot remember their sermons themselves! Poor Parson Jones, friend to no one day. This practice of reading has not yet become of fore the following way: The members of the English Church differ upon certain questions of important were made to the Bishop of the diocese, the clergymen might be called upon to reproduce the sermons in question. That is really a very serious thing for a country parson! I am another explanation of the following advertisement:

"Or! you are tired, poor! Are you worn? Are you, fifty sermons, and yet, Bishop prices Apply, by letter to Clericus, Post Office, Cincinnati."

I find in Punch the following skit: "Ah, Jim, that wicked boy, you will be in the world." says a worthy old woman to her vicar; they say you stole your sermons.

"Lor! Mum, I'm afraid they did, my good woman. The sermons are mine.

"Well, I declare!

When you go to Mass in France, you must be very careful for the gospel, or it does not count; in England, you need not there before the collection. In England you have to pay for your seat, Sunday, the blunder of having the collecting made at the close, when every one is supposed to be in a hurry to go, and very few pay any attention to the bag that is held out to them. While you are in your pew, the plate is passed in front of you; your right hand neighbor presents it to you, and you in turn, pass it to the person on your left, and so on, from pew to pew, until the collector takes it, in order to hand it on to the next row of seats. Impossible to close your pew door, as you can in a stage, as French church goers are liable to do, when the plate comes to the bag at the end of the pew.

The following English joke is stale, very old: Two shipwrecked sailors are just giving up all hope of being rescued. "What can we do to amuse ourselves?" asks one of them. "Let us pray." "We do not know any prayer." "Well, I know one, I will do it."

"Let us make a collection," suggests the other.—Mat. O'Rafe.

The Doc's Dressmaker.

A visitor to the Paris establishment of Madame Lebouble, the famous dog-modiste in the Palais Royal, says that all day long a series of pups and puppies of distinct breeds arrive at her salons to try on their garments and have their patients fitted. As they have occasionally, like their owners, to await their turns, round seats are so disposed scattered over the waxed floors, so that the little dogs may be comfortable while anticipating their interview with their modiste. They have several changes of dress in their wardrobe, which they wear according to the hour or the temperature of the day.

When they take their morning walk in the Bois with their mistress the "correct thing" is a paletot of dark blue cloth, warm, but not too heavy, and a silver mounted collar, which is hung with bells. The monogram of the dog's mistress is no longer embroidered on one corner of the paletot. That is out of date—and why should a little dog be out of the fashion? So mighty a Prince as Napoleon has driven up to the door by a lively looking little lady of approximately about fifty years of age. Mr. Graham went out to receive her bare-headed.

"I have come to see you, Mr. Graham, your telegram and you may be sure I was surprised."

"I knew I could rely upon you, Annie, and so I have cleared the coast. They are off to the Whitewater to visit the Shakers."

"What is it that requires so much circumlocution? she asked, as she walked up the path toward the house, the carriage road leading up to the back entrance.

Thereupon Mr. Graham made his request, which caused the lady to stand still and look at him as if he was crazy. But by the time he explained matters she was full of pity and ready to fall in with any plan of his brain.

The Dandales returned from their drive in good good humor, and during tea kept up a laughing description of what they had seen. A day or two after they returned to their mother's house, and filled her anxious ears with accounts of how kind Uncle George had been to them, each fancying herself the favorite.

"But it is a pity he is so deaf!" said Jane.

"Deaf!" exclaimed the mother. Then he has lost hearing since the day he was down at Christmas he heard as well as I do."

"Yes, but he told me he caught a heavy cold after that visit, and had been deaf ever since."

"Oh, well. He's over sixty, and its time," was the rejoinder.

[TO BE CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.]

Catholic American Landmarks.

Christopher Columbus, a Catholic, is that marvellous link in the chain of time which connects the Old World with the New. The new world burst on the view of this Catholic discoverer on the memorable 12th of October, 1492.

John De La Cosa, a Catholic, was a fellow companion of Columbus. He accompanied him as a pilot. The bold Alonso De Ojeda, a Catholic, was among the spoils of New World.

Amerigo Vespucci, from whom America accidentally received its name, was a Catholic. Also a member of the same Church was Vicente Yanez Pinzon, the discoverer of Brazil.

The discoverer of the Pacific Ocean was Vasco Nunez De Balboa. A member of the same Church was John Ponce De Leon, the discoverer of Florida.

The Admiral of the fleet that first sailed around the world and the discoverer of the straits that bears his name was Ferdinando Magellan.

The discoverer of the Atlantic States of Hispaniola was Don Diego Columbus, a Catholic. He coasted along the shore, from a point not far from the site of Wallington, in North Carolina, as far as the site of Newfoundland.

The conqueror of Mexico and the discoverer of California was Hernando Cortes.

The discover and conqueror of Peru was Francisco Pizarro.

Hernando de Soto conquered Florida and discovered the Mississippi.

The discoverer of Canada and the river St. Lawrence was Jos. Cartier.

The discoverers of the mainland of North America were John and Sebastian Cabot.

The first Jesuit that landed in America was Peter Marquet, S. J. died on Septem. ber 26, 1566, within about three leagues of the mouth of St. John's river, baptising the Indian his murderer blood.

The first priest ordained in the new world was Bartholomew Las Casas, O. S. D.

The founder of St. Augustine, the oldest city in the United States, was Peter Menendez.

The Catholic founder of Maryland was Sir George Calvert, Lord Baltimore.

The discoverer of Lake Huron was Joseph Le Caron, O. S. F.

The founder of Quebec, the father of Canada, and the discoverer of Lakes Champlain and Ontario was Samuel De Champlain.

The first Apostle of the Iroquois was Isaac Jogues, S. J.

The first Governor and Chief Justice of Maryland was Leonard Calvert.

The first author of Maryland was Father Andrew White, S. J.

The first apostle of the valley of the Mississippi was Father Marquet, S. J.

The founder of Detroit was Father Gabriel Carrelon S. J. in Salle.

The first Catholic Bishop of New York was Thomas Dogan, an Irishman. His consecration bears the date of September 20, 1862.

The founder of San Francisco and apostle apostle of California was Francis Junipero Serra, O. S. F.

The founder of the American Navy was John Barry, a Catholic.

The Moral of the Revolutionary war was Stephen Moylan, commander of the navy.

The first newspaper in the United States that furnished accurate reports of legislative debates was established by Matthew Carey, an Irishman and Catholic.

The Decline of Public Morals.

The following from the Washington Catholic, deserves serious consideration of all thoughtful citizens who desire the lasting prosperity of the Republic:

Thoughtful men will deem it the decay of public virtue goes hand in hand with the decay of public morals. The religion of the people no longer controls or guides them. They have lost something our fathers had—and that something is the belief that grows from Christian principles turned into our hearts in our youth in our churches, families and schools. Now religion is banished from our schools and is most from the churches. Of course, before this could have been religion must also have passed from the hearts of the people. The country is reaping a terrible harvest from the seed sowing by establishing godless schools, which have trained this generation to the belief that it is not necessary to train the heart as well as the head or intellect of the people. To remedy the evil, we must educate our boys to the belief that it is as much a sin to do wrong in politics as anything else, and to show them that honesty is not only the best policy in politics as in all other things but that we cannot be true citizens unless we obey God's laws in all.

The Saloon Business Defined.

It is a business which is opposed by every clergyman in the country.

It is a business which every merchant and business man hates and detests.

It is a business which is the standing dread of every mother.

It is a business which is the constant fear of every father.

It is a business which is the horror of every wife.

It is a business which makes 90 per cent of the business for the criminal courts.

It is a business which makes 90 per cent of the population for which the jail keeps has to pay.

It is a business which keeps employed an army of policemen in the cities.

It is a business which puts out the fire on the hearth, and reduces children to hunger, colds and rags.

It is the business which forsters vice and educates in wickedness and crime.

It is the business which makes paupers, idiots and lunatics.

It is the business which makes the poor drunkard's family amongst themselves, while and on the fresh window of the police and their uncle, seemingly absorbed in reading the paper.

"When I am mistress here," said Jane, looking up at the seven, "I shall add a story. I never could abide a cottage house; the upper rooms are so close and warm with this roof."

"If I am left the part of the farm that the house stands on, I shall let the main house, but not the cottage, but the old kitchen and dining room, and cut down those horrid trees that make such a moaning noise when the wind blows. Then just over there I'll build a new house, making the entrance between the old and the new."

"You had better not speak so loud, girls; your uncle will hear you!" mentioned Tom.

"Oh! you, Tom, aren't he's deaf as a post!" replied Carrie.

"And suppose he leaves it to Constance?" suggested Jack, with a twinkle of fun in his eye.

"To Constance!" exclaimed both the girls at once.

"We are an idea, Jack Thurston" cried Jane. "Why, he don't care anything about her! I don't forget that made him take it into his head to gift mamma to send her, but when the letter came from them saying she was too ill to travel, he didn't seem to care a bit. He just let the matter drop."

Nor did he ask his sister to return the money he had sent her. Dot of this the young man hour nothing.

"Have you heard from your cousin since? asked Tom.

"No; ma didn't write again. She supposes that when the girl is ready she will come."

They chattered on never noticing that their uncle had risen and left the parlor. Presently he returned to the window and called out:

"Jane! Caroline! I have told Abe to get ready the carriage; I am going into Venice. Will one of you go with me?

Jane responded promptly:

"Yes, uncle; I'll go with pleasure. Then to Jack: "I'll be back before long.

"All right," replied Mr. Graham; "get ready."

An hour or so later Jane had returned her seat upon the porch, holding the hat she had worn during her drive in her hands. Mr. Graham had also resumed his seat in the window, but it was too dark to read.

"He stopped at the post-office and would not let me get out; went in himself, and I saw him myself at the telegraph desk."

"Whom could he be wiring for in such haste, mused Tom.

"Wiring! Oh, telegraphing, you mean," exclaimed Carrie. "Well, no one knows but himself and the operator. I bet I can guess pretty near."

But when the next morning, Miss Carrie and Master Tom walked over to the village in pursuit of knowledge, they were checkmated by the indignant refusal of the operator to reveal the secret.

At dinner, of which meal the young men were also partakers, Mr. Graham proposed that the girls and their friends should drive over to a Shaker settlement in the neighborhood which was well worth a visit. He told "Abe," the man of all work, to put the carriage in the morning, as two horses would be required. Of course the girls were delighted, for it was a drive through the loveliest of lovely country scenery by plain of in his treatment of them, however much he may have misbehaved the guns they were playing. But he always grew very deaf while they remained.

"Oh! you, Tom, aren't he's deaf as a post!" replied Carrie.

"And suppose he leaves it to Constance?" suggested Jack, with a twinkle of fun in his eye.

"To Constance!" exclaimed both the girls at once.

"We are an idea, Jack Thurston" cried Jane. "Why, he don't care anything about her! I don't forget that made him take it into his head to gift mamma to send her, but when the letter came from them saying she was too ill to travel, he didn't seem to care a bit. He just let the matter drop."

Nor did he ask his sister to return the money he had sent her. Dot of this the young man hour nothing.

"Have you heard from your cousin since? asked Tom.

"No; ma didn't write again. She supposes that when the girl is ready she will come."

They chattered on never noticing that their uncle had risen and left the parlor. Presently he returned to the window and called out:

"Jane! Caroline! I have told Abe to get ready the carriage; I am going into Venice. Will one of you go with me?

Jane responded promptly:

"Yes, uncle; I'll go with pleasure. Then to Jack: "I'll be back before long.

"All right," replied Mr. Graham; "get ready."

An hour or so later Jane had returned her seat upon the porch, holding the hat she had worn during her drive in her hands. Mr. Graham had also resumed his seat in the window, but it was too dark to read.

"He stopped at the post-office and would not let me get out; went in himself, and I saw him myself at the telegraph desk."

"Whom could he be wiring for in such haste, mused Tom.

"Wiring! Oh, telegraphing, you mean," exclaimed Carrie. "Well, no one knows but himself and the operator. I bet I can guess pretty near."

But when the next morning, Miss Carrie and Master Tom walked over to the village in pursuit of knowledge, they were checkmated by the indignant refusal of the operator to reveal the secret.

At dinner, of which meal the young men were also partakers, Mr. Graham proposed that the girls and their friends should drive over to a Shaker settlement in the neighborhood which was well worth a visit. He told "Abe," the man of all work, to put the carriage in the morning, as two horses would be required. Of course the girls were delighted, for it was a drive through the loveliest of lovely country scenery by

GoodGroceries
CHEAP FOR CASH.
THE MONEY SAVING MASSES
Have discovered that they can save
25 PER CENT
IN THEIR GROCERY BILLS
By buying from
SBARBORO & CO.,
FAMILY GROCERS,
531 Washington St., Bo
(Between Beaupsgny and Sumner)
Have laid in an IMMENSE STOCK of GROCERIES,
Which they Guarantee to be JUST LOOK AT THESE BARGAINS
IN GROCERIES
Read the following
Price List of SBARBORO & CO.
And call or send your orders to
531 WASHINGTON STREET
The Greatest Fall Yet!
10 1-2 pounds White Sugar, - $
14 1-2 lbs. Brown Sugar -$
20 pounds Table Rice, $
20 pounds Tapioca, $
12 pounds German Prunes, $
10 pounds Green Coffee, $
Star, Roasted or Ground Coffee, 15c. per pa
Fine Tea, (No Humbug) 50c per Family Mixed Tea, 25c per
10 pounds Prunes, $
5-gallon can water-white Coal Oil, $
Golden Syrup, 5 gall. kegs, $
And all other Goods Equally Cheap.
WINES AND LIQUORS.
Claret, Zinfandel, $ gallon.
Port, Sherry, Madeira, $ gallon.
Sherry, Old, $ gallon.
Port, Old, $ gallon.
Old Tinian Bourbon, $ gallon.
Old Rye Whiskey, $ gallon.
Grape Brandy, $ gallon.
Jesse Gin, $ gallon.
Jamaica Rum, $ gallon.
The Manager of our house having
25 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
IN THE
GROCERY BUSINESS
In this city, and being an Expert in Large Stocks of Goods
Is a guarantee that under his management are able to sell FIRST-CLASS GROCERIES
CHEAPER
Than any other house on this Coast
Economy is the result trading with Us.
Wealth is the result of Economy.
All orders promptly and fully filled and delivered to any part of City, Oakland or Alameda free of Country orders solicited and made carefully and shipped free of charge.
Country Produce Exchanged
SEND FOR OUR PRICE LIST
SBARBORO & CO
531 WASHINGTON STREET
S. SBARBORO, Manager

CHRISTIAN BURIAL.

Reasons Which Prohibit Members of the Church From Christian Burial.

And Which Every Catholic Should Know and Understand.

Scarcely a week or a month passes in the Archdiocese of Milwaukee that cases do not arise where the priest has to refuse Christian burial to the remains of some member of the Church who, while living, was no really Catholic in name. The refusal on the part of a priest to allow this person burial in consecrated ground usually brings down on him the condemnation of relatives and friends. We treat, therefore, that every Catholic will carefully read the following authoritative statement of the light of a deceased Catholic to Christian burial. It is taken from a book just published, called the "Parish Priest, Manual," by Rev. Joseph Prandstetter, Prior of Sabina, Ozmos. The high character of the work, and its strong endorsement from such men as Cardinal Manning and Ballerini, will give to the statement the assurance of safety.

The Roman Ritual points out clearly who those deceased persons are who must be deprived of Ecclesiastical burial. Nevertheless, since the practice of discussing has been somewhat modified in practice, it will be well to make some preparatory remarks on this subject, so that the parish priest may not be surprised, or in danger of compromising himself, or occasionally happening with the relatives of the deceased or with the civil authorities.

When there is question of deceased persons who have given no indication of their ministry there is probably no difficulty; but difficulties frequently arise when we come to deal with those who have given some indication of their ministry, or have lived in a state of public sin, or have died under the ban of public condemnation, or have by their conduct, by their words, by their actions, by their dress, by their manner, by their gestures, by their tones, by their silence, by their absence, by their presence, by their sighs, by their groans, by their tears, by their smiles, by their frowns, by their laughs, by their jokes, by their sarcasms, by their ridicule, by their sneers, by their jeers, by their mockeries, by their insults, by their injuries, by their calumnies, by their slanders, by their lies, by their deceits, by their frauds, by their robberies, by their murders, by their suicides, by their adulteries, by their fornications, by their sodomies, by their masturbations, by their impenitence, by their despair, by their hatred of God, by their contempt of religion, by their blasphemies, by their execrations, by their imprecations, by their obscenities, by their profanities, by their sacrileges, by their impurities, by their lewdnesses, by their lasciviousness, by their immodesties, by their improprieties, by their indecencies, by their improbities, by their dishonesties, by their injustices, by their iniquities, by their wickedness, by their perversities, by their perfidies, by their treacheries, by their knaveries, by their roguery, by their villanies, by their turpitudes, by their baseness, by their meanness, by their pettiness, by their littlenesses, by their vanities, by their follies, by their foolishness, by their madness, by their insanities, by their lunacies, by their idiocies, by their imbecilities, by their stupidities, by their dullnesses, by their blockheadnesses, by their asinities, by their brutalities, by their bestialities, by their animalities, by their sensualities, by their carnalities, by their devilisms, by their satanisms, by their infernalities, by their damnabilities, by their damnations, by their damns, by their damnedness, by their damnedness, by their damnedness

THE MONITOR.
PUBLISHED UNDER THE AUSPICES OF PRIESTHOOD.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1884.

Retirement of Bishop O'Connell.

We learn from reliable authority that his Holiness Pope Leo XIII. has been pleased to permit Rt. Rev. Bernard O'Connell, D. D., Bishop of Green Valley, to retire from the active administration of that See, which will hereafter be administered by Rt. Rev. Patrick Monagan, hitherto Coadjutor-Bishop.

During the twenty-three years Bishop O'Connell has presided as Vicar Apostolic and Bishop over his Diocese he has accomplished a vast amount of good for the holy cause for which he was consecrated. He has relied rather upon the fearful crime that perpetrates, we think they would be happier to perform such deeds of a diabolical character. They should ask themselves when sober—no matter how degraded he may be—will permit the memory of his mother to be insulted with impunity? This love for the lady in name and memory is so deeply implanted in the human heart by Almighty God, and is it likely that He will bless those who blasphemously defame the sacred Person of the Holy Trinity in their familiar remarks upon the Immaculate Mother of His Son? Assuredly not. Those people who have indulged in this unnatural spirit may expect their reward from Satan and not from God; they may expect eternal punishment instead of eternal glory, as there is no blood relation in the Divine family, and the earth is compared to a speck of mere, the sick hope to be visited and the dead buried. In the hour of sorrow, when all others seek comfort, the sick one prefer most bashful to the cry of pain and soothe the pangs of the dying. The lip accused here will be instructed, the Book of Life has to be opened for those who demand for admittance into the one true fold—and then from only down to destine of day, for the Lord knows the hearts of all, and to the day of judging others who God.

In the case of Bishop O'Connell, what a glorious reward he has left behind him for years! What an example to the glory, the purity, and the probity of his life, for both priests and people! And now, in the decline of his years, he will carry with him, in his retirement, the veneration and the absolute reverence because not only of his own people, but even the immediate flock who were given over to his paternal care, but the holy Bishop's name will evoke many a prayer for his earthly happiness and his eternal bliss. Long may he live, beloved and revered by many hands who have learned to love him for his humility and paternal rule as a pastor, and for the fidelity with which he clung to the fortunes of his lonely-loved native Bishop.

Every Catholic Bishop can say, in the word the gospel: "I am the good shepherd and I know mine, and mine know me." In the Bishop of Green Valley, and especially the venerable Bishop of Green Valley may rejoice in the fact that the Holy Ghost has placed the memory of those who have had the holy place to receive his rule counsels or his admonitions. And the prayers of his people will plead to God that when the Prince of the Pastors of the Church shall—many years—call the venerable Bishop of Green Valley to receive the crown of a good and faithful shepherd, the pathless of the people will follow his pure soul in the flight, and will wish his peaceful voice they will cut thus his holy example and his many good works may gain for him a never-fading crown of eternal glory.

Restitution to Concerning the Church.

A week is usually published in Rome under the title of Prevalente Catholica, or "Catholic Hierarchy," in which is included statistics concerning the Pontifical Court, the College of Cardinals, the Episcopate, and all other information concerning the colonization in the Church throughout the whole world. From the most recent issue of this work we learn that the whole number of the Cardinalate is his Eminence Cardinal John Henry Newman, aged 84; next in order of age comes Cardinal Hyppolyte Guibert, Archbishop of Paris, aged 81; then Cardinal Camillo di Pietro, Dean of the Sacred College, aged 80, and 31 years a Cardinal. The Cardinal-Bishops included in the Sacred College in his Eminence Frederick Joseph Schwarzenberg, 78 years of age, who was created Cardinal by Gregory XVI. in 1842 (he is the only one of that Pontiff's creation living, and is consequently 42 years a Cardinal; Cardinal Manning, twelfth on the list, aged 76 years, 6 years a Cardinal; Cardinal Cretaz, Archbishop of Paris, aged 75; Cardinal Camillo di Pietro, Dean of the Sacred College, aged 74 years, and 31 years a Cardinal. The Cardinal-Priests included in the Sacred College in his Eminence Frederick Joseph Schwarzenberg, 78 years of age, who was created Cardinal by Gregory XVI. in 1842 (he is the only one of that Pontiff's creation living, and is consequently 42 years a Cardinal; Cardinal Manning, twelfth on the list, aged 76 years, 6 years a Cardinal; Cardinal Cretaz, Archbishop of Paris, aged 75; Cardinal McCloskey is the seventeenth, counting by age, and 74 years old; Cardinal McCabe, aged 68, is thirty-second on the list; Cardinal Howard, fifty-second, aged 55; and the youngest of all, Cardinal Wilhelm Czacki, the fifty-seventh, is aged 50 years.

The dignitaries composing the Catholic Hierarchy on January 1, 1884, were as follows: The Sacred College, 58; the Patriarchs of both Rites, ten; Archbishops and Bishops of the Latin Rite (Residential Sees), 730; Archbishops and Bishops of the Oriental Rite, 68; Titular Archbishops and Bishops, 318; Archbishops and Bishops without See, 22; Prelates Nullius Diocesis, 6; total, 1,196.

RAISE BUT FIGURE.

Miss Rita Mackay, the daughter of Hippolytus Jackson Mackay, is hardly 10 years of age. Through a prime lady of medical knowledge, and a very accomplishment, she is but little benefited with the intellectual people. A room inclosed in her life very beautifully illustrates the strength of her light. Her mind is very mind with a vibrant flame and for days her life was dependent of by all among our little learning, who, when the physicians themselves had not a word of comfort to give, took her cradle and knelt silently in the strong protection of Our Lady of Lourdes and Mary Left upon her knees and prayed from hours without ceasing for her mother's recovery.

How Heretics Rate the Mother of God.

One of the most significant signs by which sectarianism may readily be recognized in the work of Satan, consists in the constantly-recurring hatred of the Holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, on the part of sectarian rather. The devil seems to have planted the evil spirit of malignity towards the Mother of God broadcast in the souls of sectarians, who seem to glory in the shame of slandering the sacred character of her who was chosen by Almighty God to be the Mother of His Son! Such a spirit can only proceed from the most perverse and impotent sinners, who think they serve man by maligning Mary.

If the people who thus persist in insulting God by their jibes at the Mother of the only Son of our Heavenly Father, would pay a fine doctor hundred by his Son with but few shoulders and a sentenced flock; but with that indomitable energy so characteristic of Christ—no matter how degraded he may be—will permit the memory of his mother to be insulted with impunity! This love for the lady in name and memory is so deeply implanted in the human heart by Almighty God, and is it likely that He will bless those who blasphemously defame the sacred Person of the Holy Trinity in their familiar remarks upon the Immaculate Mother of His Son? Assuredly not. Those people who have indulged in this unnatural spirit may expect their reward from Satan and not from God; they may expect eternal punishment instead of eternal glory, as there is no blood relation in the Divine family, and the earth is compared to a speck of mere, the sick hope to be visited and the dead buried. In the hour of sorrow, when all others seek comfort, the sick one prefer most bashful to the cry of pain and soothe the pangs of the dying. The lip accused here will be instructed, the Book of Life has to be opened for those who demand for admittance into the one true fold—and then from only down to destine of day, for the Lord knows the hearts of all, and to the day of judging others who God.

Leyson's Late Lecture.

A small knot of French infidels gathered in Platt's Hall last Thursday evening to listen to a lecture by one of the "Gallican Church" as he discovered on France and America. The daily press gave an extensive synopsis of the married monk's remarks, and just to show our readers what kind of nonsense this charlatan indulged in we have copied a few of the more prominent paragraphs in the Call's report. According to the revolutions in France and America, Mr. Leyson wrongfully concluded that "The people of France and America. The democracy that came forth from the revolutions of France and America was nearly the same."

A more erroneous parallel than that construed by Charles Leyson it would be difficult to imagine. The democracy of American was law-abiding and God-fearing, while the French were a mob of murderers who cared only for plunder under the guise of patriotism. They were the imitators of the Vandals in their destructiveness, and the mark of Cain rests on their work in consequence of the blood-thirsty spirit they evinced. American democracy is insulted by being likened by this imitator of Luther to the plundering parricides who turned France and made France into a hot-bed of vice: who banished religion beyond the realm and tried to annihilate the knowledge of God from both public and private life in France.

We can see very clearly why this poor, old, unfortunate ex-priest tries to palaver the American people by comparing the two in this way: It wants dollars and dimes, hence he hopes to befool his hearers into adopting his false notions by the glamour of a name which means nothing to him or his audience.

Leyson says he "professes" the Catholic faith, yet he spurns alike the oremale and the celebrate, and Charles Leyson. The inhuman horrors of the French Revolution are very familiar to most people, and Mr. Leyson—even by his old of that woman with the "wonderful rhetorical and theological power"—cannot make French angels out of Gallican demons, nor must he insult the intelligence of the American people by comparing the patriots of this land with the council and the riotous bloody-handed rabble of the French revolution.

Catholics crave truth and base their opinions upon error are full of contradictions, hence the father of Paul—the two year old prodigy of Parisian politicians—contradicts the assertion we have printed, in the course of his subsequent remarks. Here is the point where Leyson differs from Hypocrisy:

"You have had your Constitution of 1789 and you have lost it, and it was a charter that added to the glory of your country and from. It been your Constitution that added and made every living soul upon this country, and particularly in Illinois, the Constitution of Illinois, the Constitution, constituted by the bloody hand of the people, and the people made the hand of the tyrant. We have overturned any rulers. Our kings have died on the scaffold, and Charles Leyson. Our kings are they dowered slaves of doing good. It is in the world of the people. Our Constitution is the same. Will it develop into Cromwell, or will it develop into the government of the people? It is already, by heaven, on the nations and courage of the people."

Here, the reader will observe, the extract shows what a vast difference there is between American French democracy as traced in the history of France sketched by the old sinner himself.

The Constitution of France is liberty of conscience. Religion must be acknowledged. By religion I mean Christianity. There is no intimate connection between religion and the people." Hear, again, the corner-stone of the Gallican fiasco proves the false character of French democracy, for the reason that "liberty of conscience" is not respected in France, nor is "religion acknowledged." The French Government, under the so-called Republic, is hostile to all its subjects, and it only needs another Robespierre to make the streets of Paris again run rivers of blood. Such bogus "democracy" as that of France is neither to be respected nor emulated by any people who pretend to Christian civilization, hence the less the hand and tail of the "Gallican Church" says about it the better.

The main object Charles Leyson has in having himself, his melancholy medium, and his sad, sad story before the world, is to coax dollars out of the pockets of such prejudiced people as may listen to his lampoons on the Catholic Church. On this point there is no room for doubt. People who stop at the False Hotel, in this city, and at other first-class fashionable hotels in every part of the country, must have coin to pay the porter; hence Leyson hopes to "put some shot in his locker" by tendering the Catholic Church, to the joy of the infidel and those who listen to him.

Here is what the Call reports him as saying upon this point:

"I have nothing to say against the Catholic faith which I profess. Nay, sire, it is error and blame against which I protest. I discriminate between the Catholic and Mohammedan. Poverty is the weakness of Catholicism. Ultramontanism is ruling the Church to obedience, hence instead of having different religions, I have but one."

Leyson says he "professes" the Catholic faith, yet he spurns alike the oremale and the celebrate, and Charles Leyson. The inhuman horrors of the French Revolution are very familiar to most people, and Mr. Leyson—even by his old of that woman with the "wonderful rhetorical and theological power"—cannot make French angels out of Gallican demons, nor must he insult the intelligence of the American people by comparing the patriots of this land with the council and the riotous bloody-handed rabble of the French revolution.

Catholics crave truth and base their opinions upon error are full of contradictions, hence the father of Paul—the two year old prodigy of Parisian politicians—contradicts the assertion we have printed, in the course of his subsequent remarks. Here is the point where Leyson differs from Hypocrisy:

"You have had your Constitution of 1789 and you have lost it, and it was a charter that added to the glory of your country and from. It been your Constitution that added and made every living soul upon this country, and particularly in Illinois, the Constitution of Illinois, the Constitution, constituted by the bloody hand of the people, and the people made the hand of the tyrant. We have overturned any rulers. Our kings have died on the scaffold, and Charles Leyson. Our kings are they dowered slaves of doing good. It is in the world of the people. Our Constitution is the same. Will it develop into Cromwell, or will it develop into the government of the people? It is already, by heaven, on the nations and courage of the people."

Here, the reader will observe, the extract shows what a vast difference there is between American French democracy as traced in the history of France sketched

A Jubilant Scene in Germany.

Heaven alone knows the joy that wells up in the hearts of the Catholics of Germany as they behold their Bishops and Priests returning to their fools and assuming again the office of shepherds of the souls entrusted to their care. Here is a scene described by the Volksblatt of Baden, as having recently occurred in that city, which is regarded as far more vivid picture of holy joy and gratitude to God for restoring to the Church of their Divine Church, than any language we could express it in:

"At nine o'clock in the morning a vast crowd of the faithful started in procession from the temporary church they had made use of during the time of persecution, amid the ringing of bells in the different tower of prayer, and the strains of the Gloria in Excelsis, to the place of their old church. At their head headed the parochial clergy. The pastor of the parish, carrying the Sacred Host, walked under a canopy, a hundred young girls in white frocks joined a lower around the Blessed Sacrament; they were followed by the clergy of the canons of the Sacred Heart, Holy Ghost, St. Joseph, and St. Anne, which were followed by the Sisters of Charity, and the whole length of the procession (extending to two and great periods. The Archbishop was a perfect blaze of splendor, and the intense joy of the people was a sight to behold. Above the tabernacle stand the image of the venerable person, St. Boniface, above all stood a white cross entwined with white roses and bearing the inscription, 'Thy people shall rebuild the Sacred Host restored to its former throne, the Church restored to its former place, and the tending seasons to his deeply moved congress. Thus, the Church of Saint Boniface, which 12,000 people, yet, be it noted, hundreds had to stand in the aisles, and, as it was impossible to the solemn service, the organ began the air of the Gloria in Excelsis, and the Holy Sacrifice words were sought by thousands of gilded tiers. The entire scene of this glorious and joyful occasion to the deeper tones of the majesty.

Irish Priests in Politics.

Most Rev. Dr. Lynch, Coadjutor Bishop of Kildare, a large member of the clergy, and several of the most influential laymen of the country, were present at a meeting, held on Tuesday night, Rev. Dr. Kavanagh, P. P., of Kildare, at a public banquet, in recognition of his good offices in assisting the Land League, and tried to sustain their cause against landlord oppression. In replying to the toast of his health, Dr. Kavanagh thus alluded to the prosperity which existed for Irish priests taking part in politics:

He said that his highest ambition should ever be to assist the people, not only in religious, but as regarded their secular interests in every way not inconsistent with the sanctity of his sacred office. He should thus fulfill the instructions of Leo XIII., one of the most learned Popes that ever ruled the Church of God. The Pope had declared that politics and religion would not be separated. Infidels and Communists alone would divide them, and they each other and drive the priests within the sanctuary of leave the people to the erring guidance of the world. Let us remember that we are portion of the Church of God where this was not the case, and where priests had been treated than in Ireland. What would they do if they had to take sides with the priest, the time of the early Christians, when politics and religion were rather separated than amalgamated, and when it was a crime to be a Christian? Let us remember Barbadoes. The modern officials issued bulles and sent the martyrs to the Coliseum and Mamertine Prison. Of the two, this seemed to him less merciful and more mean and Pharisaical.

Opera Glasses Leveled at Leyson.

A great many people visit the Protestant churches on Sunday with precisely the same object that they go to a circus or a side-show—to gratify their curiosity or to be amused. This fact was never more forcibly illustrated than on last Sunday night, when Charles Leyson held forth in Trinity Church to a crowd of people, the majority of whom did not understand a word of the French he spoke, and who only went to church through curiosity. Alluding to the mercenary motives which actuated a majority of those present, the Chronicle says:

"It was evident that among the audience were many who were not drawn there from religious motive, as during the service many ladies were seen in light conversation with their escorts, and the gaze of the congregation was directed toward the structure of their companion to get a glimpse of the opera glasses leveled at the stately ascended the pulpit, clad in the usual black robe and white neckcloth. Although Charles Leyson is a professed Catholic, he did not allude to the church religion of the people, but, with the fervor of a Methodist, he made a comparison, which, if he had made a comparison, he should have made, between the Catholic Church and the Protestant Church, and made a comparison of the congregation, which he compared to the festival of Notre Dame, and crowding the fervid and extreme theological views to the people, he made a very clever sketch of the Pope's life and his labors in the Church."

Poor Hypocrisie! What a dreadful downfall was his! From an expounder of God's truth in the Catholic Church to be the mere peep-show of curiosity-seekers in a sectarian shrine!

— Mgr. Capel, in his lecture on "Conscience" at the Dominican Church in New York on Sunday week, said: "Religion does not consist merely in religious exercises, but in doing our duty, and an immediate and practical understanding of our duty is imparted to us by conscience, that is given us by God Almighty. The existence of this conscience is found in all modern civilization. The dictates of conscience are, or should be, clear and forcible. When our enemies say that our conscience are in the hands of our priests they state a deliberate falsehood."

— It is rumored that other Catholic Prelates in this country are contemplating taking a similar position on mixed marriages to that lately assumed by Bishop O'Connor of Nebraska; that is, they will grant no dispensations for marriages of Catholics, and persons must consequently apply to Rome for the necessary permission.

— We learn from the Mobile Register that Very Rev. Father O'Callaghan, Administrator of the Diocese, has received a dispatch from Rt. Rev. E. Manney, informing him that the brief appointing the Rt. Rev. Bishop to the See of Mobile had arrived from Rome, and that the installation will take place on Passion Sunday at the Cathedral, Mobile.

The Unity of the Human Race.

Dr. Prichard, whose fame as the greatest of ethnologists was universally admitted during his lifetime, constantly upheld the doctrine of the unity of the human race. He maintained that mankind sprung from one stock, and formed but one species. He accounted for the diversity observable in the different races by the influence of food, climate, and other circumstances operating through a long series of ages. Darwin's work on "Animals and Plants Under Domestication" strongly confirms Dr. Prichard's view, for it proves conclusively that within the limits of one acknowledged species of animal there may be produced, by the operation merely of artificial selection and hereditary transmission of peculiarities, diversities infinitely greater than those existing between the highest and lowest races of mankind.

This doctrine of monogeny or original unity of mankind, which Dr. Prichard maintained with such powerful arguments, is supported by Dr. Latham with arguments drawn from philology. He assumes, on the most reasonable grounds, that all languages have had a common origin and spring from it in lapse of an original unity of race. The difficulties of emigration from an original center of creation are not to be compared to difficulties with the wide geographical distribution of mankind, for even the South Sea Islanders—and in their case the difficulties most have been great—have in most cases may have come to their present abodes by emigration, for Japanese mariners have been sometimes driven from their homes by stress of weather and met upon islands in the South Seas. Sir Wm. Jones, the great Orientalist, says that "it is no longer doubtful whether the Japanese, the Chinese, the race of man proceeded from Iran or Persia as from a center, whence they migrated at first in three great colonies, and that those three branches grew from a common root which had been miraculously preserved in a general convulsion and inundation of this globe."

So great is the evidence for the derivation of all the human inhabitants of the earth from one pair of ancestors that it has obtained the suffrages of the most competent to judge upon a question of comparative anatomy and physiology. The distinctive Caucasian and Mongolian are examples of the highest order. But no writer has a claim to deference upon this subject superior to that of Dr. Prichard. He has devoted a large work to this subject and others allied to it—"Researches into the Physical History of Mankind"—and another work—"The Natural History of Man." In the Introductory Observations prefixed to the latter work he says that he has not allowed himself to be swayed by any prepossessions, but that he has tried to be his conclusions by the strict rules of scientific inquiry. The animals which render the greatest services to man, and peculiarly depend upon his protection, are widely diffused—the horse, the dog, the sheep, the ass, the camel, the reindeer, and different to a degree so great that an observer, ignorant of physiological history, would pronounce them to be of different species. Thus, by an investigation totally independent of historical authority, we are brought to the conclusion of the Holy Scriptures—that the Almighty Creator has made all nations of one stock.

OTTOWA, N. Y. P. A. TERACY.

— If we are to credit Hedley's badly-animated Directory, there have been 305 churches built in the Archdiocese of Baltimore during the past year! From the same remarkably unreliable source we learn information we learn that Catholic hospitals have decreased from 185 in 1883 to 139 in 1884! Whether the buildings were evolved by earthquakes, or carried bodily off the earth, the "learned compiler" fails to inform us. Yet we have failed to hear that any Roman Catholic single hospital, hence it is safe to conclude that such begging is a habit these book-makers have contracted, and which it is very difficult to get rid of! But, joking aside, the present issue of the Hedley's Directory is the most complete piece of botch-work yet issued in America.

— A circular has been issued by the Irish National Parliamentary Union of Great Britain announcing as its object "the payment of a yearly sum of, say £500, to Irish National members of Parliament, to assist them in devoting their time to the National interests of Ireland, and residing for the Parliamentary session in London. The annual subscription is either £1 or 5s.

WARRANT FOR RADIMONE'S ARREST.

LONDON, March 24.—A Government warrant has been issued against William Redmond, M. P., for Wexford borough, for a seditious speech delivered prior to his departure for Australia.

OUR IRISH LETTER.

Irish Affairs in Parliament—The Speaker of the House of Commons—The Franchise Bill—Its Beneficial Influence—Parnell's Reception on the Grand Festival—The Dynamite Scare.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

Dear Sir—After a period extending from the Speaker of the House of Commons, Sir H. Drummond Wolff, M. P., Mr. Parnell, M. P., and the handsome salary of £4,000 a year. Mr. O'Donnell, M. P., Mr. Lewis, M. P., and Mr. Parnell, M. P., spoke for his services; also in the same period the Queen in person upon Sir H. Drummond signal mark of her favor. Sir E. Reed, M. P., Mr. Lewis, M. P., Mr. Parnell, M. P., and Mr. Farnell speaking for the Irish Party, and the Queen, in a very gracious way, expressed it did not fail to hit be to accomplish the purpose for which it was intended, acknowledging to the fullest extent both the Irish and all his honorable friends the great generosity, kindness and consideration with the Irish Party, and they always evinced towards him in his individual capacity, he (Mr. Parnell) had found with great respect and such a number that notice.

OFFICIAL ACTIONS OF THE SPEAKER had to the judgement of the Irish members and the Speaker's intimate relations on the party, and including much injustice and hostility, and the Speaker's intimate relations with those actions were in season of the outbreaks of the Irish Party, and the Speaker's House, and courtesy to the privileges of the Irish Party, and he had fals had never been disappointed if they initially opened to the Irish Party, and the Speaker's Irish Party withdrew and did not be.

The Speaker's Ball, a ball given by the Speaker, was held in Ireland, and the following evening (Tuesday) the Speaker's Ball was held in Dublin, and the Speaker's Ball, Sir Robert Peel. His election to the Chair of the Speaker's Ball, and the Speaker's Ball, and the Speaker's Ball, and

Leisure Hours.

GAPT. H. FRANK - - - EDITOR

All matters of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and selections for this department. Address all communications to

Frank J. McGrath,
634 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PROGRESSIVE—

PUZZLES.

For the best batch of five fat-answer puzzles contributed to Leisure Hours, the MONITOR is offered for one year.

For the best batch of three puzzles, the MONITOR is offered for three months.

SPECIAL.

For the second best in each of the above "batch" offers, Spirit of Light for one year, six months, and three months respectively.

All contributions entered in this competition must be marked "in competition" and must reach me on or before May 1, 1884.

Capt. H. Frank.

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 70.

1st.—Dick Sin. 2d.—Tom Bowline. 3d.—Ben Bolt. 4th.—Sindbad the Sailor. 5th.—Sweet Alice. 6th.—Tom Tiddler's Ground. 7th.—Sinbad the Sailor. 8th.—Ben Bolt. 9th.—Sweet Alice. 10th.—Tom Bowline. 11th.—Sweet Alice. 12th.—Ben Bolt. 13th.—Sweet Alice. 14th.—Sindbad the Sailor. 15th.—Tom Bowline.

1st.—JAMES		9th.—LUCY
2d.—ADELA		10th.—DEAN
3d.—MARY		11th.—ALICE
4th.—JESSIE		12th.—LEWIS
5th.—ROSE		13th.—LUKE
6th.—ELLEN		14th.—ANNIE
7th.—ANNIE		15th.—ELLEN
8th.—MARY

1st.—CORRIGAN		9th.—AVY
2d.—CONNERS		10th.—ARIO
3d.—NOLAN		11th.—ALICE
4th.—CRIMP		12th.—AGRICULTURE
5th.—ROSE		13th.—AVY
6th.—ELLEN		14th.—ALICE
7th.—ANNIE		15th.—LAD
8th.—MARY		16th.—R

17th.—Ascent
18th.—AGRESTI
19th.—SIFTER
20th.—SIFTER
21st.—SIFTER
22d.—SIFTER
23d.—SIFTER
24th.—INTERN

Puzzles in Leisure Hours No 70 were solved by Adams, Andre, Grandpa, Jack, Jo, Lizzie, Lizzie Lizzie, Mac, Mac, Mac, Mac, N. Y. L., and Frank.

Puzzles in Leisure Hours No 69 were solved by Adams, Andre, Grandpa, Jack, Jo, Lizzie, Lizzie Lizzie, Mac, Mac, Mac, Mac, N. Y. L., and Frank.

Puzzles in Leisure Hours No 68 were solved by Adams, Andre, Grandpa, Jack, Jo, Lizzie, Lizzie Lizzie, Mac, Mac, Mac, Mac, N. Y. L., and Frank.

Puzzles in Leisure Hours No 67 were solved by Adams, Andre, Grandpa, Jack, Jo, Lizzie, Lizzie Lizzie, Mac, Mac, Mac, Mac, N. Y. L., and Frank.

Tales, Tales Galore, Jokes, and Sparks, with Intermixed.

NUMBER LXXXI.

Ist Room.—BRASS.

To me, then, which they say is found,
A Jewel, a Jewel of rare price and worth,
Gems of brilliant. From the ground
Gems, which, when cut, and with skill polished
Sparkle in the sun, and shine
Brilliant, and rare, and costly, and
Of great value, and worth, and price.
Of the same, and of the same
Of the same, and of the same
Of the same, and of the same

Jesuit Missions in America.

INTERESTING HISTORICAL RETROSPECT.

The various Orders of religious men, which have originated from age to age, to revive fervor and enlarge the foundation of the Church, have each sent all of them, does very much in the way of missionary labor—which seems to have been the preference of so many. At the present we desire to notice merely the principal labors of the Order of the Society of Jesus, as established by the much of their missionary labors in North America. The Indians of the celebrated Order began to be felt on this Continent long ere even other its establishment by St. Ignatius de Loyola.

BEFORE THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS

in Massachusetts, and long before a Baptist, they was made in the settlement of James-town, Va., Spaniards established the Catholic Church. The Jesuit Fathers were among the earliest and most habitual sharpers—they lived with the Indians, learned their dialects and went as far as to speak their language for them, just long before the founding of Harvard University. Embarking from Spain, they came in a company, they landed at the St. Lawrence to the great Lakes and at the numerous tribes of Indians that held regions and hunting grounds there to the tracks of our lady religion, as well as in Florida, and even in the Gulf of Mexico. But this was not enough for these Jesuits, thousands of miles from any civilized settlement, they went, wherever such were still to be found, with the same great object in view, and all over the civilized world of the Jesuits, with books and pictures of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin, Slattery Table to, that, everywhere, their labors were crowned with success. They planted the cross of Christ among them, and that the labors were still from the commencement, from the Jesuits, Father Hunter, and Jos Marie in their own harsh tongue, and the Jesuits Fathers the hard ships and labors inevitable, endangerous in the extreme, and, in fact, the Jesuits Fathers accompanied with hardships and suffering unknown, and with which, in such times and in such places, and in such times, and in the "wilds" of the Jesuits, lived according to the precept of Christ, "Love ye the Jesuits, and whatsoever you do I have loved you." It did not require a very great amount of eloquence to show that these Jesuits Fathers were called to the work of the Jesuits, and that the Jesuits Fathers were called to the work of the Jesuits, and that the Jesuits Fathers were called to the work of the Jesuits, and that the Poetry.

GOD WILL EXPLAIN IT ALL.

Two women were dwellers beneath one roof;
The one was beloved and young and fair;
The other, she, with a heart that was hard,
Now her cheeks were faded, and white her hair.

One at eventide brought an infinite riches
That held the world, and she let her heart break,
And smiled as she thought he will love me more,
When he sees his child to my bosom I take.

While the other knelt in her lonely room,
With her dead eyes lifted toward the skies
And prayed: "O my heart-ache, weary and old!
There is nothing to live for—let me die."

And then in dark night the one was stricken
By the lifeless form of his young fair wife.
And his motherless babe mourn'd for years
Of the desolate woman weary of life.

And the happy children play in the streets,
And brightly or sad the sunbeams fall
And the busy crowd pass hurrying by,
And none mine God will explain it all.

THE BLESSED TIDINGS.

The Spirit of the Mother of God—The modern Image of the Blessed Virgin—Teaching of the Church concerning the Power of Mary.

CLARKE CITY, March 30, 1884.

REVEREND MOTHER—

Of Pole, 27 lb., contains a whole in your paper of Mary, Mother of God, and Mother of Men. Allow me, Reverend Mother, to thank you for the kindness of your letter.

Almost the time that letter was written, I was reading the Encyclical of Pope Leo XIII. on the Rosary, and I thought that it is Mary, Mother of God, and always girl—the Dove, Queen of Heaven, and Mother of Men.

Christ, Jesus, Creation, with them and in spiting them of the young Prince of the Angels and brother. For with all his faults and weaknesses, his father's was a lovable nature, and much would have been forgiven him for the sake of his mother, whom he had returned to obey in Christ, Christ, without ever since the birth of Christianity, Christ, without ever since the birth of Christianity, Christ, without ever since the birth of Christianity

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1884.

Meaning of Palm Sunday.

Next Sunday will be the festival known in the calendar of the Church as PALM SUNDAY, on which occasion the Church commemorates the triumphant entry of our Blessed Redeemer into Jerusalem, five days before His Crucifixion—as recorded by the Evangelists.

The renowned author, Rev. Dr. Alban Butler, in his Feasts and Fasts of the Catholic Church, gives a very interesting account of this festival, from which we copy the following particulars:

"When our Saviour had drawn near to Jerusalem, and to the Mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, Mary and Martha, Lazarus's sisters, to fetch an ass and her colt, on which he rode, by which he meant to signify the people of the Jews and the Gentiles, the two nations, which, being joined together in one, were to be his spouse. The Jews had long groaned under the yoke of the Law, and were ready to receive the Gospel; and the Gentiles, who had lived without God in the world, and were strangers to the covenant of promise, were called with a tender voice to come to him. Our Divine Redeemer, who had long before promised to gather the nations together, and to make them one fold under one shepherd, now, by the ministry of his disciples, gathered the first believers of the Jewish and Gentile nations together in one, and made them one fold under one shepherd, and one spouse, by the unity of the Spirit, the bond of peace, and the mystery of charity, which is the soul of the Church. But some of the Scribes and Pharisees, who lurked in the city, and who had contracted a deadly rancour against the Prophet, and envied the honours paid to him by the people, cried out, Why do you do this? Why do you suffer the people, and children, and even the children, to cry out, Hosanna to the Son of David? Hosanna, Hosanna, Hosanna, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord? Hosanna, Hosanna, Hosanna, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, the King of Israel? Jesus, to their confusion, and to the glory of his disciples, who had spoken to him in the spirit of prophecy, and had given the people occasion to cry out, Hosanna, Hosanna, Hosanna, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, the King of Israel, and to the glory of God, who had ordained out of the mouth of babes and sucklings, and even of the children, to prepare a perfect praise for himself, answered, I tell you that if these shall hold their peace, the stones shall cry out. Jesus, being arrived at the Mount of Olives, sent two of his disciples, Peter and John, to prepare the paschal lamb, which he ate with his disciples, and instituted the Holy Eucharist, the Christian Passover, in the night in which he was betrayed, and which was the eve of his Passion, and of his Sacrifice on the Cross, as the Jewish Passover had been of his Resurrection."

A Very Beautifying State Document.

The race of statesmen seems to have become extinct in America, and in recent times their places are filled with men who are below mediocrity in all that concerns the management of the affairs of this great country. Let any intelligent person take a glance at the men composing President Arthur's Cabinet, and then compare them with such men as Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Calhoun, Webster, Clay, Cass, Black, Everett, or even James Buchanan, and it will be at once apparent that troubling politicians have succeeded to the position hitherto held by wise patriots in this republic.

Numerous instances might be cited where the dignity of America has been insulted and American prestige lowered—by reason of the toadying, time-serving, and truckling of those state statesmen who at present rule the destinies of a country for whose welfare they never performed a single public service to entitle them to the people's gratitude. One example, however, shows how little our Chief Magistrate cares what a stain upon statesmanship is the methods at present employed in American diplomacy.

Our readers may remember that a few weeks ago it was reported in the press that the British Ministry had sent a request to the American Government, through the British diplomatic channel, that the President would issue a proclamation, which would be read in the navy yards, and should be read in the British navy, on the occasion of the birthday of the Prince of Wales, which occurs on the 9th of November, that the Prince of Wales, the heir-apparent to the throne of Great Britain, was a man of high moral character, and that the British people should feel sorrow and indignant at the treatment of the Prince of Wales by the Queen, his mother, and recommend to the people of the United States, that they should show their sympathy with the Prince of Wales, by not visiting the Queen of England, his mother, during the period when the Prince of Wales should be in the country, and that the President should, in his proclamation, request the people of the United States to

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. FRANK, EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and solicitors for the department. Address all communications to

FRANK J. HOPPER,
828 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-GNOSTICS—

NUMBER LXXXII.

To Miss L. B. ——, the number of LEISURE HOURS is most respectfully dedicated.

1ST ROCK.—CHARADE.

"Ye Capt. F. Frank,"
Now the greatest thing extant
(Probably you know it),
Is a book that you will grant,
Ere you read it,
Is a book very different,
That's the way I view it,
Yet you can not put it down,
(Will the reader pardon this? Sir!)
Because it is so good.
(If you will, by-the-bye,
Why then, you must be
Very much pleased indeed,
When old Jack gets it.
Nevada, N. T.

2ND ROCK.—CHARADE.

Sam Rankin and sweet Rosie Slade,
After a quantity of shoot one week,
Concluded to join hearts and hands,
For one of seven, so to speak.

3. R. E. R. S. of Gotham
Is a Jack of all trades, I W.
And when he has time, on all hands,
Will end of Sam, who is a
Jack of all trades, and master of none.
Dallas, Or. P. G. LEE ABBY.

3RD ROCK.—DIAMOND.

To "Capt. Frank" ("De Vile Mischief.")
Will the "Ship of Fortune" "Capt." all
September
Sail to Paradise on fifteen bonuses, and on clear-
Perhaps you are not blessed with children and they hasten
Do not be called his children and they hasten
For his reward, in their honor and his falsehood
Is a Dead man, a drawer of a long bow
What inner duty of Kings endangered by the
Is a Dead man, a drawer of a long bow
Is a Dead man, a drawer of a long bow
Is a Dead man, a drawer of a long bow

THE REIGN OF TERROR.

BY ROBERT J. DUNDETT.

London, March 14.—The explosion in the hotel at Paris, which has left a dozen men and women dead or dying, is not half so horrible but we are not a Frenchman subject belonging to a king. (Vide Dynamite.)

The mine is laid and the wires are set!
Pulse!
We'll be blown into dinner or Halifax yet—
Shake!
The center throes at our trembling feet,
And dynamite hurls to the stones of the street,
Destruction stops in the food that we eat—
Pa-tee!!!

There's a bee of antidotes under the bed,
Oh, yes!
And a trunk full of dynamite out in the shed—
Hes! Hes!
There's a bottle-bomb stuck in the bath room
Ahs!
And a plum bomb under the parlor floor,
And down in the dining room several more—
Ho-ree!

And all these things that out, and explode,
And throw,
And shake, and poison, and tear, and corrode,
Fly over
Are Fenian notions of mornings and noons;
Lord's Prayers, Yankee pieces on every death,
And a Yankee bullet at the British throne—
Oh, dear!

Come, Wilhelm the Kaiser, don't sleep too much!
Hasten!
Or dot Tamphoos will blow up dey Dutch—
Listen!
Put Yankees out who can reach up your fence,
And Irish bombs grumble under your sense—
Hear!
Dark Colonies Tom will "resolve" some more,
Come on!
And Lord Cora Blentwich Schoolmaam's when Gone!

Lord Fitzgerald, Sir Albert of Wales!
Lord Lorne, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Salisbury!
Sir Stafford of Cabinet, Chang Ling Long Wun
Lee!
Sir Hartington Lorde! Baron of Blancard!
Sir Bellamy Malcolm! Admiral of Derby! All!
Come!

Oh, heaven have mercy! We only too late!
The Fenian are at Fulham! Oh, fearful our fate!
The mines are exploded! The volcanoes flash,
Our cities are ruins! The ocean rises down with a crash,
Our populous towns in eternal sleep—
Che-boom!
Ah, he! We are saved! They have perished
Boo!
They have taken away my American toy,
Hoo!
Put the Brits to sleep with a gas or the shell,
And keep to the Tower the Fenian all
Hie down on remains for my mother's sad Cockpit!
Me, he!

A Dose for Dynamiters

REDPATH ROASTS O'DONOVAN ROSSA.

A TERRIBLE SCORCHING WITH SOLID TRUTH.

Poets Stronger than Rossa's Rigmarole.

In a recent number of his paper, James Redpath addresses the following treatment to the Head Centre of the Dynamiters, and all who read it will conclude that poor O'Donovan Rossa is completely used up by the depth of both language and rational feeling.

Dear old, honest, right-hearted, straightforward, O'Donovan Rossa—Dynamite Dan, President of the Vice-President of the Centre Convention, If the Rose Rossa, Esquire, is just other thinking, it seems, that, in the opinion of Redpath, he is a humbug, and deserves the Vice-President, who might be found that the Vice-President was not dismissed from the O'Bryan; that, instead of being a Tankerpot, he is a man with both blood in James Redpath, who is a Fenian, and who is not.

True for you, O'Donovan, dear!

Redpath is a man who has shed blood in the cause of our poor Ireland himself had his wife, (May the rest of the entire Redpath, that one's have a Tankerpot), he, instead of being the man he is, he would be a Commissioner Billygoat, or some other equally impossible, but dangerous (to himself if not—and then made a present of it to Gladstone, the wood-cutter, under some impressive product. If Gladstone Billy had got me chance to make a rear movement upon the English William, just to be was thwacking at a free, the Gladstone Administration would have a stiffer a defeat! That would have been an honest physical force movement. But—a Yankee run!—better and another jet of jam to Gladstone, and abide the results! For, possibly, a colic might have come from that! and she will be so colic is not a recognized weapon of legitimate warfare, still it is better than more Bunker!

Yet, although the brainless folly of the Dynamiters has been so much more than mischievous ridiculous, then their failures have been tragically fertile in disasters to the Irish cause. They have alienated the sympathy of the friendly English working-men whom they should seek, and they have accentuated the "lower class" whose sentiments we shall need. If there should be any great dynamite explosion, attended by serious loss of life in England, there would be

A MASSACRE OF THE ISOLATED TRISH IN ALL LARGE BRITISH AND SCOTCH CITIES.

Are you prepared to take this possible bloodshed on your soul, O'Donovan Rossa? If you are ready to brave such a thing, you are not fit to be the head of your Irish countrymen. Go to England in disguise—go to England in disguise—go to England in disguise—and blow up the Tower, if you please, if you can. But do not, in your dynamite explosion, attempted by various men

Poetry.

[SEE THE SOUTHERN.]

HAILS! HOLY EASTER.

The lovely way of Lent has passed,
The grief from Calvary's Cross is o'er,
A glorious joy is at length is our,
The holy light poura more and more,
The angels sing with the lowly of earth,
Tell it to the Resurrection Morn!

The Lord has risen from the dead,
On this day so fresh and bright!
With a sweep of angels on His head,
That would blind our mortality sight,
A crown that is far before our eyes,
The glittering new this Easter Morn!

Children of the earth rejoice,
On this our joyous holy day
Listen lovingly to His voice,
To Him who has trod a weary way,
He whom first was crucified
Rise has risen this Easter morn!

Let us to quick watch bside
The holy Magdalene,
With sorrow joy to Easter tide,
Where the angels are seen,
With redeemer in the tomb,
On the Blessed Easter Morn!

[SEE THE SOUTHERN.]

A REQUIEM.

Cold, bleak March has passed away,
And April comes in her train,
With her showers of tears,
Her showers of joy.

The dead is gone, the grave, and bright,
The angel stones is here,
Tell to the world the news,
A life of resurrection.

But for thing the angel,
Bright, bright, bright,
Perhaps, perhaps in which angels,
Where the angels are.

We may pass the boundary stone,
Pass the boundary line,
Pass beyond the shadow,
Pass the cerement dogs of rude.

We look in vain, and we wonder,
We look in vain, and we long,
Where the angels have lived,
Where the angels have lived,
Of Gethsemane Garden Kennedy Hall.

With all the glory rich cross down,
Where the angels are.

Oh, gently would have Gently would have
Gently would have with the dance
Of our holiday time.

Hall is vacated, hall is deserted,
Hall is vacated, hall is deserted,
To wave the pain of May with flower,
Hall is vacated, hall is deserted.

CONSTITUTION.

San Francisco, May 27, 1884.

Literary Miscellany.

The Nun's Protege.

AN AMERICAN CATHOLIC STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

The next day, at an early hour, Anni Amie appeared at my room, and by appointment we set out together for a walk before the sun was hid behind her. My reader can understand how shocked she was when I told her the story of my last interview with Mr. Graham, and how, in the midst of my grief, she comforted me by telling me that I was not to blame in the matter, but that he was a very unpopular character, and that I was not the only one who had suffered from his cruelty. When Knowles, after visiting his patient that morning, inquired for Mr. Dandale, he was informed that he had gone, and shortly after he had received a letter from Mr. Graham, which was followed by a second, in which he stated that he was called to his residence in Cincinnati, and that he should not return for some time. Knowles, after visiting his patient that evening, inquired for Mr. Dandale, and was informed that he had left the city, and had written to his wife, who was in Cincinnati, and that he should not return for some time. Knowles, after visiting his patient that morning

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1884.

The Great Festival of Easter.

Next Sunday will be the glorious festival of Easter, a day upon which all practical Catholics are sure to receive the Bread of Life, and a day when those Catholics who have been among the sleeping disciples of God should awaken from their lethargy, should confess their sins, express their sentiments to God, ask His pardon, determine to amend their lives, and then strengthen their holy resolution by mentally receiving the Holy Eucharist in their parish church.

Our holy Mother the Church throws open the portals of the sanctuary of God to all members of this holy empire. She bids her children welcome to the feast of her plan. Founder, the inspiring spirit Catholic father, every Catholic mother, and every Catholic child that has arrived at the age of spiritual knowledge—to raise from the tomb of sin, to unit forth in the pure atmosphere of Christianity, and to feast upon the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world.

How Ecclesiastical History is Garbled by Dr. Schaff.

One of the means adopted by Protestantism, by which the inventors of that system of religion strive hard to destroy the Catholic Church, was by issuing a corrupt, abridged, mistranslated, and generally adulterated Bible, and as well did this reformation runs succeed in deceiving and plunging the world, the thought suggested itself to a certain Dr. Schaff—who is a Congregationalist D. D. of some Yankee institute where politics, and not knowledge, is the recognized supreme power—that if he would garble ecclesiastical history in the same disreputable manner that his predecessor in Protestantism bell-dosed the Bible, he could make the world believe that Protestantism was Christianity; that it had its foundation in the Apostolic Church; that every man ought to be his own preacher, and every creed should be specially manufactured to suit the carried need of such status for himself.

This programme, if adopted, would naturally do away with Popes, Prelates, and Priests, and, as Dr. Schaff thought, would have for them Orders in the Catholic Church, and thus prevent the inspiration of the Indian and Irish Protestant Bible, in the year on Sacrificial Church which is the root and foundation of Christianity.

We cannot boast of the work until we view it in the light in which it is the Pasqie, reproduced and then contrast obscurity of the ordinary unbelieved Catholic reader with the propriety of exposing the egregious errors of

The Historical chaff
Of Dr. Schaff.

The Pope's infallibility person who not out to talk people for more than he knew, and this statement on page 124 of the second volume of his continental emasculation of truth:

"In the Apostolic Church preaching and teaching not confined to any particular person, every council could propose the gospel to the world, and every Christian could do the good work and teach and other in the world."

Not to minor words, we pronounce this utterance one of the most unparalleled and unpardonable falsehoods that ever emanated from a mind impregnated with the Luciferian light of the Father of Lies! The language of our Divine Saviour contradicts Dr. Schaff; the Sacred Scriptures prove him a falsifier; tradition proves him to be a traitor of truth, and the whole Church of God proclaims him to be a reckless prevaricator for the sole purpose of deceiving his Protestant dupes.

Now let us calmly compare the facts, as narrated in the divinely-inspired Scriptures with the assertion of this truth-torturer, and we will have a revelation of evangelical error that will put the brand of Cain upon the brow of this diabolical attempt to permeate the world that our Blessed Redeemer did not call certain men to be His apostles and disciples, and to whom alone He imparted the power to preach and teach His gospel to all nations.

Protestant Bibles, and Protestant Bibles, and Protestant Bibles, and

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. FRANK, EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and solutions, for this department. Address all communications to

Frank J. McEvoy,
555 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

HIS POETS.—CHARADE.

The Russian Campaign.

The bones and bloody rebel war that desolated
Poland
And made her canny hills and dales s' prey to crowd and brave,
Now taken th's way to distant lands like an avenging
Bard,
Th' Europe's nations from North to South are plunged in strife and blood.
The life blood of her gallant sons drenches her smiling value!
And from her smoking hills the sighing echo madly wails.
While Some Napoleon's fiery crowd wields with unhesitating skill,
And nations rise and sight again at his capricious will.
The sound of guns and musketry now echoes through the sky!
Guns, musketry, terrible implements preparing everywhere,
To wield great Napoleon conquest doth Napoleon
To add one gemlet to his name; new trophies to his fame.
Not yet content with having spread his conquests on the continent
He contemplates his grandest scheme; publishes proposal to the
Sons of the sunlit of the conquered re-
Sons of the sunlit of the conquered re-
Sons of the sunlit of the conquered re-

Archbishop Seghers.

SIGHTS AND SCENES IN SOUTHERN ITALY.

A Visit to Assisi, the City of St. Francis.

The Sacred Shrine of that Great Saint.

A VIEW OF MOUNT VESUVIUS.

The Church of St. Clara and Her Saintly Companions.

A Lovely Letter on Pious Conjugal Love.

NAPLES, Jan. 21st, 1884.

REVERENDED AND DEAR FATHER—

I have not been writing to you while about my trip through Central and Southern Italy, for I hoped to be here that I might have the time to do justice to the subject. Hence it is, that one is so of these things of which I have not yet written, when the Franciscan Virgin used to join with the angels in celebrating the praises of the Lord. We were shown the place where the veil opened to hide the young St. Francis from the wrath of his father; for the house where, to the great displeasure of his father, St. Francis used to spend days in contemplation, because afterwards the monastery of his spiritual daughters. We saw the place where and the gloomy looking refectory where the multiplied loaves of bread. We visited the dormitory where she and her Sisters used to take their night rest, and from the window of which, holding in her hands the monstrance with the Blessed Sacrament, made the Saracens fall from their ladders at the very moment they were ready to invade the cloister. The nuns stands depicted on the walls of the old edifice. That monastery is now a convent of Franciscans of strict observance, and the church is dedicated to St. Damian. In the latter we saw the very protective cockpitted the Identical pale with which St. Clara used to defend her monastery against the Saracens. In the evening we took our supper with the Father Guardian. As it was Epiphany, three of the Fathers, holding each a silver salver with little rolls of paper, stepped into the middle of the refectory; one would jump up as soon as a slip of paper from his salver and read the lucky name on it, and then the second would do the same, and would read from his slip the name of the saint whom the great feast honors would have for patron during the remainder of the year; the third would then read the slip of paper to be particularly attended to. My name was one of the lucky ones, and you should have heard the drawing, shouting, and slapping of hands and joyous peals of laughter that followed the announcement. Now, I have to tell you that I was very, very happy when I received for patron during this year of grace 1884, by a simple coincidence, it was none other than the great and glorious patriarch of the Franciscan family, the

MONT OF ST. CLARA'S COMPANIONS WERE BURIED.

PATRIARCH OF ASSISI.

Every one was so pleased, and at the same time so agreeably surprised, that the reader of the annals of the saints thinks it his duty to protest earnestly and solemnly that he had acted in all candor and good faith.

I continue my letter, after a short walk through the streets of Naples, to tell you, as my distinctly the top of Mount Vesuvius lit up by a huge fire; sometimes the furnace of the volcano seems to be extinct, but in a minute or two it brightens up, now emitting but a bold glare, then pouring forth the forked flames of its volcanic lines beneath vard. It is a sight never to be forgotten.

But I continue the narrative of my pilgrimage. After saying Mass on Monday, Jan. 7, in the crypt of the church of St. Clara of Assisi, before and in sight of the body of that great saint, I set off to pay a visit to the ancient monastery of the Franciscans (now in the hands of the Government) which was illustrated by St. Bonaventure and other great men of that illustrious order, and I left Assisi with my constant and faithful companion, Father Sesbo, to ramble the remaining place of St. Clare de Montefalco. On the cars we met two American ladies of St. Paul, Minn., who were not a little surprised and delighted to have a chat in their mother tongue, with two American clergymen.

WE ARRIVED AT FOLIGNO

amidst a raging storm of rain and wind, and we hired a carriage to take us up to Montefalco, a small town on the top of a hill, where we passed the night. At Cedone, we honored a saint, a penitent, who had practiced austerities which, from the exaltation of size which the hardest really committed. At Montefalco we venerated another saint, an innocent child who had practised austerities not less severe and surprising, although she had never reserved for herself the path of righteousness but had preserved her innocence intact and unsullied. Such is the lesson of the saints. They are a book containing the most wonderful teachings. We find in them the practical teachings of doctrines which faith alone reveals to us; which human reason, of itself, is not capable comprehend. Our reason can understand the practice of penance performed by those who have lived in the world, and who have been canonized, but one cannot help asking ought penance to be performed by those who have not themself flurry the love of our Lord, and a fervent desire to be like Him will partially account for the penance of mild persons, but if that cause does not entirely satisfy the mind, let us go to the saints of Old—those temples of the Holy Ghost—whose virtues have received from above a solemn approbation and a divine sanction through the marvels and miracles wrought around them, and we shall at once be convinced that a life of austerity is the mark of a true Christian, whether penance be or be not in question. No wonder that Luther declared war on the invocation and veneration of saints—with them he had nothing in common, for he did not believe in the communion of saints, and as in other matters, he threw overboard whatever contested his ideas of falsehood.

SAINT CLARA IS MONTPALDO

presents to us an interesting subject to study because she was canonized two years after St. Joseph Labre, John de Rossi, and Lawrence of Brindisi, by our holy Father, previously reigning. She was but seven years old when she can found worthy to enter a convent of cloistered nuns, of which her sister was Superior, and which convents received the rule of St. Augustine. At the age of twelve she made her vows, and, in a moment of anguish, behold the Infant Jesus in the arms of the Blessed Virgin appeared to her in the cell, and made of gold and very far The date of her death was 1308, so she died at the age of forty years in 1308. Since that time, many girls have lived, died, and been piously preserved, both intact and faultless. Yet we have the body of that saintly woman on the afternoon of the 7th of January. The sisters uncovered the shrine where it is kept, and where we saw a figure of St. Anne, the Blessed Virgin's Mother, given to St. Clara by Cardinal James Colonna. No words can describe the feelings one experiences when beholding the sacred remains of that great servant of God, reposing sweetly with a placid countenance; the absence of marks usually made of death, but the hands shape of the fairest speaks of life. Of her our Lord might call way what he said of Lazarus:

"SHE IS NOT DEAD, SHE BUT SLEEPETH."

The color of the body is gray like that of ashes. Her hands are not together and lifeless as usual. No sooner do the Sisters unite hands to change her habit, than they fall to her side in a natural position. We then saw the heart cut in two parts; one of the two parts from the edge of the cross, the other that of the strap or scourge with the cross and the instruments of the passion of Jesus Christ that were found imprinted in her heart on a Friday, in prolonged prayer. The next day, Monday, January 7, I said Mass before the body of that great Franciscan Nun; but, in the afternoon of the same Monday I paid a visit to the monastery where she used to live. It is most lonely, and the latter had taken up their residence in that city.

Too ill sale, perhaps, for the cutting in two of Saint Clare's heart is to be associated for? When she had died, her Sisters remembered a vision with which she had been favored, and in which she had seen our Lord, walking painfully with his cross on His shoulders. Our Saviour, turning to our saint, addressed her and said. "This cross, O Clare, I will plant in thy heart." Prompted by curiosity, the nuns of Monta. to the great displeasure of his father, St. Francis used to spend days in contemplation, because afterwards the monastery of his spiritual daughters. We saw the place where and the gloomy looking refectory where the multiplied loaves of bread. We visited the dormitory where she and her Sisters used to take their night rest, and from the window of which, holding in her hands the monstrance with the Blessed Sacrament, made the Saracens fall from their ladders at the very moment they were ready to invade the cloister. The nuns stands depicted on the walls of the old edifice. That monastery is now a convent of Franciscans of strict observance, and the church is dedicated to St. Damian. In the latter we saw the very protective cockpitted the Identical pale with which St. Clara used to defend her monastery against the Saracens. In the evening we took our supper with the Father Guardian. As it was Epiphany, three of the Fathers, holding each a silver salver with little rolls of paper, stepped into the middle of the refectory; one would jump up as soon as a slip of paper from his salver and read the lucky name on it, and then the second would do the same, and would read from his slip the name of the saint whom the great feast honors would have for patron during the remainder of the year; the third would then read the slip of paper to be particularly attended to. My name was one of the lucky ones, and you should have heard the drawing, shouting, and slapping of hands and joyous peals of laughter that followed the announcement. Now, I have to tell you that I was very, very happy when I received for patron during this year of grace 1884, by a simple coincidence, it was none other than the great and glorious patriarch of the Franciscan family,

MONT OF ST. CLARA'S COMPANIONS WERE BURIED.

THE PATRIARCH OF ASSISI.

Every one was so pleased, and at the same time so agreeably surprised, that the reader of the annals of the saints thinks it his duty to protest earnestly and solemnly that he had acted in all candor and good faith.

I continue my letter, after a short walk through the streets of Naples, to tell you, as my distinctly the top of Mount Vesuvius lit up by a huge fire; sometimes the furnace of the volcano seems to be extinct, but in a minute or two it brightens up, now emitting but a bold glare, then pouring forth the forked flames of its volcanic lines beneath vard. It is a sight never to be forgotten.

But I continue the narrative of my pilgrimage. After saying Mass on Monday, Jan. 7, in the crypt of the church of St. Clara of Assisi, before and in sight of the body of that great saint, I set off to pay a visit to the ancient monastery of the Franciscans (now in the hands of the Government) which was illustrated by St. Bonaventure and other great men of that illustrious order, and I left Assisi with my constant and faithful companion, Father Sesbo, to ramble the remaining place of St. Clare de Montefalco. On the cars we met two American ladies of St. Paul, Minn., who were not a little surprised and delighted to have a chat in their mother tongue, with two American clergymen.

WE ARRIVED AT FOLIGNO

amidst a raging storm of rain and wind, and we hired a carriage to take us up to Montefalco, a small town on the top of a hill, where we passed the night. At Cedone, we honored a saint, a penitent, who had practiced austerities which, from the exaltation of size which the hardest really committed. At Montefalco we venerated another saint, an innocent child who had practised austerities not less severe and surprising, although she had never reserved for herself the path of righteousness but had preserved her innocence intact and unsullied. Such is the lesson of the saints. They are a book containing the most wonderful teachings. We find in them the practical teachings of doctrines which faith alone reveals to us; which human reason, of itself, is not capable comprehend. Our reason can understand the practice of penance performed by those who have lived in the world, and who have been canonized, but one cannot help asking ought penance to be performed by those who have not themself flurry the love of our Lord, and a fervent desire to be like Him will partially account for the penance of mild persons, but if that cause does not entirely satisfy the mind, let us go to the saints of Old—those temples of the Holy Ghost—whose virtues have received from above a solemn approbation and a divine sanction through the marvels and miracles wrought around them, and we shall at once be convinced that a life of austerity is the mark of a true Christian, whether penance be or be not in question. No wonder that Luther declared war on the invocation and veneration of saints—with them he had nothing in common, for he did not believe in the communion of saints, and as in other matters, he threw overboard whatever contested his ideas of falsehood.

SAINT CLARA IS MONTPALDO

presents to us an interesting subject to study because she was canonized two years after St. Joseph Labre, John de Rossi, and Lawrence of Brindisi, by our holy Father previously reigning. She was but seven years old when she can found worthy to enter a convent of cloistered nuns, of which her sister was Superior, and which convents received the rule of St. Augustine. At the age of twelve she made her vows, and, in a moment of anguish, behold the Infant Jesus in the arms of the Blessed Virgin appeared to her in the cell, and made of gold and very far The date of her death was 1308, so she died at the age of forty years in 1308. Since that time, many girls have lived, died, and been piously preserved, both intact and faultless. Yet we have the body of that saintly woman on the afternoon of the 7th of January. The sisters uncovered the shrine where it is kept, and where we saw a figure of St. Anne, the Blessed Virgin's Mother, given to St. Clara by Cardinal James Colonna. No words can describe the feelings one experiences when beholding the sacred remains of that great servant of God, reposing sweetly with a placid countenance; the absence of marks usually made of death, but the hands shape of the fairest speaks of life. Of her our Lord might call way what he said of Lazarus:

"SHE IS NOT DEAD, SHE BUT SLEEPETH."

The color of the body is gray like that of ashes. Her hands are not together and lifeless as usual. No sooner do the Sisters unite hands to change her habit, than they fall to her side in a natural position. We then saw the heart cut in two parts; one of the two parts from the edge of the cross, the other that of the strap or scourge with the cross and the instruments of the passion of Jesus Christ that were found imprinted in her heart on a Friday, in prolonged prayer. The next day, Monday, January 7, I said Mass before the body of that great Franciscan Nun; but, in the afternoon of the same Monday I paid a visit to the monastery where she used to live. It is most lonely, and the latter had taken up their residence in that city.

Too ill sale, perhaps, for the cutting in two of Saint Clare's heart is to be associated for? When she had died, her Sisters remembered a vision with which she had been favored, and in which she had seen our

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM—IRELAND

Canada and Ireland.

NEW YORK, April 11.—The Herald of Lorne, having recently written an article called "Provincial Pious Rule," Sullivan, the Irish patriot, spoke to an American reporter to-day, thus: "It is book! book! His Lordship does not know what he is writing about. His proposal would be a measure of Irish Affairs greatly deplorable. The Marquis is from Canada. Canadians are peculiarly loyal and at the same time extremely jealous of their legal rights. They possess local legislatures and are content with the general dominion of England. Lorne thinks it would be a solution of the Irish question to apply the Canadian system to Ireland. But the Irish situation is the reverse of the Canadian. The people of Ireland are contented with their district government, and are at war against the general dominion of England. The Canadians are content with dominion; the Irish protest against allegiance."

Mr. Parnell on the Political Situation.

DUBLIN, March 31.—The Freeman's Journal publishes an interview with Mr. Parnell. The House of Lords, Mr. Parnell believes, will reject the new Franchise bill. The result of this will be a dissolution of Parliament and an appeal to the country. The Government, he says, is dependent in Commons on the Whigs upon the Irish vote for a majority. Mr. Parnell expects that his party will be able to carry seventy-five seats at the general election. Candidates, he says, will be required to give a pledge that they will act, and vote with the Irish party or resign. It is necessary, he believes, to make the Irish peasant proprietors, who are now by the act of 1881, 250,000 would be enfranchised to vote at elections and to return members to the Irish representatives of the Irish nation in Parliament.

The Study of Irish at St. Jarlath's.

The following letter appears in the Galway Dean Sun:—In connection with the paragraph that appeared in the Sun of the 19th inst. in which it was stated that Canon Neenan, P. P., has resumed the study of Irish, which had been abandoned for 50 years in St. Jarlath's College, permit me to assure you that the study of Irish never was, and has not been abandoned in this college, nor have they been forbidden. To say so is to be entirely false. Yes will oblige by publishing at least the extracts of this letter.

Sincerely yours,
P. KILBERRY, D. D., President.

Return of Canon Neenan from Rome.

Dr. A. O. Walsh, of Galway, writes to the Tribune to state that Canon Neenan, P. P., has returned to Ballinrobe from Rome. The reverend gentleman met a medical unknown when in Rome, Dr. O'Connell, who, from the description at home was cordial and enthusiastic. The invalid was thinking of going home to die in their pastor; the town was illuminated, the bells were lit, and the streets paraded by an immense crowd, the Canon walking in their midst, bareheaded, uncovered and greeted with an ovation accorded him. Cheering, loud, long, and continuous, rent the air. Hats were thrown, tottlers of feeling, indicating joy and gladness were visible on every side.

Death of Father Ryan, P. P., Kilbeggy.

The death is announced of the Rev. Joseph Ryan, P. P., of Kilbeggy. The deceased gentleman had his entire clerical career spent at Knockanagy, in his own diocese, where he was much beloved and esteemed as an active and clever and effective preacher. Even Kilcolgan, he was removed to Kilbeggy parish, where he is loved immensely for the great eighteen years' labors he spent in the parish of Knockanagy. The funeral obsequies were largely attended by the clergy and laity.

St. Patrick's Day in Rantry.

The National festival was duly observed in Rantry. A little after 1 a. m., on Monday, the bells of the parish church of Mr. Michael Whitford, proclaimed the arrival of St. Patrick's day in Rantry. Shortly after 2 a. m. a party of men, with a fiddle, proceeded to the house of Mr. Patrick Ryan, Superior of the Christian Brothers, Limerick, and the music to which every attended by a large number of people, proceeded to the residence of the Rev. Father Tranchemontagne, Bordeau and Castle.

The death of the Rev. J. T. Sullivan, Chancellor of the diocese of Ardagh, which occurred on Sunday, 30, so closely following that of his brother, the Rev. Patrick Sullivan, P. P., Ballymore, has been a great loss to the people of that Diocese. They were the sons of Mr. Denis Sullivan, Ballymore, Co. Mr. Denis Nolan, the Vicar-General, Very Rev. Thomas B. Walsh.

"The revelations concerning the manufacture of the Phoenix Park murders, published in the Times, the man who had worked in a New York machine shop, and who had lived with a solid gold watch and gold chain, and became even, and his hair and nails dressed and his face shaved, physician and surgeon, and who had lived the life he would have led had he lived in the Phoenix Park murders." Mr. Parnell, speaking of the murders in Mr. Gladstone's letter was read to a meeting of Irish men and Irish women in Dublin, which was lately held in Dublin, and which was to be revived, did, as the Chief Secretary for Ireland, Mr. Trevelyan, and the Lord Lieutenant, Lord Spencer, were in the room, and Mr. Parnell, speaking of the murders in Mr. Gladstone's letter, said, "Mr. Gladstone believed similarly to the Chief Secretary

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

LOOKING BACK.

BY J. H. GAVIN.

Old scenes, old sights, old sounds, ah! when
We see with fancy's eye, we dream
There was a youthful long ago,
When life was fair, when life was gay—
My home was by a rustic stream,
An Ormond's lawn, beneath a hill,
Deep bosomed in the leafiness wild,
The Poet's bright vision spread around
The flowery harvest, waving wide,
Peopling the dreaming valley's side
Half seen, half hidden in a wood,
Our little lowly cottage stood,
Not proud it stood, but yet it bore
A lofty mien, it was a home
For they who loved the solid little, who
Spurned the scene, with wealth and pride
Were held in vain, where hearts were poor
Oh the happy hour, long ago

Bright from Ormond's clover hill,
On the green sward a step lightly
Was resting, and two gentle eyes,
Were gazing wonderingly at the stranger
Were gazing on the handsome, haughty
Dame, proud of her ancestral hall,
Dame proud of her ancestral hall,
Proud too, of her lineal descent
The idle, in glowing distance plain
Scarcely could deem, that such a dame
The day's bright spreading energy,
The fear of being held in low
Of the world, the world, the world
Ambition and fondness for power, shame
Ambition and fondness for power, shame
Pride, envy, anxious care, and
Other evils, which God hath made
Have wrought with new needs to
Such wrought depth upon to heaven,
Such wrought to hide Deity. After this vie
Of what he knew not due to prove.

Thus mused through the long, long, long
Thus mused through the long, long, long
Thus mused through the long, long, long

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1884.

How the Bible is Perverted by Protestant Writers.

The proof we adduced last week was clearly sufficient to show that Dr. Schaff purposely misquoted the New Testament when he made his mis-called "Church History" say that "every convert in the early Christian Church could tend in the congregation." This week we intend to take up another malicious invention of this inveterate libeller of Holy Writ, in order to further more fully what a corrupting influence Protestant preachers are whenever they deem it to lendcraft their dupes by manufacturing history out of false interpretations or intentional corruptions of the sacred text.

It used to be the regular custom of all the enemies of the Church to invoke the aid of the Father of Lies before they make their attacks upon the Catholic citadel. Hence their minds are impregnated with more of the Satanic spirit of the Prince of Darkness than they are gifted with the wisdom of the Holy Ghost. Watson, like D'Aubigne, Eugene Lawrence, Dr. Schaff, et al., are nothing short something their consciences as to the truth of the statements that make. They not cast upon the principle that all is fair in warfare against Catholicity, hence they disregard Christian charity and common decency, and make reckless assertions, confident either truth in the publications that have the misfortune to fall from their pens.

Dr. Schaff—and indeed all other enemies of the excellent Congregational sect—have a lady partiality for the Bible, which they have imbibed in the Catholic Church. Notwithstanding the fact that the minority will be best understood by our readers when they learn that their sect was first formed in Geneva, then the home of its half-crucified, unfortunate founder. This sect having become a big sect, it was changed to Lutheranism, and when the sect divided into the different organizations, they settled down upon Congregationalism. The theory upon which they have based their claim to be the sect that every object of worship—the sect for public worship formed a distinct, entire, and complete Church of itself; that each congregation formed a Christian government for itself and that an ecclesiastical authority could exercise any jurisdiction whatever over any single congregation. Such were the principles called somebody to preach for them, listened to him as long as their patience prompted them, and then handed him out of the pulpit and called somebody else, who was in turn treated to the same discipline whenever "the elect" saw fit to kick him out of the sheep.

It is hardly necessary to say that such jarring, jangling, and jabbering people have no authority or influence. Whenever they attempt to teach them anything, because so unsettled are Congregationalists in general that they imagine themselves wiser than King Solomon, when society had to make better vested in the minors of salvation than any of the Evangelists who wrote the Sacred Scriptures.

The Successors of Holy Orders in a Pope's domination to these people, and it was in order to try and prove the correctness of the Congregational notion that Dr. Schaff deliberately falsified Holy Writ in his history—from which we quote this sentence as a text for this week's thrashing.

"The New Testament knows no political authority or holding, but calls all believers priests. Yet from the Constantine period, based in distinction from the people, so multiplied and developed and ripened."

From what we have said regarding the peculiar outlook of Congregationalism, our readers can easily discern what Dr. Schaff is driving at in the above sentence. He wishes it a downright disgrace to any man with any pretensions to decency that he make the Church read in the Scriptures—"Go ye to and." The New Testament contains not the foundation of falsehood for the purpose of confiding the open mouth of each prodigious lie of the Protestant Church. And this system of prostituting the Word of God to the lowest purposes of Protestantism should be every day plunged. Let us see the divinely-inspired Word of God and hold Dr. Schaff convicted of the whipping post with St. Paul Significant his condemning the lost sinner—condemned by the God of Truth. Here is what St. Paul says in that same New Testament—that quoted by the sinful Dr. Schaff:

"Christ," says the Apostle of the Gentiles, in his epistle to the Ephesians, "gave to His Church, some indeed Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and others Pastors and Teachers—(Bishops, says St. Chrysostom, who was charged with the care of the whole people), for the perfecting of the saints (i. e., to lead the faithful to the perfect discharge of their Christian duties), for the work of the ministry, for the building up of the body of Christ (the mystical body—the Church), until we meet all in the unity of faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God."

Then comes St. Paul against the idea of Dr. Schaff's anti-Sacerdotal theory:

Here we find set forth in language so plain that any intelligent mind can grasp it, the Divine Ordained Orders of the Church of God, and St. Paul must have had a prescientory photograph of Dr. Schaff in his mind's eye when—in the words following those quoted—he gives as the reason why Apostles, Prophets, Bishops, and Priests are necessary in the Church, in these words:

"That henceforth we be no more children tossed to and fro and carried about (like sectarians in general are) with every wind of doctrine, by the wickedness of men, (another hit at Dr. Schaff) by cunning craftiness (hit him again St. Paul!) by which they lie in wait to deceive." (This is a parting lash from St. Paul to the Philistines who purposely perverted the Holy Scriptures for the fraudulent purpose of serving with a Christian mask the monkey face of creedless Congregationalism!

In it any wonder that the Holy Bible has fallen into disrepute among Protestants when such untruthful text-writers as Dr. Schaff degrade themselves publicly by openly bearing false witness against even the Sacred Word of God? Yet Dr. Schaff's scandalous falsehoods have passed current among Protestant preachers for years, and it was left to a Catholic paper to take over the rubbish of this irreverent sortie and to place him in the pillory so that St. Paul could scourge him for thus ball-fooling the Bible!

Next week—(D. v.) as soon as the scrow on Dr. Schaff's Congregational crible have healed a little, we will trim him up again and we will hit through the Monroe preacher-peddler so as to extract the crystal evil which evidently abounds in his Congregational cranium.

Non-Catholics Calling Upon the Church to Save Society.

On the first page of this week's MONITOR we print the sermon of a Methodist preacher who has by his own act himself been from the Communion and cast of sectarianism so to boldly proclaim marriage to be a Sacrament. We do not mean that unless the Catholic principle regarding divorce is endorsed, society will become a nothing mass of corruption, a regular den of male and female demons.

The sentiments of this Methodist preacher—taken in connection with the happy-go-lucky ones of other non-Catholic thinkers and writers—shows conclusively that there is only one power on earth fully competent to check mankind in its career of vice, that there is only one authority left that has the courage to proclaim the law of God boldly and defiantly in the face of every malicious world.

And now, when Protestantism has continued to countenance divorce for three hundred years, the very preachers of that religious system of religious rant are compelled to point to the Catholic Church, and to call their misguided followers that the laws of the true Church of Christ are the only remedy for the sins which afflict society.

Protestant created sins which were never heard of in the world prior to Luther's time. Bigamy and divorce were the birth-marks branded on Protestantism by its father in his Christian Church, which divorced of 6,000 in the amount of a former footman, and married Anne of Cleves, which was only a in the State prison for embezzlement. Yet, in the Christian Church of Christ, we have to hear him compare for a the offenses of the Harlot Church of Christ, the Church of Christ, the Church of God, the Church of Christ, the Church of God, the Church of Christ, the Church of God

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. DRAKE — EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original matter for publication by the department. Address all communications to

Capt. H. Drake,
826 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

Answers to Leisure Hours No 77.

1st.—AUSTRALIA
UPBRAIDING
STRAITEN TRAILER RAINED
ACCED
PIER INN
AG
N

2nd.—Spend, pent, out. 7th.—New Zealand.

3rd.—NAPACAR — 8th.—SERAMUM
AMAPOLA — EPIGON
NAPACAR — SIMILES
APAMEA — ASHMAN
CACAFUO — MOLASSE
ELAMOO — UTTERS
REGANTE — MESSES

4th.—Wed-lock. 9th.—Hard-ship.

D 10th.—
CICIS — MA
SALAD — A
DIAGRAMS — ORCA
CANICULAR — PLACE
DIAGRAMS — ACCEPT SATURATED — PROMISE
DEPARTED — GLADNESS
SAZED — CHARIOTEE
RED — HUNTERS
D — BARBERSHEP

5th.—Amanuensis.

12th.—
CALIFE — IRE
SAPONIFY — A
CONVERTS — SAVOIRE
PANELING — O
CHARLES — ROYAL PAPERING — E
REMAINS — ENGLAND

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No 77 were solved by Ada, Sunflower, A. Merryman, Big Sur, Wooden Spoon, Ben Lomond, Sunshine, Big Sur, Thistle, Lady Forest, Rose Lot, Pompey, P. Q. Lee Abby, Harmony, Shamrock, Lady Southgate, N. Y., Sunset, Lily Dale, Sunset, Hawaii, Rose S. Hall, Osborne, Osborne, C. P. T., Hope, H. Bee, Mrs. Hale, Oakland, Mary, Complex Lion, A. Salem, and J. C. M.

Best Puzzles Solved by Ada, Sunflower, Sunshine, Big Sur, Lady Southgate, Lady Forest, Rose Lot, Pompey, Rose S. Hall, Osborne, Osborne, C. P. T., Hope, H. Bee, Mrs. Hale, Oakland, Mary, Complex Lion, A. Salem, and J. C. M.

Best Puzzles Sent in by Ada, Sunflower, Sunshine, Big Sur, Lady Southgate, Lady Forest, Rose Lot, Pompey, Rose S. Hall, Osborne, Osborne, C. P. T., Hope, H. Bee, Mrs. Hale, Oakland, Mary, Complex Lion, A. Salem, and J. C. M.

Prize for Best Puzzle Solved, and Puzzle, given solution each.

Prize Puzzles.

—THE CONSONANTS—

NUMBER LXXXIV.

1st Sort.—SYNCOPED PYRAMID.

Across:—1. A river in Germany. 2. A colored pulpy substance. 3. The armpit. 4. Poison. 5. A plant allied to the spinach. 6. A medicinal plant. 7. The entrails of a fowl.

Perhaps be an officer.
Perhaps be an officer.
Perhaps be an officer.
Perhaps be an officer.
How Orleans, La. P. Q. LEE ABITT.

HIDE HOUSE—ANAGRAM.

I GIVE NO HIDE TO HANG THE! And after here, in a tree,
Without any one
To stir, sunny or shady
No neighborly idea I will—
Much time is not lost.

But how when I chance to make,
Reddy, a fatal mistake,
For Commercial Pa?
Eye late, in schoolroom, then,
Perhaps be an officer.
Lays popsicle low.

Th well, Dis symbol of sight,
I vanish when comes the light!
Of poesies and lyrics
And now, more free from distress,
For Jerusalem's sake I will
The time has grown ripe.

Brooklyn, N. Y. BYSERIC.

HIVE HOUR—GREEK CROSS.

Tor Square.—1. Usually. 2. An open space for conduct. 3. Moderately warm. 4. An avenue for pedestrians.

Lower Square.—1. A junto. 2. The great ocean. 3. Gregarious. 4. To pulsate. 5. Loaded.

Center Square.—1. Loaded. 2. Old women. 3. Pertaining to a number. 4. To prefer. 5. Houses of birds.

Right Square.—1. Houses of birds. 2. To fasten. 3. To frighten. 4. Elegantly considerable.

Bottom Square.—Collection of bones. 2. To begin grossly. 3. A wager. 4. Wine made at Tokay. 5. Facts and arrangements in rooms.

Oakland, Cal. LOUISE E. ATTA.

—ANSWER and Solvers in five weeks.

Puzzle-Notes.

SPHINX.—Back to the old home again?

BYSERIC.—Always pleased to receive your fine puzzles.

SPOON CAKE.—I hope that your promise will soon be fulfilled.

FRIAR.—Another supply of puzzles from you will be thoroughly enjoyed.

LOUISE E. ATTA.—Very much is schooled. Another would meet with speedy insertion.

TOM A. HAWK.—Can you not send another one of your excellent hatchets to Leisure Hours.

NO. 78.—Not much of this issue in the last of your Cross Word.

GOOD SPORT.—Years of the 9th ult., come safely to hand. Thanks. I have very glad to hear from you. Many thanks for the contributions; and also subscribe.

Mystic Diamond.

—The Golden State Puzzlers' League did not hold its usual monthly meeting on Saturday evening April 5, 1884, owing to the absence of a quorum.

The organization of the Golden State Puzzlers' League was effected on Saturday evening April 5, 1884, with the following officers:

President, Mr. Wooden Spoon; Vice President, Mr. Thistle; Secretary, Mr. Ben Lomond; Treasurer, Mr. Sunflower; Editor, Mr. Sunset.

The Cross Word Puzzle, Mystic Diamond, Charade, Pyramid, Anagram, Rebus, Transposition, Double Acrostic and enigma, Also, good reliable Puzzle Help, without any charge to employers. Instructions sent free for taking any Puzzle.

Address, Sunset, Box 1, Hawaii, Cal.

The Sunset of our fellow-puzzer will be long remembered by the Puzzle Fraternity.

—The Mystic Puzzler (Vol. 1, No. 5) is out. All Sorts contains plenty of readable matter for the puzzler. The Proper Sun, edited by "Puppet," is very good. The Mystic Puzzler price is twenty cents for six months. One cent stamps or silver taken. Address, C. N. Emerson, Jr., 39 Waverly Place, Grand Rapids, Mich.

—Gem.—The Order of Sun-Flowers of the G. P. L., contributes this week, an original "formula." Which has compared at his leisure form in Germany. Although the form is small, it is a Conundrum very Nearly. It is the Sun of "Puzzle." Perhaps the Lower Sheet will be the redoubtable of a Puzzle of "Gem Quill" contributor—Perhaps he is in Germany.

—The Sun-Flowers of Puzzle League was organized in Mission Street Puzzle Lodge on Feb. 20, with a membership of twenty-one. The following officers were elected: President, Mr. M. Henry McGlynn; 1st Vice, Mrs. W. F. Hall; 2d Vice, Mr. Wooden Spoon; Recording Secretary, Mr. D. Randall; Cor. Sec., Lottie E. Bastian; Fin. Sec., Mr. Thistle; Treas., Gem Lead; Off. Ed., Gem Quill; Assistant Editor, Mr. Lee; Sun, Mr. Campbell; Advisory Committee, Mr. Lee, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Randall, Mr. Thistle, Mr. Wooden Spoon.

Puzzle Help, Mystic Diamond, Charade, Pyramid, Anagram, Rebus, Transposition, Double Acrostic and enigma, Also, good reliable Puzzle Help, without any charge to employers. Instructions sent free for taking any Puzzle.

Address, Sunset, Box 1, Hawaii, Cal.

—The Sunflower (Vol. 1, No. 5) is out. Contents: Puzzle Help, Puzzle Notes, Sunset Puzzle, Sunset Puzzle, Sunset Puzzle

OUR ENEMIES' AIMS.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

tween them. One is an impostor, the other is truth. . . . . Let us, therefore, insist on absolute secularism in our schools and teaching." Such was the practical conclusion urged in a series of lectures given in the principal Masonic lodge in Paris, by Pelletan—pupil of Renan. . . . "The United Philanthropists,

SETTING TO SECULARIZING THE SCHOOLS OF FRANCE.

After the downfall of Napoleon III., and under the Thiers government, the Radicals and Masons felt that their hour had come. In the annual distribution of prizes in the Philanthropic Institute, the religious books of any kind should be given, yet even such as treated of the existence of God. Then all of the schools of Paris were secularized. Intellectually, this revolution was a thousand times more fatal, were to be feared than the sad debauch of the short-lived Commune. The Brothers and Sisters of Charity, the Christian schools, the great city were expelled, and all religious emblems were removed. "One morning," says F. Rouvier, "a wagon was found to all the schools, they threw in the worthless as pieces of furniture beneath the windows, and Catholic France had the heartrending grief of seeing the sacred emblem of our Redemption thrown into the city sewers, amidst a heap of worthless lumber."

THE DUTY OF CATHOLICS.

It was at this very juncture that "Catholic France," or rather, all the true-hearted men and women of France, were called, if not their ancestral faith, at least the sacred right of liberty of conscience, which had been trodden in a body, began to withstand this new form of persecution and intolerate tyranny, the Abbe Duval his under the name of Freedom. What I wrote in the New York Tablet, from Paris, in March, 1880, I repeat here: "Every man who cherishes the liberty of his soul, every father, should be faithful to go into the street to join his brethren, even to drive back by main force the brutal invaders and Goliaes usurpers of the sanctuary and the home."

CATHOLIC AND NON-CATHOLIC SCHOOLS IN FRANCE.

What was, in March, 1882, when the inhabitants of Paris were called to vote in the public schools of France, and substituted in the place of "conscientious," that is, bad and immoralistic teaching—what was the relative proportion of Catholic and non-Catholic schools? Out of 1,000 schools, a minority of over 36,192,861 inhabitants, there were, in Paris, 32,000 Catholics, with 71,547 schools; we only find 1,000 schools whose pupils do not belong to the same religion."

WHAT FRENCH CATHOLICS SHOULD HAVE DONE.

I buy Father Rouvier's pardon, if I take the liberty to think and to say that if these thirty-five and a half millions of French Catholics were so in fact and truth, and not in name, they would have taken a leaf out of it. Catholics in the United States number, in round figures, 10 millions, and against 46,000,000 of other creeds; but, this notwithstanding, if non-Catholics would have very little influence in, yet, in the school matter, they have our schools of every grade, primary and secondary, from the Sisters of Christian Brothers, our Ladies of the Sacred Heart, and the Christian Brothers, undoubtedly dispersed, turned out of their houses and their places given to secular teachers, and Catholic France, if she did not fight for it. But, thank God, American citizenship, civil and religious liberty, family rights and rights of the child, are unknown in France. Hence, we see the Catholics of France, if they would, have lost their liberty, and the Catholics of France, if they would, have lost their liberty, and the Catholics of France, if they would, have lost their liberty, and

Poetry.

THE CATHOLIC MISSIONARY.

With his cross and dauntless heart he meets each day,
Life's toils, his lot, his home, his all he casts
Counts not the cross which impede his way,
Nor, cowed and faint, each obstacle does he dare.

With heart devoted, filled with love divine,
His one unceasing cry is "God and souls!"
Nor s'ay he home and kindred dear, the sign
A nobler impulse nature's its mandate.

Of tongues and tongues of dusky foreign soil,
Of what and every tongue, he learns to speak;
And, what to him are poverty and toil,
Hunger, fatigue, fever, and what would chill?

What, tho' at sea he encounters a storm, frowning,
Yet, in his frail craft, fearless he sits at the helm;
A joy he has, which words may not describe,
A sweet and holy peace, the world knows not.

And through life our pathway is strewn with thorns,
Our mountain path and even thoroughfare path,
Is thickly strewn with thorns, and we must
Each fainting soul, who seek of comfort hath.

With naught save love, we're sustained by a chord,
Which, tho' it sometimes vibrates, keeping alive hope
Yet, when we think of the work, we have to accomplish,
Each day prayer is offered, with tears we weep.

Divine the call that hallowed him away
From all that mortal hold as blest and dear;
Man's approbation, lauded as long fame;
Yet, he has left all, and he is happy.

Me, me! to hear, thousands outstretched
From parts of error—who had need of light—
Which, tho' it pierce, yet, shed a mellow ray
Of a peace, unknown, with a heart broken.

IF WE HAD BUT A DAY.

If we had but a day,
We'd spend all the hours in prompt things;
If we had but a day,
We should pitch sunshine into every place;
To our neighbor
We should love with a tender love in an hour,
If we had but a day,
We should be more than kind, but for fraction
Of a hour.
To be sad to do.

We should smile our wayward or weary with Half the energy spent
In a fretful, fitful life; in the heavenly hills,
We should sing in the valleys
We should weep for the cold and the disconsolate
We should take whatever is good God sent,
With a smile, and be thankful.

We should smile instead of frowning
If the days were but one—
We should speak a word of comfort
Ere our sun sets the sun
We should be ready to forgive ere
We go to rest by the great
And be ready to do all that love is to be,
If we had but a day.

Literary Miscellany.

The Story of St. Cecilia

BY THE BARONESS PAULINE VON HUTZEL.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.)

And while they talked of the things of Heaven, Tiburtius entered the chamber and stood by the bed of his brother. Pinnikett had lost, as he did so, power of speech and he could only gasp in agony as Tiburtius, with his hand and eyes raised to her half. And Cecilia, looking up, said:

"Whence comes this glorious light, Cecilia? We are in the season of winter, not in the season for storms."

He was gazing on the tree of the cross to atone for the first sin which had committed against God, and for which Man and his Creator had been disunited. And when He let death have dominion over Him, and by his death overcame death for ever more. The earth quaked, the sun clouded and rent, all trembled and were affrighted at the death of God, and then dead arose from their graves to show that the Blessed Saviour had gone to the just in hell and that He had conquered the devil who would be throughout the world, but forever by those who believe in their Redeemer. And so, Tiburtius, we rejoice and are glad when we may suffer for Him Whose's sake, and we glory in being persecuted. And how could Christ, who, from the cross had kept Life and Light, but abortioned to give place to that bright light eternal provided by the Son of God to His Apostles, promised by Him to Peter, and from the dead, and who was soon ascending into Heaven.

And then Tiburtius threw himself at Cecilia's feet and cried:

"Oh, if over my thoughts cleave to this present life again, may I never have a joy in that which is to come. Let me be with hitherto for no purpose, but it shall be so no longer."

And Valerian arose and went to Urban some more, but this time Tiburtius was with him.

For a brief space the three, Valerian, Tiburtius, dwelt together, loving each other with a pure and holy love remembering that of Christ and the spirits of the just made perfect, rather than that of sojourners on this poor earth. But only for a space, brief indeed. The persecution against the Christians had been growing in strength and fury during which no one troubled by anything but a good conscience, and which could quickly and whether we prefer death or life, but the life beyond the grave is eternally better than the life beyond the grave is eternally better than the life beyond the grave is eternally better than

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1884.

Encyclical Letter on Secret Societies.

His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. has written an Encyclical Letter—(which we will publish with pleasure when the full text is received)—in which he styles Masonry the City of Satan, and calls upon Catholics and all conservative people everywhere to combine in order to defend Christianity—the City of God—from the insidious attacks of such bound conspirators, who, as the Holy Pontiff says, are undermining society, corrupting morality, demoralizing Christianity, and playing the part of Anti-Christ throughout the world.

Here is a synopsis of the charges which the Vicar of Christ brings against the diabolical system of oath-bound secret societies which are working to uproot religion from the hearts of the people:

"The plan of secret society," says the reigning Pontiff, "is no longer a mystery. It is a struggle against the Church, and the various Popes have very properly denominated Freemasons.

"During the last one hundred and fifty years secret societies have increased frightfully. A great part thereof formerly belonged to the Freemasons, who, however, in Masonry. The Papacy is placed in an intolerable situation.

"Masonry does not cover its real object; it does not let the innocent by a variety of initiation. The pious, marriage, obedience, sovereignty of the people, abolition of the State, nihilism, communism—all tend to and a return to paganism.

"Masonry fastens princes in the hope of having them for auxiliaries. The Freemasons should choose between Masonry and the Church, which latter contains authority and immutable obedience."

It is then that the authoritative voice of the successor of St. Peter speaks to the whole Christian world in warning terms against the hidden villain in the street masonic in the Church. It is the same of wisdom, therefore, to give heed to the words of the holy Pontiff, hearkened as they are by the wisdom of the Holy Ghost. "He that will not hear the Church," says our Blessed Lord, "what has he to do but as the heathen and the publican," and those unfortunate Catholics who are allied to Masonry by the figures of Lucifer had better cut the gordian knot that binds them to the sons of Belial, and break away from the connexion see God's judgment overtaken them.

In decades times the Mormons has hitherto denounced secret societies. Our former articles on this subject cost us the loss of a few subscribers who avowed the Masonic mask by a little of nothing to lend the paper over to his mother-in-law! They are—and we will admire exception—interlopers, false Christians, who, in the name of the respecting sacrilegious mummeries—the dolcots and denotes mankind upon a question of eternal happiness or eternal misery. A medical quack convicted of malpractice is generally condemned by the voice of public opinion, and every one of these evangelical quacks like Dr. Schaff—who mislead the congregation—unite with the Sovereign Pontiff in this appeal to the Queen of Heaven, and we will find the foes of the Church vanquished by the invincible power of God, and the legions of Lucifer hurled down to dark ness by the angelic hosts of Heaven.

Dr. Schaff Strung Up Again!

Already we have stripped, spanked, and scourged Dr. Schaff pretty effectually, so that we will still polish off the bones and leave nothing but the skeleton of the Brighton-minister as a sign of the fate that secretly awaits all those sectarians who prostitute the Word of God to the worst purposes of their wanton wickedness.

The extract which we propose to notice this week reads in Dr. Schaff's spellbinding and Scripture-libeling volume after this fraudulent fashion:

"The New Testament clearly teaches the universal priesthood, as well as universal kingship, of believers. It does this in a far deeper and larger sense than the Old, in a mean, too, which even to this day, is not yet fully realized. The entire body of Christians are called elect, (kleros) a peculiar people, the heritage of God.

"The false deductions from the Bible—and the false conclusions from Christian truth—established in the Middle Ages might well be styled "Religion-made-easy, or every man his own god." It stands to reason that if such an absurdity as "universal priesthood" and "universal kingship" existed, or was intended to exist in the world, our Blessed Saviour would never have established Apostles and Disciples specially to instruct those who were converted to Christianity, nor would Almighty God have endowed them with the wisdom of the Holy Ghost, and promised them His perpetual presence throughout all ages. If that fabulous thing called "universal priesthood" existed in our Saviour's time, assuredly the Spirit of Truth would not have descended upon the Apostles and their successors alone, but the "fiery tongues" would have descended upon the thousand of Christians who were scattered throughout Judea at that time.

Of course any reflecting person can discern Dr. Schaff's disreputable reason for denouncing the truth of God's Word in this connection. The corner-stone of Protestantism is error, hence it requires error to support it, and those who undertake this contrary compulsion have either to corrupt ecclesiastical history or to invent falsehood in their efforts to prevent their dupes from the notorious system invented by Satan is recognized by the Word of God. In his efforts to accomplish this end, this quack doctor has made a most miserable failure. He has no diploma, new such as those issued from the devil's college, hence he is not recognized by those who are legitimately licensed by the Ecclesiastical Doctors of the Church of God. "Here shall they preach unless they be sent!" asks St. Paul, and no sectarian preacher has ever been able to convince the world that he possesses a commission from God to preach the Gospel. The Pope is the only legitimate Pontiff, and he only would pitch him and his "history" into the stove!

Even such a simple fact as this proves sectarianism to be a regular religious sham; a decoy designed to deceive; a regular trap invented by Satan to snatch souls from salvation. Those unfortunate people, therefore, who are anxious regarding their future state, should not hazard an eternity of error for the sake of following: a few years the crooked ways of some evangelical crack who is paid a good salary for sending souls to perdition.

Dr. Schaff makes a very weak attempt to bolster up his bad cause by citing the Bible proof that the entire body of the people are called "the heritage of God." But does such a title prove that each ignoramus in the world is entitled to the office of priest or preacher? The term "heritage of God," as applied to mankind in general, means simply the seal of the Saviour which is so dear to God as the soul of the Sovereign Pontiff. Christ came to save all men, but He did not come to establish a world-full of windy, writless preachers, or to found any such foolish institution as that "kingship of believers" which the kinky mind of Dr. Schaff has conceived.

The early Christians called themselves Catholics for the reason that the Christian this week reads in Dr. Schaff's spellbinding and Scripture-libeling volume after this fraudulent fashion:

"The New Testament clearly teaches the universal priesthood, as well as universal kingship, of believers. It does this in a far deeper and larger sense than the Old, in a mean, too, which even to this day, is not yet fully realized. The entire body of Christians are called elect, (kleros) a peculiar people, the heritage of God.

"The false deductions from the Bible—and the false conclusions from Christian truth—established in the Middle Ages might well be styled "Religion-made-easy, or every man his own god." It stands to reason that if such an absurdity as "universal priesthood" and "universal kingship" existed, or was intended to exist in the world, our Blessed Saviour would never have established Apostles and Disciples specially to instruct those who were converted to Christianity, nor would Almighty God have endowed them with the wisdom of the Holy Ghost, and promised them His perpetual presence throughout all ages. If that fabulous thing called "universal priesthood" existed in our Saviour's time, assuredly the Spirit of Truth would not have descended upon the Apostles and their successors alone, but the "fiery tongues" would have descended upon the thousand of Christians who were scattered throughout Judea at that time.

Of course any reflecting person can discern Dr. Schaff's disreputable reason for denouncing the truth of God's Word in this connection. The corner-stone of Protestantism is error, hence it requires error to support it, and those who undertake this contrary compulsion have either to corrupt ecclesiastical history or to invent falsehood in their efforts to prevent their dupes from the notorious system invented by Satan is recognized by the Word of God. In his efforts to accomplish this end, this quack doctor has made a most miserable failure. He has no diploma, new such as those issued from the devil's college, hence he is not recognized by those who are legitimately licensed by the Ecclesiastical Doctors of the Church of God. "How shall they preach unless they be sent?" asks St. Paul, and no sectarian preacher has ever been able to convince the world that he possesses a commission from God to preach the Gospel. The Pope is the only legitimate Pontiff, and he only would pitch him and his "history" into the stove!

The Rolling Passion of Protestantism.

The non-Catholic portion of the American people have their "fashion" in religion just as they have in the cut of their clothing, and the changes frequently made by large numbers of them fully establishes the fact that they put off their regular sectarian principles just as easily as they cast aside their unfashionable garments. This is a sure indication that the worship of man is paramount to the worship of God in the minds of many Protestants, and the tendency of sectarians to worship in churches frequented by "our first society" is the best proof that such non-Catholics are more unfashionable sectarians detrue shown by every wind of fashionable folly covered by a cloak called religion.

It is already becoming apparent to those who are watching the changes that occur over men at different periods, that Protestantism is no longer a lever powerful enough to lift the souls of men above themselves. Church membership is merely used as a stepping-stone to society, a passport by which politicians and public men secure the votes of the Protestant Church, and thus the Protestant Church is merely used as a stepping-stone to society, a passport by which politicians and public men secure the votes of the different grades of good, bad, and indifferent may wear the badge of an outward Christianity which they do not in reality possess.

It is not the Mormon alone that brings this indictment against the churches under sectarian control, as we have noticed in the columns of the Eastern press criticisms upon this tendency to toft-hunting somewhat akin to those sensible remarks of the Oregonian:

"Religion is more a matter of fashion in this country than the Chinese are willing to acknowledge. In many places the churches are, to a great extent, the centers of social life, and it is the duty to attend through the gentile of the Church. Much the same thing is true of Methodism. Much the same thing is true of Presbyterianism. Many people who are not determined to be sinners, or to be considered sinners, they will attend, or whether they will attend any or not. As one of General Grant's sayings Presbyterian, there was a "grand rush" of government clerks and society people to attend a particular church in that city. Simply because it had been ascertained that Grant was to that church. The little building was so upon overcrowded, and the society began to make plans for building a larger edifice. But the death of General Garfield eclipsed the popularity of Presbyterianism in that city, and it was soon found that the church could not get the public represented by the Cabinet and their families to attend. Although the church which he attended now flourishes, the church it was made famed and Hayes, both of whom attended Methodist churches, though not the same church. For twelve years, during their residence in Washington, Methodism was the popular religion. Mrs. Hayes, it should be said to her credit, refused to attend the Methodist church, where so much of her husband's flattery in the Grants had been shown, and chose a more obscure church of her denomination. There is almost as much servility of imitation in the support of Washington's church by Lincoln, where the example of the court is followed in all things."

Every word of this is true, and we address this evidence from a non-Catholic newspaper in order to show our readers the folly of those people who look upon sectarianism as any religion that will be recognized by God. Truth is immutable and never changes, and religion, to be God's truth, must have the power of convincing the great majority of those who believe all of its doctrine and practice to be desirable. Thus the Catholic Church alone possesses the potency of accomplishing. The Church of God keeps the vast majority of her flock continuously within her fold, and so closely are they attached to her that neither human respect, worldly considerations, temporal gain, or direct persecution even—in Nations or course then outside the sanctified—can induce Christ. But where we whole flocks of sectarians desert to Campbellite fold of Garfield and follow the Methodist bell-weather Grant into some fashionable conventicle, and that change their so-called "religion" with any change of the Administration, such frequent and disreputable doings should expose all sensible people that they might as forever through the labyrinths of sectarianism and never find the kingdom of God. "My kingdom," says our Blessed Redeemer, "is not of this world," hammerstroke to make that Protestantism, and is of the earth earthy, is not, and cannot, the kingdom for the possession of which he sent of man alone. This fact is because, more apparent at every day, and wise as-alike who will "seek first the kingdom of God so that "all things else shall be added unto."

Poor Loyson Hard Luck.

It seems that crutha "boosting" which the Call gave the Loyson variety troupe in Gotland and lofty numbers last week, did not save them from the humiliation of a suspension of the Sunday Thursday night last, when the mishaps of a week ago caused attained to lecture on 5 reasons for changing his Carmelite Hic! carnalian. The following account of it is taken from the Chronicle of Friday:

"The lecture announced for last Friday Evening was postponed at evening to deliver the lecture in Sacramento, the subject of the discourse was to the St. Albert's reunion of the Sacramento Catholic Total Abstinence Society, the place was to be Pio's Hall, and the hour 8 o'clock but when the Sacramento Call announced the change of place, the society began to make plans for building a larger edifice. But the death of General Garfield eclipsed the popularity of Presbyterianism in that city, and it was soon found that the church could not get the public represented by the Cabinet and their families to attend. Although the church which he attended now flourishes, the church it was made famed and Hayes, both of whom attended Methodist churches, though not the same church. For twelve years, during their residence in Washington, Methodism was the popular religion. Mrs. Hayes, it should be said to her credit, refused to attend the Methodist church, where so much of her husband's flattery in the Grants had been shown, and chose a more obscure church of her denomination. There is almost as much servility of imitation in the support of Washington's church by Lincoln, where the example of the court is followed in all things."

Every word of this is true, and we address this evidence from a non-Catholic newspaper in order to show our readers the folly of those people who look upon sectarianism as any religion that will be recognized by God. Truth is immutable and never changes, and religion, to be God's truth, must have the power of convincing the great majority of those who believe all of its doctrine and practice to be desirable. Thus the Catholic Church alone possesses the potency of accomplishing. The Church of God keeps the vast majority of her flock continuously within her fold, and so closely are they attached to her that neither human respect, worldly considerations, temporal

THE PROPAGANDA.

Important Letter to the Bishops of the Catholic World—Establishment of a Missionary Centre Abroad—San Francisco Selected for the Pacific Coast.

The Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda has addressed the following most important Apostolic Letter to the Bishops of the Catholic world:

Most Illustrious and Most Reverend Lord,

Your lordship is aware of the judgment which was delivered on the 20th of January last, by the Supreme Court of Cassation of Italy, in full session of all its Divisions, on the controversy which had been raised by the Minister of Public Instruction in the Italian Chamber of Deputies, between officially judged by public opinion, the Propaganda to be a stumbling-block and bound and secularization institutions, and on that ground to some member the law for the secularization of the patrimony of such bodies within the Roman province (Law of 7 July 1873, 1873). Now, as your lordship is well aware, the nature of this institution, most undoubtedly international, is quite different, whether with regard to the administration of its property, or to the source of the funds which constitute its patrimony. The Act of foundation by which initiated this splendid work, the glory alike of the Holy See and of Italy, and the series of Pontifical Constitutions issued with respect to it during the two-and-a half centuries of its existence, have ever shown that the violent Revolutionists, had already sufficiently made clear to the world, that the hostile bill attempted against this institution with the exclusive object of making it the instrument of the Revolution, and of its chief apostolic ministry by the propagation of the Faith, and by the care of the Catholic Missions, and of the Apostolic Delegates, would not be could half the Holy Ghost, and the Church, and the Pontiff, and the Sacred Congregation, particularly, the ministry of Sts. Peter and Paul, and the Church of Christ, would in a short time before, that the protection of the Apostolic Delegates, and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and that all his faithful were people and the Church of Christ, and the Church of

GREGORY XV., OF HOLY MEMORY,

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. FRANK — EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and enigmas for this department. Address all communications to

FRANK J. MCFUN,
508 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PROGRESSIVE—

Answers to Enigmas Nos. 70 to 75.

1st—DELIBERATED, DIVORCE, RIVERS, ROSES, WORDS. 2nd—Rhododendron. 3rd—LUM, BAR, RAMON, LADNER, BURLIPES, MONTAGUE, GRAY. 4th—CAMPBELL, BARCLAY, BARNES, BARRETT, BARNUM, BIRD, BRYANT. 5th—PRESCOTT, PRESCOTT, BARCLAY, BARNES, BARRETT, BARNUM, BIRD, BRYANT. 6th—ARMSTRONG, BARCLAY, BARNES, BARRETT, BARNUM, BIRD, BRYANT. 7th—Love-apple. 8th—ROSE, POLEN, SOLICITOR, DISGRACED, SIGHS, TOP. 9th—Mandolin. 10th—Ivy. 11th—Hand-house.

[illegible]

3rd—Tennyson. 4th—Cow. 5th—Cow. 6th—Cow. 7th—Cow. 8th—Cow. 9th—Cow. 10th—Cow. 11th—Hand-house.

[illegible]

3rd—Tennyson. 4th—Cow. 5th—Cow. 6th—Cow. 7th—Cow. 8th—Cow. 9th—Cow. 10th—Cow. 11th—Hand-house.

[illegible]

Rules for "Leisure Hours" No. 76 (monthly): Address all letters to Editor Leisure Hours, Box 1, Monitor Office. Write on one side of paper only. Write your name, post office and state plainly. Use pen, ink, paper. Symbols, Nos. 1 to 10, as Webster's Unabridged. Use Roman numerals, capitals, etc., as in dictionary. Proper names, abbreviations, foreign words, etc., allowed. Words must be in Webster's Unabridged. Transposition of letters, as in anagrams, not allowed. Words formed by adding letters to preceding words, not allowed. Words formed by dropping letters from preceding words, not allowed. Words formed by changing letters in preceding words, not allowed. Proper nouns, adjectives, verbs, adverbs, not allowed. Plurals of nouns ending in s, es, or y, not allowed. Contractions not allowed. Foreign words and phrases, not allowed. Obsolete words, not allowed. Compound words, not allowed. Hyphenated words, not allowed. Words of less than three letters, not allowed. Words of more than nine letters, not allowed. Only one word allowed in each solution. Number of letters in each word must be given. Definitions must be given. Only one solution allowed to each enigma. Enigmas must be original or from books not in common use. Enigmas from periodicals must be credited. Enigmas from newspapers, not allowed. Enigmas from friends, not allowed. Enigmas from relatives, not allowed. Enigmas from pupils of the Christian Brothers, not allowed. Enigmas from pupils of any school, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any family, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any society, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any club, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any class, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any order, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any association, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any church, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any congregation, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any sect, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any party, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any nation, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any tribe, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any family, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any relation, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any enemy, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any stranger, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any traveler, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any author, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any publisher, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any printer, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any reader, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any subscriber, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the editor, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the publisher, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the printer, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the reader, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the subscriber, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the editor, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the publisher, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the printer, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the reader, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the subscriber, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the editor, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the publisher, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the printer, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the reader, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the subscriber, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the friend of the editor, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the friend of the publisher, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the friend of the printer, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the friend of the reader, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the friend of the friend of the friend of the subscriber, not allowed. Enigmas from members of any friend of the ARCHBISHOP SHOMER'S LETTER.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

in working this miracle is to have the veneration of St. Nicholas extended throughout the world; for, as it is impossible that he has been neglected everywhere, Divine Providence decrees this season, so that, not the relics, but the prayers, coming from them can be sent far and wide into all countries for the greater glorification of that great saint.

I

I presume you will find it somewhat singular to fill a letter with so many quotations. I acknowledge it is so. But I adduce the words of men who were remarkable either for sanctity of life and learning, or for their elevated position in the world, in order to silence anyone who might be tempted to smear it the simplicity of my language, or the novelty of the prelegomena made of the meaning of the Queen of St. Nicholas. Surely a prince like Charles II. King of Spain and an Emperor like Theodosius would never idiotic, in a public document, a thing which had not been ascertained and authenticated by unimpeachable witnesses. Because Spain and Constantinople were so honored to be designed by my visiting of our age, St. Dominic and the Blessed Jacinta, St. Michael, were sent of the well-known sanctity to be imparted or to confirm the authenticity of their names to the opinion of a fabulous tomb.

BUT PERHAPS YOU WILL ASK:

is not this merely a water flowing over the spot where the remains of St. Nicholas lying at Bari? I answer no, for the following reasons. 1. This miracle of Manna is known from the history of St. Nicholas is not peculiar to that great saint. Many saints, such as St. Ambrose, Augustine, Gregory, Isidore, Bede, Bernard, Anselm, Thomas Aquinas, Bonaventure, Francis Xavier, Francis Borgia, Philip Neri, Alphonsus Liguori, and others in my opinion, have exhibited the same miracle. Hence, it is not a water flowing over the spot where the remains of St. Nicholas are, but it is a miracle, which, even myself personally in Bari, I have seen, lately, in St. Andrew in Naples, which I

Poetry.

THE MOUTH OF MARY.

MARGERY M. SEYMOUR, (MARIE.)

Pale queen of months, bright moon of flowers,
When earth, through all thy shining hours,
Keeps meadows pale-lit

The morning air is sweetly stirred
By hum of golden bees
And joyous lilts of woodland birds
Float on the fragrant breeze.

Pure heaven throb your blue pulsations,
Your velvetry dwell shelved,
Your silvery stars be lighted,
And jonquils thronging rise.

While sunlight scatters the purple hills,
And dapples the dim lea,
While birds, with joy and music, fills
All earth, and sky and sea.

Thus gentle May her beauty brings
To mother's holiday,
And pours forth all with folded wings,
Serenely ruling all.

Sweet month, she hath a blessed name,
Thy light and bloom are given
To her who will the best hope claim,
The gentle Queen of heaven!

Mary, such floral gift we bring
Thy month from every round,
Mid such wealth of fragrance and of song,
Dear Mother, crown thee!

The triumph then, dear mother,
Is thine, all thine forever,
Thy sanctum fresh and pure,
Thy spotless, thy sweet!

"Hail to thee, Mary! full of grace!"
Then fondly we repeat,
Thy name, thy sacred name,
The angel's message meet.

O Young Heart! dwell on refuge
To her before thy shrine,
When life's sweet joys are gone, would shun
No mother-love but thine!

"Behold thy mother!" Then He gave
Thy love our way to be
One, to, then, more that love to crave,
Our Saviour's legacy!

Come, then, our fond! Also, "no sins,"
Let hope thy sobbing, "Ave!"
O Mother, lay the first divine
To all our prayer!

In vernal frolic, a drought defied
Rather than see we flower-sold,
Of lilies cheap, O, "Ave!"
And be you lily-gold!

And light globe meets and sun,
Mid lilies, lilies, lilies, smiling,
To pure virgin, O, "Ave!"
Mary, Mother!

And to a worthier bouquet shall
Earth's sweet pale-lilies,
And that will rule our festival,
And edge our hearts with "Ave!"

(For the MONITOR.)

SONNET—TO MAY.

(Upon reader, child.)

Hail to thee, fair month! thy balmy breath
The quantitative balmer of the heart,
Of winter cold, thy sunny days dispel,
And deep cities hence our grief to shun,
While thy gentle hand, with joy and smile, fills
All earth, and sky and sea.

Thus gentle May her beauty brings
To mother's holiday,
And pours forth all with folded wings,
Serenely ruling all.

Sweet month, she hath a blessed name,
Thy light and bloom are given
To her who will the best hope claim,
The gentle Queen of heaven!

Mary, such floral gift we bring
Thy month from every round,
Mid such wealth of fragrance and of song,
Dear Mother, crown thee!

The triumph then, dear mother,
Is thine, all thine forever,
Thy sanctum fresh and pure,
Thy spotless, thy sweet!

"Hail to thee, Mary! full of grace!"
Then fondly we repeat,
Thy name, thy sacred name,
The angel's message meet.

O Young Heart! dwell on refuge
To her before thy shrine,
When life's sweet joys are gone, would shun
No mother-love but thine!

"Behold thy mother!" Then He gave
Thy love our way to be
One, to, then, more that love to crave,
Our Saviour's legacy!

Come, then, our fond! Also, "no sins,"
Let hope thy sobbing, "Ave!"
O Mother, lay the first divine
To all our prayer!

In vernal frolic, a drought defied
Rather than see we flower-sold,
Of lilies cheap, O, "Ave!"
And be you lily-gold!

And light globe meets and sun,
Mid lilies, lilies, lilies, smiling,
To pure virgin, O, "Ave!"
Mary, Mother!

And to a worthier bouquet shall
Earth's sweet pale-lilies,
And that will rule our festival,
And edge our hearts with "Ave!"

(For the MONITOR.)

SONNET—TO MAY.

(Upon reader, child.)

Hail to thee, fair month! thy balmy breath
The quantitative balmer of the heart,
Of winter cold, thy sunny days dispel,
And deep cities hence our grief to shun,
While thy gentle hand, with joy and smile, fills
All earth, and sky and sea.

Thus gentle May her beauty brings
To mother's holiday,
And pours forth all with folded wings,
Serenely ruling all.

Sweet month, she hath a blessed name,
Thy light and bloom are given
To her who will the best hope claim,
The gentle Queen of heaven!

Mary, such floral gift we bring
Thy month from every round,
Mid such wealth of fragrance and of song,
Dear Mother, crown thee!

The triumph then, dear mother,
Is thine, all thine forever,
Thy sanctum fresh and pure,
Thy spotless, thy sweet!

"Hail to thee, Mary! full of grace!"
Then fondly we repeat,
Thy name, thy sacred name,
The angel's message meet.

O Young Heart! dwell on refuge
To her before thy shrine,
When life's sweet joys are gone, would shun
No mother-love but thine!

"Behold thy mother!" Then He gave
Thy love our way to be
One, to, then, more that love to crave,
Our Saviour's legacy!

Come, then, our fond! Also, "no sins,"
Let hope thy sobbing, "Ave!"
O Mother, lay the first divine
To all our prayer!

In vernal frolic, a drought defied
Rather than see we flower-sold,
Of lilies cheap, O, "Ave!"
And be you lily-gold!

And light globe meets and sun,
Mid lilies, lilies, lilies, smiling,
To pure virgin, O, "Ave!"
Mary, Mother!

And to a worthier bouquet shall
Earth's sweet pale-lilies,
And that will rule our festival,
And edge our hearts with "Ave!"

Literary Miscellany.

My Treasure Trove.

BY MRS. E. SELKIRK IN THE CATHOLIC

I rather prided myself upon my sign; it was neat, and yet attractive, and it indicated the character of the place to all who lived within the wall to which it was attached could be found.

Mr. Bernard F. De Peyster, M. D.,
{ 8 to 10 a. m.
Office hours: { 2 to 3 p. m.

And, though both office and clinical patients were numerous, I had contrived, unknown to anybody during the period mentioned, One day in the middle of December, I had an unpleasant quarter of an hour, and perhaps some other, I certainly considerable dinner at the Chub, when I, with Fletcher, on leaving my highly comfortable tobacco pouch from its accustomed place, I was compelled to do substituting the time I removed my foot to the ground, my pocket-book, containing my money and bill, called out to rechristen it. Hurrying home with the well-filled pouch I discovered that I had lost it, and the person upon who was standing on the curb near my office.

"I won't, I tell you"

"I do think, I say"

"I won't" But the voice trembled; instead of a tone of defiance it was sad, and was answered at the sweetness of the tone, which was revealed to me. He was about six years old, ragged, barefoot, with pale features and large blue eyes; through his torn hat, uniformly too large for him, the tangled mass of matted curls protruded, and the naturally fair color of the skin was deadened by dirt and in his not too clean shirt. He was standing at bay, his small hands clenched as they were held forward to keep off his assailant, and his mouth closed with every fiber of the little, resolute body. With my purpose revived, I saw that the heart was commanding the hand to do the work of the child.

The boy, I know had his back to me, but that back told me as plainly as words could that the character of his face was.

"Far enough, young fellow!" I said, "Give me that pouch!"

"Do you hear the gentleman?"

The boy nodded, still apparently undecided, to have a hole through his eye with his knuckle, and making great efforts to keep up his sobbing. The conversation stood quietly in the policeman's grasp, in tensely breathless silence.

"Will, answer them."

"Who's he wants to know for?" with a sob between each word.

"That's nothing to you, but it will be a good lot to you if you don't tell me."

"If I tells yer, will you let me go?"

"Yes."

Then he told me name, street, and number, and as I showed, it was down in the poorest part of the city.

"I shall I let him go, Doctor?"

"Yes."

It is not necessary to state that by the time we reached the office of an interested group of co-lookers.

"Now ones are you off, Bryan?"

"In about twenty minutes."

"Then one you come to me for a few moments?"

"Yes, as soon as I leave the station."

"All right, Bryan."

Just then a man pushed his way through the crowd, and Bryan spoke to him. Then to me:

"Here's Jarvis, Doctor—shall I give those youngsters over to him?"

"Yes, that's fortunate! Jarvis, just step inside with that boy, will you? And Bryan, be sure and come back!"

"All right!" and policeman, pausing a moment to disperse the crowd, walked away. Jarvis was off duty, and consequently in mufti, and he was the man who was of "Tim Adams," to his home, and verily his duty was to see that he was return to me.

were opened, at first with a startled glance around the room, and he smiled as if he recognized something familiar.

"Well, my boy," I said, speaking cheerfully, "you're better now, are you not?"

"Yes, ma'am," quietly.

"I thought so—and as you shall stay—but first I'll carry you into the next room and put you into my bed. Then we'll wash our face and hands, and our sheep will be all the more refreshing."

"Will you get to sleep, too?"

Something in the childish face lifted to mine strung me and I replied:

"We'd put you like me to go to sleep with you?"

"That's the way pop did when——"

The lips trembled, but no tears came. Only the eyelids fluttered and fell.

"Then I will, too, my boy," and when you wake up, you'll tell me about pop—ah!"

"Yes," he said, drowsily, and was asleep before I could carry him to the bed in the back room. Then I hurried to the nearest shop and clothing store, not forgetting one where I had seen ladies' and children's underwear for sale, and when I returned I found the sensation of the child, reinforced by a friend and fellow lodger, resuming with full affected air of indifferent interest and deed. Behind them came a policeman quietly giving the crowd, I have nearly all the men on the force, and this one touched the shoulder of the boy passed me I made a sign to him, and in a moment he had collar of them.

Of course there was a howl and a remonstrance in elegant if not elegant lingo.

"Stop that tribe. We don't want to have you, though you ought to be well trounced for fighting a weaker boy! Take the man's message meek.

O Young Heart! dwell on refuge
To her before thy shrine,
When life's sweet joys are gone, would shun
No mother-love but thine!

"Behold thy mother!" Then He gave
Thy love our way to be
One, to, then, more that love to crave,
Our Saviour's legacy!

Come, then, our fond! Also, "no sins,"
Let hope thy sobbing, "Ave!"
O Mother, lay the first divine
To all our prayer!

In vernal frolic, a drought defied
Rather than see we flower-sold,
Of lilies cheap, O, "Ave!"
And be you lily-gold!

And light globe meets and sun,
Mid lilies, lilies, lilies, smiling,
To pure virgin, O, "Ave!"
Mary, Mother!

And to a worthier bouquet shall
Earth's sweet pale-lilies,
And that will rule our festival,
And edge our hearts with "Ave!"

(For the MONITOR.)

SONNET—TO MAY.

(Upon reader, child.)

Hail to thee, fair month! thy balmy breath
The quantitative balmer of the heart,
Of winter cold, thy sunny days dispel,
And deep cities hence our grief to shun,
While thy gentle hand, with joy and smile, fills
All earth, and sky and sea.

Thus gentle May her beauty brings
To mother's holiday,
And pours forth all with folded wings,
Serenely ruling all.

Sweet month, she hath a blessed name,
Thy light and bloom are given
To her who will the best hope claim,
The gentle Queen of heaven!

Mary, such floral gift we bring
Thy month from every round,
Mid such wealth of fragrance and of song,
Dear Mother, crown thee!

The triumph then, dear mother,
Is thine, all thine forever,
Thy sanctum fresh and pure,
Thy spotless, thy sweet!

"Hail to thee, Mary! full of grace!"
Then fondly we repeat,
Thy name, thy sacred name,
The angel's message meet

THE MONITOR.

TRUTH-SPEAKING TRIB OF PUBLICITY.

The Monitor has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1884.

Centenary of the May Devotion.

The devotions for the forthcoming month of May should be celebrated with unusual zeal and gratitude to God, for the reason that in the present year we celebrate the centennial anniversary of that most beautiful, consoling, and broadest devotion. For several hundred years previous to 1774, the May devotions had been substituted in a few places, in some countries, by religious communities and exceptional individuals. But, unable to Almighty God, Father Mc. ...nell, S. J., was inspired, in 1774, to give uniformity to the devotion by the institution of prescribed prayers.

There is no truly Catholic heart that does not feel an additional thrill of joy in every fifth when the May devotions are announced in the month Mary. To converts reading MARY's month commence, and now, in this hour of the Church's trial, when our Holy Father has invoked the aid of the Mother of God in his tribulations, every child, client, and ecclesiast who is enrolled in the Sodality of our Blessed Lady, Mother, should frequent her shrine during May, and thus open the gates of Heaven for enthusiasts, as well as gain peace for the Church on earth.

Trials, persecution, and tribulation are so many marks of the divinity of God's Church. Her very debacle in the eyes of men, becomes victories in the sight of God. And who knows but the present persecution through which the Vicar of Christ is passing may not result in spreading devotion to the Mother of God, and thus lead many souls to the light of the true faith. It has been so historic in the history of the Church, and it may be so again.

Devotion to the Blessed Virgin has been wonderfully encouraged and increased during the past century. Every decade of years seems to add additional fervor to the faithful love which Catholics give to the Mother of God. The more we enter into the knowledge and love of MARY, the better will we know Her Son and the brighter our soul's resplendent horoscope.

The devotion peculiar to the month of May owes its origin to the love for the Mother of God which springs up spontaneously in every Catholic heart. It had its beginning in Rome, and from thence it was transplanted throughout Europe, until the Church, during the vast amount of piety it evoked among the faithful, set the seal of approbation upon it, sanctioned it with an express indulgence, and then it became enthroned in the Church itself, so that in those times, whenever the Church has a holiday, the Queen of Heaven, whose Son hangs on the Cross in central place, the adoration of God is propagated and intensified by the May devotions to His ever-glorious Mother.

In speaking that our readers may derive some spiritual benefits from the holy season we are now about to enter on, we present them with a synopsis of the May devotions which they will find short and suitable prayer for every day in the week, and for saints which they can derive great spiritual advantage. We have printed a great many extra copies of this little ancillary to the month of May which we would like to send, entered the mail of every Catholic to offer such a holy oblation as the Mass to any saint or angel, or even to the Mother of God. Might an act could save by any possibility, be the salvation of Catholic faith, hence it is only those who know little or nothing about Catholic doctrine who then condemned the teachings of the Church with their own conceited and confused notions concerning her. For these reasons, Catholics, it is easily understood that when they shallow reflect on the Adocate tries to listen such foolish notions upon the Catholic Church, every intelligent mind can conceive how ridiculous is the position occupied by the correspondent of our contemporary.

The Adocate's critic thinks that the proof of the charge trumped up against the Church is clearly established by some prayer which are published in a Catholic book of devotion entitled the "Oratory of a Faithful Soul," from page 114, of which this sentence is copied:

"To Mary, O Lady, do I raise my supplications, on Thee do I ask the grace of my heart, in thee doth my soul confide. Turn pity on me, for my salvation is in thy hands."

This paragraph is cut away from the context—an old Protestant trick, by the way—so as to make non-Catholics believe that Catholics ignore God altogether, and appeal to our Blessed Lady for salvation. This trick we have often exposed before, and now let us open this book and see how far it bears out the idiots sought to be conveyed by the extract. The book opens with a prayer in adoration of the Most Holy Trinity, in which the soul acknowledges that God alone does he adore. After a hundred pages of prayer to God, we come to the "Devotions to Our Blessed Lady," which are those which have infinite sou has exercised in America:

"In an most hesitation of faith, we shall probably find very much to establish so as to be the ladies of native-born Americans; for ourselves, and native Americans in both the city towns and the country towns have among them some of the greatest Christians. Is it true a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (1) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (2) after the number of 9 passed away. It was a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (3) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (4) after the number of 9 passed away. It was a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (5) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (6) "Communion Yankee nation." We want to ready to turn back footer to Italy. We want to marry in Ohio, settled from New England, the seats of diversen to the number of marriages is much larger than in the southern counties of Ohio. The question is made, by by great reports on the theme, that un-Catholic native born populations are exceedingly loose in many quarters of the country."

Comment on such charges is entirely unnecessary on our part, as no doubt Joseph Cook knows well that he is talking about, and he would not be likely to tell such tales upon his lids and his knees, unless the charges could be substantiated. The fact is that Protestantism will soon have to say out, "save me, save me friends," if they go on thus indicting that system of iniquity so publicly.

A Methodist on "Mariolatry."

From the earliest Christian age it seems to have been the devil's design to wage a relentless war against the Mother of God. Satan was declared to be the woman who would crush the head of the serpent Satan, and as the demon is endeavoring all the time to destroy the Church of God, he constantly instigates schemes against the Blessed Virgin. The history of the several heresies which have arisen and fallen in the world is proof of this fact, but it is even more forcibly demonstrated by the bad spirits and false prophets of Protestantism in the sixteenth century, who avowed the needs of that fanatical hatred of the Blessed Virgin which shoots up among the other weeds of secularism, even to this day.

The reason why Satan has planted this enhance is very simple to every Catholic. To engender a hatred of the Mother of God only human hearts would be certainly followed by a hatred of her Son. "The Church and Satan," says Cardinal Newman in one of his sermons, "agreed together in this, that Son and Mother went together; and the experience of three centuries has confirmed their testimony; for Catholics who have honored the Mother, still worship the Son, while Protestants, who have ceased to honor the Mother, have ceased to honor the Son, begun by mocking of the Mother."

These are the words of a great luminary of the Catholic Church, who was for years the champion of the Church of Protestantism, and we quote them in preference to a thousand other writers on the same subject, in order that non-Catholics may have the benefit of the experience of one who was in the same pinfall with themselves.

In last week's Adocate somebody shows his editor of the Monitor with being ignorant of his own religion, for the reason that he does not know that "salvation is from God, and that Jesus is our only Saviour." Such assertions, however, could only emanate from the uneducated mind of a non-Catholic, because all Catholic children—even before they come to the use of reason—are taught that there is only one name, under Heaven, where by mankind may be saved. "Christ is our only Saviour," is neither new nor novel doctrine to Catholics, so that the "ignorance" charged against us recently upon the head of the writer in the Adocate.

The mistake common to all sectarians who are not yet to criticize Catholic doctrine is that they set up their own crude and confused opinions as the belief of Catholics, and then deny conclusions somewhat similar to the following therefrom:

"Now, it must be conceded that if we seek salvation through other persons, we make them equal to Christ, and we ought to pray to them and worship them as our Saviour, we give to them divine trust is taken, we find this declaration preceding it:

"Thou," alluding to the Blessed Virgin, "after thy Son, art the mistress of all creation."

This shows plainly that God is exalted in every Catholic heart far above the Blessed Virgin, who is what she is only by the power, the will, and the desire of Almighty God.

But why—Protestants may ask—do not Catholics appeal directly to God in their prayers, and not through the medium of Mary? Well, there are a dozen answers to this question, but we will answer it by simply asking those quizzies the cold why, at the marriage feast in Galilee, it was the Mother of God that caused the miracle of changing water into wine to be performed? Again, if "God heareth not sinners, but if a man be a worshiper of Him, and do His will, him He heareth;" if "the continual prayer of a just man availeth much;" if faithful Abraham was required to pray for Abimelech, "for he was a prophet;" if patient Job was to "pray for his friends," because "he had spoken right things before God;" if meek Moses, by lifting up his hands, turned the battle in favor of Israel against Amalek—why, in the name of Christian common sense, should we wonder that MARY—the only spotless child of Adam's seed, to pain whose consent to be His Mother God sent an angel from Heaven, who was declared "full of grace" by the Spirit of Truth, whom "all generations call Blessed"—has a transcendent influence with the God who elevated her above all the human beings, both before her birth, during her life, and after her death?

And again, if the Gentiles at Jerusalem sought Philip, because he was an apostle, when they desired access to our Blessed Saviour, and Philip spoke to Andrew, so still more closely in our Lord's confidence, and then both went to Him—is it strange, O consistent Christian, that the MOTHER should have power with the Son, distinct from and apart from that of the great angel and the most triumphant saint?

And, finally, if Protestants believe that our Blessed Redeemer was the Son of God—came down on earth in the form of a servant and a creature, why may not His Mother, on the other hand, rise to be the Queen of Heaven, and be clothed with the sun, and have the moon under her feet?

These, then, are a few of the reasons why Catholics appeal so frequently to God through His Blessed Mother, whom we ask to pray for us, feeling that we are sinners unworthy to lift our eyes to the face of that heavenly Father when we have so often and so grievously offended. This is a mark of Christian humility—a virtue entirely unknown to non-Catholics—and God has promised that the humble shall be exalted, just as He regarded "the humility of His handmaid," and raised her to the highest dignity in Heaven.

We hope, therefore, that the light we have shed upon this question through this simple article will have the effect of removing the mists from the eyes of the Adocate's critic so that he or she may behold the Blessed Mary as we Catholics see her—as the Mother of God—but not possessing a single divine attribute of the Creator. We also hope that hereafter H. L. will not be so foolish as to rush into print with any more such ridiculous charges against the Catholic Church, but just step into the Mormon office whenever any doubts arise in his or her mind, and we will most willingly place him or her in possession of books that will illumine the darkness of his or her understanding, so that the ignorant critic of the present may become the well-instructed Catholic of the future.

Another Edith O'Gorman Fraud.

A few weeks ago a dispatch was published setting forth that a member of the "Catholic Sisterhood at Annapolis" had "escaped" from the living mausoleum of her friends, and had "horrifying revelations" to make regarding the "fearful depravity" of the Sisters from whom she so fortunately escaped." Several correspondents have sent us clippings and asked the MONITOR to "say something about it." Well, all we can say is that it is "the old, old story." For reasons best known to themselves—and always for the good of the religious life—the Sisters in all communities are constantly compelled to expel some one of their number, and this was the case, we presume, at Annapolis; but in the present instance Mary Magdalen Windsor is determined to be revenged upon the Sisters who discarded her, so she has hatched up a string of slanders after the Maria Monk pattern, which she sells "secrets of a Convent," and has set out on a lecturing tour in order to get shekels and satisfaction at the same time.

But the day when such frauds could influence the public to say great extent has gone by and the "cross immortalities," the "chalks and dungeons," the "burial baptism," and all such vile concoctions of vicious minds has pulled upon the public taste, and even the pious reformers say all so number to such scandal-hatchers.

People now-a-days know as much about convents and Sisterhoods as they do about the editor of the Monitor with being ignorant of his own religion, for the reason that he does not know that "salvation is from God, and that Jesus is our only Saviour." Such assertions, however, could only emanate from the uneducated mind of a non-Catholic, because all Catholic children—even before they come to the use of reason—are taught that there is only one name, under Heaven, where by mankind may be saved. "Christ is our only Saviour," is neither new nor novel doctrine to Catholics, so that the "ignorance" charged against us recently upon the head of the writer in the Adocate.

The mistake common to all sectarians who are not yet to criticize Catholic doctrine is that they set up their own crude and confused opinions as the belief of Catholics, and then deny conclusions somewhat similar to the following therefrom:

"Now, it must be conceded that if we seek salvation through other persons, we make them equal to Christ, and we ought to pray to them and worship them as our Saviour, we give to them divine trust.

So far as the Catholic Church is concerned, we plead not guilty to such sweeping conclusions as the above contains. No Catholic makes anything or anybody—in the heavens above or the earth beneath—"equal to God." Catholics give "divine honors to no one save God; to Him alone we offer daily sacrifice—the highest type of Christian adoration—and it never yet has entered the mind of any Catholic to offer such a holy oblation as the Mass to any saint or angel, or even to the Mother of God. Might an act could save by any possibility, be the salvation of Catholic faith, hence it is only those who know little or nothing about Catholic doctrine who then condemned the teachings of the Church with their own conceited and confused notions concerning her. For these reasons, Catholics, it is easily understood that when they shallow reflect on the Adocate tries to listen such foolish notions upon the Catholic Church, every intelligent mind can conceive how ridiculous is the position occupied by the correspondent of our contemporary.

The Adocate's critic thinks that the proof of the charge trumped up against the Church is clearly established by some prayer which are published in a Catholic book of devotion entitled the "Oratory of a Faithful Soul," from page 114, of which this sentence is copied:

"To thee, O Lady, do I raise my supplications, on Thee do I ask the grace of my heart, in thee doth my soul confide. Turn pity on me, for my salvation is in thy hands."

This paragraph is cut away from the context—an old Protestant trick, by the way—so as to make non-Catholic believe that Catholics ignore God altogether, and appeal to our Blessed Lady for salvation. This trick we have often exposed before, and now let us open this book and see how far it bears out the idiots sought to be conveyed by the extract. The book opens with a prayer in adoration of the Most Holy Trinity, in which the soul acknowledges that God alone does he adore. After a hundred pages of prayer to God, we come to the "Devotions to Our Blessed Lady," which are those which have infinite sou has exercised in America:

"In an most hesitation of faith, we shall probably find very much to establish so as to be the ladies of native-born Americans; for ourselves, and native Americans in both the city towns and the country towns have among them some of the greatest Christians. Is it true a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (1) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (2) after the number of 9 passed away. It was a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (3) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (4) after the number of 9 passed away. It was a New Redeemer who founded Mormonism, (5) was another Holy Redeemer who had called (6) "Communion Yankee nation." We want to ready to turn back footer to Italy. We want to marry in Ohio, settled from New England, the seats of diversen to the number of marriages is much larger than in the southern counties of Ohio. The question is made, by by great reports on the theme, that un-Catholic native born populations are exceedingly loose in many quarters of the country."

Comment on such charges is entirely unnecessary on our part, as no doubt Joseph Cook knows well that he is talking about, and he would not be likely to tell such tales upon his lids and his knees, unless the charges could be substantiated. The fact is that Protestantism will soon have to say out, "save me, save me friends," if they go on thus indicting that system of iniquity so publicly.

The Pope Outmanned in Soda Water!

Napa soda water is notorious for its effervescent qualities, so it is safe to conclude that the writer who succeeded a criticism on the Pope in the Napa Reporter of the 22d inst., blushing in several bottles of this "fine-bang" fluid can be published his criticism of fresh and frenzy combined. The article is certainly not deserving of any extended comment, so, in order that our readers may enjoy a good laugh at the poor imbecile who is on the wrong side of the issue, we publish the article in its beautiful way, we mean a few samples of this newly-discovered soda water, which is likely to rival Colonel Sanborn's brand, at least in the home market:

"The Pope of Rome assumes that he is the Holiest Sovereign on Earth and says that his Catholic Church is the one-trumpet of Jehovah, and that outside of it there is no salvation for man. Now we do not envy the Pope in his chatchling pretensions, for we know that the Pope of Rome is as knowingly or unknowingly labouring under a delusion."

Much obliged! On the part of the Pope we tender our grateful acknowledgments to the Napa soda water contributor for his polite consideration of the Pontiff's feelings when it refuses to assert point blank that the Vicar of Christ is laboring under a delusion! As his Holiness reads the Napa Reporter every day in Rome, no doubt the editor did a very magnanimous deed in sending "two roughly" with the venerable Pontiff's feelings!

"In themselves the spiritual ideas of the Pope are laughable, but when he applies them to temporal affairs they of ours antagonize the sensibilities of millions of people just as good and pure as ours the throne of God to any Pope or High Priest on earth."

Just so! We are all saints—if God only knows it! It will be a great consolation for Catholics to learn from such a very enlightened and influential source that "the spiritual ideas of the Pope are harmless," so much a judgment from such a soda water contributor is worth considerable as it shows that the opposition to the Church erected on throughout all ages was entirely manufactured! And, no doubt, when the Pope reads the Napa daily Pap he will certainly cease from applying his harmless spiritual ideas to temporal affairs, or at least stop the Napa country from coming under any condemnation for his heresies!

"We have no apology to make as any creature in creation shall be ordained by Heaven to be our Saviour, and we do not believe in the Christ of God; that we need to make, and by the Christ to be pardoned, but we believe in the pardon of God; that we need to make, and by the Christ to be pardoned."

"We have been told that domestic service has always been open to young girls."

"Yes, we know all about it. That little Repentsalve's silly life is made a burden to her by the labor for whom she worked, rushing to her on the street, and in company, and exclaiming: 'O, Jenny, is that you?' and the same

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1884.

CALENDAR FOR MAY.

1—Thursday—SS. Philip and James, Apostles.
2—Saturday—Finding of the Holy Cross.
4—Sunday—Third Sunday after Easter.
5—Monday—St. Pius V., the Pope and Confessor.
6—Tuesday—Apparition of St. Michael, Archangel.
10—Saturday—St. Antoninus, Bishop and Confessor.
11—Sunday—Fourth Sunday after Easter.
12—Monday—St. Pancras, Martyr.
13—Monday—St. Peter Celestine, Pope and Confessor, Rogation Day.
20—Tuesday—St. Bernardine of Sienna, Confessor, Rogation Day.
21—Wednesday—Vigil of the Ascension, Rogation Day.
22—Thursday—ASCENSION OF OUR LORD. Holy-day of Obligation.
23—Saturday—B. V. M. Help of Christians.
24—Sunday—Sunday in the Octave of the Ascension.
25—Monday—St. Philip Neri, Confessor.
26—Tuesday—St. Mary Magdalen de Pazzi, Virgin.
28—Wednesday—St. Augustine, Bishop and Confessor.
29—Friday—St. Peter, Pope and Martyr.
31—Saturday—St. Angela Merici, Virgin.

ROGATION DAYS.

When They Occur What They Mean—How They Were First Instituted.

The feast of the Ascension of our Lord will occur on the 22nd of May, and as that feast is preceded by three Rogation Days, we appeal to our readers to prepare for the observance of these ancient Rogations, which are intended to be a great season of prayer and supplication. It was, however, the custom of the Church in the past to designate more particularly short prayers or Rogations.

The custom of designating the three days preceding Ascension Thursday as days of ancient origin, dating back to the 5th century, when they were instituted by Mamertus, the Bishop of Vienne, a city in the province of Dauphiny, France.

Between the years 417 and 469, this city and its surrounding country was the scene of great calamities, such as earthquakes, fires, and wolves, which terrified the people. The accounts of these calamities are too numerous to be given here, but the following will show that the very beasts of the forest, it is related, were driven from their haunts:

On the festival of Easter, 469, the people were gathered together in the large cathedral, when a shock, more violent than any that had yet been experienced, shook the edifice, and one of the largest edifices in the city cracked in several places. The people fled from the church in terror, but the holy Bishop St. Mamertus exhorted them to return, and, in his turn, he commenced his task of establishing the Rogations, which he made a law for the whole city, and which, by the decree of the people ordained to the church to render thanks to God for His mercy. St. Mamertus explained to them the vows he had made, and told them how he had fasted and wept for the sins made by which they could escape from the terrible disaster which had threatened. They willingly agreed to follow his advice and accordingly he set apart the three days immediately preceding the approaching feast of the Ascension as a time of special prayer and penance. A church was and a short distance from the city was appointed for the place of assembly, where the prayers were to be held, and there they proceeded in procession, "walking and weeping."

The result of this first Rogation was so good and so evidently pleasing to God that it was ordained that the Rogations should be observed every year, and that every Christian should fast at least with half the fidelity and consideration they do their dues. Then, perhaps, hiring out will not be a last resort.

We left the poor girls, impressed with the idea that, right or wrong, they painted the shield as they saw it, and we could not help thinking that if there was any foundation in fact for their statement, what a grand opportunity there is for the Society Belle to immortalize their names by declaring some means by which young girls can find sufficient remunerative employment to insure them, at least, the common necessities of life.

It is not necessary that we should comment on the above portion of the conversation, as the facts set forth therein are true to the letter. But let us ask: Can nothing be done to avert the sad fate of so many poor and honest girls who are thus driven to immoral ways solely because society is founded on a false basis? Has corruption so deep a root in society that the only conscience that vice will continue to be employed and protected, whilst virtue must be idle and shiver in its rags? Are there not Catholic ladies in the land who will succor the sorrowing, help the helpless of their own sex, and thus prove to the world that good to their neighbor? As it is now, the Industrial School and the Magdalen Asylum are the only refuge left for the poor children of many and honest parents. Hence it is well for those to whom God has given much to ask themselves if they have done all they could to alleviate the sufferings poverty and shielding virtue, and if their conscionces tell them that they have, they may rest in peace, but if not, let them with sandy all the corruption of the times. It is a fearful thing to be indifferent to the woes of those below us in misfortune.

On the festival of Easter, 469, the people were gathered together in the large cathedral, when a shock, more violent than any that had yet been experienced, shook the edifice, and one of the largest edifices in the city cracked in several places. The people fled from the church in terror, but the holy Bishop St. Mamertus exhorted them to return, and, in his turn, he commenced his task of establishing the Rogations, which he made a law for the whole city, and which, by the decree of the people ordained to the church to render thanks to God for His mercy. St. Mamertus explained to them the vows he had made, and told them how he had fasted and wept for the sins made by which they could escape from the terrible disaster which had threatened. They willingly agreed to follow his advice and accordingly he set apart the three days immediately preceding the approaching feast of the Ascension as a time of special prayer and penance. A church was and a short distance from the city was appointed for the place of assembly, where the prayers were to be held, and there they proceeded in procession, "walking and weeping."

The result of this first Rogation was so good and so evidently pleasing to God that it was ordained that the Rogations should be observed every year, and that every Christian should fast at least with half the fidelity and consideration they do their dues. Then, perhaps, hiring out will not be a last resort.

We left the poor girls, impressed with the idea that, right or wrong, they painted the shield as they saw it, and we could not help thinking that if there was any foundation in fact for their statement, what a grand opportunity there is for the Society Belle to immortalize their names by declaring some means by which young girls can find sufficient remunerative employment to insure them, at least, the common necessities of life.

It is not necessary that we should comment on the above portion of the conversation, as the facts set forth therein are true to the letter. But let us ask: Can nothing be done to avert the sad fate of so many poor and honest girls who are thus driven to immoral ways solely because society is founded on a false basis? Has corruption so deep a root in society that the only conscience that vice will continue to be employed and protected, whilst virtue must be idle and shiver in its rags? Are there not Catholic ladies in the land who will succor the sorrowing, help the helpless of their own sex, and thus prove to the world that good to their neighbor? As it is now, the Industrial School and the Magdalen Asylum are the only refuge left for the poor children of many and honest parents. Hence it is well for those to whom God has given much to ask themselves if they have done all they could to alleviate the sufferings poverty and shielding virtue, and if their consciences tell them that they have, they may rest in peace, but if not, let them with sandy all the corruption of the times. It is a fearful thing to be indifferent to the woes of those below us in misfortune.

Important Information Worth Preserving.

The MONITOR frequently receives letters from Ireland and other portions of Europe asking information as to the proper mode of transmitting money to Ireland, or to any place in Europe, or even in Asia or Africa, and as we have lost considerable time making inquiries and answering the class of correspondence, we have concluded to print—for the benefit of our readers here, as well as elsewhere—the sections of the California Code which relate to the subject in question. This information was kindly furnished by Hon. Phillip A. Roach, Public Administrator of this city and county, who is thus in a position to be familiar to all persons, so that none may knowingly transgress the law.

If you wish to remit money to a stranger, or person without known heirs, dies intestate in the house or premises of another, the presumed or probable heirs are unknown, or live in a place more immediate notice thereof to the Public Administrator of the country and in default of such notice, the property left behind is to be retained thereby, to be recovered by the Public Administrator of the country, if claimed by an heir, injury or waste; and which, by reason thereof, ought to be in possession of the Public Administrator.

SECTION 1726. "Every Public Administrator, City Coroner, Commissioner, and constable, must take charge of the estates of persons dying within his county, as follows:

1. Of the estates of decedents, for which no administrators are appointed, and which, in consequence, thereof, are being wasted, uncared for, or lost.

2. Of the estates of decedents who have no heirs.

3. Of the estates ordered into his hands by the Courts and

4. Of the estates upon which letters of administration have been issued to him by the Courts.

5. The Public Administrator's right to administer upon the estate of a relative, next of kin, and creditors of decedent, exists concurrently, entitled to share in the distribution of the estate.

6. All persons presenting claims against the estate of any decedent, must exhibit them with vouchers, duly authenticated, or else such persons may have to show that they are justly due.

7. Every person who shall by concealment, or otherwise, or, if he be a public officer, by neglect or attempt to discharge any duty of his office, when no other punishment is prescribed, is liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding five years."

The Irish National League Convention.

We print this week the proceedings of the Executive Committee of the Irish National League in Chicago, at which it was resolved to hold the next National Convention in Philadelphia, on August 18th. We hope to see California represented in that body by some men of brains who are familiar with the shortcomings of the Constitution of the Irish League, and who will introduce the Convention to make changes, therein which will be greatly beneficial to the prosperity and usefulness of the organization. The League has but 25,000 members in all America, when it should have at least 100,000 members, but unless some changes are made in the workings of the organization, not even 10,000 will be on the roll by August, 1885.

In California the Irish National League is but little known, and seldom heard of, outside of San Francisco and a few other cities. The country districts of the State seem to feel no interest in the cause, and there are no funds whereby to send an official organizer into every county. For this reason we have but a few hundred members of this League where we had ten thousand Land Leaguers before that organization was merged into the present League. This is not the way to free Ireland, and unless a constant, steady, preserving system of agitation is kept up so as to help secure funds to pay members of Parliament and for election purposes in Ireland, the Land Bill for which the League was established will be entirely defeated.

We want to see California represented in the coming Convention, therefore, by men who will make their influence felt for the benefit of the Irish cause, and who will plainly show the Eastern delegates the shortcomings of the Constitution. We can have a live and influential organization instead of the half-dead skeleton that at present is dragging out a precarious existence in America.

A Lady in the Editorial Chair.

We learn from the current issue of the Advocate that Brother Crazy has been induced by his friends to go to Philadelphia, but as the genial gospel-torterer says herself:

"It will make no difference in the management of the paper. We will do the same page copy, and we shall write various things on the way."

Accordingly we doff our editorial chapeau to the literary lady, and we hope that the editorial tops which happen to transgress Crazy sanctum, may sit gracefully upon her shoulders, and that "editorials" may flow from her pen plentiful as showers from Pluvius. It, most demur, however, at Brother Crazy's promise to write "various things along the way." Preachers are sometimes very peculiar people, and we hope Brother Crazy will not be guilty of any "funny business" in the way. We want to see him back here as good candidate as when he left, and we regale to writing about "various things" so greatly fear he will not be, unless he is treated in the spirit of life, "and that would never do for a Methodist editor!

A Leap-Year Proposal!

The MONITOR quotes from the evangelical union of Ohio, as follows: "Dear Brother—Inclosure hits a little, and absence Protestant is scarcely endurable. Life is short, and I am lonesome. Life's cup is full of the corruption of the times. It is a fearful thing to be indifferent to the woes of those below us in misfortune. The Monitor is a good paper, and I am glad to see it. Life's cup is full of the corruption of the times. The Monitor does not get any drunkenness. Life's cup is full of the corruption of the times

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. P. SEARS BOSTON

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original conundrums and solutions for the department. Address as follows:

PALMER J. MCCURDY,
103 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-CONSULTUS.—

Answers to Leisure Hours No 61.

1st.—Bagshot-road. 7th.—Capitaliel.
2nd.—LAYFIGURE Sth.—
ARGOTIC BER
FONDU BONNY
ITEM REMOVEL
TID BATHE
OC YES
L L

3rd.—Chelsea. 9th.—Flagon
4th.— P.
DIM PAD
REGAL CAGE
DECAPAL PATENTS
LIGATURE PATRONS
MAMMIT DEMODES
PARIN SPIRIT
LEN SIR
T U
5th.—Three-fourths. 11th.—Mahly.
6th.—MORINOO 12th.—TABASCO
SAMPSON ARABIAN
ANSWER BEATING
INTEREST SITTING SPEECH CAPTAIN
CORRADE OINTMENT
SERENE ORGELET
T

Remarks.—"Legend Home" (No. 61) was solved by Messrs. "Y. M.," S. A. M., Pauline, Augusta, James Fitzgerald, Ellen Terry, Ethel Maude, Prescott, Lady Flower, Lily, Gladiolus, Urbanus, Ethel, Pansy, Bell, Clara Bell, Jessie, Zion Lee, Ethel, Pansie, Nellie Cockley and F. M. Mary Lake, Lily, Gladiolus, Urbanus, Ethel, Pansy, Bell, Clara Bell, Jessie, Zion Lee, Ethel, Pansie, Nellie Cockley and F. M.

NUMBER LXXXVI.

1st BOX.—CHAPTATION.

To a New Jersey Pastor.

Out of the head of a "French grammarian, 1615 1-1000, and you will find a French dramatist, born, 1796-1856.

Beaumarchais, Cal. SYLMORE.

2nd BOX.—LEFT BEHIND.

Across:—1. To gift out. 2. An officer whose duty it is to count, 3. Commutations. 4. Bedds. 5. Food for cattle. 6. Sedimentary.

Down:—1. A labour. 2. A Spanish dance. 3. Indeed. 4. Healthy. 5. To deny again. 6. Are or were. 7. Ancient. 8. Published instrument. 9. An ass. 10. An island. 11. Wilkie's.

Leicester, Mass. HERBERT MURPHY.

3rd BOX.—CHARADE.

Some other lessons, then those that grow
On trees and shrubs, most every blow,
For Wisdom's sake, I'd have you see
Something of a "most dower of Faith."

So, friend, if fair honors heat in time
With life, as birds in sunny June,
Be sure to gather the good and sweet
You'll think, with me, the time is meet.

For me but poorly skilled to sing,
Long and slow progress I make, when I try
Upon the ground so long I dwell,
Might incapacity I find in me.

But still I love the mind flower
For its, like, little self, has a power,
Alike to thrill and warm the heart,
Of kindly feelings that will be or depart.

Dubuque, Ia. ASPIRO.

4TH BOX.—DIAMOND.

To Bewrayed.

1. A letter. 2. Not in labour equally with a navvy. 3. (Called Polyphemus) Ulysses. 4. A kind of great or small gun. 5. A point of love (Mid.). 6. A course of pleasure. 7. Ability. 8. Very quaint, comical. 9. Ancient. 10. Ancient. 11. The bell or wall of horticultural produce. 12. Not a friend of great or small. 13. Not a friend. 14. Open having the sides and ends square. 15. Not a friend. 16. Not a friend. 17. Not a friend. 18. Not a friend. 19. A letter.

Valparo, Cal. S. A. M.

5TH BOX.—ANAGRAM.

NATHAN CAN DO FOR THE PERCEL DIEM.

New Orleans, La. P. Q. LEE ARTT.

6TH BOX.—SQUARE.

To J. C. M.

1. Reported, as from a friend's pack. 2. A river of India. 3. Advocates. 4. Preparations for medicine. 5. A portion of Ireland. 6. Indication (Mark.). 7. The fault of a chair. 8. Ability.

Phila., Pa. W. M. DEXTER.

7TH BOX.—DOUBLE LINTED MORAL.

1 "Reproached home,"
2 In "Jenny Wren,"
3 In "Jenny Wren,"
4 In "worthy cause,"
5 In "lawful man,"
6 In "the upper hen;"
A Christian's motto for the whole choice,
One fond of dissipation;
He practised proved to Indians,
Hence our good reputation.

Newark, N. J. HANNAH.

8TH BOX.—SQUARE.

1. Polyhedron. 2. A small country house. 3. Subsequently. 4. Not liable to perpetuation. 5. A formidable of disease thrown together without order. 6. To esteem. 7. Flattered (Obsol.).

Brooklyn, N. Y. M. OTIS.

9TH BOX.—DOUBLE CHARADE.

First Part.

Did you ever stop to think of this?
Well, it is a kind of game
Quite common, I'm afraid and true
Next part explains the same.

Second Part.

Lest prime be thought to be some rows,
Be sure to hear they rule.
Thus, if the bulls do what they may
Well, if the bulls go straight.

St. Helens, Cal. JUSTUS.

10TH BOX.—DIAMOND.

To our esteemed friend, Lily Oak

1. A letter. 2. A new country of Lower. 3. A Jewish Rabbi. 4. Pertaining to a portion of Arabia. 5. An island of Asia, off the east coast. 6. A river of Scandinavia. 7. A village of Arabia. Spain. 8. A town of Independent Tartary. 9. A village of Holland. 10. A letter.

N. B.—Twenty-two cents for first correct solution.

Turbo Buena, Cal. SPECULA.

11TH BOX.—CHARADE.

To Blackbird.

The officer patrolled the beat
Where I lived, with business planning
Then stopped, for almost 'twixt his feet
A wretched creature had lay dreaming.

He roused me after he made my hour,
Bad said "Get home!" I simply laughing
And just a rum-shop he did go,
Though ground to daisy, I was very trying.

An angry mentalist sought the law,
Charging pains, the observing
Provided on him to come on every,
"Don't fall out with first friends, I warn ye!"

A wonderous thing, for last friend,
By this the second last relation,
So merchant and his friends soon got
Their friends, and then grown both his gaiter.

Friends, I simply would remark,
Be sure of your friends before ye entry
Lest by a lawyer not a show
Of P. P. Pumpkin, family.

Then in a dream I saw it all,
Or fancied some such dilemma
When you could call a rubber call,
Or not have—what one is name!

New York City. UNABLY.

12TH BOX.—SQUARE.

1. Mischievous. 2. Ancient. 3. An humorist. 4. An amiable lady (Wm.). 5. A female name. 6. Lasting. 7. A mixture. 8. Ever. 9. Chaste. 10. Ever.

Lawrence, Mass. A. F. HOLT.

N.B. Answers are desired in five weeks.

TWO-FOOTER.

HAMMIE MURPHY.—Your batch is finished with the usual favor of this department.

ASTON.—The charade, of the last batch, was a good one. 3, 4, 7 and 8.

CONTRIBUTOR.—I would ask of you to favor both I, Monitor and Lady, with your quaint puzzles for their respective departments.

SPRIGGS.—He is married but can remember, which I think was a very good one. I have not seen the Lady's Bower, yet, but must go and see it when I do, it shall be "expanded" I shall endeavor to do so.

NEWCOMB.—I would call your attention to the article headed Our Repository, in the Monitor which publish The Monitor and The Mirror.

for News, respectively; and I have no doubt a big thing will come from it in time.

N. R.—"We have a cyclopean on hand part of the answer to which is: "The man who tries to hold three horses often breaks his neck in the attempt. "Very true! but some men think they can manage equine to perfection!"—Gen. Tom Thumb, of Grace Church.

The author of the quoted cryptogram partly speaks from his experience. He (the author) was willing to drive three horses, if he got the opportunity, (which not had) when he had one in hand and was to mock for "the small boy" to manage. You know how it is when a person gets hot,—they leave every savvy ever is,—so do I, when I have a cryptogram to write.

You.—It is very funny, but somebody (?) will try to be, or, when they try to blind persons by publishing an article that is veiled with (some veiling be this or the cryptogramist,) and set it forth for a "sharp shot" against a reporter, I would like to make a cryptogram, the answer to which would be such as to be mentioned further on, but, I think it best to let the cryptogram speak to whom it belongs. Cut, where the wood-bees rebuke; and give the whole answer, which is:—"It is far better to trust one man than one dozen drive horses with ease and safety than trust drive men who try to drive one horse when they have not how." Ta! ta!! Will; (it stands for counterfeit cryptogram) you hear.

Hyrtle Hunton.

1.—"Colquitz" has taken command of "Mystic Island." 2.—"Leon A. Noon," resigned.

3.—"Ethel Magnolia, "Junius," is member of the G. A. F. I., is the idle editor of The Monitor.

4.—Contributions are desired by "Lark" for Leisure Hours, also, Joseph M. McGuire, 136 Bryant street, San Francisco.

5.—"Pansy" is a good editor and one, in fine, is a carter in the Monitor. N. B. and Ed.

6.—"California is the Banner State of Pansdom, having more contributors than any other State in the Union."—The Mystic News.

7.—"Brown" does not contribute, yet, to all California poetry, for his department in The Mystic News. Address, Joseph A. Rohr, 20 Centre avenue, Newark, N. J.

8.—"Aspiro" was elected a delegate to the Republican State convention held in Peoria, Ill. in September, and was one of the "Lucky" State convention held four years ago.

9.—"Aspiro" is much by those who most fully competent in the holiday contest of the Mystic Sister, recommended by Gen. Tom Thumb, that the prize were never awarded.—"I. Bonnie."

10.—Your department has been opened in the Cincinnati Weekly Journal of New York for the ensuing year. The name of the department is "Leisure Hours." Address, Lily Oak, Cincinnati, Ohio. "Lily" says she now is to who is the editor, I think, "Lily" is editor in chief. "Wilkie" or "Ed." Ed.

11.—At an entertainment given in this city, two weeks ago, "Jennie," "Chipmunk," "Sophie," and "Wood B. Actin," were prominent parts therein. "Sophie's" parts were received with tremendous applause. "Jennie" and "Chipmunk" were equally good. "Sophie," was highly valued by many musical critics, that they were competent to act in such. Several poems were present principally in embodiment of more pleasure E. C. D.

12.—"Our Directory."

"All poems are earnestly requested to send their name, post office and state with their copy of their composition, if any, to T. and W. Ellsworth, 270 Ninth Ave., New York City." Poems for insertion in the Monitor should be to hand July 15. Name of Directory for 1884, to be received by July 1. Date of issue, 1st of every, be sent in as early as possible. After May 1, all communications must be sent to No. 270 Ninth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Mystic News.

N. B.—The Mystic News for March 15, 1884, (combined) has appeared in a 5 page form. It contains more poems and more pleasure than any poems journal extant. California notes and G. B. F. Jones are a treasure to editorials are well written. The best feature of The Mystic News is the poetry, "Poems," contributed by "J. Sorrow." "I. Bonnie." "Lily" has joined the rhyme-country banner, after the style of poems in city. For the size of The Mystic News, it is the best poetic journal in the country, that is published in any puzzle journal.

C. N. F.

Chinese Washing Powder for sale by all grocers.

—The great Maxima remedy, Damiana Bitters.

JOHN A. LENNON,
Wholesale Grocer,
AND IMPORTER OF
Choice Brands
Japan and English Breakfast Tea.
Agent for Pure White Beaver Condition Cotton Oil. Are Prepared to Contract for Cotton, and Pure Olive Oil for Sacrament Purposes. Nos. 215 and 217 Clay Street, San Francisco

WARD & O'BRIEN'S
Male and Female
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.
608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.
Telephone No. 907.

CENTRAL
Atlantic Steam-Ship Agency,
613 MARKET STREET, 613.
Tickets sold over ALL Atlantic Steam-ship Lines.
ALL OVER THE STATES.
PARTIES DESIROUS OF BRINGING FRIENDS OR relatives from the old country can do so by applying at this office. Plans and sailing lists always on hand. Drafts issued on England, Ireland and the Continent.
C. B. HORTON, Assistant Agent. J. MALPAS, Agent.

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON
968 and 970 Folsom St.
San Francisco
WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS
Established 1870.
We are selling Claret for Cash and grocery.
The following lay prices will convince you. Old Tom Gin.
Bottle Wines:—Port, 25c, 37c, and 50c. Sherry, 25c, 37c, and 50c. Claret, 25c, 37c, and 50c. Port, 25c, 37c, and 50c. Sherry

THE CHARITY OF THE IRISH PEOPLE.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

Also many Irish monks are found during the Middle Ages unrolling themselves at the monastery of the great St. Bernard, in one of the most dangerous passes of the Alps.

"Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament; adversity is the blessing of the New; which wisdomly the author of creation, and the clearer revelation of God's future. . . . Certainly virtue is like precious odors, most fragrant when they are crushed; for prosperity doth best discover vice; but adversity doth best discover virtue." [Bacon: Essay.]

SINCE THE PENAL LAWS HAVE BEEN RELAXED in Ireland there have been spent there on churches $6,200,000; on convents and monasteries, $16,000,000; on colleges and seminaries, $1,722,000; on asylums and hospitals, about $800,000; and since the year 1836 Ireland has contributed $936,000 to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith. And that the old missionary spirit was strong as ever in Ireland, we know from the 400 priests now sent out to foreign parts since the year 1843 by All Hallows College; and during the past 40 years, the united dioceses of Cashel and Emly have sent forth 143 priests, 93 monks, and 147 nuns; while 125 priests, 11 monks, and 97 nuns entered from the noble old diocese of Limerick. The Sisters of Mercy and the Nuns of the Presentation, both religious orders of Irish foundation, and whose establishment we owe exclusively to the zeal and charity of saintly Irish women, are now spread over all the English-speaking countries of the world; and it is to the incessant, heroic charity so less than the energy of character and administrative ability of the Irish people. Mother Ignatius Halihan, that is dear the establishment, in Australia, other three centuries of martyrdom of the noble order of Dominican Nuns.

PAY THE IRISH MEMBERS.

APPEAL FROM THE IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

Charles Stewart Parnell has publicly declared that in order to secure a sufficient number of Irish people to form a quorum in Westminster Parliament, and to keep the Irish Parliament, a fund will be raised in Ireland, in London and given in America, to enable the Irish people to pay their own members, to enable Irishmen to compete with power from a home statesman of ruin, with the power from a foreign government, the members of the House of Commons resolved, "that it is the duty of the Irish people at home and abroad, at the expense of the Irish people, to pay the salaries of the members of the House of Commons." Parnell, the Irish people,

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

THE BANSHEE'S WARNING.

Young Patrick Maclinden was a native of Erin,
A lonely or better lady never was born;
Sweet, modest and retiring in the bower or shearing
And bright as the bell when its tongue is gone from
And never was his heart so at ease as the moment
Spent wooing
Dear Norah, the pride of the village, he loved
And swore on his faith to be true to Norah Bell.

Where naught lived to witness save God and the river,
He whispered his vows, sweet, sweet, and tender,
Then to the far West, where the war wasted wither,
But I'll take you home, Norah, I'll take you home,
And I'll work like a slave for you, Norah Bell.

Ah! little he dreamt, as the lips of the river
Sighed back the sweet vows he had spoken to her,
That a fiend in the form of a man was lurking
Or one who was jealous of young Patrick Maclinden
And swore that he would, ere he left Norah Bell,
Twist wicked him out of his lady love's heart.

Proud wooing he went to the West, Norah's lover,
Where naught lived to witness save God and the river,
He whispered his vows, sweet, sweet, and tender,
But I'll take you home, Norah, I'll take you home,
And I'll work for the glory of

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The newest but the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1884.

PASTORAL LETTER

OF THE

MOST REV. J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,

Archbishop of San Francisco.

The following important Pastoral Letter was read in many of the churches throughout the Archdiocese on last Sunday:

TO THE CATHOLICS OF THE DIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO:

Dearly Beloved—It is the duty of the Church to advocate the interests of God and man. The interests of God are promoted by vindicating his law, and those of man are secured by his complying with it. God is infinite wisdom, hence he cannot must an unwise law; he is immaculate justice, and then incapable of making a wrong decree, and infinite goodness which, as proceeding with his infallible Son, unerring baptism, may be a condition of forfeiting his will. Then it is he alone that can make a law which will keep the law of God, as it is his greatest evil and misery to disregard it.

We do not mean to make a dissertation on the evil of sin, but we should briefly observe that it is the sanctuary of the Almighty, for the same reason, since our minds and hearts were also given us by God, and we are responsible to him, it is just that we should offer him the tribute of our adoration with pride and thanksgiving, and that we should, in obedience, obey

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. FRASS. . . . . MONITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and solutions for the corresponding department. Address all communications to

FRANK J. McFUN,
140 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

PUZZLES.

For the best batch of five Sub-answer puzzles contributed to Leisure Hours, the MONITOR is offered for one year.

For the best batch of three Sub-answer puzzles, the MONITOR is offered for six months.

For the best enigma contributed, the MONITOR is offered for three months.

Special.

For the second best in each of the above, "Look" when Safe it's Aside for one year, six months, and three months respectively.

All unpublished enigmas of this competition must be marked "for competition," and must reach us on or before May 7, 1884.

Capt. N. Frask.

—PRO-CONSULTIS—

Answers to Leisure Hours No 38.

1st.—Hemp-dew. 7th.—Wild-eyed.
2d.—ARAPAOUS 8th.—F
ARRIVE ERE
PRIVATE REV
ARRIVE REGULR BIAS REGULAR ORE LATIN
ER ROC
I 9th.—Avenue.
3d.—Ida. 10th.—FOODELL
4th.—HEARTBELT OVERHEAR ENTHUSIAST OVERHEAR
ENTHUSIAS BREMEN
ENTHUSIA BREMEN
ENTHUSI LEIPZIG
ENTHUSIA LEIPZIG
ENTHUSIAS LATVIA
ENTHUSIAST LATVIA
5th.—Open. 11th.—Dark-cone.
6th.—COMBERMERE
MEMBERSHIP
MEMBERSHIP
BEHEADS
HUADES
HATES
ATES 12th.—P
ES COS
S ORNIS
D ORNITHOS
COMPOSER
POTTERNOSES
ASTORES
MORES
RES
S

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No 37 solved were by Miss Stephen, Miss E. Samson, "J. M." S. A. Hopper, Spinnard, Junius, Madeline and Hawthorne, Oakland, Chemist, Redwood, James Flynn, F. G., Los Aloe, May R., Sensitive, Sunset, Sun Proof, Emerald, Intrepid, Hay, Joe C., Shade, Summer, Lemon, Dreadnaught, Ida, Hopeful, Sunset, Oroville, Orange, Cupid and Hollis Cooley.

Best 15-Puzzle set, named—eleven days out.

NUMBER LXXXVII.

Prize 3.—Separate from an established church. 4. They who dissent. (G.) 5. Reason. 6. Tormentors. 7. Tracks. 8. Sensible trout.

Down.—1. A letter. 2. A pronoun. 3. To spread. 4. A job. 5. A blunder. (Big. 2. Tyrannous. (G.) 7. To lay out. (G.). 8. To remain. 9. One who differs in opinion. 10. They who dissent. 11. They who intend. 12. Dogs that roam place. 13. Offensive. 14. Carnivorous animals. 15. They who rest or remain. 16. German poet and philosopher, 1781-1856. 17. English statesman, 1805-1869. (Big.) 18. New style. (Little.) 19. A letter.

Lawrence, Mass. A. F. HOLT.

☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.

Toto-a-Toto.

HAZEL KIRKE.—The previous stones have been find for an early insertion.

CHARADE.—Your "Hope" will arrive soon, as all of yours have been accepted.

BERTHA.—Your charade of No. 79 were received from Goose Quill, Redstone, Gertrude.

Solution.—Will put them all through in detail soon. The A. B. C. batch will appear in next number.

DORA THORNE.—Your contributions, which were intended for Land Work, are too large and difficult for the supporters of that department. They have been transferred to Literary Horse, hence the appearance of the diamond as the 4th item.

POEM.—I would call your attention to the Ist Lesson, which is one of the best and longest pyramids composed. The next commendable form is the 5th lesson, by A. F. Hall, which is a gem of the richest hue. "Last but not least" is A. F. Hall has honored Leisure Hours with a ten-letter Eight Rhomben, (Reversed Rhomboid) which is the second one in succession and is the first ten-letter rhomben published—the other form being in the hands of Mystic, of "numbered-no." I have on hand from A. F. Hall, a beautiful gem of a Double Diamond and a batch of twenty-four 7-letter squares which I think will for the sixteenth lesson.

Mystic Minstrel.

—"Cash and other prizes are now (and have been) offered in the New Age (Geo. E. Newby "Hop Bitters"), but never awarded."—The Mystic Star.

—The Mystic Star for more than a year has had much puzzle journal contents, and yet we have received no "cash and other prizes." Notes from our exchanges, Editorials, and a department called Starlight, which is edited by Rachel Bell.

EASTERN STATE LEAGUE.

The Pioneers of New York and Brooklyn Puzzlers formed the 7th meeting of the Eastern State Puzzlers' League was held on Sunday, April 13, at the residence of "Jo Cook" at the Manor, sixteen members being present. The following officers were elected: President, J. Cooper; 1st Conn'l Vice President, J. Delaney; 2d Conn'l Vice President, Sergeant; J. Hall; Recording Secretary, J. R. Hackenbush; Cor. Sec'y, Jo Cook; Editor, Oldest Editor, J. Frankish ("Nestor")—The Mystic Star.

The latest addition to our puzzle literature is the Industrious Puzzler, a monthly, edited by Sudbury, N. Y. Its contents are "Chas. H. Keyes" (Memoriam.) "Puzzle Contest," "Answers to Puzzles," "Up the Creek," and "Puzzle Meadow" which contains numbers items. Page 7 contains a Dictionary and Gazetteer. Puzzles and 1 are devoted to The Mystic Circle, (edited by "Marmion,") which contains some good puzzles. For 50 cents you can receive the Industrious Puzzler for one year, Address, Charles H. Keyes, No 1 Board of Trade Building, Sudbury, N. Y.

—The great Medium remedy, Dominica Bitters.

JOHN A. LENNON,
Wholesale Grocer,
AND IMPORTER OF
Choice Brands
Japan and English Breakfast Tea.
☞ Agent for Pipes, White Seamless Oyster Cans, Fairbanks' Lard, Pure Olive Oil for Sacramental Purposes, and Pure Olive Oil for Machinery. Nos. 202 and 204 Clay Street, San Francisco.

WOODEN MANTELS.
R. HERING,
Manufacturer of
Fine Furniture, House, Bank and Office Fittings.
420 and 422 FOURTH St., San Francisco.
☞ DESIGNS FURNISHED. ☜

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Dangerous Case.

. . . Rochester, June 1, 1882. "Ten Years ago I was attacked with the most intense and deadly pains in back and . . . Kidneys.

"Extending to the end of my toes and to my brain!

"Which made me delirious!

"From agony.

"It took three men to hold me on my bed at times!

"The Doctors tried in vain to relieve me. But to no purpose.

"Morphine and other opiates

"Were used in vain!

"After two months I was given up to die!

"When my wife

"Induced me to try Hop Bitters! I had heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain.

"The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for long months before. Before I had used five bottles, I was well and at work, as hard as ever I could, for over three weeks! And I attribute my success, my strength, and taking a hard cold, I got laid up with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system that was ever known! I could not move the bottom half, and after several weeks, they left me a cripple on crutches, and so they lay! I took a friend and told him my case, and he told me to stick at it! I then sent for more! Hop Bitters! Rev. Ex-Governor.

"That poor invalid wife

"Sister!

"Mother!

"Or Daughter!

"Can be made the picture of health!

"With a few bottles of Hop Bitters!

"Will you let them suffer?"

CARROLL & TILTON,
Respectfully announce that they have opened
THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—WITH A LINE OF—
GENT'S ^ BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.
Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.
We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible
CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And late with JONES & CO.

WARD & O'BRIEN'S
Male and Female
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.
608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.
ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Girls, Pure Hands, Good Cooks, Good Hands, Gardeners, Coachmen, etc. Hotel Complete in private families and vicinity. Also, good, reliable Help made Help, without any charge to employers. Satisfying results or labor and fare to Stockton.

ORIENTAL
Atlantic Steam-Ship Agency,
613 MARKET STREET, 613.
Tickets sold over ALL Atlantic Steam-ship Lines
AT LOWEST RATES.
PARTIES DESIRING TO RECEIVE PREPAID remittances from the old country can do so by applying to Hayden Kyle, Agent for forwarding him money or send Drafts issued on England, Ireland and the Continent.
C. E. BORTON, Assistant Agent.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.
MANUFACTURERS OF—
Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes,
511 and 513 California Street.
Safes made to order and other uses. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

ESTABLISHED 1858.
J. O'KANE,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN
HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,
And Everything necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.
Boots and Shoes Soldiery a Specialty
Nos. 615 and 617 Clay Street, San Francisco.
☞ Inquiring promptly attended to.
767 MARKET ST
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA
Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for ladies. Can refer to all the principal Bankers and Merchants on the Pacific Coast.

BOOTS AND SHOES.
BOOTS AND SHOES.
JOHN SULLIVAN,
NORTHEAST COR. OF BATTERY AND JACKSON Sts., where he will be found to sell the best French Calf Leather BOOTS, at from . . . $7 00
California Leather Boots 6 00
French Calf School Boots 4 50
California 3 50
Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order. Repairing and Repairing done neatly and to the satisfaction of their patrons. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention.

THE CATHOLIC BOOK HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
Is happy to announce to the Catholics of the Pacific Coast that he has now opened—in connection with his San Jose Establishment, a Branch House at
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Where he will keep constantly on hand
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
OF
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
COMPRISING
Miscellaneous and Controversial Works, Prayer Books, Etc., Etc.
SHEET MUSIC
The Largest Stock on the Coast.
☞ Sole Agent for Benkert's Sons, F. A. North, and other Music Publishers. Catholic Sunday School Books, Manuals and Student Compositions for Catholic services.
PIANOS AND ORGANS!!
CRUCIFIXES, CROSSES AND STATUARY.
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In French, Spanish, German and Italian; at all prices from 25 cents to $25.
☞ Orders by mail from any portion of the Pacific Coast promptly attended to and filled at LOWEST CASH PRICES.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
The Catholic Book House of the Pacific Coast,
737 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
And First Street, San Jose, - - California.
☞ PIANOS ORGANS WANTED. ☜

FUN AND FROLIC AT FAIRFAX!
—THE—
PICNIC OF THE SEASON!
A Pleasant Ride!
A Delightful Day!
PICNIC IN THE PARK, AND SPORTS IN THE PAVILION!
ALL FOR ONE DOLLAR.
14TH ANNUAL PICNIC
— OF THE —
St. John the Baptist Society and Sunday Schools
(Connected with the Holy St. Catholic Church.)
—WILL TAKE PLACE AT—
FAIRFAX, Wednesday, May 14th, 1884.
CHILDREN'S TICKET, (Round Trip) 50c.
Boats leave San Francisco at 8:30 and 10:45. Returning, leave Fairfax at 5:15.
☞ Bring your Baskets and Babies and enjoy the SPORTS ON THE GREEN. Listen to the BAND playing, and enjoy a share of the numerous VALUABLE PRIZES.

CUT THIS OUT AND KEEP IT FOR REFERENCE.

Duplex Galvanic Belt.
THE UNPARALLELED EFFECTS OF THIS MEDICAL belt in the cure of Nervous Weakness and Prostration, Impotency, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Constipation and all Liver and Kidney Diseases, is attested by thousands who have been cured by it. It is worn with perfect ease by the weakest person. It is adapted to self-treatment, and cures at home. Full instructions go with every belt. Price of belt, complete, under same as Electric, $10. Sent prepaid on receipt of price, or C. O. D. if desired. Address DUPLEX GALVANIC CO., 1122 BROADWAY, (311 Sutter street), San Francisco, Cal.

CATHOLIC PICTURE STORE!
D. J. QUIRK,
Importer and Manufacturer of
Pictures, Mirrors and Frames,
Steel Engravings, Etc.,
121 FOURTH ST.,
Bet. Mission and Howard Sts., San Francisco.
☞ Frames of every description made to order. Satisfaction guaranteed. Lowest Prices. Call and see. Goods sold on the Installment Plan.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA . . . . CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of preparing for young ladies, a solid, extensive, a moral and Intellectual education, equal to any institution particular that should claim for this Academy, in the influence accorded to form the pupils for views and habits of thought, and to render them useful members of society in after years.
The next scholastic year commences on the beginning of August and ends in June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $50
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA . . . . CALIFORNIA
This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies an imposing building, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasium, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a fine complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Mechanics, Photography and Commercial Law.
For the latter a new building 196×40 has been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance:)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Washing, Bed and Bedding, per scholastic year, $250 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes, $ 40 00
Tuition in the 3d and 4th College Classes, 50 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes, 40 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes, $ 30 00
Tuition in the 3d and 4th College Classes, 40 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes, 30 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes, 15 00
Tuition (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons form extra charges, as in the Catalogue.
Bed and Bedding for pupils are given, good throughout, as also in Table and Bury Bedding.
N. B.—A private one-room is furnished, at moderate rates, for the convenience of parents residing in distant parts of the city.

School of the Holy Cross.
A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF CHARITY of Santa Cruz, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. For other particulars address
BRO. LADLAS, Director

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly declaimed and criticised by the class.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half-yearly in advance:)
Board, Tuition and Washing $250 00
Entrance Fee, ... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicine 10 00
Vaccination at College, ... 50 00
Use of Bed and Bedding, ... 50 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETTELIN, President.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY.
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated on the Sacramento River, opposite the town of Rio Vista. The grounds are extensive, and the building new, and well furnished with all the conveniences for the health and comfort of the inmates. The climate, grounds are extensive, and well adapted to the purpose, and the course of instruction embraces all the useful branches of a solid education, combined with the ornamental accomplishments of a finished education.
The next scholastic year will begin on the first Monday in August, and end in June.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per annum, $200 00
Use of Bed and Bedding, ... 20 00
Music (private lessons), ... 20 00
Drawing in Crayon, Painting, French, Plain and Fancy Needlework do not form extra charges.
For further particulars address
SISTER MARY ANGELA, Superior.

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND, . . . CALIFORNIA.
CONDUCTED BY
The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding a view of the Bay of San Francisco. Its site is supplied with all the modern improvements—its grounds have been spared to provide for the comfort of the boarders.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly in advance:)
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included, free of extra charge) . . . . $ 200
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution) 10
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Plain Work form extra charges.
For further particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIORESS

COLLEGE
OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, HAS received from the State Legislature, and endorsed with the Public Confidence of similar Colleges throughout the Pacific Coast.
Reference required. For terms and particulars address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE,
Twelfth and K streets,
SACRAMENTO . . . . . CAL.
A LIMITED NUMBER OF BOARDERS RECEIVED. A fancy facility for acquiring a sound thorough education and, at the same time, enjoying the comforts of a refined home. Address
SISTER MARY ANGELA, Directress.
For particulars apply to
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY
Golden Gate Ave. San Francisco, Cal.
CONDUCTED BY
THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.
THIS ACADEMY PLEASANTLY SITUATED in the Western Addition, affords every opportunity to a thorough and Christian education. Two miles of ample ground, form the extensive playground for the pupils, who may enter at any time. All communications should be addressed
SISTER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.
THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1868, chartered in 1875 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Jones street, opposite the Old Mission Church.
The course of instruction embraces all a thorough education may require to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per annum, ... $300 00
Use of Instrument for practice, ... 20 00
EXTRA CHARGES.
Piano, with use of Instrument per annum, $60 00
Vocal Music, per annum, ... 30 00
Tuition in "Private Lessons" " 30 00
Drawing, per annum, ... 30 00
Painting in Oil, per annum, ... 30 00
Painting in Water Colors, per annum, ... 30 00
Graduating Fee, ... 20 00
Physician's Fee, when required, ... 10 00
Bed and Bedding, per annum, ... 50 00
Fills are presented and are payable at the close of each half session, in advance.
SELECT DAY SCHOOL.
Terms per month (paid in advance.)
Tuition in the 1st and 2d College Classes $ 20
Tuition in the 3rd and 4th College Classes, 25
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes, 15
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes, $ 10
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Grammar Classes, 12
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes, 10
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Primary Classes, 12
Tuition (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons form extra charges, as in the Catalogue.
Bed and Bedding for pupils are given, good throughout, as also in Table and Bury Bedding.
N. B.—A private one-room is furnished, at moderate rates, for the convenience of parents residing in distant parts of the city.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,
SAN LUIS OBISPO . . . CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG Ladies, conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy Heart of Mary.
This house is the Novitiate of the order.
SISTER MARY CRESCENTIA, Directress.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE . . . . CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING THE MOST ample facilities for a thorough education to receive a solid and refined education, was incorporated in 1861, in the usual form, by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the Trustees were empowered to confer the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions.
It occupies large Buildings, with extensive playgrounds; and possesses every thing to ensure material comfort and advantage. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the branches usually taught in the Schools of the Sisters of Notre Dame.
Every facility will be afforded to students wishing to pursue the Ornamental branches, and to devote their whole time to music or the study of the languages.
The next Scholastic year will open on the first Monday in August and close about the first week in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, (payable in advance.)
Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Assisted Spanish, German, and Latin, washing and use of bedding, ... $ 75
Drawing (per quarter), ... 5
Painting in Oil, (per lesson), ... 3
Painting in Water Colors, (per lesson), ... 3
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
For further particulars, address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
San Jose, California.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
BENICIA . . . . CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Mercy, and affords all that is the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The school is conducted on the Monthly system, terms on the 1st of August, and on about the 1st of Feb.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly.)
Board and Tuition, ... $225
Entrance Fee, ... 10
Washing, ... 30
Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation, is charged
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

Convent of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary,
GILROY, . . . CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, CONDUCTED BY the religious sisters of the R. H. and I. H. of Mary. For terms, etc., apply to the
MOTHER SUPERIORESS

URSULINE ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
The Fourth Annual Session begins
AUGUST, 1884.
For Prospectus and full particulars, Address
SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINES,
Santa Rosa, Cal.

BEATTY'S PIANOS $7 upwards $125. Pianos, $297 upwards. Organs, $65 upwards. Illustrated Catalogue free. Address BEATTY, Beatty, Washington, N.J.

MONITOR MENTION.

—Dr. Marie A. Burch, dentist, 105 Sutter street.

—Fast Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724½ Market street.

—Dr. Wong, 200 Geary street. Office hours—8 to 9 A. M.; 1 to 3 and 6 to 7 P. M.

—Wanted—Ladies to board, and warranted, 50c. Wanzek, 139 Third street.

—Occidental Dental Association, 325 Sutter street. Admission free. Best of work. Filling from $1 upwards, and gold plate, of which we make a specialty. 21.

—Dr. Smith's Chloride Tooth Oil is sure to take the first place among tooth powders.

—Rev. Pemberton, 904 Howard street. Money saved for any length of time, on Clothing, Furniture, Jewelry, Bedding and all household articles. Business private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. Cor. Emmy and Geary streets.

—Odorite Tooth Oil is the most wonderful pain killer ever of the 19th century. A single application will instantly convince you.

—If's set for health—warranted as good as cast iron, Teeth-billed, $1. Dr. Simms, Dentist, 825 Market street.

—"I am 15—had suffered over 40 years with rheumatism. Dr. Smith's Chloride Tooth Oil cured me when every remedy failed."—AN OLD VETERAN.

—Dr. J. F. Porter, dentist, 771 Market street, S. F. 8 years practice in Eastern cities. Preservation of natural teeth a specialty. Also, gold and aluminum plates.

—The Prescott House, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under the proprietorship of Mr. J. W. Barbe, continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. The rooms are good and well cared for. Rates are from $1 to $1 50 day, or less by the week. Transient trade solicited. Good and country readers will find the Prescott cheap, central and comfortable.

—The National Surgical Institute, 819 Bush street, cor. Stockton, Western Division of the U. S. Surgical Institute, Philadelphia, which has so celebrated the cure of all deformities, such as Hip Disease, Curvature of the spine, hip, knee, and all joints crooked limbs, Club feet, Wry neck, Spine and Joints, Catarrh, Deafness, Piles, Fistula, and all diseases of the rectum, Tumors, Cancers, Epilepsy, and all diseases of the eye, ear, throat and lungs. Consultation free. Office hours, 9 to 4 P. M. Sundays, 10 to 12 M.

—Mr. Jules Lambla, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of J. B. Cox, in the General Employment Office, 315 Geary street. This firm was established in 1862, and has been continued ever since. Mr. Lambla will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lambla, who has for years managed the best facilities for supplying families with the city or country with the most competent and trustworthy help, both general, educational or ship help. Help of any kind desired by employers, can be supplied at once or period to J. Jules Lambla, 315 Geary street, S. F., describing the kind of help required and your wants will be faithfully attended to satisfactorily.

—The Wonder Flower and Feather Store, No. 103 Market street, is now in the 7th year of its existence, and is daily gaining custom and popularity. They may be set up very cheap at some of their fine flowers and feathers for latter half year. The ladies can rely on being served in the latest and most fashionable styles, and the prices of the various attractions are only half new prices. The proprietors are always ready to show any goods to visitors and customers.

—Leiner's Photograph Gallery, 25 Third street. Italian pictures a specialty. Taken on the premises by new process. Cabinets $1 per dozen. Instantaneous guaranteed.

—Dandyline Bitters revitalize the stomach and the best body.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.

The Order C. K. of A., has already over 500 branches, at about 15,000 members all over the United States, has pay $5,000 at the death of a member. Has Insurance Department, with Policies of $1,000 and $2,000 at Endowment and Insurance, and Premium of Insurance, has a general benefit fund, and a Relief Fund, which is a Life Insurance Fund, and is the Insurance Department of the San Francisco Branch No. 2 C. K. Schools, 1020 Market St. San Francisco.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces quiet, healthy sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button" after a good night's rest. This invaluable preparation is the prescription of one of the most skillful female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used with never failing success in millions of families for over thirty years. It corrects acidity of the stomach, relieves wind colic, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

—Dr. Bunsen's drops are unpleasant and look small, where smaller quantities of medicine are required, and yet retain its virtues. Dr. Bunsen's drops are unknown Warranted safe to wash or rub off. Be sure to get Dr. Bunsen's Perfecting Drops. Sold by druggists. Bottle plain, San Francisco, Cal. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 25 cents. Address Dr. Bunsen's Perfecting Drops, San Francisco, Cal.

—A possible cure for Dyspepsia, drink Dumlaus Bitters.

ROGERS PATENT AND SOLD BY A BOTTLE $1 00 Druggists.

LEGAL NOTICE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT IN AND FOR THE City and County of San Francisco, State of California. Department No. 10. Action filed the 1st day of MARY FITZSIMMONS, administrix of the estate of MARY FITZSIMMONS, deceased, plaintiff, vs. MARY FITZSIMMONS, administrator, defendant. To MARY FITZSIMMONS, administrator of the estate of MARY FITZSIMMONS, deceased, defendant: Proceed forthwith to make a full, true, and perfect inventory and appraisement of all the estate, goods, chattels, rights, credits, and effects, of said deceased, and to render and file the same in the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on or before the 30th day of MAY, 1884, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. of said day, at the Court Room of said Court, in said City and County, and to render your account of your administration of said estate to the 30th day of MAY, 1884, at the hour and place aforesaid, and to do and perform such other and further duties as are required by law and the orders of said Superior Court, in the premises. Witness, the Hon. JOHN WALSH, Judge of said Superior Court, and the seal of said Court, this 12th day of April, 1884. Witness my hand and the seal of said Court, this 12th day of April, 1884.
J. V. COFFEY,
Judge of the Superior Court.

QUICK TIME AND CHEAP FARES
To Eastern and European Cities
Via the Great, Time-transversal All rail Route,
CENTRAL PACIFIC R. R.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC R. R.
Fully Express and Baggage Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East, connecting by
New York & New Orleans
TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.
PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS
attached to Overland Express Trains.
THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS
are now daily with Overland Emigrant Trains.
Reduced charge for Berths in Third class Cars.
☞ Tickets sold, Sleeping or Berths secured, and other information given upon application at the Company's office, where passengers calling to purchase tickets should or recheck, also.
RAILROAD LANDS
NEVADA, CALIFORNIA AND TEXAS,
For Sale on Reasonable Terms.
Apply by, or address,
W. H. MILLS, Land Agent, C. P. R. R., S. F.
H. H. ANDREWS, Land Commissioner, U. R. R. & R. Co., San Antonio, Texas.
T. H. HOPKINS, Gen'l Pass'r Agt. S. P. R. R. Co., S. F.
A. N. TOWNE, General Manager, S. P. R. R. Co., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. H. H. STEVENS,
DENTIST,
REMOVED TO 166 Third St., San Francisco.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PACIFIC STEAM
CARPET BEATING
And Renovating Works.
WHITENING
In all its branches Thoroughly and Promptly Done.
OAKLAND BRANCH—Twenty-first street and Telegraph ave. Prompt attention will be given to orders sent to 337 Telegraph ave.
333 GOLDEN GATE AVE.
CONKLIN BROS., Proprietors.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST. SAN FRANCISCO.
Life Scholarships $70.
☞ SEND FOR CIRCULAR ☜

WHITE STAR LINE U. S. ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS,
Between New York, Queenstown and Liverpool.
These steamers are among the largest and fastest afloat, and noted for the regularity of their rapid passages between New York and Liverpool, as well as for the comfort they afford to their passengers. Tickets issued from all the English, Irish and Scottish ports, at low rates. For freight or cabin passage apply to the agents of the line, in Liverpool, Messrs. IMMAY & SONS; in Queenstown, Messrs. JOHN MCKORKELL; in New York, Messrs. WM. LUTHER BORDEN & SONS, 69 Broadway.
E. DONNELLY, M. D.,
Physician, Surgeon and Accoucheur
OFFICE AND RESIDENCE.
150 FOURTH ST.
Cor. Howard, S. F.
OFFICE HOURS: 8 to 10 A. M.; 1 to 4 P. M. and Evening.
☞ Surgical Operations a Specialty.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND, - - - PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FULSOM,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,013½ barrels.

ASK FOR
BROOK'S SOFT FINISH SPOOL COTTON

UNDERTAKERS.

ATKINS MASSEY,
UNDERTAKER.
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKER, Barclay's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fisk's Metallic Burial Cases.
Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, as undertaker is always ready. Office, 501 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

R. H. BYERS & CO.,
Undertakers and Embalmers,
138 VALENCIA STREET.
☞ Bodies Embalmed for Shipment.

T. S. O'CONNOR. T. H. SHEEHY.
O'CONNOR & SHEEHY,
UNDERTAKERS,
767 Mission Street,
Bet. Third and Fourth, . . . San Francisco
Every Requisite for Funerals furnished at the Lowest Rates and in the Best Manner.

TRAIN PLANNER.
FLANAGAN & GALLAGHER,
UNDERTAKERS,
No. 29 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.
EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

UNITED UNDERTAKERS
—AND—
Embalming Parlors,
27 and 29 FIFTH ST.
Telephone No. 2107.

SAMUEL OGLE. C. A. WEDEL. J. A. CLAUSEN.
N. Gray & Co.,
UNDERTAKERS,
641 Sacramento Street,
Cor. Webb, ... San Francisco
EMBALMING.
☞ Metallic Burial Cases and Caskets

NEW YORK HAT STORE
C. BERTRAM & CO.,
632 FEARNY ST.
(Third door of New York Bakery.)
Fine Fur, Stiff, Soft and Cassimere
HATS,
At Factory Prices.
Children's Goods in Great Variety
J. F. CONDIT, ... Manager.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. HENLEY'S
CELERY BEEF IRON
(Vinum Apiatum Fortius Carne Ferro.)
(Tonic Nervine and Invigorator.)
(Physiological Tonic for the Blood, and Food for the Brain.)
A FABULOUS DISCOVERY.
Worth Millions to the Human Family—Celery as a Cure.
The habitual daily use of this vegetable in much more beneficial to man than most people imagine. The writer, who is familiar with its virtues, is acquainted with many men and women who owe their present good health, and in some instances their lives, to its use. Its effects are strengthened and their health they thank God upon it, but by a medicinal use of celery they become as strong in nerve as sound in limb, and are ready to do battle for the population of the land. To this day not one has ever received of Dr. Henley, of Portland, Oregon, a bottle of Celery, Beef and Iron, but has answered that the preparation relied upon by the proprietor, is the best that ever was prepared, and that it has done and is now doing good to the sick and suffering. Many have written to the proprietor, and have received from him the formula received, such a bottle is compounded, and the reply is the signature of every one who has written to him with unchanged mind. These testimonials are in his possession, and are ready for inspection. Celery, Beef and Iron is not a panacea, nor a patent medicine, nor even a secret remedy, but a compound of celery, beef and iron, which is the source of the human family. Prepared by the proprietor, Dr. H. Henley, Portland, Oregon.
MANUFACTURED BY
TUTHILL, COX & CO.
537 Clay Street, below Montgomery,
SAN FRANCISCO.

M. VULICEVICH
Importer and Wholesale Dealer in
FOREIGN & DOMESTIC FRUITS!
427 Front Street, 427
LATEST ARRIVAL OF CONSIGNMENTS—ALL KINDS OF Choice Fruits, Nuts, Prunes, Figs, Dates, Almonds, Raisins, Fresh Fruit, Sardines, Macaroni, Lima Beans, etc., etc.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS
YOU CAN BUY A WHOLE IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN
100 FLORINS
GOVERNMENT BOND,
DATED 1st JULY, 1864.
Which bonds are issued and guaranteed by the Government of Austria.
THREE TIMES ANNUALLY.
Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must be redeemed with a Premium, at the least sum of
THE THREE HIGHEST PREMIUMS AMOUNT TO
150,000 FLORINS,
30,000 FLORINS,
15,000 FLORINS.
And needs not, from among one of the above Premiums must be drawn a Premium of NOT LESS THAN 200 Florins.
The next Redemption takes place on the 2ND OF JUNE, 1884. and every bond bought of us on or before the first of June, participates

DEAD TO THE WORLD.

Declination of a Resolution Remembering Ladies in Gilding and Refined Gold—Mother Shipton—Which the Question may not Much even when Asleep.

On a recent Sunday morning Mr. Bishop Wagner of Kentucky blessed the new Sun St. Dominic's Cathedral, which has just been completed by the Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic in that city. The ceremony is described by the Louisville Courier-Journal as follows:

Bishop Wagner read the pontifical mass, and the Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic's Cathedral, Father O'Rourke, to be in a copy of manuscript which he gave to the Old Virginia. The reason, the fact that it is the only house of the order in America, and the sentiment for which the nuns have already begun to and there, crowded beside the tabernacle of the Sacred Heart, and the sanctuary of the order in France, and four years ago, by the Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic, the other order into the United States. With them the Sisters of the Second Order of St. Dominic, an Ursuline convent, Kansas. He has now fifteen sisters, and the Sisters of the Second Order of the order in America. He informed the reporter that the Sisters of the Second Order in France, which for four years was a special act of favor from the Pope, and the Sisters of the Second Order have received their perpetual benediction. It was the first time that the Sisters of the Second Order have been conferred over the establishment of a house of the order in America, and it is a matter of a building terrible or mysterious in the student.

THE NUNS AND BURNED VOTES.

Mr. Bishop Wagner, accompanied the Bishop of the diocese, who spoke one visit a year, is all, he said, he was glad to see the Sisters of the Second Order of the Second Order of the Second Order

Poetry.

MONTH OF MAY.

AUSPICATIONS TO OUR BLESSED LADY FOR THE MONTH OF MAY.

Joy of my heart! O let me pay
To thee thine own sweet month of May.
Mary! one gift I beg of thee,
My soul from sin and nerve free.
Direct my wandering feet aright,
And be thyself my light by night.
Be love of thee the purging fire,
My incense for God my heart's desire.
Mother of God! let my poor love,
A mother's prayers and pity move.
Oh Mary, when I come to die,
Be thou my spouse, and I your sigh.
Sweet Daughter! let thy beauty be
A light to draw my soul to thee.
Oh Joan, Joseph, Mary, dolps
Shall be heavenly steps to hope.
Oh, Queen of heaven! obtain for me
The glory three one day to see.
Mother of God! let my poor love,
Vouchsafe a maiden's street crown.

Write on my heart's most secret core,
Jesus, Mary, Joseph, that Jesus love.
One more request, and I have done:
Let Jesus, Mary, and Joseph be my one.

Rose let me have, and rose let me pray,
Till love of self is lost in love's sway.

—Rev. Joseph F. Dean.

Poetry.

Poetry is that which holds their children's Hearts in thrall by its music and golden hale,
Its pictures, its pathos, its wit, its wisdom
Its fancy, its fancy, its fancy, its fancy.

But God is good to all the tender creatures,
Giving to each a little share of the pleasure
Through poetry, through the gift of the present
Through music.

Yet never can they quench the hope within,
Yes, God is very good to tender mothers,
Who see in their children the golden hoard
Of him who plays among life's earliest roses,
Then kneel to God, and bless, and then are glad.

Yet who, the model of all earthly mothers,
Who, in her sweetness, is the golden hoard
That, though they's little plays with blessing
The even most sense, for all her powerful bliss.

To look—He slept—upon His mossy eyelids,
And know that they should come upon the Tree,
To gaze upon His smooth and stainless forehead
And know that blows great drops of blood should be.

To catch the dimpled hands and softly warm them
At a mother's gentleness, and then, yet pale,
See the bad priests on their tender clothes,
Then, between and nerve her Lamb from being slain.

When mothers watch beside their children's cradles
And dream bright dreams for them of joy and
Let them remember Mary's trust through anguish,
And with all blessings through the Holy Mother.

Literary Miscellany.

Good For Evil.

A CAPTIVATING CATHOLIC STORY WITH A MORAL TO IT.

The prettiest cottage in all Sedgefield was John Hartley's; but the garden, with its lilies, and roses, and hollyhocks, was more to be admired, and this was Bessie's work—her own great, clumsy, but willing hands, and her own, or rather, "mother's" as she, on purpose to ward off praise, would make out, kind, and make and mater; to tie up the flowers which the wind had blown too roughly, or to gather the fruit which the sparrows had pecked, and some of the families who lived near, and I am sorry to say, envied Hartley his pretty girl when she could hand her mother a few choicest blooms, or a well carved bee hive out in the garden.

But and some of her friends could not help hinting that her flowers disappeared strangely in the night. She would look at them one day, and the next, they were all gone. Hartley was strongly taken in the night, and he had set a watch to see what it was that was so much admired by the passing fox.

"Mother, I caught the girl who stealing my flowers. She comes very early—before it's hardly light, and she sells them, mother. She's got a wretched home, and her little brother's crying for bread, and their father drinks and hell harrow them."

When Bessie Miller said this, there was a pensive questioning and examining from father, mother, brothers and sisters. Rich mold if he only sought the thief, "he'd pitch into him." Mrs. Miller wanted to know her name and where she lived and all about her, but Bessie Nelly owned to having promised her Nelly Morris to go to her home to take her food, but that which would cost money was walked and carried, and wondered what had come to Bessie.

"Why, Bessie, you look as if you had seen a ghost!" said Mrs. Hartley.

"Mother, I've promised to go home, child!" said her father. "That's a queer sort of way to do, Bessie! I'm going to try and lay hands upon and give her a good punishment!"

"Oh, father, don't!" cried Bessie. "I was so angry at first, I'd like to see her punished there. But when she told me of her little brother, her face looked quite different, and I'm sure there was tears in her eyes. She wouldn't steal if it was not for them. And hell oppression, as dirty, ragged and slipshod as ever. She took to me and I promised to go home with her little mother, and I left down by the side of her little bed, and I prayed for her eyes can never have imagined. I'm sure I'd be afraid to take my food to such a place, and I'm sure I'd never have imagined."

"Pooh! there's no money of it that I know of," said Hartley, "and I'm sure I'm not in a hurry to make my flower-garden a place for thieves."

"Pooh!" echoed the girl; "I'd like to have you'd say to our place—where my little brother's dying for food, and my mother's dead and I've none to give him, and I'm left to the cruel cries and I can't bear it. You'd steal flowers, or anything else you could sell, if you was in my place."

Bessie looked at the girl. Yes, she certainly had a ragged, starving look. "Don't you father and mother mind the pay?" she asked.

"Mother's dead, dear Harry was 'most a baby. Father only beats us, and thinks we lazy. He's at work and some times not."

Bessie was cooling down from her bad hour very angry, but now she was getting to feel sorry for the miserable-looking girl at her side.

"You can keep those flowers you've got to your apron," she said gravely.

"I can! I mean to, you may be sure," answered to other, laughing. "I'm didn't suppose a slip of a thing like you'd get them from me, did you?"

"Bessie's face flushed. She couldn't bear to be laughed at. "I could ask my father or Bob to some after you," she answered, "but I'm not going to. I'm sorry for you because you are so poor and ragged, and I'm sorry for your little brother.

"Well, then, give me some of them strawberries! I see growing over yonder in the hazes. I watched you picking of 'em; I meant to get some for Harry."

"You mustn't stand there," said Bessie. "If you'll be a good girl, and leave my garden alone, I'll ask mother to let me come and see you and Harry, and bring you some fruit, shall I?"

The girl nodded. "I lives over the common! there's no house near you, you can't mistake; its a tumble-down sort of place, and all the windows is broke, so you'll know it; my name's Nelly Morris.

"Well I'll come if mother 'll let me," said Bessie. "Good-bye; and she went back so her strawberry-picking still breakfast was ready, but all her thoughts were with Nellie Morris and her little brother.

"Mother, I caught the girl who stealing my flowers. She comes very early—before it's hardly light, and she sells them, mother. She's got a wretched home, and her little brother's crying for bread, and their father drinks and hell harrow them."

When Bessie Miller said this, there was a pensive questioning and examining from father, mother, brothers and sisters. Rich mold if he only sought the thief, "he'd pitch into him." Mrs. Miller wanted to know her name and where she lived and all about her, but Bessie Nelly owned to having promised Nelly Morris to go to her home to take her food, but that which would cost money was walked and carried, and wondered what had come to Bessie.

"Why, Bessie, you look as if you had seen a ghost!" said Mrs. Hartley.

"Mother, I've promised to go home, child!" said her father. "That's a queer sort of way to do, Bessie! I'm going to try and lay hands upon and give her a good punishment!"

"Oh, father, don't!" cried Bessie. "I was so angry at first, I'd like to see her punished there. But when she told me of her little brother, her face looked quite different, and I'm sure there was tears in her eyes. She wouldn't steal if it was not for them. And hell oppression, as dirty, ragged and slipshod as ever. She took to me and I promised to go home with her little mother, and I left down by the side of her little bed, and I prayed for her eyes can never have imagined. I'm sure I'd be afraid to take my food to such a place, and I'm sure I'd never have imagined."

"Pooh! there's no money of it that I know of," said Hartley, "and I'm sure I'm not in a hurry to make my flower-garden a place for thieves."

"Pooh!" echoed the girl; "I'd like to have you'd say to our place—where my little brother's dying for food, and my mother's dead and I've none to give him, and I'm left to the cruel cries and I can't bear it. You'd steal flowers, or anything else you could sell, if you was in my place."

Bessie looked at the girl. Yes, she certainly had a ragged, starving look. "Don't you father and mother mind the pay?" she asked.

"Mother's dead, dear Harry was 'most a baby. Father only beats us, and thinks we lazy. He's at work and sometimes not."

Bessie was cooling down from her bad hour very angry, but now she was getting to feel sorry for the miserable-looking girl at her side.

"You can keep those flowers you've got to your apron," she said gravely.

"I can! I mean to, you may be sure," answered to other, laughing. "I'm didn't

"No; she's cross, and I think I'm half sorry," said Nelly. "She hires a way off, but I go and beg a penny from her when I can. She's poor too."

"Where's your father?"

"Oh, he's gone off these three days. There's a fair somewhere, and I spose he's gone."

"Do you go to school, Nelly?"

"Sometimes, I don't think not, indeed. What's the use of it."

"Why, you can—"

"Yes, just a bit—as much as I want to."

Bessie couldn't understand such a girl as she; she hardly knew what to say next, so she felt it time to go home.

"Good-bye, Nelly," she said, "good-bye Harry. I'll come again if you like; and would you like a picture?"

"The little boy's face said "yes" though he did not speak; but when Bessie was gone he talked of her pleasant look and clean frock, and the strawberries and flowers, till Nelly was half crying.

"You care more for her than you do for me, Harry," said jealously.

"I don't said Harry. "You're good to me, Nell, and I love you best of everyone, but couldn't you have your face as clean as here? I'd like to see you look pretty, too."

Nelly declared she didn't want to be pretty but for all that, she took the hint, and two days after when Bessie went to the cottage, she was surprised to see the girl had not only a clean face, but that she had combed her hair and tied it with a bit of ribbon.

Bessie was quite taken with the change, she exclaimed, and she thought Nelly looked pretty, and the child looked eagerly at the basket she carried; but when she spoke her grey sky and tears had been away.

"Harry, don't cry. I've got something nice for you," said Bessie. "No answer; but look and see."

"Harry look at me! I told Nelly—you know Nelly—I'd bring you some strawberries, and Harry peered through his tangled hair and a smile shone over his little face. Bessie set up and ate the strawberries one by one, as if Nelly needed to be sure, until only a few were left.

"Now, Harry, I've got a little cake, and I've brought some milk in this bottle," said Bessie, "and I've brought some for you."

"Where is the," asked Bessie.

"He's gone to Grimsby, over in the town, to see if she'd give us anything. She's be in directly," and that minute the door was pushed, and Bessie's mother, ragged and slipshod as ever. She took no notice of Bessie, but she looked at the little mutterer, and knelt down by the side of her child and felt over in her eyes one could never have imagined. Bessie felt a sudden remembrance of if shocked Bessie when she was cross or quarrelsome with her little brothers at home.

"Harry, Harry, Granny sent you this," she said, picking out a piece of bread from the basket, and tasting it her pinafore; but Harry pushed it aside and held out his hand for the Bessie Bessie gave him.

"She's brought me these, Nell, and strawberries, and there's some left for you," said the girl.

The girl turned to Bessie then. "Thank you," she said, "I'm glad you're come. I want your things to eat more. I took a few this morning—they weren't many, Harry, and I'm sure I'm sorry for it, only there was nothing in the house, and I only wanted to keep you, and get some tea for Harry. I'll not do it again, though. Granny's given me twopence, and those bits of bread, and we'll get on for a day or two, and perhaps father will come home then."

"Will it there they choose to be bad."

"Why should He care!" Harry cried.

"Oh, He loves us all so," answered Bessie. "Like Nelly loves you, Harry, only better."

"Oh, He loves us all so," answered Bessie. "Like Nelly loves you, Harry, only better."

"Good-bye," said Bessie; but she did not say she would not come again. In a different way she was almost as angry as poor Nelly, and as she went home her thoughts were after this fashion:

"I won't go near the girl. She stole my flowers, and I forgave her; and I've been good to her and Harry, and she isn't one bit thankful to me; and then, when I was telling them about our Lord, and meaning to teach them nicely, she spoke to me like a fool, and I'm sure I'm not."

"Pride, Bessie," whispered conscience. "You were pleased with yourself for being kind; you were thinking how finely you were getting on, and what a good girl you were."

"I wasn't," Oh, how she disliked that troublesome voice of conscience just then! "I wasn't thinking anything of the kind."

"Then you ought to have been, for you had said the truth, that the way it was very disagreeable.

"Then I'm sorry for all the rest of the evening Bessie Miller was in a bad mood. Nothing went right.

"Have you been to the Morrises?" asked her mother.

"Yes, and I shan't go any more. I can't bear that Nelly."

"It was much a new, strange tone, that Mrs. Miller stared in surprise.

"Why?" "What's wrong! What's she been up to?"

"Nothing, mother; can't you let me be," and Bessie pettishly; and then she was straight spoken, and never showed her temper in this fashion, and her mother felt sure she must be called to get the little cross to bed. Then she was so sorry that they quarrelled, and stopped, and talked angrily, they did not have a time of it; and their mothers, who heard something was wrong, said to herself over and over again: "Whatever ails the child? I haven's seen her in such a temper! I don't know the day when."

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

The Magnitude of India.

Few people are aware of the magnitude of India, or comprehend that it contains some 50,000,000 more people than all Europe west of the Vistula. Few still know that it contains sixty-two sixth with a population of more than 100,000 inhabitants. Below the limit of 50,000 the towns become much more numerous, and there are hundreds with a population above 20,000. The majority of the latter are quite unknown to Europeans, unvisited by tourists or two excepted; and there is no book in the English which gives the slightest account of their organization or of the life and people in them. Yet many of them have histories of 2,000 years, and in all flourish families, which call themselves noble, and have long pedigrees and stirring tales to narrate.

—Many ladies admire gray hair—on some other people. But few are willing to try to effect an imitation of the color. For most they, since Ayer's Hair Vigor prevents the original color. It eliminates the scalp, preserves the hair from premature decay, and restores gray locks to their original color. It eliminates the scalp, preserves the hair from premature decay, and restores gray locks to their original color. It eliminates the scalp, preserves the hair from premature decay, and restores gray locks to their original color.

Fish in Ancient Rome.

The value of a Roman or Neapolitan gentleman's stock of fish was considerable. The fish in the ponds of Lucullus was estimated to be worth about £40,000 sterling. In those days the term "mullet mullet mullet" meant when whose fortunes were invested in mullets. Several refers to the size and value of these fish—

Six nearly pounds the mullet weighed,
Six pounds of Roman money they paid!

The mullet of that period (it is not certain, she adds, that they have been lost by mixing with any of the family known to us) were very numerous, and for a time were worth their weight in silver. A big mullet in the days of Horace was entoomed as being "a treasure among treasures;" the bigger the fish the greater the treasure, because large fish were singularly scarce. It is reported that on one occasion a mullet weighing 6 lbs. was presented to the Emperor Tiberius, who ordered it at once to be exhibited for sale in the public market, where it became the property of a Tetrarch at the price of 6,000 sesterces; and during the reign of Caius Antonius, Cotyr, of consular rank, bought one of these fish for the sum of 4,000 sesterces, which amounts in sterling money to about £50. These times that amount was often paid for a dish of mullet, and large sums were spent in procuring and multiplying this particular fish on the plea that it was a dish in great quite common, of artificial spawning and rearing. One noble Roman is reported to have expended his fortune in raising a tunnel through a mountain in order that the fish could be kept in a stream which neither preserves. C. Hirrius, who dealt in lamprey-fish, was nearly killed by a fall from his lamprey pounds. Lampreys were in Rome, as they are now, called Muræna, or Conger; Cassiodorus gives a description of the fish in his "Work of the Reparation said: This Repastum is a dainty, and is very rare, and is thrown into the ponds by Vellius Pollio, but food in Rome, and in the Vatican, and in the instruments of the Sacred Passion of our Blessed Lord. They are sent from three seasons, and are "extremely delicious." The seal of the Gung's of the Vatican. One of the holy lamentations, seen by the Sacred Carmelite Nuns of New Orleans to their loved friend, Mrs. Mary J. Holland, the gifted and pious author, well known for her valuable contributions to Catholic literature. All will, we feel sure, feel sympathetic in pursuing her beautiful reply of grateful thanks to the Carmelites for this gift of priceless value.

STONEBRIDGE, Madison County, N. Y.

DEAR AND REVEREND SISTERS—I promised you as soon as I got a little rested, I would tell you the feelings the blessed picture of the Holy Face gave me. I kindly sent to me, despite. The evening it came I was very busy at my books, and with your letter came two more from other beloved Religious, each letter fragrant with a little piece of relics. I read the letters, glanced gratefully at the souvenirs, and was about returning to my books, when I had to turn and look at yours again. It was decidedly simpler in style than the others; they were artistically inco-bordered, and, aside from their religious character, beautiful specimens of art. This had nothing of the kind, it was plain, perfectly plain; and yet it so once I felt as if I could understand how it was impossible to take my gaze off its holy lineaments.

The history of the Adorable Passion was so long before me, more than eighteen hundred years have passed since the Man had writing of sin was washed away in the Blood of Lamb. Yet, in these two instances, I seemed transported back to that far Sanctified; when the shrill shouts of "Crucify, Crucify Him!" rent the smoky air; when His chosen disciples had fled from Him in terror, and only faithful and weeping women remained to minister in the slightest companion for His great and terrible sufferings. Even at the foot of the miles of blasphemies, insults and cruelties, which had to pass over, I felt as if I could understand how it was that the Man of Sorrows, Who knew all, could yet pen a word to the adorable apostle."

Work of a Single Hair.

In the base of the Capitol at Washington is the engines by which the House, the Senate and committee rooms are warmed and ventilated in the winter time by electricity. It is a big apparatus, consisting of three immense fan-wheels, three great boilers, with the necessary appliances for regulating the temperature of the air supplied to the various apartments. The instrument which tells whether this air is too hot or too cold is no larger than a human hair. A perfectly dry air is put in style than the others; they were artistically inco-bordered, and, aside from their religious character, beautiful specimens of art. This had nothing of the kind, it was plain, perfectly plain; and yet it so once I felt as if I could understand how it was impossible to take my gaze off its holy lineaments.

The history of the Adorable Passion was so long before me, more than eighteen hundred years have passed since the Man had writing of sin was washed away in the Blood of Lamb. Yet, in these two instances, I seemed transported back to that far Sanctified; when the shrill shouts of "Crucify, Crucify Him!" rent the smoky air; when His chosen disciples had fled from Him in terror, and only faithful and weeping women remained to minister in the slightest companion for His great and terrible sufferings. Even at the foot of the miles of blasphemies, insults and cruelties, which had to pass over, I felt as if I could understand how it was that the Man of Sorrows, Who knew all, could yet pen a word to the adorable apostle."

Emblems of the Saints.

The following characteristics generally distinguished the Saints:

St. Peter, the keys and a triple cross, or sometimes a church. St. Paul, a sword, or sometimes a book; (Saturn), a lily, a pot filled flowers which is frequently placed between him and the Virgin Mary. St. John the Baptist, a long mantle and long wands surmounted by a small shaft, forming a cross, at least in most pictures. St. Jude, or impressed on a book in his hand. St. John the Evangelist, a chalice, with a cross and serpent issuing out of it, together with an open book. St. James the Greater, a staff and saw; St. Thomas, a spear; St. Simon, a saw in a boat; St. Matthew, a fuller's club; St. James the Less, a pilgrim's staff, book scrip, and hat, with an escallop shell upon it; St. Bartholomew a knife; St. Philip, a crosier; St. Anthony, a rosary on his mantle, and a pig at his feet, with a bell around his neck; St. Nicholas, a book with three or four naked infants in it; St. Margaret, standing on or piercing a dragon with a cross; sometimes she holds a book and she wears a crown; St. Clair, holding an expositorium; St. Appollonia, a palm branch and a tooth; St. Barbara, a palm branch, or tower where she was imprisoned; St. Mary Magdalen, dishevelled hair and a box of ointment; Mary Cleophas, her hair all around her; St Elizabeth, St. John and the Infant Jesus; St. Agnes, a lamb in her hand; St. Dorothy, a basket of fruit; St. Genevieve, pierced through with arrows; Edward the Confessor, crowned, a ring on his right, sometimes a spear; St. Edmund, pierced with arrows; St. Edward, piously habited, his right hand blessing, his left holding a sceptre; St. Louis, in royal robes and crosier, his hand elevated to give the benediction; St. Leonard, in a deacon's crosier; St. Christopher, a gigantic figure crossing a river, with the Infant Saviour on his shoulders; St. Christina, a stone in her hand, a book; Paul the Hermit, a long robe and sitting at the door of a cave, a book and gridiron; St. Michael, in armor, with a lance and shield; St. Francis, a Friar's dress with a figure half human, half angelic, issues from his heart, feet and hands, for he is a wonderful man; St. Clare, a Nun's veil, in a sicomaker's shop, St. Catherine, with a wheel or a spear, with the point downwards.

Bishops have the triple cross and anchor, or a triple cross and a dove descending in their ears. The exaltation of the Cross is represented by a king kneeling and worshiping the Cross, which is held by a person. The Holy Ghost is represented by a dove, or represented by a cross being lifted out of a hands amidst spectators. The Eleven Virgins are represented by young females crowned, and kneeling, and the Seven Virgins by a young person crowned.

The above are the principal subjects which are represented in the stained window of British monasteries, and which are very plainly preserved in some of our cathedral and parish churches.

The New Musical Critic.

The new musical critic of the Cranberry Clarion was a great rant. Nobody was gazed upon his gossamer limbs, his spectacles, his long hair and his Byronic dress, did not his hyacinthine locks into equal sections and part them in the bulging brow, could doubt this for an instant.

He was a genius, no earthly creature, however, had his double-shaded lamp burning near, but, as the musical critic had to write something, he had dipped his inspiration out of his inkstand and showed that young man the master spirits from nearly all the world. He was sitting, one evening, drawn with a full score under his arm and his heart beating with melodious anticipation.

Bettering, and having finished his critique, he leant back to the managing editor, who leant back to the managing editor, who leant back to the world. The young man was terribly nervous, for this was his first composition should be called "stand." However he bore up, and was great as he could under the circumstances and follows:

"The tuneful sweetness of the maestro's Chef d'oeuvre cannot be surpassed with more engaging regret do critics than by the silence of the Cranberry Clarion. The chromatic tints were laid on with a prodigality of fervor that rebilitated the appetites and spontaneous tears of the Cranberry Clarion."

"Stop!" exclaimed the managing editor, "what do you mean by all that?"

"I mean," performed the musical critic; "how do you suppose I know! I've delivered for the great deities, and nobody ever asked me what I meant, I'm sick of it."

The managing editor nodded, and the young musical critic—

"And apotheosized the contrapuntal tones with the enthusiastic exposition. Signor Screwbout, the prima donna, has given us her best voice, improved as it was by a slightly nervous tremolo, which gave to her and those incisive murmurs which tickle the ear of the Cranberry Clarion, and the lovers of the warbling music. Her embonpoint hides her beauty effective, and no words can hope to depict the ecstasy, or describe her delle fur mente in the bravura passage in the adagio movement."

"I don't catch on worth a cent," sadly murmured the managing editor, "but as you have worked on the great deities I suppose it all right."

The young man said "Yes," and went on.

"Signor Macaroni, the tenor assistito, stimulated with enthusiastic applause, advanced in solium by delirious ovation, and, and, and

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper Published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1884.

Answers to Some Objections to the Catholic Church.

SECOND ARTICLE.

The second objection brought against the Catholic Church by "J. M. B." is comprised in the following sentence:

"After the miraculous birth of our Lord, between nature around Bethlehem and Nazareth, there shall be no more marriage in Israel, with a family of sons and daughters."

Protestants who hold opinions akin to those held by "J. M. B." pretend to base their religious opinions upon the Bible, yet in the whole sacred volume, from Genesis to the Apocalypse, there is not a text that can be twisted—even by the most inventive ingenuity of the Mother of God—into casting a shadow on the married state of her spouse, Joseph, or upon the married state of Joachim and Anna, the parents of the Blessed Virgin. Yet, notwithstanding this, Protestant objections to married life are so common, and so many of our Protestant friends have so often asked us why we Catholics do not, that we have concluded to devote a few words to the subject, and to show, from the Bible, that the married state is not the only one in which the Mother of God had other children besides the Son of God, namely, the apostle James, the Just, and other children mentioned in the Gospels, and that the married state is not a state of sin, but, on the contrary, that it is a state which God Himself blessed, and which, when lived in accordance with the laws of God, and when not dishonored by the sin of adultery, is a state which God Himself has made holy, and which, when so lived, is a state which God Himself has made holy, and which, when so lived, is a state which God Himself has made holy, and which, when so lived

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. S. FRANK — EDITOR

All readers of the MONITOR are cordially invited to send original contributions and selections for this department. Address all communications to

100 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-GNOSTICATE.—

Answers to Literary Hours No 38.

1.—A, Mir, mirs, manles, mincrais, ale-ravoing, rainers, manous, ciirs, ainrs. 2.—H, man, tarb, tallow, sandpiper. 3.—C, cod, tores, tersum, sandlake, coral-lipan, doubling, anqiet, stay, Hop-o. 4.—D, lily, Janet, jumper, Bertini, dinomarine, spirits, barley, rainy, lay. 5.—E, pea, Costa, canals, pendants, meteor-mon, strictures, shinola, Stefan, ale. 6.—F, eat, manner, markets, swallain, family, holmesian, minter, stole, are, y. 7.—G, dad, hand, hinder, determine, pastrono-mic, philander, decision, sake, Ike, ore. 8.—H, pea, decay, decanter, prostrate, hemo-rrhage, ingenious, reader, idiot, Tyler, s. 9.—I, Rex, dance, spleen, eliminate, insan-ity, nonsense, ensnare, ensign, ice, ell. 10.—J, nap, cane, sandal, sandlake, jar-ring, ensnare, ensign, ice, ell. 11.—K, Dar, dance, dancers, decamerin, brew-ing, ensnare, ensign, ice, ell. 12.—L, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 13.—M, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 14.—N, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 15.—O, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 16.—P, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 17.—Q, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 18.—R, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 19.—S, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 20.—T, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 21.—U, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 22.—V, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 23.—W, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 24.—X, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 25.—Y, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 26.—Z, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion. 27.—Ampersand, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion, ion.

NUMBER LXXXIII.

1st BOX.—MIDDLE.

Translate I from the German.

My shape is very plain
Am pay and light, in fact
Through air I lightly bound
And everything reflect.
I was created with a breath
A breath will into cease my death.
Bedeutung, Germany. UGONE QUILL.

2ND BOX.—DIAMOND.

1. A letter. 2. To put into a desired position. 3. A vessel with a broad and heavy black curved toward the stern. 4. Partaking to a bear. 5. A well proportioned. 6. A quadruped of the stag kind. 7. A letter.
San Francisco. LITTLE FAIRY.

3RD BOX.—CHARADE.

When dogs are pleased they one their tees,
Not so with Thou Out.
They one their tees with plaintive news,
At each terrific spat.

The one is an English bird.
The smallest one that walks,
Moth dalizier it is avered,
Then say bird that stalks.
Newark, N. J. BARNARD.

4TH BOX.—SQUARE.

1. Bands drawn horizontally across the accoutrement. 2. Prickly heads of plants. 3. Certain fishes. 4. The dog star. 5. To remain firm. 6. Wicked.
Forbed River, N. J. LAZICHOT.

5TH BOX.—REBUS.

EAAPS

Los Angeles, Cal. TRIPTH.

6TH BOX.—DIAMOND.

1. A letter. 2. Grave. 3. A river of Italy. 4. A type. 5. Sea-water. 6. An island of the Orkney group. 7. Indecorous behavior. 8. A Greek goddess. 9. Pensive. 10. A fish of the Linnæan genus Ann. 11. A letter.
New Orleans, La. STRETCH.

7TH BOX.—CHARADE.

A fellow up from Frisco with a nobby suit and Wont out to shoot some ducks, and have a little lark.
He traveled all the marshes o'er, and spoiled his whole with small;
But all the dreams of swimming game were nipped in the bud.
He promised in an hour or two, sat on the beach in vain;
He hadn't "even seen sent feat"—he hadn't he "to blessed."
(No wonder thought a looking glass he couldn't see himself.)
As noon was coming on, thought he of his inner self.
And as he rose he spied some ducks right near a fence in the shore.
He cocked his gun, took deadly aim, he "never shot so fair."
He killed three, went to fish them out with two of his all of his hers so gay.
When the farmer cried, "young chap," he said, "I'm not a lyer.
I don't care if you shoot, but the mare's price of three dollars is six bits, but 22 ½ make it square."
Md. Station, Cal. JUDGE.

8TH BOX.—DIAMOND.

1. A letter. 2. To spring. 3. Relating to the Papacy. 4. An article of wearing apparel. 5. A temperate country. 6. To re-cover a narrow and broad band. 7. To remind. 8. A letter.
San Francisco. WOOD H. ACTOR.

9TH BOX.—DIAMOND.

In quadripartition not in know.
. . . . . .
. . . . . .
. . . . . .

THE SHELTER OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

A City Institution and its Inmates—Grand Work of the Sisters of Mercy—Religious's Quiet Endeavors—A Happy Community of Castaways.

The following interesting letter we copy from the Sacramento Record Union of a recent date:

It is a point for pessimists that an unsouth season, or one unpleasant in its congenitus, if once gives to a place or thing, whether it is the proper designation or not, always sticks, often goes near to obliterating the right name and occasionally usurpers legitimate activities. A case in illustration is the nunnery with which the Home of the Good Shepherd is called the Magdalene Asylum. No doubt the fallen ones are sheltered and helped, and no doubt their rescue and reformation are among Christ's noblest ministries, but my visit to the original Magdalen Asylum, which is the old fashion of nunneries, showed me many different kinds of unfortunates putting in and out of the doorway of the place, some accepted and some not, and I was told by the nuns, "What shall we do with them?" In a nunnery, the right is the other name of the Good Shepherd. Industrial Department, Reformatory Department, Penitentiary Department, Hospital Department, Asylum Department, Home Department, Refuge Department, Protectory Department, Retreat Department, Sanctuary Department, Refuge Department, Home Department, Asylum Department, Hospital Department, Industrial Department, Penitentiary Department, Reformatory Department, Home

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

ALTER CHRISTUS.

AD ORDINATIONE DOM. ET ELEMOSYNA C. DONELLY.

"There is no language which can express the dignity of a priest. He is 'Alter Christus.'"—CARDINAL MANNING.

Alter Christus! meek and lowly,
Pure and true—O virgin dreams!
Thou art made a mirror holy
Of the dear divine Redeemer.
Yet thy faith His sight shall win,
Like a flame thro' alabaster;
Every lineament and limb
Some fresh beauty of the Master.

Alter Christus! Hear Ye Deaf,
Ere thou breakest at the altar,
Hey ye sinner, forgive mere!
—Words which never fall or falter!
Christ and priest, thy intercessor,
On thy lip the liquid Lattic,—
Take it, lip, for Christ is priest,
Sacred chalice, blessed patten.

Alter Christus! thine to offer,
Like Melchisedech, the mystic,
Bread and wine, yea, more, to proffer,
Christ, the Victim Eucharistic.
Chaste, the Lamb. Foreshown by prophets,
And by priests of old, gone past,
Lo! the glory of thine office
Far outshines all high and august!

Alter Christus! Shaled and vested,
Lay thy hand on the image of Passion,
Pulpit, death-bed, marriage-feast,
Bless and grace, and, ghostly blessing,
Claim thy ministry; the office
Is Christ's, and thou art Christ's,
Key, which, (by the Golden City),
Open the glorious shining portal!

Alter Christus! rapt at Incense
(Scent of Aloes—Sweet incense!)
Christ, thy lover, hovering nigh
Angel-shapes with wings of fire.
Thy lips to chant, thy hands to bless,
Thee Lift's desert voice, like Hermit,
Patient and Meek—look! look! Alter Christus!
So our guide till Heav'n unclosed!

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

HYMN TO OUR LADY OF PERPETUAL SUCCOR.

Written by a Redemptorist Father, of DUBLIN, Ireland.

MARY, from thy throne of glory
With thine eyes so mildly cast,
Hear the fervent prayer we offer
See us humbler at thy feet.

In thy arms thy Child thee honors,
Favors of all thy joy and woe;
Thou hast known, they kiss reverent,
Mother, thou alone must know.

On thy Lap He lay in slumber,
On thy breast He nestled warm,
Fed by thee, the Infinite children
On the Cross and Rood and Lance.

Thy Child, Mary, Lord of Glory,
As a child would cling, is fain
Of thee, Mother, to cling, Mary
Of His Passion dreaming sore.

And the Blue thine eyes are pleading,
"Pale is my Child! pity Mother,
Sinners, enter my Child! your Saviour,
Mother, Mary, I implore."

Yes, we have thy sweet sweet Mother
Thy Son, Mary, thy adoration
A day first, thy helpless children
Thy Son, Mary, thy Saviour.

Thy Son, Mary, thy Saviour,
Sinners, enter, thronged of sinners
Hope, enter, and hold courage
Mary, Mother, Mary, Mother
Is that hour of pleasant peace,
Is that hour of pleasant peace,
Sailing down from thy loved Image
Rays of shadowed light, Mary,
Thou wert the gift to let Father Joseph
Ponder on, show sweet pensive
Quell the tempest, calm the billows,
Hush the wind, Mary, Mother,
Through the life of weary exile
Thy Child, Mary, Mother.

Literary Miscellany.

Good For Evil.

A CAPTIVATING CATHOLIC STORY WITH A MORAL TO IT.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.)

"Yes will not wonder that when Bessie got up she felt that night she was not at all happy. The Dancing Class was over, and some young men asked, and when she refused to dance with them, they looked hurt, and she felt that she would have been happier if she had danced. Nelly had gone home with her to make her good, would not, and, or the Mary—Bessie was sure of that, since she had seen Nelly look at her in her eyes up to the chapel over him. Poor Nelly! Bessie felt that she had done her a great and spiteful wrong, and that it was not only a little baby, just born, he couldn't live with Jane and Mary, when he had been baptized. "Stuff" said Nelly. "Who said I do? Why shouldn't he? I thought you told me that you thought it was you're always talking about, lover him."

"And he loves you, Jane loves him dearly. He wants Mary to be in Heaven, I know. He has said more one go there who hasn't been washed white by baptism. O Nelly, can't you have it done?"

"Bessie, I wouldn't have it done for some; but he's been often to get us to his house, and he's done with us long ago."

"Oh, I don't know, Nelly, the priest can do it best, Nelly, and Father Joseph would do it."

"I know him—he's called here, too; but I don't want to have him in, and he said if I let him come, he'd half kill me if he found it out.

"Why, you good father know Sunday—I'm sure he would."

"Bessie, he's not been home much, and when he is, he's the worse for drink, and he's violent, too. He'd be not enough if Harry died; he's been so cross to Nelly, and treated us different."

"It certainly seemed very hopeless; evidently Nelly dared not admit the priest against her father's orders, and there was small chance of such a man consenting to have the dying child baptized. However, all the Mullins began to pray to the Blessed Virgin for Harry, and then they felt sure Heaven would not refuse them.

Perhaps it was a week after that, when Bessie went to the cottage one day, she saw the girl holding Harry in her arms. He was two routine and weary to stay on his mat-tress, and his face had the signs of death upon it.

"Bessie" went close and took one small hand in hers, and then the boy whispered: "Ring me something—I'd like it."

"Yes," said Bessie, with tears rolling down her cheeks; "what shall I sing?"

"The one I like—about the Good Shepherd."

So Bessie began in a trembling, unsteady voice, the hymn she had sung by Harry's side many a time before: "I was wandering and weary, and Harry raised up his head to hear, and said over some of the words after them, and then sank tired even of that, and leaned his head heavily on Nelly's shoulder. Bessie stayed as long as she could, but at last she went, leaving Nelly holding her little brother in her arms, all alone in the wretched cottage.

"I've brought some more, Harry—some of mother's. I don't give them to you, but I thought you'd like to look." There were several which the boy admired very much, but he turned back to his own. "Good Shepherd," declared that he liked it much the best of all.

Now and then the boy would raise his head and ask for water, and talk of Bessie, and of the book of Jesus Good Shepherd, in a rambling sort of way. "He'll take me to Heaven; He'll come; Bessie said so; she said He would if I'd let Him" and then he would seem to sleep again. Then the shadows fell, and darkness crept into the room, and Nelly could not move to get a light. Harry grasped her so tightly. Then came a footstep to the door.

"What, dark!" cried an angry voice. "A nice home to come to! Nell! Harry! Where are you, I say?"

"Father, we're here; I'm holding Harry, he's bad."

"Yet him down, girl, and get a light."

"He's dying, father."

Morris stood still. Then he came staggering and groping towards the children, and presently found a match and struck a light. "Eh, what a cry he gave as he plumped at the boy. It was more than three weeks since he had seen him, and it was a terrible change.

"Harry! Harry!" he said, "there's father. Give it to me Nell. Oh! Harry, I've been cruel and bad to you, but say you'll forgive me!"

But Harry never answered, only drew closer to his sister, and nestled on such a fond manner. "Bessie, and flowers and the Good Shepherd."

"What's he talking of" asked Morris.

"It's some one who's been kind to him, gave him a little book, and taught him things and given him pictures; he's thinking of her."

"Why didn't anyone tell me he was so bad?" exclaimed the father. "I never knew he was going to die. Can't some one do him good?"

A sudden thought struck Nelly. She remembered Bessie's words, and now was the time to brave her father's anger if it cost her her life, so that it was well for Harry.

"Father, there is only one thing he wants. He's always talking of going to heaven and seeing Bessie."

"Don't talk that way to me! I don't believe in such things, girl!"

"But Harry does, father—he wants the Good Shepherd to take him. And, oh, father! he can't ever go home, unless—"

"Unless what" shouted Morris. "Don't you hear how he's breathing!—don't you see he is fast? Let's hear what he wants, and I'll do it."

"Let the priest come, father, that's all. A terrible one that was on Morris's lips, but something shocked him.

"I've seen death in my time and the likes of him shall never cross my way; but if Harry wants him, he may come. I'll clear out. I'll get my wife—she can't make. Let me hold the boy while you run for him, and then I've done. Harry'll be dead, and I don't care what becomes of me."

"Oh, father, pray!" Nelly rushed to the Mullins' cottage—her dress more disordered than usual, her hair streaming in the wind which blew never knew or cared.

"The priest! the priest!" she cried, as Mrs. Mullins opened the door. "Fetch him quick, father says so; and tell Bessie to come, for Harry's dying, and he's in a great state, for what should she do if he should die without her?"

He was lying, through breathing heavily, and lying almost unconscious in his father's arms, when Nelly's little tools he opened his eyes and smiled. "Bessie, my pictures!"

"More footsteps at the door. It was Bessie! Bessie! Bessie!

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 21, 1884.

The Sin and Shame of Sunday Picnics.

The truth of the Biblical expression, "The way of transgressors is hard," was never more forcibly illustrated than it was at a picnic near this city upon a recent Sunday, upon which occasion a crime against virtue was committed which we greatly fear of too frequent occurrence at all promiscuous Sunday gatherings of young people of both sexes. The circumstances, briefly told, were these: A mother and daughter went to a Sunday picnic, and in the dancing hall the daughter was invited to dance a couple of times by a young man who was a comparative stranger to her, after which she accompanied him to a sequestered spot on the grounds, where her ruin was consummated. The young man was arrested, and when the news of it leaked out, when the father of the girl, who was seated only a short distance behind the second, drew a revolver and shot him down @ the court room. The young man subsequently died, and the father of the unfortunate cause of all these crimes is now in jail prior to being tried for murder! What a lesson for those who trample against the commandments of God by violation of the Lord's Day!

In the Morrison of the 7th inst. we printed a Pastoral Letter from our venerated Potate Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, Archbishop of San Francisco, in which his Grace then admonished the breakers of God's law of the sin they committed by spending Sunday in pursuit of sinful pleasure:

"But the particular evil to which we would direct special attention, at least for a few moments, is the growing practice of desecrating the Third Commandment, "Remember" (says the Supreme Legislator to the Israelites) "that thou keep holy the Sabbath day." In the Second Commandment the Law Giver simply says: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." But in the Third, in order to call our especial attention to its broader obligation, the Divine Legislator begins with the emphatic word "Remember" and it is doubly to be regretted that many do not remember, but seem to make it their aim to forget that law of sanctifying the Lord's Day. "

"In the year of all Jubilee, which gave a Catholic in the sixteenth century could be secured for by purchasing an Indulgence! The laity of such an absurd idea is entirely apparent when it is remembered that an Indulgence is merely a remit to the Secretary of Penance. It removes only the temporal penalty, which may remain due, after the sin itself, and the eternal punishment due in it—have been already remitted; and, according to its very nature, it takes effect until all grievous sin has been already pardoned through sincere repentance, confession, penance, &c. Indulgences, therefore, so far from offering any encouragement to sin, are essentially a most powerful incitement to repentance and amendment of life.

It is untrue that Indulgences were ever sold for the purpose specified by our correspondent, who, like many another sailor of the Church of Christ, has adopted his lurid ideas from the sensitive and spicing pages of the "Protestant Episcopalian," yet even this virulent writer is forced to admit that "the hand that delivered the Indulgence would not receive the money: that was forbidden under the severest penalties. The money in question was merely an alms of amount unspecified, and deposited in a box by a penitent who received a certificate that his Bishop, a father instructed his penitent, and a mother driven frantic through grief in a charitable purpose—the building of a St. Peter's at Rome. But supposing Tetzel and none other sixteenth century clergyman, had overstepped the bounds of prudence in their preaching, has not the Church since condemned their conduct? The Church, at her very birth, acquired, by the express declaration of her Divine Saviour Himself, the power to forgive or to retain sins, and those powers include the authority to ameliorate the temporal punishment due for transgressions against the law of God and on this authority the Church of Christ justly grants Indulgences to all her faithful children who are worthy to use them for the purposes for which they are intended.

PRUSSIA AND THE VATICAN.

To Monte Pecore, Cardinal Independently Resigns.

ROME, April 29th.

His Eminence Cardinal Independently, Archbishop of Cologne, has resigned his See to Rome Tuesday. The Holy Father has not signified whether or not he will accept that resignation, but it is believed by those who profess to know, that he is conjecture rightly that he will accept it. This event will very much please the Vatican. The Holy Father was frequently asked to intimate to Cardinal Independently, would be so pleasing to Prussia. His Holiness, however, refused to do so, and the Archbishop was on not of persecution of most unjust nature, carried by the Prussian Government. The Cardinal naturally could not accept the behaviour of the State in reference to that appointment or removal. Now, however, in order to heal his old to the pacification of the Church in Germany, he has tendered his resignation. All the difficulties of the Prussian Government are not removed by this self-sacrificing act of the Cardinal. The selection of his successor is likely to raise a new question. The Prussian Government will, in all probability, insist on having a Prussian subject chosen for this See, and the Holy Father will make the selection that may be most acceptable to Prussia.

A Visit to the Pope on the part of Prussia is certain the question in dispute with the Vatican are very, very numerous more evident. The work of such a settlement will, it is anticipated, begin with the appointment of a successor to the Bishop of Ermland, the Prussian Government. These are dependent on a certain degree, on the selection of the public international question. There has been an attempt to raise, in Prussia, a cry against the Jesuits, and to represent any connection to Rome as a journey to that Jesuitical Prussian Bishop. The Pope, however, does not desire the journey, and, if he should, it would be at the present moment when government have a good deal of bitterness against the Jesuits. Prussia is in order to hold up a Bishop, a victory which we never thought detested or humiliation to the power which position it.

Answers to Some Objections to the Catholic Church.

THIRD ARTICLE.

In the whole catalogue of calumnies fulminated by the enemies of the Catholic Church, there is none regarding which there exists more misrepresentation than the doctrine of Indulgences. Fabricators fond with venomous unanimity have been told over and over again for the past three hundred years, regarding Indulgences, until the average Protestant has come to believe that an Indulgence is actually a license to commit sin! But if such people would only stop to think, how easy it would be for them to consider how long a Church would last as the earthly representative of a sinless God, as the advocate of truth, honesty, virtue, piety, and purity in person and life—yet wherever a license to sin could be purchased by any individual!

Our separated brethren falsely imagine, in their pride of heart, that we Catholics are the mere dupes of designing priests, while the fact is that our enemies forget to remove the mote from their own eye before they say they discover the beam in our organ of vision. Catholics, as a class, are far better Christians, and one eye more forcible reasons for every formula of their faith, than are any non-Catholic for any form of disbelief in the doctrines of our holy Church. If those people who are beyond the pale of Christ's mystical world only reflect upon this fact, the world would not be so given to calumniate the Church or to attribute to Catholics doctrines which we detest, and which are constantly denounced both by priests in the pulpit and through the Catholic press.

The correspondent whose objections we are meeting in this series of articles, says in his letter:

"Is Luther's time Roman Indulgences were openly sold, embracing every crime, from murder down to violation of ecclesiastical vows or chastity.

"Is Tetzel, the old and exploded objection, was not in themselves unknown the abolition of any sin in the curriculum of Christianity. But in order to create enmity against the Catholic Church the dup-trap of "the sale of Indulgences" has been harped upon by the hermit-hatchers of the past and present, and in the great mass of non-Catholics never think, but accept their false assertions, ing religious affairs from the false-minded preacher who misled them, it has come to be a settled fact in many prejudiced Protestant minds that a surplice constituted a Catholic in the sixteenth century could be secured for by purchasing an Indulgence! The laity of such an absurd idea is entirely apparent when it is remembered that an Indulgence is merely a remit to the Secretary of Penance. It removes only the temporal penalty, which may remain due, after the sin itself, and the eternal punishment due in it—have been already remitted; and, according to its very nature, it takes effect until all grievous sin has been already pardoned through sincere repentance, confession, penance, &c. Indulgences, therefore, so far from offering any encouragement to sin, are essentially a most powerful incitement to repentance and amendment of life.

It is untrue that Indulgences were ever sold for the purpose specified by our correspondent, who, like many another sailor of the Church of Christ, has adopted his lurid ideas from the sensitive and spicing pages of the "Protestant Episcopalian," yet even this virulent writer is forced to admit that "the hand that delivered the Indulgence would not receive the money: that was forbidden under the severest penalties. The money in question was merely an alms of amount unspecified, and deposited in a box by a penitent who received a certificate that his Bishop, a father instructed his penitent, and a mother driven frantic through grief in a charitable purpose—the building of a St. Peter's at Rome. But supposing Tetzel and none other sixteenth century clergyman, had overstepped the bounds of prudence in their preaching, has not the Church since condemned their conduct? The Church, at her very birth, acquired, by the express declaration of her Divine Saviour Himself, the power to forgive or to retain sins, and those powers include the authority to ameliorate the temporal punishment due for transgressions against the law of God and on this authority the Church of Christ justly grants Indulgences to all her faithful children who are worthy to use them for the purposes for which they are intended.

PRUSSIA AND THE VATICAN.

To Monte Pecore, Cardinal Independently Resigns.

ROME, April 29th.

His Eminence Cardinal Independently, Archbishop of Cologne, has resigned his See to Rome Tuesday. The Holy Father has not signified whether or not he will accept that resignation, but it is believed by those who profess to know, that he is conjecture rightly that he will accept it. This event will very much please the Vatican. The Holy Father was frequently asked to intimate to Cardinal Independently would be so pleasing to Prussia. His Holiness, however, refused to do so, and the Archbishop was on not of persecution of most unjust nature, carried by the Prussian Government. The Cardinal naturally could not accept the behaviour of the State in reference to that appointment or removal. Now, however, in order to heal his old to the pacification of the Church in Germany, he has tendered his resignation. All the difficulties of the Prussian Government are not removed by this self-sacrificing act of the Cardinal. The selection of his successor is likely to raise a new question. The Prussian Government will, in all probability, insist on having a Prussian subject chosen for this See, and the Holy Father will make the selection that may be most acceptable to Prussia.

A Visit to the Pope on the part of Prussia is certain the question in dispute with the Vatican are very, very numerous more evident. The work of such a settlement will, it is anticipated, begin with the appointment of a successor to the Bishop of Ermland, the Prussian Government. These are dependent on a certain degree, on the selection of the public international question. There has been an attempt to raise, in Prussia, a cry against the Jesuits, and to represent any connection to Rome as a journey to that Jesuitical Prussian Bishop. The Pope, however, does not desire the journey, and, if he should, it would be at the present moment when government have a good deal of bitterness against the Jesuits. Prussia is in order to hold up a Bishop, a victory which we never thought detested or humiliation to the power which position it.

The Protestant Church on the Presidio.

Among the "rejected" manuscripts left by Brother Crary in the Advocate office are he departed for Philadelphia, was no cold hands of skillful politicians, and we believe that he has a supreme contempt for the Irish is general, and Catholics in particular. Such a narrow-minded man could never make a good Governor, hence we, at least, are not disappointed in the result of the recent extra session of the Legislature, from whence no beneficial legislation for the people has emanated.

The taxpayers of California will be called on to pay the bills of this body of their misrepresentatives, and it is only right that the people at large should be made aware of the causes which have led to the do-nothing action of the Legislature, and when that knowledge is imparted we think it will be found that Governor Stoneman was wrong in calling the extra session at this time, and hence on his shoulders alone must rest the odium of the failure of that body to pass any remedial measures.

The Sacramento correspondent of a city contemporary said a short time prior to its adjournment that members of both houses denounced the session as a failure, and loudly complained that the very objects for which Governor Stoneman called them together to effect had been kept as far in the distance as it was the beginning of the session. The cause of this delay may be traced to the fact that the rights of the people are considered of far less importance than the interests of political parties. "The Party" has paramount claims upon the legislator after he is elected, but "the people" will be heard at the polls, and yet when he is appealing to them from the hustings for their votes. Politics, politics, has come to be considered as a legitimate speculation whereon you invest your brains or your money, and you sell your services for whatever they are worth to those who bid high. Why, what does the politician who leaves Sacramento $20,000 richer than when he entered the State House, what anger his constituents may entice towards him? They may pass condemnatory resolutions, and he laughs at them; they may accuse him of dereliction of duty, but he consoles his conscience by the size of his bank account. Hence, so long as the love of lucre prevails over the love of country, we see no remedy for the wrongs which politicians inflict upon those who entrust them with their interests and who experience only deceit at their hands.

If this system of bargain and sale which at present prevails in American politics is to continue, we are unable to contemplate where it will end, as corruption—like all that is unnatural—must come to an end either for good or evil of society. To political corruption, demoralizing, and pagan ideas, may be attributed the decline of our Christian population. Our form of government is but a century old experiment, and no person will contend that it is a good, as pure, or as stable as it was in the infancy of our Republic. Let us seriously consider upon the part of every citizen who desires to see liberty perpetuated in this land throughout coming centuries, but this can only be done by following out the programme laid down by the Fathers of this country, and when the good depart therefrom they run the risk of wrecking the ship of State.

We admitted on all sides that our political systems are disgraceful, yet so long as politicians "pan out," so long will men be found who will sell our rights and constituents to the highest bidder, and then feel proud that they were so lucky as to possess even a contemptible office which they could realize a fortune in a few months. We are this evil we require stringent bribery laws; our legislators should be hemmed round with laws somewhat similar to those which apply to jurymen, and until some such measures are adopted honest legislators will be as scarce as hens' teeth.

The evil effects of the do-nothing policy of Governor Stoneman's extra session will not only be an expensive burden to the taxpayers, but it will, in all probability, take California from the list of Democratic States at the next Presidential election. This catastrophe is not the work of the rank and file of the Democratic party, but it has been perpetrated by Governor Stoneman as the synod of scheming political speculators by whom he is surrounded. This fact is so apparent that it is the talk of the streets; the people and the press all point to the so-called "leaders" of the Democratic party in this State as the causes of all the disunion and the impending defeat in the next national struggle. Here are a few extracts from the press, from which Democrats at a distance from the city may learn what is thought of Governor Stoneman and his tool politicians. A correspondent, writing from Sacramento, says:

"The extra session is writhing in the agonies which immediately precede dissolution. The mode of assembling was nearly two months in advance, it almost finished—not entirely—in the interim, and it has clearly demonstrated to the people of this State the folly of permitting itself to be led to the slaughter by a clique of wire-pullers, who seek their aggrandizement at the cost of the public good. Governor Stoneman is responsible. So fully do the members of the Legislature realize the fact that the people are aware, and, clearly do they understand the fact, that Mr. Hearst was to be sent to the United States Senate, that as they walk the streets of Sacramento they predict their fate in the approaching defeat of their party at the polls next November, and in a breath curse the people of Hearst, Grantham, Dalman, and English, and the party which has placed them in the unenviable position they occupy at the present moment. The session is what can been on every hand, coming from well-known and respected Democrats, members and non-members of the Legislature, who have determined that it is a fight before it begins, it must be believed that they cannot see the falseness of its proposals, for the men of that political faith never give up a contest that has an atom of the leaven of promise in it for them."

The following extract, from an editorial in the Bulletin, throws additional light upon the subject:

"There are signs of a speedy adjournment of the Legislature. Nothing now is likely to come out of the ill-starred extra session but a maiden expenditure of a large amount of the public funds. The movement was devised to disarm from the beginning. It was made up in about equal parts of false pretenses and unmoral theories. Governor Stoneman was deceived into the belief that he called in collect taxes, the principal of which had been paid late Court; that one of the chief measures of the session was based on the assumption that the State would lose Gold Hill unless, though there is no solid reason for the assumption; that the sale of a state capital was sought to be set up in relation to railroads different from that laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States, apparently for no other purpose than to be set by the wrong conducting one of the chief actors in the mainframe; but that all along the effort is made to divert the Railroad Commission, by fresh or crude, was paradoxical, logical, and the disappointed. It remains only to say, a general result, that the extra session, which was to be a great economy, has cost the State a good deal. The tax-payers will have to pay roughly for the unsolicited performance—for a premium on the political knack."

And this is the result of having incompetency in the gubernatorial chair! It has cost the tax-payers of California a vast sum of money to find out the shortcomings of their Governor, but political parties—like private individuals—must learn from bitter experience, and now that the ruin of the Democracy has been accomplished, it is time for true and faithful Democrats to cast aside the unfaithful stewards and to seek for wise and honest men, and more patriotic men to lead them on to victory.

Beaman and the bad policy of Governor Stoneman has dug the grave of the Democracy of California, but it is not yet too late to bury the grave-diggers themselves beneath the clay of the people's continuously.

Sectarians with Fat Salaries.

One of the easiest ways in the world to make money is to become a Protestant preacher! As a class, they are the richest of men that do less good—and receive more remuneration for doing it—than the average. Some of them preach from church pews on Sunday no poor man does so. Here is a list of twenty noted—and some of them very rather too notorious—preachers of Protestantism, if we may so call them, and to-morrow if the money to pay their fat salaries was not instantly forthcoming:

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, of New York, gets an annual salary of $15,000. Next we have Henry C. Potter, the Brahmin, with a salary and income of $12,000; Rev. Matthew Hale, salary, $20,000; Rev. S. H. Tyng, income, $10,000; Rev. H. Crosby, salary and income, $10,000; Rev. S. S. Houghton, income, $10,000; Rev. Huber B. Newton, $10,000; Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, salary, 25,000, fees and lectures, 25,000, total, $50,000; Rev. John D. Newman, $10,000; Rev. R. S. Storrs, salary, $10,000; Rev. S. J. Prime, $10,000; Rev. J. Hall, salary, $10,000; Rev. T. I. Coyle, salary, $10,000; Rev. De Witt Talmage, salary, $12,000; Rev. Robt. Collyer, salary, $12,000; Rev. T. Armitage, salary, $10,000; Rev. J. D. Fulton, salary, $10,000; Rev. Dr. Chapin, salary, $10,000; Rev. C. F. Deems, salary, $10,000; Rev. J. W. Chadwick, salary, $10,000; Rev. C. F. Deems, salary, $10,000; Rev. J. O. Bache (married to a fish lady), accepts no salary, is in receipt of $7,500 as an insurance agent; Rev. Dr. Tyng, Jr., salary, $20,000.

There is a grand total of more than a quarter of a million dollars appropriated annually to pay twenty preachers for leading their congregations to the promised kingdom of religious error! Go into any of the above mentioned pews of their churches on the Lord's Day, and you will find you look around for the Lord's people. The wives and younger members of millionaires may be seen there in all their paint, powder, and feathers, but you will rarely find an honest man or they go to the opera or other equally public amusement—in order to see and be seen.

The preacher, too, he preaches so as not to ruffle the tempers of the people who pay him his salary, hence he never hints that hell-fire and brimstone are necessary to salvation. Devotion or prayer he never uses, save such lip-service as the preacher addresses the Almighty with, and even that is uttered in such a pompous and ostentatious tone that would shame Diives or the devil were they listening to the oily-tongued, proud-mouthed preacher as he went through his mockery of make-believe prayer for a congregation whose love for self and pride of pelf has entirely annihilated the love of God from their hearts.

How different from all this is the priesthood of the Catholic Church. Therein we find no hirelings who work for gold and not for the glory of God. Therein upon thousands of Catholic priests have no other recompense for their labors save the food they eat and the clothes they wear. And even those who are granted a small emolument for their pastoral care have just enough to live upon, and generally return the residue to God in charity. This is the difference between the hireling of heresy and the true shepherd whom Christ commanded to feed His lambs and feed His sheep.

—We are glad to learn, from good Methodist authority, that "Romanism" is still an aggressive power in the land. A conference of Methodist preachers assembled in Philadelphia last week and passed a resolution to "protest against the assault of Romanism on civil and religious liberty in the different States." These Methodists are forever fighting windmills, but they seem to forget that the first assault upon any one's religious liberty in this land was made by Wesley—the founder of Methodism—when he offered to raise a regiment of soldiers in order to help the English Government to slaughter George Washington and all the American patriots who gained civil and religious liberty for this land!

—The Methodist gives a list of the fat salaries enjoyed by the bogus Bishops representing the Church of England in Ireland, and styles that foreign fraud the "Church of Ireland," while the fact is well-known that not one in a thousand of the Irish people patronize what it falsely calls "the Church of Ireland." In that land the people have repudiated everything English, including even the English religion, during many centuries, and clung to the Catholic Church as the Ores and only Church of Christ.

What Has the Extra Legislative Session Accomplished?

The MONITOR never had much faith in the executive ability of Governor Stoneman. Its sound to us to be a mere puppet in the hands of skillful politicians, and we believe that he has a supreme contempt for the Irish is general, and Catholics in particular. Such a narrow-minded man could never make a good Governor, hence we, at least, are not disappointed in the result of the recent extra session of the Legislature, from whence no beneficial legislation for the people has emanated.

The taxpayers of California will be called on to pay the bills of this body of their misrepresentatives, and it is only right that the people at large should be made aware of the causes which have led to the do-nothing action of the Legislature, and when that knowledge is imparted we think it will be found that Governor Stoneman was wrong in calling the extra session at this time, and hence on his shoulders alone must rest the odium of the failure of that body to pass any remedial measures.

The Sacramento correspondent of a city contemporary said a short time prior to its adjournment that members of both houses denounced the session as a failure, and loudly complained that the very objects for which Governor Stoneman called them together to effect had been kept as far in the distance as it was the beginning of the session. The cause of this delay may be traced to the fact that the rights of the people are considered of far less importance than the interests of political parties. "The Party" has paramount claims upon the legislator after he is elected, but "the people" will be heard at the polls, and yet when he is appealing to them from the hustings for their votes. Politics, politics, has come to be considered as a legitimate speculation whereon you invest your brains or your money, and you sell your services for whatever they are worth to those who bid high. Why, what does the politician who leaves Sacramento 20,000 richer than when he entered the State House, what anger his constituents may entice towards him? They may pass condemnatory resolutions, and he laughs at them; they may accuse him of dereliction of duty, but he consoles his conscience by the size of his bank account. Hence, so long as the love of lucre prevails over the love of country, we see no remedy for the wrongs which politicians inflict upon those who entrust them with their interests and who experience only deceit at their hands.

If this system of bargain and sale which at present prevails in American politics is to continue, we are unable to contemplate where it will end, as corruption—like all that is unnatural—must come to an end either for good or evil of society. To political corruption, demoralizing, and pagan ideas, may be attributed the decline of our Christian population. Our form of government is but a century old experiment, and no person will contend that it is as good, as pure, or as stable as it was in the infancy of our Republic. Let us seriously consider upon the part of every citizen who desires to see liberty perpetuated in this land throughout coming centuries, but this can only be done by following out the programme laid down by the Fathers of this country, and when the good depart therefrom they run the risk of wrecking the ship of State.

We admitted on all sides that our political systems are disgraceful, yet so long as politicians "pan out," so long will men be found who will sell our rights and constituents to the highest bidder, and then feel proud that they were so lucky as to possess even a contemptible office which they could realize a fortune in a few months. We are this evil we require stringent bribery laws; our legislators should be hemmed round with laws somewhat similar to those which apply to jurymen, and until some such measures are adopted honest legislators will be as scarce as hens' teeth.

The evil effects of the do-nothing policy of Governor Stoneman's extra session will not only be an expensive burden to the taxpayers, but it will, in all probability, take California from the list of Democratic States at the next Presidential election. This catastrophe is not the work of the rank and file of the Democratic party, but it has been perpetrated by Governor Stoneman as the synod of scheming political speculators by whom he is surrounded. This fact is so apparent that it is the talk of the streets; the people and the press all point to the so-called "leaders" of the Democratic party in this State as the causes of all the disunion and the impending defeat in the next national struggle. Here are a few extracts from the press, from which Democrats at a distance from the city may learn what is thought of Governor Stoneman and his tool politicians. A correspondent, writing from Sacramento, says:

"The extra session is writhing in the agonies which immediately precede dissolution. The mode of assembling was nearly two months in advance, it almost finished—not entirely—in the interim, and it has clearly demonstrated to the people of this State the folly of permitting itself to be led to the slaughter by a clique of wire-pullers, who seek their aggrandizement at the cost of the public good. Governor Stoneman is responsible. So fully do the members of the Legislature realize the fact that the people are aware, and, clearly do they understand the fact, that Mr. Hearst was to be sent to the United States Senate, that as they walk the streets of Sacramento they predict their fate in the approaching defeat of their party at the polls next November, and in a breath curse the people of Hearst, Grantham, Dalman, and English, and the party which has placed them in the unenviable position they occupy at the present moment. The session is what can been on every hand, coming from well-known and respected Democrats, members and non-members of the Legislature, who have determined that it is a fight before it begins, it must be believed that they cannot see the falseness of its proposals, for the men of that political faith never give up a contest that has an atom of the leaven of promise in it for them."

The following extract, from an editorial in the Bulletin, throws additional light upon the subject:

"There are signs of a speedy adjournment of the Legislature. Nothing now is likely to come out of the ill-starred extra session but a maiden expenditure of a large amount of the public funds. The movement was devised to disarm from the beginning. It was made up in about equal parts of false pretenses and unsound theories. Governor Stoneman was deceived into the belief that he called in collect taxes, the principal of which had been paid late Court; that one of the chief measures of the session was based on the assumption that the State would lose Gold Hill unless, though there is no solid reason for the assumption; that the sale of a state capital was sought to be set up in relation to railroads different from that laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States, apparently for no other purpose than to be set by the wrong conducting one of the chief actors in the mainframe; but that all along the effort is made to divert the Railroad Commission, by fresh or crude, paradoxical, logical, and the disappointed. It remains only to say, a general result, that the extra session, which was to be a great economy, has cost the State a good deal. The tax-payers will have to pay roughly for the unsolicited performance—for a premium on the political knack."

And this is the result of having incompetency in the gubernatorial chair! It has cost the tax-payers of California a vast sum of money to find out the shortcomings of their Governor, but political parties—like private individuals—must learn from bitter experience, and now that the ruin of the Democracy has been accomplished, it is time for true and faithful Democrats to cast aside the unfaithful stewards and to seek for wise and honest men, and more patriotic men to lead them on to victory.

Beaman and the bad policy of Governor Stoneman has dug the grave of the Democracy of California, but it is not yet too late to bury the grave-diggers themselves beneath the clay of the people's continuously.

Sectarians with Fat Salaries.

One of the easiest ways in the world to make money is to become a Protestant preacher! As a class, they are the richest of men that do less good—and receive more remuneration for doing it—than the average. Some of them preach from church pews on Sunday no poor man does so. Here is a list of twenty noted—and some of them very rather too notorious—preachers of Protestantism, if we may so call them, and to-morrow if the money to pay their fat salaries was not instantly forthcoming:

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, of New York, gets an annual salary of $15,000. Next we have Henry C. Potter, the Brahmin, with a salary and income of $12,000; Rev. Matthew Hale, salary, $20,000; Rev. S. H. Tyng, income, $10,000; Rev. H. Crosby, salary and income, $10,000; Rev. S. S. Houghton, income, $10,000; Rev. Huber B. Newton, $10,000; Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, salary, 25,000, fees and lectures, 25,000, total, $50,000; Rev. John D. Newman, $10,000; Rev. R. S. Storrs, salary, $10,000; Rev. S. J. Prime, $10,000; Rev. J. Hall, salary, $10,000; Rev. T. I. Coyle, salary, $10,000; Rev. De Witt Talmage, salary, $12,000; Rev. Robt. Collyer, salary, $12,000; Rev. T. Armitage, salary, $10,000; Rev. J. D. Fulton, salary, $10,000; Rev. Dr. Chapin, salary, $10,000; Rev. C. F. Deems, salary, $10,000; Rev. C. F. Deems, salary, $10,000; Rev. J. O. Bache (married to a fish lady), accepts no salary, is in receipt of $7,500 as an insurance agent; Rev. Dr. Tyng, Jr., salary, $20,000.

There is a grand total of more than a quarter of a million dollars appropriated annually to pay twenty preachers for leading their congregations to the promised kingdom of religious error! Go into any of the above mentioned pews of their churches on the Lord's Day, and you will find you look around for the Lord's people. The wives and younger members of millionaires may be seen there in all their paint, powder, and feathers, but you will rarely find an honest man or they go to the opera or other equally public amusement—in order to see and be seen.

The preacher, too, he preaches so as not to ruffle the tempers of the people who pay him his salary, hence he never hints that hell-fire and brimstone are necessary to salvation. Devotion or prayer he never uses, save such lip-service as the preacher addresses the Almighty with, and even that is uttered in such a pompous and ostentatious tone that would shame Diives or the devil were they listening to the oily-tongued, proud-mouthed preacher as he went through his mockery of make-believe prayer for a congregation whose love for self and pride of pelf has entirely annihilated the love of God from their hearts.

How different from all this is the priesthood of the Catholic Church. Therein we find no hirelings who work for gold and not for the glory of God. Therein upon thousands of Catholic priests have no other recompense for their labors save the food they eat and the clothes they wear. And even those who are granted a small emolument for their pastoral care have just enough to live upon, and generally return the residue to God in charity. This is the difference between the hireling of heresy and the true shepherd whom Christ commanded to feed His lambs and feed His sheep.

—We are glad to learn, from good Methodist authority, that "Romanism" is still an aggressive power in the land. A conference of Methodist preachers assembled in Philadelphia last week and passed a resolution to "protest against the assault of Romanism on civil and religious liberty in the different States." These Methodists are forever fighting windmills, but they seem to forget that the first assault upon any one's religious liberty in this land was made by Wesley—the founder of Methodism—when he offered to raise a regiment of soldiers in order to help the English Government to slaughter George Washington and all the American patriots who gained civil and religious liberty for this land!

—The Methodist gives a list of the fat salaries enjoyed by the bogus Bishops representing the Church of England in Ireland, and styles that foreign fraud the "Church of Ireland," while the fact is well-known that not one in a thousand of the Irish people patronize what it falsely calls "the Church of Ireland." In that land the people have repudiated everything English, including even the English religion, during many centuries, and clung to the Catholic Church as the Ores and only Church of Christ.

Thomas Brennan's Farewell Lecture.

We publish this week a synopsis of the eloquent lecture on "The Life and Labors of Thomas Davis," delivered by that brilliant young Irish Nationalist, Thomas Brennan, at the Metropolitan Hall, on Thursday, the 7th inst. From it will be gleaned a concise and accurate sketch of the life of him who was the idolized poet, the honest statesman, the patriot, the idol of his countrymen. And if one thing more than another adds to the interest of the lecture it is the character of the young patriot who delivered it. Thomas Brennan is not one of those morbid aristocrats whose lives are dead to the interests of their country. No; he was reared with the people, by the people, and he is now working for the people. Young though he is, he was one of the foremost in the inauguration of the Land League movement—the movement that has raised the curtain and displayed to the world that tragedy of landlord tyranny that has so long held Ireland down—that has made it a by-word in the mouths of all nations. He was not the man to stand idly aside and by his silence to show his acquiescence in the prolongation of a state of things which left his countrymen no resort but the emigrant ship or an early grave. We all know what we owe his reward, that reward which is inevitably sooner or later to those who have had the courage and manliness to stem their voice in exercise of those duties which God and our fellow-creatures are bound to perform when their country's welfare demands them. The prison gates were unlocked, and he was compelled to sojourn within the precincts of one of those jails till such times as suited the tastes of her vindictive representatives to set him free.

But to-day the name of Thomas Brennan shines prominently within that golden roll which enunciates the names of those brilliant men of Ireland, who, amidst whose patriotism failed to court the toadying susceptibilities of England's defunct government, Buckshot Forster, Scotch renegade, only lead to further cries that stirred the spirit and energy of those men in their struggles for their country's liberty. The trumpet call of duty has at last awakened Ireland into active life. Parnell and his little band have donned the armor and it stared war with English oppression. Oh, that we had in our land one Thomas Brennan, we say, your energy, your activity, and your intelligence, that a better and brighter morrow is to shine upon Erin, and the "Flocked darkness like a drenched owls

From Irish Judy's pathway, made by Freedom's wheels."

In this State we have some branches of the Irish National League. Let every Irishman who has a spark of patriotism within him throw himself into the ranks of that movement. Good and true men are what the organization stands in need of. Men true to their own convictions, and with spirit and vigor to act promptly in the hour of danger. Let there be no place in our ranks for hungry politicians for purposes of profit or distinction, but men who can bear responsibilities and who can stand firm against when the hour of trial arrives. Men who are inclined to labor as well as talk—who are willing to lay down their life, but yet not unprepared to face, aye, even death. Duke of Sussex on pro patria mori.

"Home and the Blind."

"In Bologna, October 22, 1153, the Bishop, in response to the questions of Pope Julius III., gave the following answer: 'Of all the things I have done in my episcopate, I have most preserved the most important for the last, and, as it is all the abomination of Jesus Christ, I pray to read or little as possible, especially in the Bologna, and in the Bologna, for the Bologna is the Blue is sufficient, and no more should be read in the Bologna. While the people were busy with this small portion, your interests prospered, and the revenue of the Bologna has increased, your interests have decreased. We repeat, that the book, the Bible, is far more than any other, has raised science to what it is, and has made it what it is, and has given to Hall and impede its circulation, and truly, if the effect produced by the reading of the Bible practice of our Church, we shall see a great diminution of the people, and a distinct thing in the people's minds to be back. What if the people should be taught to read the Bible? Why, we should be at war against us, the whole world be divided, and the Church be destroyed. Let the people be taught and learned. For this reason the new pages in the world must be represented with results." —N. Y. Orthodox.

The MONITOR Publishing Company will pay the proprietors of the Occident Five Hundred Dollars if they can produce from such a document ever emanated from any body of Catholic Bishops, or was ever presented to Pope Julius III., or any other successor of St. Peter. Any person who assumes of common sense can see in the composition of the foul calumny the footprints of Calvinistic falsehood fabricated by some worthy Presbyterian son of the Father of Lies!

Against bogus, corrupt, and Calvinistic versions of the Holy Bible the Church has always cautioned the faithful, but, on the other hand, she has never, through her Prelates or her Popes, forbidden her children to peruse the pure Scriptures in the vernacular. "Ves judge exceedingly well," says Pope Pius VI., in his letter to Martini, the author of a translation of the Bible into Italian, "that the faithful should be excited to the reading of the Scriptures: for these are the most abundant sources, which ought to be left open to every one, to draw from them purity of morals and of doctrine, to cleanse from morals affected by publishing the Sacred Scriptures in the language of your country."

It was the Catholic Church that preserved the Scriptures to the world. It was the Church that first translated the Bible into the modern languages, English, as well as the rest. For ages before printing was invented the monks of every portion of the world spent the best portion of their lives in translating and transcribing the Scriptures, and the first book printed from movable type was the Catholic Bible. Down to the present day Catholic Bibles are printed and sold and read by Catholics, and no Priest, Prelate, or Pontiff says aught against it. Yet, in the face of these facts, the Occident dishonors its Christian character by printing such a transparent untruth as the one we have thus effectually exposed.

Lorgan Exposed by a Baptist Paper

When Mrs. Lorgan was in this city she enjoyed the reading of the MONITOR every week. Thursday afternoon was the time for the MONITOR matinee; then two of the sofas out easy chairs of the Palace hotel parlors would be rolled into the winsome widow's coziest corner, and she would translate for her dear hubby all the "horrid" things the MONITOR said about Lorgan's Gallican Church. But it seems, after all, that the MONITOR was not the only paper in the Union that denounced the Gallican Church in terms of the following extract from the Baptist Union shows that it was not the true non-Catholic paper in this country that has the courage to tell its readers the truth regarding a sectarian scheme that could only emanate from the foolish brain of a befogged old man whose mind is a prey to doubts and despair. The Baptist Union evidently understands the crisis in the same precisely when it thus sketches Lorgan's folly in the French capital:

"Until we visited Lorgan's church claims also to be part and parcel of the Roman Catholic Church, we had entertained the idea that Lorgan was a Catholic, and a Roman Catholic, except as to some special points. We boasts that he is "other special points. He boasts that he is "a Catholic, but not a Roman Catholic." We have been endeavoring to accomplish the needed reformation in the Church of Rome, and for our pains we have been rewarded with the opprobrious epithet of "Protestant." Yet, he has organized a church under the Papal Benedictine. He claims that he is a Catholic, and that he is only seeking to reform the errors of Rome, and to expelling celebration of the Church of Rome, and to establish a church in the heart of the Church of England. The attempt is made at the same time, and in the same place, and in the same way, as the Apostolic Church. It is not only Protestant, but it is not a church at all, and it does not consider itself the Church of Christ. It is only a society, which is in the same as the Apostolic Church

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. FRANK . . . . . EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and solutions for this department. Address all communications to the Editor.

PARADISE, P.O.
Box 2011, San Francisco, Cal.

—PROGRESSIVE—

Answers to Science Hours No. 94.

1st.— METHYPHONIS
TOPELINES
MOSAICS
SICES
TED
R

2nd.—Mamoncloon.
3rd.—LAPAL
LYNAN
CAVIL
RAVEN
SCOUR
ASSAR
ORAN
4th.—Pharoah.
5th.— T
6th.— PTER
HOMER
WORLET
BELLS
ORACH
ES
SAREE
7th.— T
8th.—Pastoral.
9th.— PTER
10th.—FYFIN
ROCOR
OXTER VIRUS
ORACH
SAREE TRAIL
11th.—The Vigilance-committee.
12th.— PATAL
PETAL
TEPID
ANNEX
CARALADENESTS
AGRADENDECRI
GROODIVESCARE
ATOLMOTSERE
LADERESOLEEP
VENAL
TOKAY
LEP
ER

Puzzle is "Lalawa Hoom" No 84 universal by M. Faber, Minneapolis; J. Sawain, S. A. Mayer, Minneapolis; Rev. Geo. Zimmer, Lacy, Texas; F. C. Lee Jolly, Tipton, Cooper, Emerald, Intrepid, Joe Cot, Kitty, Pacific, Ginger Snap, Dakota, Rose Lee, Nellie Grey, Ginger Snap, Dunbaugh, Rose Lee, Nellie Grey, Ginger Snap, Dunbaugh, Rose Lee, Nellie Grey, Ginger Snap, M., and Sparkle, each ten words.

Two Love-Solitaires. 1. Behead and 81 from Gone Quill, Bodertzen, Germany. 2. Behead 1, 2, 3, Q Lee Antly, and to No. 81 from Pepper.

NUMBER XC.

1st Hour.—NUMERICAL.

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40,

BRENNAN'S ADIEU.

The Irish Orator's Lecture on the Life of Thomas Davis.

IRELAND'S POET AND PROPHET

His Labors in Behalf of His Oppressed Country and the Principles that He Inculcated.

A large audience attended the farewell lecture on Thursday, the 7th inst. E. W. McCarthy presided. Mr. Brennan spoke on "The Life and Labors of Thomas Davis," saying: "Ireland, the island, was whatever out of the usual run of brilliant writers and patriots whom soil has gifted in the only time that Ireland was free enough for the large of their country endeavoring to free her from foreign slavery and the degrade of internal strife, and that the people learned what a noble, generous, and brave people they are. One of the evils from which our country is cursed is the provincial condition of our country in regard to the education of her people. Ireland should have an empire and depended people than the people of Ireland, speaking that does not for country of Ireland's country. There are Parks, of James Clarence Mangan, or of Tomas White, either than or the Irish people.

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE CHURCH OF CARMEL.

PADRE JUSTINO'S MONUMENT.

There are scenes of deathless glory twined to crown the brows of heroes
With the laurels love and reverence as a meed of honor paid
To the gallant knights and leaders who have borne a stainless banner
For earth's highest ones and purest, ever many a battlefield
There are lofty marble columns builded in commemorative
Of the works their hands perfected, and the glorious deeds they wrought,
Telling in undying language to the swift succeed ing ages
All the hearts now cold and pulseless to uplift one yet have done,
But our land's first Saint and Hero, he whose name will shine forever
First on California's records, foremost by a right divine,
He whose fervent soul enkindled in her white the lights celestial
Of God's holy Faith, and bedded many a fair and lofty shrine.
He, the pure, the true, the fearless follower of the great Saint Francis,
With a spirit so devoted, and complete as his alone
Padre Justino Ramos, who within our Father's Fold
Reared now the tribute monument, hallowed, where the wind its dirge is breathing,
And the waves are breaking, breaking on the beach with thunderous roar,
Where the boughs of the Wintar and the Summer's smile of pity,
Fall on home that he had left behind, the home of Carmel.
Most the debts that binds each treasure as his precious body perished?
May! Jadwing, Jesus, sitting in the twilight
Arise man's mind, gently resting at the joyous
And the people gaze of him now, her heart seemed as if it would burst. In her grief and sympathy, her only resource was to kneel before her whose sorrow was like to no other. She, the Mother of Sorrows would understand it all.

Of course the Wersly jewel robbery made a sensation in Glenborough. The two rival newspapers metaphorically smacked their lips over it, and wazed rich by capturing Gerald O'Conor in their editions, and selling him free in the next. Reporters tried hard to interview Mr. Wersly, and Mr. Vacuslac Fiendola was an easy victim: he liked it. Even the "hands" in the foundries were pounced upon by the enterprising agents of the press. Cuts, which had done forty an authentic portraits of Lincoln, Mad Mahon, and the latest murderer were represented as counterfeit presentments of the defaulting clerk. Glenborough, you perceive, was not unappreciative.

Time flew. Six months passed. The man so often a prisoner on paper was still a prisoner. His defence in Indy had proved a failure. Gerald's friends had made you to change. Him defence in Indy proved a failure. Gerald's friends had made you to change. Him defence in Indy proved a failure. Gerald's friends had made you to change. Him defence in Indy

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1884.

The Last Chance for Paschal Communion.

As announced by his Grace Archbishop Alemany, O. P., prefatory to his sermon in the Cathedral on last Sunday, next Sunday will be the end of the term allotted by the Church wherein Catholics can receive their Easter Communion, hence it behooves all Catholics who have neglected that important and important spiritual duty than to shake off the lethargy that afflicts them, to make their peace with God in the Sacrament of confession, and then, by a worthy Communion, become—like the prodigal son—a child ever whence return the Chapel on earth will rejoice, and ever whose conversion thereby angels in Heaven will chant hosannas of gladness!

The most pitiful sight in the world is the man or the woman who, calling themselves Catholics, never approach the altar of God! Men may call themselves saints, but unless their actions comport with their self-styled sanctity, sensible people only play their stubborn blindness in not seeing themselves to others see them. In the same manner does the world look upon those unfortunate and still misled Catholics who refuse to hear the Church when she calls them to their Easter duty, and who, too often, are cut off in their sins through their own perverse spirit of disobedience to the precepts of God's holy Church.

If there be a single reader of the Monitor who has not yet performed this all-important act of duty which he owes to God, let us beg of him, as he values his eternal happiness hereafter, not to let next Sunday pass by without placing himself on the record as a Catholic in practice as well as in name. It may be the last opportunity Almighty God will grant him of preparing for that awful judgment which all men must undergo after death, and upon the result of which depends their eternal peace in paradise with God, or our eternal rebellion against God in the regions of the damned! The choice of his hereafter is left with every man through the free will with which Almighty God has endowed us, and what Catholic so foolish as to halt in his choice between the glorious happiness of Heaven and the endless torments of Hell!

The New Methodist Movement.

The Methodist sect enjoys the unenvy and unenviable notoriety of being the most notorious puke-your-nose-into-other-people's-brother-Christians in the United States. They never have a social gathering that is not garnished with small talk and scandal; every "Bible class" contains its sharp-set hypocrites, and every meeting house is a mausoleum of Christian characters that have been blemished and then buried beneath the blistering tongues of untruthful men and women who wear the livery of Heaven in order to serve the devil under the guise of "Godliness."

Yellow magazine Methodists have persuaded themselves that Romanism needs their helping hand in order to place some Popish beasts from the burning; accordingly, at their recent conversion of white chokers, they resolved to establish "evangelizing agencies" among the Roman Catholic population of this country, such agencies to be administered as "foreign missions."

We therefore deem it our duty to caution Catholic priests and prelates to be on their guard against these grasshoppers' godless ghouls who are preparing to pounce down upon them, to the harvest, and the helpless in order to ensnare them into the members of Methodism.

By means of recruits from Romanism, the Methodist sect hopes to fill the gaps made in its ranks by death and desertion. The sect finds its numerical strength waning every decade, and now it is determined to use the means thrown in its way to swell its ranks and unpolishable foreign mission scandals that would have nothing to do with Methodism, in pervading poor Catholics, corrupting Catholic children, and shedding all the Papists they can by means of that matching hypocrisy which is to present a foist in the Wesleyan programme of promulgation.

But with all their money, their nasal tones and their mendacity, the Methodists will fail ignominiously in this new mission of mischief towards Catholics. Thirty or forty years ago, when Catholic priests were few, Catholic churches scarce, and Catholic schools almost unknown, itinerant Methodist preachers gained many a victory of vice over virtue by parcelling the faith of Catholics into the wicked hypocrisy of Wesleyism. But (thank God!) all this is changed now, and the Methodist Mawrons of the present day will find it a far more difficult task to make turncoats out of Catholics than it was a third of a century ago. Against the power of the priesthood, the school, and the Catholic press, proselytism can never prevail, if it be true to its mission; hence, we have no fears, whatever, that those Methodist weathercocks will be after time to any great extent, although they will manage to make the money fly in paying fat salaries to a brigade of sleek parsons whose very looks would cause any ordinary Christian to regard them with suspicion.

We hope that in case any of those Methodist preachers attempt to carry out their proselytizing programme anywhere on this coast among Catholics, our readers will send an account to the Monitor so that measures may at once be instituted to checkmate these religious charlatans whose only work in the world seems to be to make religion a cloak for all that is despicable and degrading.

The Jesuits in Congress.

The Indian Appropriation Bill was up before Congress for action a couple of weeks ago, and, naturally, the question as to what Immoralism was doing the most to ameliorate the condition of the Indian race on this continent came prominently forward in the course of the debate. But the matter was not completely at rest in the minds of many of the members when they had listened to the speech of Senator Vest, of Missouri, who has spent months traveling in the interior country for the purpose of making himself thoroughly conversant with the present condition of the Indians upon the different Government reservations. Here is the evidence of this well-informed non-Catholic Senator, which adds additional weight to the testimony hitherto given by other worthy Americans who freely volunteered their testimony that Catholic missionaries were alone fit to change the condition of the American Indians from that of roaming savages into industrious and thriving Christians. In the course of the debate Senator Vest said:

"Now, as to education, in all my wandering in Montana last summer, I saw but one ray of light on the subject of Indian education. I saw a Protestant—he was an educated one, expect to die one—but I saw now that the system adopted by the Jesuits is the only practicable system for the education of the Indians and the only one that has resulted in anything at all. When the Senator from Massachusetts—the chairman of the committee on Indian Affairs—and the other day that the reason of the success of the Jesuits more than any other sect with the Indians was that they devoted their whole lives to the work, he struck the keynote of the entire situation.

"Take a Jesuit and what does he do? He is a semi-military preacher. He belongs to the company of Jesus. He owns nothing but the robe he wears on his back. He receives an order from the commander of the company at the dead hour of night to arise and go to Asia, he goes without a question. He is a member, he is not a man.

"What is the result? To day the Flathead Indians are a hundred per cent. advanced over any other Indians in point of civilization—at least in Montana.

"Fifty years ago the Jesuits went among them, and to-day you see the result. We had a school examination there lasting two days. I undertake to say now that never in the States was there a better examination that I heard at that mission of children of the same ages with those that I saw there. The girls were taught needlework; they were taught to sew and to knit; they were taught music; they were taught to keep house. The young men were taught to work upon the farm, to hard cattle, to be blacksmiths, and carpenters, and wheelwrights. The Jesuits have the key to the whole problem. They have learned it by actual experience, and the result is shown to-day."

Read that ye bigoted bigots who are constantly blustering about "the danger" our country is in from Jesuit influence. Here is the evidence of an intelligent and influential Senator of the United States who was never a Protestant, raised a Protestant, and who says he expects to die a Protestant—(we pray God not)—yet he boldly declares, in the face of all the falsehood fabricated by hatred hatred against the Jesuits, that these pure, pious, and persevering missionaries of the Cross are the only successful soldiers of the Cross who have solved the great Indian problem! This is praise, indeed, of which the sons of St. Ignatius may well be proud, and the evidence thus reluctantly given by this gifted son of Missouri should make those miserable men who belong to the old American tribe of bigotry of the Jesuits hide their heads in very shame at their bigotry!

Senator Dawes, of Vermont, could not let such a eulogy as that pronounced by Senator Vest upon the Jesuits pass unnoticed, so he came to the rescue of the sects who play missionary among the Indians for the sole object of robbing both the Government and the unfortunate Indians over whom they exercise control. But Senator Vest—armed as he was by truth and knowledge of facts—soon demolished Dawes' weak defence by hurling at his head this courageous challenge:

"I do not speak with any sort of denominational prejudice in favor of Jesuits; I was taught to abhor the whole sect; I was raised in the good old school Presbyterian Church that looked upon a Jesuit as very much akin to the devil; but I say now that if the Senator from Massachusetts will find me any tribe of blanket Indians on the continent of North America—if he will find me a single tribe of Indians on the plains, blanket Indians—that approximate in civilization to the Flatheads who have been under the control of the Jesuits for fifty years, I will abandon my entire theory on this subject. Let him out of the eleven tribes that I saw—and I say this as a Protestant—where they had had Protestant missionaries they had not made a single, solitary advance toward civilization—not one; and yet among Flatheads, where there were two Jesuit missions, you find farms, you find civilization, you find Christianity, you find the relation of husband and wife, and of father and child scrupulously observed. I say that one ounce of experience is worth a ton of theory at any time, and this I saw and knew."

Well done, the good and faithful public servant! If we had a few more Vests in this country of this Senator's calibre, they would soon crush the head of that hydra of Knownothingism which occasionally opens its jaws and yawps whenever it wants to scare old women with a sight of the Jesuit "bogie."

—In order that our readers may have a correct understanding of the Railroad question we copy from Saturday's Alta a letter from Col. Creed Haymond which is likely to attract public attention. Many of the statements made therein will be found new to our readers, and as all honest men desire to know all the facts in the case concerning the Railroad question, we are a merciful perusal of the letter on the sixth page, so as to let equal and exact justice be done to all men—whether they are capitalists or criminals.

—The meeting held in Boston to protest against the spoliation of the Propaganda was a great success. Governor Gaston presided, and among those present were Archbishop Williams and several judges.

Mgr. Capel on Darwinism.

Mgr. Capel is always interesting in every theme he touches upon, but more than ordinary interest was attached to his discourse wherein he treated of the fallacies of the day which—under the mock title of "sciences"—are misleading many minds into the regions of the so-called "unknowable" both in reason and religion.

"What is man without religion?" asked Mgr. Capel, and the question was answered by the application of logic to the law of God to as to carry conviction to every mind not submerged in the science of Satan which so largely prevails at present.

"Rather than be the improved monkey," said Mgr. Capel, "I will choose my position on the Christian doctrine. He then pointed out the characteristic distinction between man and animal, which consists of the consciousness of a moral responsibility to God that no animal possesses. We have within us the germ of power to detect that there is a God. The faculty to determine between right and wrong is implanted in the human mind as being the impress of God. Through baptism the child which has been heretofore but the reflector of God, becomes participant of God's grace and nature. It then looks upon God in his sacraments and nature. Under the influence of that new inflatus man bears his crown, and can toil patiently, seeing his star home before him. Self is suppressed, and all its desires and associations are swamped, and the Christian grows into the fullness of power.

"And now I turn to the other side of the question," continued the preacher, "and mark the difference between him who has origins and who has not. Our pain is to be sworn with sweat with roses and flowers, but beneath the surface are sorrow and misery. Wealth cannot keep off sickness or death. And perhaps the bitterest of crosses is the rapidity with which life glides by. The young feel it; but speak to those who have arrived at the middle of life, and they will tell you that life, to all intents and purposes, is over with them. If there is nothing else beyond this life, then let us eat and drink and be merry, for to-morrow we shall be dead. It is just the cream of mankind that is possessed of wealth, culture, and knowledge; the manor must ever remain in poverty and toil in the sweat of their brows. Say to the masses of the people, 'There is no other world to pass into, there is no home and crown in store for you,' do you expect that mankind, looking at your wealth and the power it gives, will rest peacefully?

"I say if there is no God, then all mankind should rise against those who have the goods of this world. What holds the second man in check? Is it learning? It has been tried and failed, as the history of ancient Greece and Rome shows. Religion alone can keep man's passions down."

More Catholic Schools in California.

Year by year the number of Catholic schools is increasing in this State, and are 1890 dawns upon us we hope to be able to chronicle the glorious fact that every parish church in the State will possess a Catholic school where the lambs of the flock will be kept secure from the fangs of fanatics who are constantly seeking to steal them from the arms of the Good Shepherd.

We are proud to chronicle the fact that during the coming autumn Catholic schools for boys will be opened in Stockton and Sacramento, the Convent of the former flourishing city, and Father Bubeler of the latter place, having secured the services of the BROTHERS OF MARY for that purpose.

If no unforeseen circumstance occurs, eight Brothers of this Order will come out in this coast from the Mother House at Dayton, Ohio, next August, five of whom will take charge of the Stockton schools, and the three remainder will teach in Marysville.

This order is of French origin, it having branches in other portions of Europe, as well as the management of educational institutions in several Dioceses in this country. The Mother House is at Nazareth, near Dayton, Ohio, very Rev. J. N. Reinhart is Provincial, having a large faculty to select him in the government of the Order. There are in the community in America 130 professed religious, 26 scholastic, 31 novices, and nearly a hundred postulants.

The Brothers teach 6 parochial schools in the Archdiocese of Cincinnati, and 30 parochial schools in different other Dioceses throughout the States and Canada. They have established themselves recently in the Sandwich Islands, drawing their members mostly from two colleges under their supervision—one at Nazareth, and the other at San Antonio, Texas.

More Catholic Martyrs.

The sad news comes through the Bishop of Soudan, who has recently arrived at Cairo, Egypt, that seven Catholic priests have been murdered at Khobeh by the soldiers of El Mahdi, who is at present engaged in ravaging that country, the scope in their efforts to capture his country.

It is sad to reflect that the innocent are thus made to suffer for the guilty, but we hope that in the present instance the saying—"the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church," and that the prayers of those who are spared from the sword in the path of duty will prevail in Heaven so that the light of Christian faith may be spread all over that country.

—The Cardinal Archbishop and the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland patronized the Holy See last October to proclaim St. Vincent of Paul Patron of all institutions and Work of Charity in Ireland, and the petition, which was presented through the Sacred Congregation of Rites, has recently been granted by his Holiness.

A Murderer who Graduated in a Michigan University.

It has often been asserted in these columns that the so-called "graduates" of High Schools, Colleges, and seven Universities under State and sectarian control, are, in a large number of instances, eight-right-down ignoramuses with a superficial gloss in certain studies so as to appear well in the eyes of the public—and hence the Bull "graduates," it is hardly necessary to say, possess about as much knowledge of the subjects pertaining to their studies as a cat does of oostamentation.

A "graduate" of one of the class of cowboy colleges to which we refer paid the penalty of his crime upon the gallows last week, and as he had written a sketch of his brief earthly career in the classical style of such college "graduates" as those we write about, we print the effusion as the most modern style of Michigan English, as evolved from the cultured brain of a murderer whose graduation diploma must have been gained by some other means than that necessary routine usually followed in institutions where "graduates" are not permitted to pass out of the college portals until they learn to spell "war with one t."

Here is the effusion of a "graduate" of the spring of 1883, who had graduated from the Methodist Episcopal Church:

"My father was born in old Virginy. Come to Ill in 52. I was born in Adam. Co Ill and there until my father died and most of the time up to the war. Worked at farm and carpenter making. In 61 lieisted in the 9th Mo. artilery. I my company was all of 11 men. John Gilmar was 12th of the regiment. I was then 16 years of age. Was laiid in the hos. nearly many of the time. Was there until battle of Fredrickburg, where I was wounded. Was in hospitals Washington city where I was discharged and pensioned to body. Went to my father's in Adam Co. Ill. Then to the Univ. of Michigan graduate in the spring of '79. Then went to Kansas and taught school

TO THE PEOPLE.

Hon. Creed Haymond, as a Solicitor of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

ADDRESSES THE PEOPLE OF CALIFORNIA

The Anti-Railroad Sentiment, the Revenue Laws and the Railroad Tax Cases.

CORRUPTION AND BLACKMAIL.

What Resistance to Taxation Has Really Been Made by the Railroad, and Why.

AN APPEAL TO THE HISTORY

Of the Railroad Tax Cases; to the Principles of a Responsible Form of Government; to Common Honesty and for Fair Dealing.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA:

For three years past I have been intimately acquainted with the Directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. My position has been that of Assistant (Special) Solicitor, and as such I have been in special charge of the cases known as the Railroad Tax Cases, and believe I am thoroughly advised of the motives that induced the Directors of that company to make an appeal to assistance to the tax laid upon the assessment made by the State Board of Equalization. It is a large undertaking, both for the railroad company and the people, that is the large body of the proprietors of the company they have not always been to the people information which would enable the formation of a just judgment of their motives. The great interests involved, both of their owners and of their foes, have gone naturally enough to those who have devoted the best years of their life to the development and property of the state, to the enhancement of its wealth, and to the fulfillment of obligations, moral and legal, have allowed a misunderstanding to grow up slowly since the commencement of the suit.

I propose now to present to the people of the State a statement of facts and reasons, and the questions involved in the railroad tax cases, and the effect of the suit made by the Directors of the company for a speedy adjustment and final settlement of the difficulties growing out of those questions.

While the questions involved are Constitutional ones, and in any other country would not be comprehended by the masses of the people, yet the American people, by reason of their active participation in the affairs of the Government, are able to grasp and comprehend such questions, indeed, it has not been infrequently the case that the masses arrived at a correct conclusion upon questions in advance of the legal profession. Notably was this the case upon the question of the validity of the Legal Tender act, which involved in the relations of debtor and creditor, the question of the right to compel the acceptance of the paper of the people of the Union in satisfaction of debts contracted, and judgments rendered, in the lawful money of the country, and after the Supreme Court had decided against the validity of the act, the people of the Union by a vote, compelling the State Courts to enter judgments in the lawful money of the country, and after Congress had passed the act making the Legal Tender Notes a lawful tender in payment of debts, the people sustained the action of the Supreme Court and determined that the Legislature should not have the power to compel creditors to take their money in payment of debts, and that the Legislature should not have the power to make a law impairing the obligation of contracts. The people decided that the Legislature should not have the power to take the property of one man and give it to another, and that they would not HEAR THE CAUSE NOT PREJUDGED.

It will be borne in mind that the companies, although denying their legal liability, tendered an amount OF FIFTEEN PER CENT. OF THE AMOUNT CLAIMED, which WOULD HAVE BEEN A TAX VERY MUCH GREATER THAN EVER LEVIED UPON ANY SUCH PROPERTY IN THE STATE, and in full satisfaction of the claim.

They did not claim, as has been asserted, the right to pay their taxes, but they claimed that so much had been illegally exacted. Moved by a sense of justice, and in deference to the moral obligation, and to the "Constitution of the State," they offered to pay more than they believed they were legally due, when they could be legally sued.

The State Board of Equalization, in 1880, assessed the property of the railroad companies, and in 1882 it was largely in excess of the previous year, and in some instances in the State Board of Equalization, in 1882, the Chairman of the Board, and the Board, in some instances, made the assessment of 1880 had been made in advance of the assessment of the Board, and at a time when the Board assumed to and was the power to take the property of the companies, and to "equalize" the values which they had fixed upon railroad property in the previous year, and at a time when the decision of the Supreme Court of the State, in Washington to the power, was that all must be taken, and the property was left standing as the full value of the property, and the Board had no power to reduce it.

This was a condition by the very tribunal intrusted the power of valuation, and in the exercise of that power, and in the face of the fact that in view of this fact, and in view of the fact that the Legislature had not provided any other tribunal intrusted by the non-payment of those taxes, in the State of California, the Board composed of the Governor of the State to pay the taxes, although they still knew that they were too high, for the taxes, upon the basis of the assessment of 1882.

The money was paid by the Governor to the Treasurer in November, not upon the ground that it was legally due, but upon the ground that he had no power to accept it. In the mean time the State authorities sued, with the Central Pacific Valley Water Company and the San Francisco Gas Company, for the taxes of 1882, and in 1883 WITHOUT ATTEMPT OR ATTORNEY'S FEES, although so agreed upon or both companies the State had prevailed in the litigation.

Against the assessment, which was a final one, beyond which no power can go, so cry of injustice was raised by any one, and from that time to this, so far as I am advised, NO ONE HAS ATTEMPTED TO DISPUTE OR JUSTIFY OR THEY SETTLEMENT, although it is conceded that the property of the water company would sell in the market for 100 per cent more than the assessment, and it is decided if the railroad company had to sell in the market within 10 or 15 per cent. of the value.

After the return by the Governor to adjust matters with the railroad companies, and with the Central Pacific, and with the Spring Valley Water Company and the Gas Company, in the 17th of November, the Board of Equalization, in arbitrary and unjustifiable manner, made the assessment of 1882 upon the railroad companies, much the greatest increase in certain lines on such side of the State, without any attempt to make a valuation with any person who proposed to build a road, and in fact, as the Central Pacific Railroad Company is concerned, this great fact mostly is the case, that the Board of Equalization, if there is now a private land-owner in this country whose land lays the same as the property railroaded who would not cheerfully give one half of his property to have the road built, and who would, and think he had made a good bargain.

THE GOVERNMENT CONTRIBUTED SO MUCH TO THE SUBSIDY OF THE FIRST ROADS THE CENTRAL PACIFIC, and the Government has given to the road, and they were sold by the company at an average of $2 50 per acre, and dollar in cash. That land is now being resold in parcels, and there are people who have paid for it, and have paid the price, $10 per acre per cent.—a great rate than has ever been paid for land in the world.

These companies have filled up an country, have built towns, have built every facility that related for transportation, have helped made every land still value. On the contrary, these roads have made a garden of the valley of the San Joaquin, and an orchard of the Sacramento, and have rendered almost perfect the land in Northern California, and at the time of their projection were spoused for ridiculous and visionary.

It has been attempted to array the farmers against the transportation companies, and the fright is given to the fact that since the first of the year the Central Pacific Railroad Company has sold from Fort Costa to New Orleans, and to Chicago, a quantity of wheat have shipped from Sacramento. That the single shipment sent from Sacramento to New Orleans amounted to 1,000,000 bushels, and that the shipment of farmers of California, by reason of the transportation facilities afforded by the whole people of this State, and rendered the farmers independent of the monopolies of the transportation lines in the world. It was said, when this great reduction in the rate was attempted, would be driven from the ocean. The prophets of evil have failed. The ocean has turned in the land, and at a time when the whole with the sails of merchant ships and freight ships.

[Note.—We are now in the spring of 1884 and on the eve of a great movement by rail to California and of a fall crop in Oregon. But instead of the prophecies of evil we have an increased ocean supply with which to begin our contest with the railroads. Ed. Monitor, March 15, 1884.]

An effort has been made to array the laboring men against these companies. Yet they have in their employ, and have for years, a class of people are about evenly divided between the two political parties of the State, and as to the question, to my knowledge, has the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or any subordinate officer of the Directors, ever sought to know the political opinions of any man.

They have never attempted to engage, but, to the contrary, have sought to avoid, the employment of any man who was notoriously the very reasonable, and the company has, in the case of the Mechanics' Institute, in which I am a member, and of which I am a member of the National Secretary, and I have been for years, and I have applied to the Board of Directors of the company for a donation to the Mechanics' Institute, and I have never failed to receive it. In the Central Pacific Railroad Company's Commercial Gazette, and Mechanics' Journal, and Marvin's Journal of the Mechanics' Journal. The company has never sought to place itself in antagonism with the people, but, to the contrary, has sought to make itself a part of the people, and to make itself a part of the people, and to make itself a part of the people, and memory the speech he had delivered, or ought to have delivered. Without this care to secure adequate written record of his spoken words Shell's fame would be much more of a mere tradition than it has yet become. O'Connell never took such pains, nor Father Burke, whose sermons were not made to be read, but to be heard, and from his own lips. The Dublin correspondent of the Weekly Register, Dec. 16th, 1882, giving an account of Father Burke's appeal in St. Francis Xavier's Church, Gardiner street, Dublin, on behalf of the Sisters of Mercy, of Perth, in Australia, says: "It is very difficult to give an idea of any sermon of his on paper, for it is not alone what he says, but his manner of saying it, that exerts a spell upon his audience, and excites an enthusiasm that spreads through the multitude like a flame."

LAST RELICS OF FATHER BURKE.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

In this sermon he half unconsciously quoted Tennyson: "Oh! for the touch of a vanished." We have heard that in an ecclesiastical retreat he recommended the habitual study of poetry as a help to vividness and elevation of language. In giving this counsel he sanctioned his reverend hearers that he prescribed what he practised. "They that I may have unction in my preaching," he said one day to a young friend. This studied more than the qualifications truly ascribed to him: "A dignified presence, powerful and vigorous action, and a fine sufficing voice rich in musical intonations."

In a funeral sermon for a cut Magazine we read that of our day to quote a sample of Father Burke's verse, "The Irish Dominicans." A slight specimen of his written, as distinct from his spoken prose, may be found at page 300 of the fifth volume of Duffy's Hibernian Magazine (April, 1864). It was evidently dictated by friendship. It is the tribute of the poem of a young man, who did not long survive the happiness of publishing his poem in a volume, brother to Father Coudyn, O. P., so well known and so much beloved in Limerick. This article, which we assign to the illustrious Dominican on his own confession—not voluntary—begins with the words: "The book before us calls back the remembrance of the days of Gallic glory just dead—God rest her soul!—Adelaide Procter."

OUR LAST RELIC OF THE GREAT DOMINICAN

Not so his accent of his last memento given in a private letter, which we found in an American newspaper, copied from the Cork Examiner:

"Our dear Father Price, as you have heard, has passed to his rest. At morning dawned on the Feast of the Visitation, his pure soul passed to the embraces of Jesus and Mary. The preceding morning, about seven o'clock, he received, for the last time, the Sacraments of the Holy Church. It was most touching to hear the aspirations of love and faith which he uttered as the chalice was uncovered and our Divine Lord appeared. It seems as if that tenderness his lively, active faith, he would ever wear most say: 'O my Lord and my God!' 'O my dear Jesus!' And then, turning to his Father sub-Prior and his devoted chaplain, he sadly built around the bedside of their dying Father, he asked, in words of deep feeling, for his blessing and for that of all the members of the Order, and all of whom he had offended. During the Sunday he was unconscious, and hope continued as long as it might pass away; but as the shades of night gathered round us, we felt sorrow in the day we were told that the end of our dear Father was drawing near.

"About nine o'clock we retired to but our spirits would fain rest, but the thought, our ears would fain sleep, but the cries from our lips and the lips that only liked for God.—During the last prayer the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Philadelphia attended the arrival of 79 steamers, relieved 706 destitute emigrants, and gave advice and information to over 5,900 persons at the wharf, and protected approximately 1,100 girls and 90 men, and 'expended in relief $466.12. This shows what good work a total abstinence society can do besides reforming its own members.

TOM MOORE'S BIRTHDAY.

Literary Entertainment in Honor of the Irish Poet.

The first literary entertainment given in the city by the Irish World Branch of the Irish National League in honor of the Irish poet, Tom Moore, took place last Wednesday evening at Irish-American Hall, on Howard street. Also a musical selection was performed on the piano by Mrs. P. C. Campbell, M. P. Dunleavy, the President, delivered the opening address, and afterwards introduced the various speakers of the evening.

Charles F. Hanlon, spoke very appropriately of Moore's charming poetry and repeated "The Minstrel Boy."

The audience was enthusiastic, and warmly applauded every point of the entertainment.

Owing to sickness Miss Nora Ford and Miss Annie Moore, who were to have sung, could not be present.

The objects of the First National League were explained in a long speech by the Rev. Father Bradley, J. W. Hanely recited "The Irish Emigrant" by Moore, concerning Ireland, written by Moore, and "Shamrock" by Lover, Miss Ella O'Donnell, Miss Lizzie Hughes, Hugh J. Mc-Mahon and a few others, who spoke extemporaneously.

It is the intention of the League to celebrate each anniversary of Moore's birthday hereafter by giving an entertainment similar to the last so highly enjoyable one.

MARRIED.

SULLIVAN—McDONNELL—May 31, by Rev. Father Buchanan, Thomas Sullivan to Bridget Ann McDonnell, all of Oakland.

BRADY—BRESNAN—In this city, May 28, by Rev. Father Prendergast, Frank Brady to Miss Ann T. Bresnan, both of this city.

MOORE—MOORE—In this city, May 29, at St. Ignatius Church, by Rev. Father Prendergast, Thomas Moore to Bridget Moore, both of this city.

MOORE—MOORE—In this city, May 29, at St. Ignatius Church, by Rev. Father Prendergast, Thomas Moore to Bridget Moore, both of this city.

BROWNE—TYRON—In this city, May 31, by Rev. Father Prendergast, W. E. Browne to Hattie Tyron, both of this city.

DIED.

COUGHLIN—In Livermore, May 28, Patrick, eldest and beloved son of Patrick Coughlin, a native of Kilmacthomas, county Waterford, aged 19 years. May his soul rest in peace.

DUNNE—In this city, May 30, Mary Dunne, beloved husband of Frances Dunne, formerly, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, aged 70 years.

DALY—In this city, June 1, Norman, beloved infant son of Elizabeth Daly, a native of County Cork, Ireland, aged 1 year and 8 months.

DILLON—In this city, June 1, Mary Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, South San Francisco, a native of Mount Cory, county of Sligo, Ireland, aged 20 years.

RILEY—In this city, May 31, Michael, beloved husband of the late Mary Riley, a native of Ballinrobe, county Mayo, Ireland, aged 75 years.

BETSCHE—In this city, June 1, Antonia, beloved wife of Jacob Betsche, a native of Tuttlingen, Prussia, aged 72 years and 10 months.

CONNOR—In this city, June 1, Patrick, P. H. Mary Ellen, only and beloved daughter of Patrick and Margaret Connor, a native of San Francisco, aged 7 years and 10 months.

Death of a Good Citizen.

A pioneer of San Jose and a highly respected citizen died in the person of John McQuaid. He had lived in San Jose for a quarter of a century and had some good service as a member of the Fire Department. As a business man he left an honorable record, while his family relations were such as to cause his death to be deeply feeltly mourned. He had many friends among all classes. Mr. McQuaid was born in County Donegal, Ireland, and was 51 years of age. He leaves a wife and children.—S. J. P.

CATHOLIC NEWS IN BRIEF.

—In the colony of Hongkong, China, there are 11 Catholic schools with 1,200 pupils.

—Owing to the transfer of Rev. Father Stephan to Washington, D. C., Rev. Father McManus has been temporarily assigned to the pastorate of Jamestown, Ind.

—Rev. Father Walsham, commissioned by Bishop Desanger, is at Larvill, investigating the recent discovery, and shows said to be those of an early Jesuit missionary.

—The corner-stone of the new Jesuit College of St. Louis will be laid with appropriate ceremonies Sunday, June 8. It is to cost $300,000.

—An exchange says that the Sisters of Charity will erect a large and handsome infirmary for the aged Sisters, at their Mother House, old St. Joseph's, Emmetsburg, Md., during the coming summer.

—At the conclusion of a sermon preached by Dr. Usilhorne, Bishop of Birmingham, on Easter Sunday, at St. Chad's Cathedral, many non-Catholics who were present loudly applauded.

—Paris is not such a very wicked city after all. On Holy Thursday nearly 200,000 people visited four of the principal churches, and 7,000 received the Paschal Communion at Notre Dame alone.

—There are sixty French Catholic churches in Montreal. The French ecclesiastical student there is the largest church building on this continent. It is built of limestone, and 15,000 people have often been assembled under its roof.

—Chevalier James Dalton, of the Diocese of Bathurst, Australia, has been nominated by the Holy Father as Commendator of the Order of St. Gregory the Great. M. Philippe Gavelli, French Vice-Consul at Alexandretta, in Syria, has been appointed Chevalier of the same Order.

—We now make one-fifth of the iron and one-fourth of the steel in the world's supply. Taking all the mining industries of the world, the United States represents 30; Great Britain, 30, and all other nations 31 per cent. of the total. Anglo-Saxondom, therefore, represents 60 per cent of the mining industry of the earth.

—An agent of an insurance company in Charleston, S. C., has received a letter from Rt. Rev. Northrop, Bishop of that city, in which was enclosed a check for $200. The money was sent to the Bishop by some person unknown for losses incurred some years since, for which the conscientious christian sender considers himself responsible, that therefore makes restitution.

—The American College at Rome was opened on December 8, 1859, and during that year the Archdiocese of New York alone sent to the Holy Father the sum of $63,000 for the enlargement and improvement of the institution. The same year the other Dioceses of this country sent $400,000 to Rome for that purpose. The funds since distributed amount to a very large sum.

—The Church is making rapid strides in Australia since the past ten years. In 1873 the Catholics numbered 43,000; in 1883 they had increased to 76,576. In 1873 there were 57 churches and chapels, and in 1883 there were 196. The Catholic schools in 1873 numbered 62, while last year that figure had been increased to 106. The pupils attending in 1873 amounted to 7,297, and in 1883 there were no less than 15,000.

—The Rt. Rev. Bishop Hogan has issued a circular to the priests of the Kansas City and St. Joseph Dioceses requiring them to observe the status and regulations of having both funerals and marriages in the morning.

—About nine o'clock we retired to but our spirits would fain rest, but the thought, our ears would fain sleep, but the cries from our lips and the lips that only liked for God.—During the last prayer the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Philadelphia attended the arrival of 79 steamers, relieved 706 destitute emigrants, and gave advice and information to over 5,900 persons at the wharf, and protected approximately 1,100 girls and 90 men, and 'expended in relief $466.12. This shows what good work a total abstinence society can do besides reforming its own members.

OUR IRISH LETTER.

May Meetings.—New Churches in Ireland.—Lawless Ireland in Sorrow.—Loud and Land Tolerer—Description of Dungiven.—Ancient Irish Relics.—Irish Occurrences.—etc., etc.

(FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.)

DUBLIN, May 10, 1884.

[Non-purchasing by misnomer claim,
Ancient Ireland in the dawning stand,
And all her Dominant memories,
Wrapped in the folds of the hard,
Lady Ireland was not Lady Ireland, yet,
Dominant that treasure hand
Who hold in chains
The hot Irish plains,
And children of green Erin's land.

McGRATH

—Or—Virgin Mary—the month most celebrated of all the year in Irish Ireland, is passing away from us again almost unperceived amid the engrossing storm of Time. Actually we expect for the coming, with its sweet scented flowers, its processions, its Rosaries, its Litanies and its devotions, to Mary, the Irish Queen—the only Queen whom the Irish will know and love. Without disparagery to such as their beauts, and laughter the time in the minds of our people, this lovely May of '84 is passing swiftly indeed. It seems but a few short days since the young peasant girls went forth on May Eve through woodland and glen by fountain and lake, to gather bouquets of wild flowers to place on the altar of their Virgin Mother, or to make her crown their own cottage doors. It matters not in what part of this earthly planet our pen may be, whether in the great cities of your Republic, or further still away, their many pilgrimages and calls will be outshed by the happy recollections of the May evenings spent in their "Sweetest Home. Such memories will cheer them, when the cooling breeze the weary traveler on the desert sands of Arabia, At the month—our Month of May the virtue thoughts will fly to this favorite Isle. Its will think of its wonders, and of its the hillside fanned by the fingers' breeze. In its stars will sound once more the sweet melodies of the old church bell, calling this to kneel in prayer at the Holy Virgin's shrine, and to her protection—or its cross, that protection I hope has been gained, and the prayerful the young heart heard. May our Virgin Mother remember those petitions. If any of Irish Ireland's children should be blessed with the great wish that we have, and lack their merly devotion their Virgin Mother, to Ireland, and their hearts to the path of pain.

IN THE LAND OF THE REFINED SEX,

Where the sun never hast along the green sloping coast of "Royal Down," and where some ancient edifice was raised to the earth by the undeviate and unscrupulous spoilers of Henry VIII.

ANOTHER MAGNIFICENT CATHOLIC CHURCH

has been erected by the zealous efforts of the worthy P. P. of the village of Dundrum, the city, in which was enclosed a check for $200. The money was sent to the Bishop by some person unknown for losses incurred some years since, for which the conscienceless christian sender considers himself responsible, that therefore makes restitution.

A STEAMER WHICH SAILED

from Liverpool last week, here away to the cold climate of Canada also, was the vessel of the Order of the Vatican Conspiracy from the above named city. A few of the Sisters were on board. Bishop Machebeuf, while the others are in flight to the new settlement of Prince Albert, in the North-west. They probably accompanied the party. Besides the need there was also an urgent duty calling from Mrs. Bert's Diabolical Home in Liverpool destined for that lady's Home of Knowledge in the Province of Quebec.

In consequence of the proposed purchase of the Landed Estates Court Estate in County Derry, under terms unfavorable and unjust to the tenants, who have a desire to become the owners of their own holdings, the Belfast Morning News has sent out a special commissioner to examine the state of tenantry on those estates, and to report the facts to the public and present evils endured by them; and to publish the relations existing between the tenants and their landlords.

THOSE LOYDON LAND TRIBUNALS

The publication and exposition of the manner in which the tenantry have been dealt with will be a revelation to the outside world, and in a part of the country, who otherwise from inertia, want of time, and want of knowledge of legal points would have been led by wily attorneys to accept terms, which, for the purpose by those tenants who are in the Land Court, to agree upon their agreements and thereby deprive themselves of the benefits of the Land Court, which it was before. The Morning News Commissioner is a gentleman of high standing, and has already obtained the old home of Dungiven, of which I have given a truthful description together with the surrounding country and mountains. Having given a full account of the country of London Skinner and the miserable state of poverty to which their tenants have been kept, the Commissioner says: "Whatever has been done in this wretched estate is due entirely to the tenants, who have labored earnestly from year to year in face of all difficulties and notwithstanding the knowledge that the outcome of their exertions was certainly to become the property of their landlords, or more properly speaking their agents. Not a little Lord or Duke or Duchess we have had an example of this. To the tenants themselves it owes its origin. A lovely thatched house was built here and again as the tenants thought the spirit of God, near where the town now stands, and by some fortuitous circumstance the proprietor unanimously more wise than his ancestors designed a town and gave the land to his tenants free of all obligation

Poetry.

THE MOTHER OF ERIN.

BY REV. WILLIAM P. TRESCOT, S. J.

The Irish mother, the Irish mother, their names are immortal still
In many a Foreign valley, on many a foreign hill.
Their preaching, prayers, and fasting are still the peasants' theme
Around the coast of Cornwall, and along old Leinster's stream;
The Irish mothers and holy, and the wonders of Still sounds their faith and sanctity through fair Ireland's isle.
The cross they bore in triumph, oh, bright as the sunshine
Above the domes of America, among the Tuscan vines.

Redolent the poet, and Columbkille the dove,
At Rome and Syracuse honored, and remembered still with love;
At Lucca, St. Frigidian, in a church dedicate with Spain,
Is honored with pure worship, 'mid the pomp of Roman rites.
Even still the British miners recall on Pirian's hills
And though they hate the Church of Rome, they love the Irish mother still.
The bells of sweet Tarentum, as they wake the Still sound to her,
Still tell the tale of gladness that Catalfer's isle is then.

Quaint Mashlin's noblest temple to an Irish mother is dedicated to her memory,
In every home in Mashlin, St. Romold's name
Is held with reverence and love, and hunger, and sitting down, are his disciples, and begin to wonder what he should do next.
Soon after the very same day and child
And woman passed along where he had seen the previous night, and they stopped to speak to him.
"Well, did you get some supper, after all?" asked the woman.
"Have you?" said the child.
"Oh! go home! I slept out o' doors; I often does."
"But you'll go home to-night, I hope?"
"I'm gittin'."
"Where do you live?"
"Nowhere!" exclaimed the woman with a puzzled face; not quite taking in the meaning.
"Yes; when I went home to-day, she's out; the whole lot of 'em's gone and the place is shut up. I'm a-cold! I can't go home!"
"Why, Jerry, I'll get on somehow."
"Yes, I'll be all right."
"Have you no friends?"
"Not a friend in the parish," said the woman "whatever can you do?"
"I'll do, I'll do! I'll do!"
"Come, let me be! I am," said the boy with another grin, as he gave a rather jaughed the joke.
"Surely you don't like to live such a life, running about the streets, looking so wild and dirty. Wouldn't you like to get your living respectably?"
"That's what all the folks tells me," said Tom, scornfully; "there is too many to give me a copper. What's the use of telling me to do what I can't—respectably? Why don't somebody show me how?"
The woman was silent for a minute. She felt it was too true what the boy had said, and yet it was so difficult to know how to help him.
"Would you like to come home with me to-night?" she asked, at last. "I'm only a poor woman myself, and I have to work hard for my living, still I can't bear to leave you like this. I've just lost a boy like you—he's bigger than you; you could sleep where he did for a night or two."
Tom made no difficulty in accepting the offer, between your own and passed him by, or hidden him. "I'm his living respectably," and as at first, Tom had to give it up that day to a bad job, and was sitting down to breakfast with her husband.
It was a crushed place in a small—but dirty court, where he lived in a miserable kitchen, with a woman who was sometimes kind and sometimes cross, depending on her mood, and a husband who was cruel to his mother. There were two or three more children in the dirty room, who were her's, but she treated them much the same as she did Tom, turning them into the street to get on or beat they could.
Just opposite to where Tom sat on the doorstep there was a cook's shop, and the night fall of the house, very tempting, and arranged made her hungrier than ever, and yet it was he dared not spend one of the few pennies he had earned that day—he would be beaten enough as it was.
He was not exactly fear which made Tom so unwilling to go home; he was used to rough usage and blows, and that he had earned to care very much about them; but he felt disgusted because there was nothing much to go home to, and he wouldn't be a good deal warmer in the damp broken kitchen than in the street.
Tom sat still and buried his face in his hands, and began nothing over so many things. First he wished he was the big boy fighter; he had often watched him going out and bringing it home in triumph, for because he went along so cheerfully and quietly, he thought it would be rather good to drive on omnibus, and rose all the cracking, and come and calm that went along the street. And then he began to wish he had money enough to buy slices of puddings and sausages, and eat as much as ever he felt hungry.
Then he thought he came back to his cross relatives, and as he plunged across once more the cook's shop, his eyes filled with tears, and feeling that he had not had so much as he cried bitterly because he was so very cold and hungry, and he knew there was no chance of supper for him that night.
The tears fell in a cold some rubbing against his hands, and looking up saw a tall, very severe day, which vegged its tail and whined piteously, seemed as if he was sorry for him, and which would not be driven away by kicks or threats, such as Tom was used to give to stray dogs who followed him.
"Here's Bonnemer, mother," said a child's voice, "Bonnemer! come, do," but the dog barked and not only stayed in but again and looked at Tom.
"What's the matter, my lad?" said the child's mother, who came up just then; but Tom had not a word. "Come, you might tell me what you're crying for," she repeated.
"You'd any yourself, maybe, is you was so hungry as me," the boy muttered sullenly, for he was ashamed of being caught crying and had not reckoned on anyone seeing them there on the doorstep.
"Well, why don't you go home and get your supper, then?"
"I shan't get no supper, I'll only get trashed; but I don't care, I'll run away one of these times, I'm sick of it."
"You stay from your mother and father? Oh, oh, you won't do that," said the kind voice.
"Ain't got no mother and father; I only live along with Dorcy."
"Is she good to you," asked the child, who had listened to it, sitting still then.
"No, she isn't, but I don't care; I shan't go home at all to-night."
"Why, what's the matter?"
"Nothing, only I don't care; I shan't go home at all to-night."
"Don't you know

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1884.

The Nominees of the Republican Party.

The action of the Republican party at Chicago in nominating Blaine and Logan as its Presidential candidates, has set the political cauldron bubbling after the manner usual at the outset of all such conflicts of public opinion. Here in California the Blaine "boom" is very enthusiastic, for the reason that the so-called "plumed Knight of Maine" has gained universal popularity on the coast in consequence of his determined stand against Chinese immigration. Blaine's attitude upon this all-important issue to the workingmen will gain for him thousands of votes from men who are not strictly Republican partisans, but who feel like hewing any Presidential candidate who has given assurance that he is in sympathy with the laboring classes and opposed to the free ingress of Chinese coolies into this country.

Another feature in Blaine's public record which will help to swell the ranks of his supporters is his antipathy to foreign meddling in the affairs of the United States, which will rally round him those needs of Irish-American voters who want a President with "much blood" sufficient to withstand the pressure of British influence by Lowther. A subpœna of Monday last states that Blaine's nomination is not established in England for this reason, and the Pall Mall Gazette then voices the sentiment of her Britannic Majesty's subjects upon this important point, as follows:

"Tuesday, June 5th.—Under the heading "A Democratic Pope," the Times, "the Pall Mall Gazette says: "Blaine's nomination by the Republicans every for England since Lincoln was assassinated, the Times says, can cost the Republicans not less than a million votes, which they hold on the American Protestant Association, and the Irish Vote of America. The morning leaders think he is a Jesuit, the Chicago Jesuits have to go out of their way for the same relations of England and Ireland."

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. P. FRANK, EDITOR

—PRO-OBSOLETE—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 97.

1st.—
M BAR COPE
CARRETS
MORENTIS
CAURESTINES
ONYYERCRACKLY

2nd.—Wassilang. 8th.— B
TAPER
BILIFIE
HERETICAL
PYRAMIDITE
DECIMATED RECITED
DAZES
LEA

3rd.—Lugw.
MARK BOCAGE
BRAMBLE TRIBES
AND LEA

4th.Often. 9th.—Swimmer.
C H
CAGE RUG
COMPELS PEM
COMMENTED HAMP
CARPENTARI CURVE
ALTARED PORTIER
BEERD MINGOUTS RID FACILITATE BEWILDERED MONEYBAGS HOMELESSNESS

5th.—Repose. 10th.—
DIRECTORY
DENTITIONS DISCOMFORT
DISCOVERERS
DISPERSES
SUSPENDERS
TORMENTERS
MESSGAMERS
BEDIMMED

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 97 were solved by Antigone, Jo, Ruby, Sunbeam, Will Dunbar, Rowan, Pipper, Dinah, Sunny Side, L. B. Thetis, Rose Leo, Symphony, P. Q. Lee Antry, Plum Pie, Bill, Chess Bell and Rook.

Conundrum Lost—Angles.

Rose Incorrects Lost.—"J. M.,"—11 solutions.

NUMBER XCIV.

1ST SERIES.—METAGOV.

Answer—1. Cathode bones. 2. Drum strings. 3. A valley. 4. A chapter of laws. 5. A sacred work which contains prayers. 6. Certain Greek letters. 7. Dwarf. 8. Ever. 9. Have Sun. (Adm.). 10. A form of limb. 11. Sacred. 12. Certain animals. 13. A blunder. 14. Half a pint. 15. Not on the bed of a stick. 16. To ponder. 17. To peach. 18. An abbreviation. 19. A letter.

HALF SQUARES.

2nd, hour.—1. A spurtle. (Cl.) 2. A passage. 3. Chagrin. 4. A cart rut. (P. K.) 5. Ability. 6. Ice. 7. A kind of bread. 8. A Latin dictatorship. 9. A letter.

3rd, hour.—1. Ability. 2. Ignorance in certain cases. 3. To cause. 4. Recorded items of debt. 5. To a point of time. 6. Ability. 7. Ability. 8. A kind of cloth. 9. Ability. (Adm.) 10. A letter.

4th, hour.—1. A weapon. (Alice.) 2. A letter. 3. Ability. 4. Ability. 5. A kind of cloth. 6. A Jewish feast. 7. Ability. 8. A letter.

5th, hour.—1. Ability. 2. Ability. 3. Ability. 4. Ability. 5. A letter.

6th, hour.—1. Ability. 2. Ability. 3. A kind of cloth. 4. Ability. 5. A letter.

7th, hour.—1. Ability. 2. Ability. 3. A letter.

8th, hour.—1. Ability. 2. A letter.

9th, hour.—1. Ability. 2. A letter.

10th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

11th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

12th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

13th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

14th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

15th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

16th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Ability.

17th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. To hurry. 3. Apportion of a house for tenants. 4. Ability. 5. Cooper utensil. 6. Relative. 7. Worms. 8. In out. 9. Ability. 10. A letter.

18th, hour.—1. A letter. 2. Skins. 3. Resin. 4. Earthquake. 5. Certain Greek letters. 6. Ability. 7. Place placed on the hand of a pin. 8. Subject. 9. A letter.

DIAGONAL.

19th, hour.—1. Trees, as of iron. 2. To oppose. 3. Ability. 4. Ability. 5. Ability. 6. Small bird. 7. Abbey. 8. Ability. 9. Ability. 10. Ability. 11. Ability. 12. Ability. 13. Ability. 14. Ability. 15. Ability. 16. Ability. 17. Ability. 18. Ability. 19. Ability. 20. Ability. 21. Ability. 22. Ability. 23. Ability. 24. Ability. 25. Ability. 26. Ability. 27. Ability. 28. Ability. 29. Ability. 30. Ability. 31. Ability. 32. Ability. 33. Ability. 34. Ability. 35. Ability. 36. Ability. 37. Ability. 38. Ability. 39. Ability. 40. Ability. 41. Ability. 42. Ability. 43. Ability. 44. Ability. 45. Ability. 46. Ability. 47. Ability. 48. Ability. 49. Ability. 50. Ability. 51. Ability. 52. Ability. 53. Ability. 54. Ability. 55. Ability. 56. Ability. 57. Ability. 58. Ability. 59. Ability. 60. Ability. 61. Ability. 62. Ability. 63. Ability. 64. Ability. 65. Ability. 66. Ability. 67. Ability. 68. Ability. 69. Ability. 70. Ability. 71. Ability. 72. Ability. 73. Ability. 74. Ability. 75. Ability. 76. Ability. 77. Ability. 78. Ability. 79. Ability. 80. Ability. 81. Ability. 82. Ability. 83. Ability. 84. Ability. 85. Ability. 86. Ability. 87. Ability. 88. Ability. 89. Ability. 90. Ability. 91. Ability. 92. Ability. 93. Ability. 94. Ability. 95. Ability. 96. Ability. 97. Ability. 98. Ability. 99. Ability. 100. Ability. 101. Ability. 102. Ability. 103. Ability. 104. Ability. 105. Ability. 106. Ability. 107. Ability. 108. Ability. 109. Ability. 110. Ability. 111. Ability. 112. Ability. 113. Ability. 114. Ability. 115. Ability. 116. Ability. 117. Ability. 118. Ability. 119. Ability. 120. Ability. 121. Ability. 122. Ability. 123. Ability. 124. Ability. 125. Ability. 126. Ability. 127. Ability. 128. Ability. 129. Ability. 130. Ability. 131. Ability. 132. Ability. 133. Ability. 134. Ability. 135. Ability. 136. Ability. 137. Ability. 138. Ability. 139. Ability. 140. Ability. 141. Ability. 142. Ability. 143. Ability. 144. Ability. 145. Ability. 146. Ability. 147. Ability. 148. Ability. 149. Ability. 150. Ability. 151. Ability. 152. Ability. 153. Ability. 154. Ability. 155. Ability. 156. Ability. 157. Ability. 158. Ability. 159. Ability. 160. Ability. 161. Ability. 162. Ability. 163. Ability. 164. Ability. 165. Ability. 166. Ability. 167. Ability. 168. Ability. 169. Ability. 170. Ability. 171. Ability. 172. Ability. 173. Ability. 174. Ability. 175. Ability. 176. Ability. 177. Ability. 178. Ability. 179. Ability. 180. Ability. 181. Ability. 182. Ability. 183. Ability. 184. Ability. 185. Ability. 186. Ability. 187. Ability. 188. Ability. 189. Ability. 190. Ability. 191. Ability. 192. Ability. 193. Ability. 194. Ability. 195. Ability. 196. Ability. 197. Ability. 198. Ability. 199. Ability. 200. Ability. 201. Ability. 202. Ability. 203. Ability. 204. Ability. 205. Ability. 206. Ability. 207. Ability. 208. Ability. 209. Ability. 210. Ability. 211. Ability. 212. Ability. 213. Ability. 214. Ability. 215. Ability. 216. Ability. 217. Ability. 218. Ability. 219. Ability. 220. Ability. 221. Ability. 222. Ability. 223. Ability. 224. Ability. 225. Ability. 226. Ability. 227. Ability. 228. Ability. 229. Ability. 230. Ability. 231. Ability. 232. Ability. 233. Ability. 234. Ability. 235. Ability. 236. Ability. 237. Ability. 238. Ability. 239. Ability. 240. Ability. 241. Ability. 242. Ability. 243. Ability. 244. Ability. 245. Ability. 246. Ability. 247. Ability. 248. Ability. 249. Ability. 250. Ability. 251. Ability. 252. Ability. 253. Ability. 254. Ability. 255. Ability. 256. Ability. 257. Ability. 258. Ability. 259. Ability. 260. Ability. 261. Ability. 262. Ability. 263. Ability. 264. Ability. 265. Ability. 266. Ability. 267. Ability. 268. Ability. 269. Ability. 270. Ability. 271. Ability. 272. Ability. 273. Ability. 274. Ability. 275. Ability. 276. Ability. 277. Ability. 278. Ability. 279. Ability. 280. Ability. 281. Ability. 282. Ability. 283. Ability. 284. Ability. 285. Ability. 286. Ability. 287. Ability. 288. Ability. 289. Ability. 290. Ability. 291. Ability. 292. Ability. 293. Ability. 294. Ability. 295. Ability. 296. Ability. 297. Ability. 298. Ability. 299. Ability. 300. Ability. 301. Ability. 302. Ability. 303. Ability. 304. Ability. 305. Ability. 306. Ability. 307. Ability. 308. Ability. 309. Ability. 310. Ability. 311. Ability. 312. Ability. 313. Ability. 314. Ability. 315. Ability. 316. Ability. 317. Ability. 318. Ability. 319. Ability. 320. Ability. 321. Ability. 322. Ability. 323. Ability. 324. Ability. 325. Ability. 326. Ability. 327. Ability. 328. Ability. 329. Ability. 330. Ability. 331. Ability. 332. Ability. 333. Ability. 334. Ability. 335. Ability. 336. Ability. 337. Ability. 338. Ability. 339. Ability. 340. Ability. 341. Ability. 342. Ability. 343. Ability. 344. Ability. 345. Ability. 346. Ability. 347. Ability. 348. Ability. 349. Ability. 350. Ability. 351. Ability. 352. Ability. 353. Ability. 354. Ability. 355. Ability. 356. Ability. 357. Ability. 358. Ability. 359. Ability. 360. Ability. 361. Ability. 362. Ability. 363. Ability. 364. Ability. 365. Ability. 366. Ability. 367. Ability. 368. Ability. 369. Ability. 370. Ability. 371. Ability. 372. Ability. 373. Ability. 374. Ability. 375. Ability. 376. Ability. 377. Ability. 378. Ability. 379. Ability. 380. Ability. 381. Ability. 382. Ability. 383. Ability. 384. Ability. 385. Ability. 386. Ability. 387. Ability. 388. Ability. 389. Ability. 390. Ability. 391. Ability. 392. Ability. 393. Ability. 394. Ability. 395. Ability. 396. Ability. 397. Ability. 398. Ability. 399. Ability. 400. Ability. 401. Ability. 402. Ability. 403. Ability. 404. Ability. 405. Ability. 406. Ability. 407. Ability. 408. Ability. 409. Ability. 410. Ability. 411. Ability. 412. Ability. 413. Ability. 414. Ability. 415. Ability. 416. Ability. 417. Ability. 418. Ability. 419. Ability. 420. Ability. 421. Ability. 422. Ability. 423. Ability. 424. Ability. 425. Ability. 426. Ability. 427. Ability. 428. Ability. 429. Ability. 430. Ability. 431. Ability. 432. Ability. 433. Ability. 434. Ability. 435. Ability. 436. Ability. 437. Ability. 438. Ability. 439. Ability. 440. Ability. 441. Ability. 442. Ability. 443. Ability. 444. Ability. 445. Ability. 446. Ability. 447. Ability. 448. Ability. 449. Ability. 450. Ability. 451. Ability. 452. Ability. 453. Ability. 454. Ability. 455. Ability. 456. Ability. 457. Ability. 458. Ability. 459. Ability. 460. Ability. 461. Ability. 462. Ability. 463. Ability. 464. Ability. 465. Ability. 466. Ability. 467. Ability. 468. Ability. 469. Ability. 470. Ability. 471. Ability. 472. Ability. 473. Ability. 474. Ability. 475. Ability. 476. Ability. 477. Ability. 478. Ability. 479. Ability. 480. Ability. 481. Ability. 482. Ability. 483. Ability. 484. Ability. 485. Ability. 486. Ability. 487. Ability. 488. Ability. 489. Ability. 490. Ability. 491. Ability. 492. Ability. 493. Ability. 494. Ability. 495. Ability. 496. Ability. 497. Ability. 498. Ability. 499. Ability. 500. Ability. 501. Ability. 502. Ability. 503. Ability. 504. Ability. 505. Ability. 506. Ability. 507. Ability. 508. Ability. 509. Ability. 510. Ability. 511. Ability. 512. Ability. 513. Ability. 514. Ability. 515. Ability. 516. Ability. 517. Ability. 518. Ability. 519. Ability. 520. Ability. 521. Ability. 522. Ability. 523. Ability. 524. Ability. 525. Ability. 526. Ability. 527. Ability. 528. Ability. 529. Ability. 530. Ability. 531. Ability. 532. Ability. 533. Ability. 534. Ability. 535. Ability. 536. Ability. 537. Ability. 538. Ability. 539. Ability. 540. Ability. 541. Ability. 542. Ability. 543. Ability. 544. Ability. 545. Ability. 546. Ability. 547. Ability. 548. Ability. 549. Ability. 550. Ability. 551. Ability. 552. Ability. 553. Ability. 554. Ability. 555. Ability. 556. Ability. 557. Ability. 558. Ability. 559. Ability. 560. Ability. 561. Ability. 562. Ability. 563. Ability. 564. Ability. 565. Ability. 566. Ability. 567. Ability. 568. Ability. 569. Ability. 570. Ability. 571. Ability. 572. Ability. 573. Ability. 574. Ability. 575. Ability. 576. Ability. 577. Ability. 578. Ability. 579. Ability. 580. Ability. 581. Ability. 582. Ability. 583. Ability. 584. Ability. 585. Ability. 586. Ability. 587. Ability. 588. Ability. 589. Ability. 590. Ability. 591. Ability. 592. Ability. 593. Ability. 594. Ability. 595. Ability. 596. Ability. 597. Ability. 598. Ability. 599. Ability. 600. Ability. 601. Ability. 602. Ability. 603. Ability. 604. Ability. 605. Ability. 606. Ability. 607. Ability. 608. Ability. 609. Ability. 610. Ability. 611. Ability. 612. Ability. 613. Ability. 614. Ability. 615. Ability. 616. Ability. 617. Ability. 618. Ability. 619. Ability. 620. Ability. 621. Ability. 622. Ability. 623. Ability. 624. Ability. 625. Ability. 626. Ability. 627. Ability. 628. Ability. 629. Ability. 630. Ability. 631. Ability. 632. Ability. 633. Ability. 634. Ability. 635. Ability. 636. Ability. 637. Ability. 638. Ability. 639. Ability. 640. Ability. 641. Ability. 642. Ability. 643. Ability. 644. Ability. 645. Ability. 646. Ability. 647. Ability. 648. Ability. 649. Ability. 650. Ability. 651. Ability. 652. Ability. 653. Ability. 654. Ability. 655. Ability. 656. Ability. 657. Ability. 658. Ability. 659. Ability. 660. Ability. 661. Ability. 662. Ability. 663. Ability. 664. Ability. 665. Ability. 666. Ability. 667. Ability. 668. Ability. 669. Ability. 670. Ability. 671. Ability. 672. Ability. 673. Ability. 674. Ability. 675. Ability. 676. Ability. 677. Ability. 678. Ability. 679. Ability. 680. Ability. 681. Ability. 682. Ability. 683. Ability. 684. Ability. 685. Ability. 686. Ability. 687. Ability. 688. Ability. 689. Ability. 690. Ability. 691. Ability. 692. Ability. 693. Ability. 694. Ability. 695. Ability. 696. Ability. 697. Ability. 698. Ability. 699. Ability. 700. Ability. 701. Ability. 702. Ability. 703. Ability. 704. Ability. 705. Ability. 706. Ability. 707. Ability. 708. Ability. 709. Ability. 710. Ability. 711. Ability. 712. Ability. 713. Ability. 714. Ability. 715. Ability. 716. Ability. 717. Ability. 718. Ability. 719. Ability. 720. Ability. 721. Ability. 722. Ability. 723. Ability. 724. Ability. 725. Ability. 726. Ability. 727. Ability. 728. Ability. 729. Ability. 730. Ability. 731. Ability. 732. Ability. 733. Ability. 734. Ability. 735. Ability. 736. Ability. 737. Ability. 738. Ability. 739. Ability. 740. Ability. 741. Ability. 742. Ability. 743. Ability. 744. Ability. 745. Ability. 746. Ability. 747. Ability. 748. Ability. 749. Ability. 750. Ability. 751. Ability. 752. Ability. 753. Ability. 754. Ability. 755. Ability. 756. Ability. 757. Ability. 758. Ability. 759. Ability. 760. Ability. 761. Ability. 762. Ability. 763. Ability. 764. Ability. 765. Ability. 766. Ability. 767. Ability. 768. Ability. 769. Ability. 770. Ability. 771. Ability. 772. Ability. 773. Ability. 774. Ability. 775. Ability. 776. Ability. 777. Ability. 778. Ability. 779. Ability. 780. Ability. 781. Ability. 782. Ability. 783. Ability. 784. Ability. 785. Ability. 786. Ability. 787. Ability. 788. Ability. 789. Ability. 790. Ability. 791. Ability. 792. Ability. 793. Ability. 794. Ability. 795. Ability. 796. Ability. 797. Ability. 798. Ability. 799. Ability. 800. Ability. 801. Ability. 802. Ability. 803. Ability. 804. Ability. 805. Ability. 806. Ability. 807. Ability. 808. Ability. 809. Ability. 810. Ability. 811. Ability. 812. Ability. 813. Ability. 814. Ability. 815. Ability. 816. Ability. 817. Ability. 818. Ability. 819. Ability. 820. Ability. 821. Ability. 822. Ability. 823. Ability. 824. Ability. 825. Ability. 826. Ability. 827. Ability. 828. Ability. 829. Ability. 830. Ability. 831. Ability. 832. Ability. 833. Ability. 834. Ability. 835. Ability. 836. Ability. 837. Ability. 838. Ability. 839. Ability. 840. Ability. 841. Ability. 842. Ability. 843. Ability. 844. Ability. 845. Ability. 846. Ability. 847. Ability. 848. Ability. 849. Ability. 850. Ability. 851. Ability. 852. Ability. 853. Ability. 854. Ability. 855. Ability. 856. Ability. 857. Ability. 858. Ability. 859. Ability. 860. Ability. 861. Ability. 862. Ability. 863. Ability. 864. Ability. 865. Ability. 866. Ability. 867. Ability. 868. Ability. 869. Ability. 870. Ability. 871. Ability. 872. Ability. 873. Ability. 874. Ability. 875. Ability. 876. Ability. 877. Ability. 878. Ability. 879. Ability. 880. Ability. 881. Ability. 882. Ability. 883. Ability. 884. Ability. 885. Ability. 886. Ability. 887. Ability. 888. Ability. 889. Ability. 890. Ability. 891. Ability. 892. Ability. 893. Ability. 894. Ability. 895. Ability. 896. Ability. 897. Ability. 898. Ability. 899. Ability. 900. Ability. 901. Ability. 902. Ability. 903. Ability. 904. Ability. 905. Ability. 906. Ability. 907. Ability. 908. Ability. 909. Ability. 910. Ability. 911. Ability. 912. Ability. 913. Ability. 914. Ability. 915. Ability. 916. Ability. 917. Ability. 918. Ability. 919. Ability. 920. Ability. 921. Ability. 922. Ability. 923. Ability. 924. Ability. 925. Ability. 926. Ability. 927. Ability. 928. Ability. 929. Ability. 930. Ability. 931. Ability. 932. Ability. 933. Ability. 934. Ability. 935. Ability. 936. Ability. 937. Ability. 938. Ability. 939. Ability. 940. Ability. 941. Ability. 942. Ability. 943. Ability. 944. Ability. 945. Ability. 946. Ability. 947. Ability. 948. Ability. 949. Ability. 950. Ability. 951. Ability. 952. Ability. 953. Ability. 954. Ability. 955. Ability. 956. Ability. 957. Ability. 958. Ability. 959. Ability. 960. Ability. 961. Ability. 962. Ability. 963. Ability. 964. Ability. 965. Ability. 966. Ability. 967. Ability. 968. Ability. 969. Ability. 970. Ability. 971. Ability. 972. Ability. 973. Ability. 974. Ability. 975. Ability. 976. Ability. 977. Ability. 978. Ability. 979. Ability. 980. Ability. 981. Ability. 982. Ability. 983. Ability. 984. Ability. 985. Ability. 986. Ability. 987. Ability. 988. Ability. 989. Ability. 990. Ability. 991. Ability. 992. Ability. 993. Ability. 994. Ability. 995. Ability. 996. Ability. 997. Ability. 998. Ability. 999. Ability. 1000. Ability.

RAILROADS.

SOUTH PACIFIC COAST R. R.

DAYLIGHT TRAINS (EXCEPT SUNDAY), FOOT OF Market street, south side, at 8.30 A.M., daily, Alameda, Newark, Centerville, Wrights, Glenwood, Felton, Boulder Creek, SANTA CRUZ, Davenport, Pescadero, Pebble, Big Trees, SANTA CRUZ, and all way stations.

2.30 P.M. (except Sunday), Express: Mt. Eden, Alvarado, Union City, Decoto, Centerville, Alvin, Agnew, Santa Clara, SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and all Stations to SANTA CRUZ.

4.30 P.M. daily, for SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and intermediate points.

8.5 EXCURSIONS IN SANTA CRUZ and $8.50 to SAN JOSE, on SATURDAYS and SUNDAYS, to return until MONDAY, inclusive.

8.00 A.M., every Sunday, Excursion to SAN JOSE and SANTA CRUZ.

$2.00 to SAN JOSE and SANTA CRUZ.
$1.75 to SANTA CLARA and SAN JOSE.

TO OAKLAND AND ALAMEDA.

16.00, 60.00, 47.00, 7.30, 4.30, 6.30, 8.30, 2.30, 10.00, 11.30, 11.30, 11.00 A. M.; 7.10, 10, 12.30, 3.10, 4.30, 5.30, 6.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.45 P. M.

From FOURTEENTH AND WEBSTER STREETS, OAKLAND—6.35, 10.35, 8.35, 10.35, 12.35, 2.35, 4.35, 6.35, 8.35, 10.35, 12.35 A. M.; 2.35, 4.35, 6.35, 8.35, 10.35 P. M.

From FRONT STREET, ALAMEDA—6.15, 8.15, 10.15, 12.15, 2.15, 4.15, 6.15, 8.15, 10.15 P. M.

Sundays excepted. †Sundays only.
TICKET, Telegraph and Transfer Office, 222 Montgomery street.
L. FILLMORE, Superintendent. A. N. GARRATT, Gen'l T. F. Agt.

SAN FRANCISCO NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

BROAD GAUGE.

COMMENCING MAY 4, 1884, AND UNTIL FURTHER notice, Boats and Trains will leave from and arrive at the Pleasure Passenger Depot, Market street Wharf, as follows:

FOR CLARKSVILLE.

FOR CLARKSVILLE.

Table Wines 50c, 60c, 75c, and $1.
Sweet Wines—Sherry 1.25, 1.50 and $1.50.
Fine Old Port, Madeira, Sherry $2.50, $3.50 and $5.
Kentucky Whiskies—$2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4.
Fine Old Rye Whiskey—$3.50, $4, $4.50 and $5.
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc., $2 per gal. and upwards.
Other Wines and Liquors at low cash rates.

GENERAL

Atlantic Steam-Ship Agency,
613 MARKET STREET, 613.
Tickets sold over ALL Atlantic Steam-ship Lines
AT LOWEST RATES.

PARTIES DESIROUS OF BRINGING FRIENDS OR relatives from the old country can do so by applying at this office. Fares and sailing lists always. Agency for Dominion of Canada, Ireland and Scotland.

C. E. BORTON, Assistant Agent. A. MALPAS, Agent.

CUT THIS OUT AND KEEP IT FOR REFERENCE.

WEARING THE
Duplex Galvanic Belt.

THE UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF THIS MEDICAL belt is the cure of Nervous Weakness and Prostration, Lost Vitality, Impotency, Sciatica, Lumbago, Rheumatism and Kidney Diseases. It is hated by thousands who have tried it, because it has not the cash Talisman Belt in the Market, but it is the only one that ever received a silver medal as a premium. Its Electric Suspensory is acknowledged to be very great to restore lost manhood and vigor to broken down men at home. Full information, illustrated pamphlet, with cuts showing our Belt in use, sent free, sealed, if you send your address. Address, or call on, DR. A. DUPLEX GALVANIC BELT AND TRUSS CO., 118 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

ESTABLISHED 1858.

J. O'KANE,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER OF

HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,

And Everything Necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.

Boots and English Saddlery a Specialty

Single Harness from $18 to $60.

Goods delivered free to any part of the City.

767 MARKET ST.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for horses. Our price to all the principal trainers and horsemen on the Pacific Coast.

DANIEL SHEERIN,
STONE AND MARBLE YARD,
Cor. Broderick and Ellis sts.,
Dolores or Catholic Cemetery, San Francisco.
All kinds of Monuments and Marble Tilings. Also, Lots Enclosed with Granite.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.
—ESTABLISHED 1858.—
Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes, 315 and 317 California Street.
Safes made for closed and after use. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

JOHN SULLIVAN,
NORTHEAST COR. OF SATTERY AND JACKSON streets, office to make to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS, at from..... $6 to $8 50
California Leather boots..... $5 50
French Calf Oxford Ties..... $4 50
Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order. Persons in the country ordering Boots and Shoes to the amount of Twelve Dollars or more, will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the expense cheaper light. I sell Boots and Shoes AT MY OWN MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C.O.D. Positively one price.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,

Respectfully announce that they have opened

THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—WITH A LINE OF—
GENT'S AND BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.

Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.

We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible

CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And late with JOHN A CO.

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON
968 and 970 Folsom St,
Near Sixth.....San Francisco
—WHOLESALE—
WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS
ESTABLISHED 1870.
We are selling Cheap for Cash and guarantee our goods.
Old Tom Gin, Old Rye, Old Port, Old Sherry, Old Madeira, Old Cognac, Old Brandy.
Table Wines 50c, 60c, 75c, and $1.
Sweet Wines—Sherry 1.25, 1.50 and $1.50.
Fine Old Port, Madeira, Sherry $2.50, $3.50 and $5.
Kentucky Whiskies—$2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4.
Fine Old Rye Whiskey—$3.50, $4, $4.50 and $5.
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc., $2 per gal. and upwards.
Other Wines and Liquors at low cash rates.

JOHN A. LENNON,
Wholesale Grocer,
Choice Brands
Japan and English Breakfast Tea.
Agent for Pope, White Sulphur Springs Cider, Cincinnati. Also Pope Brandies, Cordials and Wines for sacramental purposes.
Lemon Syrup, Orange Syrup, and for Summer Lemonade, Wilbur's Milk Chocolate Bonbons.
Nos. 816 and 818 Clay Street.....San Francisco

Fast Potato Digging
THE MONARCH POTATO DIGGER
SENT ON 60 Days' Trial Trial.
Agents Wanted.

CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.
SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
—OF—
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.
SCHOOL BOOKS AND STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.
My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
No need ordering that, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight is a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled on the spot.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.
Ostensorium, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are an Archbishop Week of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,
Latest Edition, with all addendas to date.
Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA . . . . CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of providing for young ladies, a refining surpass, a moral and intellectual education. One feature in particular that should recommend this Academy, is the influence exerted by the ladies of its staff in the class room of the school, and to render them useful members a society in after years.
The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $50
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA,..... CALIFORNIA
This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It possesses a large library, with extensive finely play-grounds, covered gymnasium, swimming pool, etc. It now presents a complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Natural History, also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Phonography and Commercial Law. For the latter a new building 164x40 has been finished, that has no rival in the Pacific Coast.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once..$ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches
Washing and Mending of Linen,
Bedding, Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of ten months.....$250 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to the Rev. Father Bell, 314 Hayes street, San Francisco.
REV. H. E. RENNA, S. J.
President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.,
Fifth and Jackson Sts. OAKLAND, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School, for the education of young ladies, subject to a sensitive the comforts and adjustments of home with the advantages of a superior Christian education.
Parents and guardians, desirous of sending their sons or wards to Boarding Schools, will find in the Academy, to be conducted by the Christian Brothers, a school that combines the advantages of

OUR IRISH LETTER.

Landlord Cruelty in Donegal.—Henry Rosslyn Nelstone Second.—Inhuman Treatment of Tenants.—Death of Prince Rosenau his Pseudo.—God Save Prince Pulitzer Gladstone of Gloucestershire.

(FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.)

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR—

Dear Sir—Your readers perhaps remember that last week in the County Donegal, where another of Ireland's noblemen resides, a Mr. Clements had set by the Cweeber Brigadier, was ruined out by the Constabulary on the 15th of July. We have heard the strokes and cries of the sore persecuted sheep the robbing commenced by the leeding from the accident home of their forefathers and the wild lamentation of Donegal, to have a strange cold world on the crushing of their quietly sojourn, without food or money. On the day previous to the evictions the arrival of a large force of police indicated that something extraordinary was about to happen

IN THE VICINITY OF CARNOT.

The mystery was unravelled on the following morning when the police were seen wending their way towards Glenthickhillin, accompanied by the sub sheriff and Mr. Cassidy, J. P., agent of the McGlade estate. The reporter of the Freeman's paper says: In order to take an early start of the intimable I was on my way to the house of J'shed so as to guard by the sheriffs of Ballinagree it not down its brave spam on in the form of a bail shower. As we neared the Mansion the morning brightened up, and the sun came out, and the thousand little birds sang. Away to the far distance stretched out the great Atlantic and sweet mind Gleneel in its majestic bosom, and away inland lay the Donegal hills, and the Mansion is all in the shade enthusiasmed among the mountains which appeared to him so many shadowy forms of consolation of the under world, and which were in reality the shadows of the Rosenau cross of the revised peasantry. The police escort disappeared, and we walked off to Grant's small village near Glen Gesh. The first victim of landlord cruelty was a poor old man of 70, who with his only daughter had occupied the middle of a poor thatched hut. Soon the sad news spread, and the people came out of doors the few miscreants who which may be called the Irish peasantry. Then the poor man of the cabin with his few rags of bed clothes, food, fire and furniture, was put out on the road, and the door was locked, this is an old woman aged 70 years.

IT WAS HARD HEARGES TO SEE

this poor wretched woman so old and ailing on her forme cheek, reading the air with her head with the wind blowing in her face, and her tears to the elements. The next victim was Anne Gallagher, a lone woman, who had lived in the cabin with others directly set in work to remove the furniture. The sub sheriff and Cassidy were present on compact. The bailiff Mullen, assisted by the sub sheriff, set to work with others directly set in work to remove the furniture. The sub sheriff and Cassidy were present on compact. The bailiff Mullen, assisted by the sub sheriff, set to work with others directly set in work to remove the furniture. She is the survivor of the family. Some years ago her brother died in Glasgow, and three months ago her lonely sister and daughter left for Glasgow. The poor woman was left alone in the cabin

Poetry.

GOOD FATHER PAT.

There was one memorial remained
Of a good man who had left behind
Telling the sinner to cling to God—
Pat Lynch's father was dead!
Kind words were lost to the children,
Pat's lips had lost their pattern,
Pat's eyes had lost their fatherly
And that father was "Father Pat!"

So poor honest clay! A unlightened
By the Father's cheery voice
They were those who felt as they saw him dead
Pat's father was dead!
Such as proved without fear or dread
To our Saviour's kind—full sadly knew
That a Man had been left orphaned!

There were sorrows and heritage and troubles
That only the Father could Speak right with the worthy hard,
And they are comforting
Sorrow and trouble and poverty,
Pat's father had left behind
Pat's father was "Father Pat."

They took him away to the temple
And laid him within the nave,
"Ye are loved by the Beauty of God's House,"
And "your night the place they pass!
And the men and women and children,
And the children, all were well
Who long had felt the Father's
Who had left the Man unsaid.

They buried him beneath the altar
Which rises in the Virgin's Land
Of the marts of the Holy Ghost
Of the Holy Ghost.

The whole was the widow's
Who had lost the Father's care
And sorrow for "Father Pat."

But the choirs in the Heavenly Mansions
There were not a Father's Into their praise, "Love the Throne's Blessed,
And to Jesus Christ
And to Paraclete Adoration
Which understand all the Trust
Mother "Father Pat" forgot, I trow,
Somebody's Man earned!

Literary Miscellany.

Tom's Crucifix.

A TOUCHING TRUTHFUL CATHOLIC STORY.

CHAPTER II.

It was quite dusky when Mrs. Kelly with her little grandchild were getting breakfast, for the rose early and which had lured all day for her bread—sometimes getting a job and sometimes a little washing at home between and doing a little washing at home between times, and Joseph's earnings had brought in a little more than usual, but it was not enough to meet the weekly rent, or to pay for the food and fuel, and Joseph's earnings had brought in a little more than usual, but it was not enough to meet the weekly rent, or to pay for the food and fuel, and the rent was now; and yet she had not been afraid to ask for the rent, because she felt sure God would not let her miss what she was praying for.

"I'm going out for a half-a-day's work, Tom," said she, when breakfast was over, "and Mary goes to school; and I trust you to take care of the place till I come back, and I would always have to leave her alone, only she knew it was the way we'd get on. You won't be so very lonely, Tom, if you get up to my minded? Remember that God's always at you all the time, and He'll have everything you do for Him, and God does love to be a man and die on the cross like that, my poor Tom!" and Mrs. Kelly pulled to the crucifix.

"Mother, dear, I'm heaven now, Tom, but God's quite near me, and I'm watching you all day."

Tom looked into each corner of the room, as if he expected to see some one there, forgetting, he supposed to believe what he was told.

"All right," he said. "He doesn't mind so much, I'm pretty sure, and the boy kept his word, staying quiet, cutting up fire-wood, with her catechism in hand.

"Tom, if you like I'll teach you a bit," she said.

"All right," answered Tom: "go-ahead."

"Yes, but you'll listen and try understand, wouldn't you? You'd like to save your soul, Tom, and get to heaven, wouldn't you?"

"I don't know nothing about that, but I'd like to please you, anybody," said Tom.

"Well then we'll begin. Now you can answer the first question, I'm sure."

"Who made you?"

"Who made you?" repeated Tom.

"Yes, but that's the question. You are not to say it after me, but tell me the answer."

"So I will if I know what it is," said Tom.

"Its only who did make you, Tom. You know that."

Tom burst out laughing. "Well, if that isn't the queerest thing I ever heard. I guess I was made same as everyone else, wasn't I?"

"Yes, of course God made us all. You should just say 'God,' Tom; that's the answer."

"Well, I never knowed it afore," exclaimed Tom.

But Mary what her catechism in despair and rushed to her mother.

"Oh, mother, I meant to teach him all I'd learn't, and he's so stupid he doesn't understand how to answer at all. He says he didn't know God made him, mother."

"I will all come in time, Mary, but you must have patience. They'll be able to teach him his catechism if we can get him to go to school. Suppose you talk to him and tell him, anything he wants to know; and I'd teach him the "Hail Mary" if you pray, and consider Lady will help him to understand all the rest."

So Mary went back to her pupil, and after trying a good many ways she got him to learn the Hail Mary sufficiently well to be able to say it right and morning and evening prayer.

"I don't clearly see the good of it, though, he said, when he little teacher declared he could say it quite well.

"Well, I'll tell you," said Mary, sinking down her pinafore with both hands, "It's a prayer to our Lady, the mother of Jesus who hang on the cross. Her name was Mary.

"Same as yours," put in Tom.

"Yes, Tom, I'm called after her because I want to be a little like her. Now, Tom please listen. Of course we love Mary very much because God loved her dearly, and now she is up in heaven with Him He has to tell us all she asks for, and so if we get her to pray for us He's quite certain to do what she wants Him to do."

Tom nodded his head. "I see," he said. "Then if we ask Him for things ourselves He won't do them cept for her?"

"Oh yes Tom, indeed He does all we ask if its good for us, only He likes His dear Mother to be asking at the same time, and I think he listens with a great deal more pleasure when I pray for you.

"Then you pray for a half-a-day's work, Tom," said Mrs. Kelly, when breakfast was over, "and Mary goes to school; and I trust ye to take care of the place till I come back, and I would always have to leave her alone, only she knew it was the way we'd get on."

"You needn't be afraid, mother, I'll do it, or get up to any mischief! Remember that God's always at you all the time, and He'll have everything you do for Him; and God does love to be a man and die on the cross like that, my poor Tom!" and Mrs. Kelly pulled to the crucifix.

"Mother, dear, I'm heaven now, Tom, but God's quite near me, and I'm watching you all day."

Tom looked into each corner of the room, as if he expected to see some one there, forgetting, he supposed to believe what he was told.

"All right," he said. "He doesn't mind so much, I'm pretty sure, and the boy kept his word, staying quiet, cutting up fire-wood, with her catechism in hand.

"Tom, if you like I'll teach you a bit," she said.

"All right," answered Tom: "go-ahead."

"Yes, but you'll listen and try understand, wouldn't you? You'd like to save your soul, Tom, and get to heaven, wouldn't you?"

"I don't know nothing about that, but I'd like to please you, anybody," said Tom.

"Well then we'll begin. Now you can answer the first question, I'm sure."

"Who made you?"

"Who made you?" repeated Tom.

"Yes, but that's the question. You are not to say it after me, but tell me the answer."

"So I will if I know what it is," said Tom.

"Its only who did make you, Tom. You know that."

Tom burst out laughing. "Well, if that isn't the queerest thing I ever heard. I guess I was made same as everyone else, wasn't I?"

"Yes, of course God made us all. You should just say 'God,' Tom; that's the answer."

"Well, I never knowed it afore," exclaimed Tom.

But Mary what her catechism in despair and rushed to her mother.

"Oh, mother, I meant to teach him all I'd learn't, and he's so stupid he doesn't understand how to answer at all. He says he didn't know God made him, mother."

"Will all come in time, Mary, but you must have patience. They'll be able to teach him his catechism if we can get him to go to school. Suppose you talk to him and tell him

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE DIOCESE OF SAN JOSE.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1884.

For the Sake of the Sacred Heart.

We earnestly hope that at least fifty thousand of our Catholic dead will receive Holy Communion on next Friday—the Feast of the SACRED HEART OF JESUS (or within the octave of that Feast), and thereby practically demonstrate their earnest love for the holy, beautiful, and beneficent devotion to which this month is dedicated.

Her the SACRED HEART OF JESUS must be thrilled with agony at the debauch of sin that overwhelms the world. The very atmosphere is laden with the curses of millions of men who blasphemo the very name of the Son of God, at the mention of which all hearts should bow! Self-destruction, drunkenness, and diabolical deeds dark and damnable enough to make the very devils blush with shame—have become the recognized signs of modern society. Our cities are rapidly becoming Sodoms and Gomorrahs, cursed alike by Sodom and Gomorrah, and the mercy of God is all that saves them from being buried up with fire showered down upon them from Heaven.

Prayer and practical Catholicity are the two most potent factors in staying the vengeance of God upon this vice-loving age, and on the Feast of the Sacred Heart every Communion should be offered up to God as an atonement for offering for the insults and indignities offered His SACRED HEART by the sins of mankind. The child who breaks the heart of his mortal father or mother is considered as fugitive of the deepest dye. Yet all human beings in the world are children of God, and by their red-handed sinning they kill the Founder of the SACRED HEART OF JESUS! What monstrous ingratitude! What blind folly! What infernal fanaticism! Yet God's love is so great that He covers the heinous sinner's head with the cloak of His mercy and embraces the prodigal in the innermost tabernacle of His SACRED HEART!

Let every reader of the MONITOR, therefore, attend himself at the Lord's table on next Friday and there offer up at least a partial atonement to Almighty God for the blasphemy offered him by the millions of sinners which are constituted against His Holy Name, and then prove to the Sacred Heart of Jesus that which charity, ingenuity, and generosity are the most frequent offerings made by fallen man to God—the purest and beautiful God with all good graces and beautiful God with all good graces; and that God will not have lived a single instant of our lives.

The Church in the United States.—Its Growth and Progress.—What Dioceses Churches are Dedicated.

At the 19th Plenary Council in the United States, he was able to complete the statistics of the Church on upon his Empire! The number of priests was 19 in Maryland and 3 in Pennsylvania, and these comprised the ground of Almighty God in all the broad dominion from the Lakes to the Pacific! Dr. Carroll's estimate of the number of Catholics placed the population at 15,000,000 souls. But what a marvelous growth has sprung from these seven nucleoli seed sprinkled! Like a great tree the branches of God's Church now cover the land covered by the Republic, and ten million Catholics have taken up the praises of God which resounded from the lips of the few thousand faithful fellowmen a century ago!

The ten or dozen diminutive churches and rented habitations called "chapels" have increased to 6,412, and the 19 priests of 1785 are published into 6,825 in this year of grace, 1884. Verily hath the Lord fulfilled His promise to His land placed under the protection of the Queen of Heaven!

At same time we have entertained the idea of demonstrating from the returns published annually in Sadlier's Directory, the number of saints and other heavenly dwellers under whose patronage churches in this country have been placed, and it was our wish that week that the long and arduous task of compilation, and the MONITOR is proud of being the first to do so, we hope to furnish its readers with this really interesting table.

In 1785 the Catholic population had increased to 15,000 souls, the number of priests remaining in the same proportion 19, and the number of churches attaching to the then ecclesiastic total of 80. About this time "the great West" began to stretch the tide of immigration, and soon Catholic settlers began to reach in Ohio, Michigan, and what was generally known as the Northwest territory—a region whose boundary lands were undefined. Through the port of New Orleans the Indian of Louisiana became poured into the region at present known as the Southern States, and thus the Catholic Church obtained a foothold in a marvelous manner, so that in 1825, New York alone contained 180,000 Catholics, with fourteen churches and about the same number of priests. Not sixty years have elapsed since then, yet how insignificant these figures look when we compare the half-dozen Dioceses into which the State has been divided, with the date of fifty years ago! Within the boundaries of New York State are at present comprised the Dioceses of New York, Albany, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Ogdensburg and Rochester, having a total of 740 priests, 1,095 churches, and a Catholic population of 1,296,000!

The first Provincial Council of the Church in America was opened in Baltimore, October 9th, 1829, and in the admirable Pastoral Letter which emanated from that august ecclesiastical body, the Bishops say:

"When we look around us, and behold how, within a few years, our churches have multiplied and our numbers increased, we feel deeply grateful to Him who, being able (from the very stones to raise up children) to Abraham,' has allured them to paths of salvation. And certainly there was just ground for such congratulation when, in less than half a century—from 1785 to 1829—the Church of God had become propagated over sufficient territory and strong enough numerically, to establish 11 Dioceses, with 10 Bishops, 232 priests, 230 churches, 9 ecclesiastical seminaries, 8 colleges, 20 female academies, and gather around her altars a Catholic population increased by half a million!

The 7th Council of Baltimore was held in May, 1849, twenty years from the date of the foregoing enumeration, and here again we see the steady growth of our holy faith throughout this favored land.

The number of Bishops had increased from 10 to 33; priests, 1,800; churches, 1,100; and a Catholic population of 3,500,000! Ten years later the census still showed the steady growth of the Catholic body in proportion to the increase of the whole people, there being in 1860, 40 Dioceses, 43; Archbishops, 7; Bishops, 42; priests, 2,242; churches, 2,385, and a Catholic population of 4,000,000, or one-seventh of the entire population of 31,000,000 inhabitants! In 1873 the number of Archbishops had increased to 11; Bishops, 57; Dioceses, 60; Vicariates, 8; priests, 6,650; churches, 5,730; Catholic population, 7,000,000, being more than one-sixth of the entire population of inhabitants which the census returns gave as 40,000,000.

These figures will give our readers a synoptical sketch of the progress of the Church, the history which will close with next year, and we return to the main feature for which this article was written, which is for the purpose of segregating the different churches in all the Dioceses included in the United States, and ascertaining under which special devotion they are placed, or under what patronage and they are dedicated to the service of Almighty God. In this compilation we have included nearly 6,000 churches, but we have omitted all private chapels, convent chapels, mission-any chapels, and all buildings which do not properly come under the definite heading of churches where public worship is regularly celebrated.

From the tabular statistics which we have compiled, we find that 153 Catholic churches in the United States are dedicated to the Sacred Heart of our Divine Lord; 5 under the Ascension; and the Ascension; 8 are dedicated to the Holy Cross; 41 are dedicated to the Holy Cross; 1 each Church of Christ and of the Passion; 26 Church of the Nativity; 2 are styled Church of the Blessed Sacrament; 1 is called Church of the Crucifixion; 1 are dedicated to the Holy Infancy; 3 are called Church of the Epiphany; 1, Church of Perpetual Help; 13; Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, 3; Our Lady of Angels, 1; Our Lady of the Isle 3; Our Lady of Sorrows, 4; Our Lady of Grace 1; Our Lady of Victories, 6; Our Lady of the Lake, 3; Our Lady of Lourdes, 17; Our Lady of Refuge, 3; Our Lady of Mercy, 10; Our Lady of Loretto, 5; Our Lady of Mount Carmel, 38; Our Lady of Guadalupe, 3; Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception, 37; Holy Maternity, 12; Queen of Angels, 1; Star of the Sea, 19; Sacred Heart of Mary, 15; Church of the Visitation, 18; Church of Our Lady, 8; Church of the Assumption, 33.

The churches dedicated to the different saints in the calendar we have placed in their numerical order. St. Joseph properly heads the list with 539 churches under his paternal care. St. Patrick, the Irish Apostle, comes next, with 426, and the other saints follow in the order commencing at: St. John, 180; St. Peter, 178; St. Michael, 137; St. John the Baptist, 101; St. James, 94; St. Anne, 93; St. Paul, 84; St. Peter and Paul, 60; St. Bridget, 74; St. Augustine, 65; St. Anthony, 64; St. Francis Xavier, 56; Thomas, 56; St. Francis, 55; St. Lawrence, 52; St. Francis Xavier, 50; St. Stephen, 49; St. John Evangelist, 47; St. Alopsius, 38; St. Andrew, 36; St. Thereso, 32; St. Catherine, 30; St. Vincent, 30; St. Rose, 30; St. Rose of Lima, 29; St. Nicholas, 29; St. Charles, 28; St. Ambrose, 28; St. Malachy, 27; St. Vincent de Paul, 27; St. Agnes, 27; St. Francis of Assisi, 26; St. Stanislaus, 26; St. Francis de Sales, 25; St. Ignatius, 23; Holy Angels, 23; St. Elizabeth, 22; St. Philip, 22; St. Matthew, 22; St. Benedict, 21; St. Vincent Ferrer, 20; St. Wenceslaus, 20; St. Gertha Boryomeo, 19; St. George, 19; St. Catherine, 18; St. Cecilia, 17; St. Gabriel, 17; St. Columbkille, 15; St. Edward, 15; All Saints, 15; St. Luke, 15; St. Raphael, 14; St. Edward, 14; St. Mary Magdalen, 14; St. Joachim, 14; St. Leonard, 14; St. Mark, 14; St. Columba, 13; St. Clare, 13; St. Philomena, 12; St. Denis, 12; St. Bartholomew, 11; St. Genevieve, 18; St. Leo, 10; St. Jerome, 10; St. Pius, 10; St. Clement, 9; St. John Nepomucen, 8; Guardian Angels, 8; St. Monica, 8; St. Sebastian, 8; St. Wendelin, 8; SS. Cyril and Methodius, 8; St. Casimir, 7; St. Gregory, 7; St. Thomas Aquinas, 7; St. Sebastian, 6; St. Agatha, 6; St. Columbkille, 6; St. Fidelus, 5; St. Hedwige, 5; St. Hyacintha, 5; St. Maurice, 5; St. Isidore, 5; St. Matthias, 5; St. Simon, 5; Saints Peter, Kirran, Leopold, Philip Neri, Margaret, Philip and James, Brendan, Kilian, Laurence O'Toole, Fourteen Holy Martyrs, Helena, Sylvester, 4 each.

The remainder of the saints whose churches in the United States are dedicated, comprise the following: SS. Adalbert, Bruno, Basil, Cloud, Francis Borgia, Holy Innocents, Jarlath, Jacob, John and Paul, Lucy, Raymond, Simon and Jude, Scholastica.

The saints under whose patronage 2 churches in the United States have been placed comprise the following: SS. Amadeus, Alexandria, Anslem, Adrian, Barbara, Canice, Columban, David, Francis de Paula, Fabian, Fiacar, Fiacre, Gall, Ludger, Chrysaba, 2; Isidore, Liborious, Norbert, Rupert, Rosh, Severinus, Timothy, Thomas of Canterbury, Venantius, Virginia, Victoria, Veronica, Walburg, William, and Wenzil.

The saints to whom but a single church in the United States is dedicated are the following: SS. Aegidius, Agnes, Albert, Benignus, Caspar, Cyprian, Cyprian and Cornelius, Crisin, Cronan, Celestine, Canicius, Cunegunde, Dominic, Donatus, Donatian and Rogatian, Estelle, Eusebius, Eventius, Fabiolo, Edmund, Florian, Flamana, Francis Solano, Fernando, Frederick, Genovefa, Gervase and Protase, Germanus, Hippolytus, Inigoe, Irenaeus, Ignace, Januarius, Jacob, John and Paul, Juliana, Kiernan, Leon, Linus, Lucius, Lucy, Landry, Liboty, Ludwig, Martinil, Malachi, Michael Verdelanna, Meinrad, Mahchlar, Nereus and Achillies, Paris, Pancratius, Proscapius, Polycarp, Paddeen, Prosper, Remy, Regus, Robert, Thomas (Apostle), Tamany, Titus, Theodore, Ubaldine, Valerius, Vincenzo, Willbord, and Xenia.

Suggestions Concerning Catholic School Exhibitions.

In all temporal concerns wise people are they who strive to utilize their knowledge in the school of experience. It is from this standpoint that we propose to make a few suggestions which we think will contribute something towards making the annual exhibitions given in Catholic schools more pleasing to private parents, and popils, while not detracting in the least from the merit of the exercises presented.

In the first place, we would suggest that as "Time is money" in this country, it is a waste of a very valuable commodity to consume four or five hours in exercises that could not and should not occupy more than three hours. Commencement exercises which take place at night should close at ten o'clock sharp. Principals of schools should remember that these night exhibitions are attended by people who have parish duties to attend to, and who have to arise at an early hour in the morning to say Mass, and also that among the audience may be many persons who have to leave their daily Mass the next morning in consequence of not being able to go to sleep until after midnight, because they were kept three or four hours in a crowded hall at school exhibition!

Again, the essays are generally too long; out then down to ten minutes' duration, and then win the grateful plaudits of suffering spectators! If the essay is on a physiological, psychological, or metaphysical subject, cut off five minutes more, and thus earn the benediction of the bewildered audience who listen to the essay of some—days no earthly conception what the young logical ego is trying to elucidate!

Again, omit all concertatoes from exhibition programmes, as they only add to the sufferings of spectators and students alike. Let days or weeks, if necessary, be devoted to a thorough and rigid examination of the pupils, but our experience satisfies us that examinations conducted in between songs and recitations are not satisfactory to spectators or students. On the contrary, they are generally too short and superficial to be of any service as criterions of the ability of the scholar, and very often the best pupils are too bashful to show their proficiency in public, while brass takes the precedence of books in receiving public applause. The proper place for examination is in the class room in presence of teachers who are competent to question and criticise pupils, and if parents are anxious to know how their boys or girls are "getting on in their studies," let a general invitation be extended to them to attend. But, as we said before, examinations should be rigidly attended from school exhibitions, as they only prolong the penalties given people who have to pay who are compelled to sit on hard benches for several weary hours!

With these improvements, we are of the opinion that school exhibitions would be more enjoyable and far better appreciated than they are when they are lengthened out to weariness by the introduction of features that do not properly belong to them, and which—though introduced through the best of motives—only lead to make people feel miserable. But we cannot close this article without suggesting without making a request to parents that they hereafter omit flowers from the catalogue of their presents to sons ending their school days. It is one of the most silly-looking spectacles in the world to see a stalwart, beef-eating young man, full of muscle, lugging off, in an awkward way, a lot of floral decorations, while he knowingly anathematizes the foolish people who caused him to look like a young bull in a conservatory! At least, however, the victim of the occasion ask wardly packs his load of the stage, throws them down in a corner, and, after the performance, mayhap he lugs them home, and his mother—sensible woman!—sort day pitches the decaying family of flowers into the ash barrel! If parents, friends, or sweethearts must present something to every young man graduate, for goodness sake let it be something useful, something that he can keep longer than twenty-four hours, something that will be beneficial to him, such as a good watch, a good chain, a suit of clothes, an unabridged Dictionary, Shakespeare's, Brownson's, or Blackstone's works, or some other work or article of kindred utility, but flowers! fough! the very sight of a muscular man affeminated by such a maudlin and bashful offering is repulsive even in its very remembrance!

We are pleased to notice that many of our best Catholic academies for girls have abolished the flower nuisance from their exhibitions, and we are sure such a departure is far more satisfactory than formerly when Miss Flora McFlimsey got baskets of flowers and Miss Modesty Mazes had to hide her tears of indignation because her father did not even go to the expense of shoddy society! Such apishness should be banished from Catholic schools is not in accordance with the saintly kinship that should exist between the children of the Church, and we hope that hereafter the flower fund will be banished from school exhibitions just it has been from the funerals of all decent people.

Graduates Give Your Hearts to God

Hundreds of Catholic young men will graduate from Catholic colleges all over the country at the close of the present scholastic year, and nearly all of them will have to look around for some suitable occupation in life. The legal and medical professions will be adopted by some of them, a few less wise will look for clerkships in some "genteel" line of business, and a moiety of the wiser ones will put aside their graduating sheepskins on the upper shelf of some unused closet, secure employment in some iron foundry, machine shop, or other mechanical workshop, where they can learn a trade, and thus become useful members and not drones—in this great American hive of humanity.

Unfortunately for the country, for society, and for the individuals themselves, our Catholic young men—in many instances—have become inoculated with the Protestant idea that it is beneath the dignity of college graduates to turn themselves into "greasy mechanics." They imagine their education is "lost" if they have to entomb it while they are learning how to guide the plowshare, to mould a stone from the quarry, to cast a horse collar, or to perform any of the elementary duties necessary for all man, who would be master instead of a slave to circumstances. Now that mental cultivation is capital in every branch of industry. Knowledge is power in the shoemaker as well as in the school teacher. The man whose mind is stored with scientific facts is better calculated to be a successful engineer than the man who is merely an uneducated drudge who daily runs in the same groove. Graduation, therefore, in any particular branch, instead of debarring young men above all labor, only qualifies them the better to begin the burden of life at the foot of the ladder and mount to the top triumphantly by means of their mental acquirements supplemented by their already practical experience.

But among all the graduates who will bid farewell to school life this season, how many graduates, really—will give their hearts to God by devoting themselves to His service in the ranks of the Religious Orders or in the sanctuary of the Church!

Into the ears of how many young men does not the voice of God whisper: "My son, My heart, My son," and in how few instances is our Heavenly Father's request granted! The Church, God's spouse, calls her children to become priests at her altars. Our venerable Archbishop has established an Ecclesiastical Seminary where young Levites whose love for God has led them to embrace the highest life of Christian perfection may receive that education and discipline which are all-important ingredients in the formation of those who about to be preachers of God's Word and dispensers of His graces. How many of this year's graduates on this coast will enter St. Thomas' Seminary at Mission San José! We hope to hear of many, but vocations to the priesthood are only by gifted by God's grace through the all-powerful influence of prayer. Catholic parents, therefore, and Catholic professors, also, should pray earnestly to God that they may learn their bounden duty in life and thus begin their life-journey in accordance with the Divine Will.

Perhaps, however, some graduates may not be able to find in themselves a vocation for the priesthood, yet they may desire to lead a godly life in the service of God. Here, again, this Archdiocese is able to give the opportunity of carrying out their desires. At Mariste, in Alameda county, the Christian Brothers have a Novitiate which is admirably located for health, suitably planned for accommodation, and fitted in every way to minister to both the temporal and spiritual wants of studious young men who desire to serve God in the great Order of the venerable La Salle.

The Catholics of every county on the coast are calling out for Christian Brothers to establish schools for boys among them, but in consequence of lack of Novices it has been found impossible to accede to the numerous requests thus made for Christian teachers. The Brothers can do nothing to augment their ranks when dedicated by disease or death, save to pray that God may send them young men worthy to instruct the youth of the land in the ways of Christian life. The Novices must be the product of Catholic parents who so mould the character of their sons as to make them strong enough in Christian virtue to bear the courage and the happiness to enter upon this life and labors of Christian Brothers.

Then, again, there are the ranks of the Dominican and Jesuit Fathers, which also recruits who desire to follow a religious life in community. And thus the Church presents to the Catholic young man who desires to serve God in the religious state many avenues through which he can enter into the service of God in the sanctuary of the Church or in the school room—in both of which, alas! "the laborers are few," while the harvest of souls to be garnered into the granary of God is indeed great.

We ask therefore, that our Catholic parents should ponder over the fact that all our young men are not given to the world. Give some of them to God's service. And then we hope that such of the graduates of Catholic colleges as have not yet chosen an avocation in life will ponder on the position in which the Church and Christian education is placed, and earnestly pray to know if God wills that their behalf, and if He calls them to the priesthood, or to become disciples of La Salle, let them—like the Apostles—leave all things and follow Him. Let their prayer be, Lord speak!

"Lord, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
The night is dark, and I am far from home,
Keep Thou my feet! I do not ask to see
The distant scene; one step enough for me."

The Democratic Suicide at Stockton.

When we read over the proceedings of the State Democratic Convention which recently convened in Stockton, we very naturally concluded that all the crazy people in the State had congregated in the San Joaquin river were not confined within the limits of the State Lunatic Asylum located within the corporate limits of that lively city! The reason for this conclusion was based simply upon the fact that Dr. Shurtleff's wards could not have committed more crazy blunders than those perpetrated by the demented delegates to that referendum convention. "Bourne" is stamped on every paragraph of the proceedings, and the Convention was a realistic representation of the gospel parable of the blind leading the blind when both fall into the ditch! The Democracy, in like manner, when led by the big and little Bourne, is sure to find itself in a ditch wherein it will have to wallow in corruption until some good, honest, charitable Samaritan comes along and binds up the wounds which the treacherous tricksters have made upon the body corporate, and then takes it from the foul atmosphere that surrounds it.

What a humiliating and pitiful sight to see such a great political power as the Democracy of California, committing political suicide! Is it possible that party bosses expect the people are as blind and as bad as their party managers? Do they really imagine that the Democratic masses are "going it blind" at the beck of Bourne and Shurtleff, and believe it is to buy and sell candidates across the counters—like so many chattels sold on the block in earlier days south of Mason's and Dixon's line? We have too much confidence in the intelligence of the Democracy to charge them with consenting at such crooked-ness! but they are cowards and creatures if—a Bourne and Shurtleff can lead them by the nose wherever their leaders may desire to lead them! Yet, we hope that everything will be done in the coming campaign to show that the Democracy of California is not the creature of any ring or combination of rascals, and that everything will be done to show that the Democracy of California is not the creature of any ring or combination of rascals, and that we hereby invite the Democracy of the country to come to California and see how a party can be manipulated by a ring of rascals, and how a party can be made to do anything practical to avoid the rule of the ring. We have no fear that the Democratic party will be defeated in this State, but we do regret to note that the Democracy of California will find itself in should Judge Field receive the nomination for President at the National Democratic Convention, and we hope that should he be elected, how clin the Democratic Presidential electors pledged against him, be expected to vote for him! Do the Democracy desire to prostitute themselves into a position where the fraud of 1876 can be repeated! If not, they had better rescind their action in nominating Presidential electors until they first know who the candidate is, and then nominate men who are in sympathy with their Presidential nominee. As it stands at present, neither the national platform of the party nor the Democratic candidate may suit the views of the Stockton candidates for Presidential electors, hence they will not act as earnestly as if their selection had been left until the choice of the National Convention was known and the battle-cry of the party had been proclaimed. It was another Stockton blunder, then, to buy a band of horses before the stable had been built to hold them. Any of Dr. Shurtleff's "subjects" here more sense than to commit such a blunder!

In case Judge Field should be the choice of the Democratic National Convention, one of the present nominees for Presidential electors, or any member of the Stockton Convention, advocate his election as sure as there is a silver left of the plank in the platform which placed the brand of the Bourne brothers upon it, as a mere piece of folly perpetrated by the blind followers of the blind at Stockton, but, to the credit of the Shurtleff's "subjects," be it said that they had no share in this ridiculous resolution!

Resolved, That the Democracy of California unanimously endorse the Presidential aspirations of Judge Field, and that we hereby pledge ourselves to support him if he be the nominee of the National Convention of July 8, 1884, who will not before the convention judge Field withdraw his aspirations."

In the face of this silly fanfaronade of the Bourne and his bedizzoned followers, Judge Field's nomination is "booming" up every day since the sage of Gramercy Park, and the Democracy of California, and predictions are made by politicians like Senator Fair of Nevada that Judge Field will carry every Democratic county in California! If such political manipulations should take place, we hope Dr. Shurtleff will prepare an extra large number of strait-jackets for the use of the dozens of Bourne delegates whose demented conduct at Stockton will doubtless require them when the clerks say "Field for over?" reaches Calidornia from Chicago!

What good purpose was accomplished by the Bourne-blinded delegates who met outside the Insane Asylum at Stockton by assaulting—at this critical period in politics—the friends and followers of Representatives Hoskins and Tully? Why dissect them when no complaints against them came up from the people? Let us answer: Political Dunces are akin to that species of horse-traders who never resist a "dickey" on the gain a dollar, and as the present representative in Congress refused to "cross the palm" of the political Bone, he traded them off for cribs whose political pedigrees are far inferior in the wind, spavin, and ringbone! Yet, we hope, Hoskins and Tully will be elected, and that the Democratic party will find itself in should Judge Field receive the nomination for President at the National Democratic Convention, and we hope that should he be elected, how clin the Democratic Presidential electors pledged against him, be expected to vote for him! Do the Democracy desire to prostitute themselves into a position where the fraud of 1876 can be repeated! If not, they had better rescind their action in nominating Presidential electors until they first know who the candidate is, and then nominate men who are in sympathy with their Presidential nominee. As it stands at present, neither the national platform of the party nor the Democratic candidate may suit the views of the Stockton candidates for Presidential electors, hence they will not act as earnestly as if their selection had been left until the choice of the National Convention was known and the battle-cry of the party had been proclaimed. It was another Stockton blunder, then, to buy a band of horses before the stable had been built to hold them. Any of Dr. Shurtleff's "subjects" here may have more sense than to commit such a blunder!

In case Judge Field

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1884.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 28.

22—Monday—St. Boniface Bishop and Martyr.
23—Tuesday—Nativity of St. John the Baptist.
24—Wednesday—St. Gallicant, Martyr.
25—Thursday—St. John and Paul Martyrs.
26—Friday—St. Hilen, Abbot and Confessor.
27—Saturday—St. Leo, II. Pope and Confessor.
28—Sunday—SS. Peter and Paul.

HELP THE SISTERS OF THE HOLY FAMILY.

The Sisters of the Holy Family—aside from the amount of good they accomplish among the poor and the sick—have a special claim upon the charity of the citizens of San Francisco in consequence of the Orphan Asylum being located in the City. The Order has now 300 orphaned children, the children of the destitute poor, whom they are daily fed and cared for while their parents are at work, and by this act of mercy the Sisters are able to accomplish a vast amount of good for widows and other worthy women who are compelled to work out in order to support their helpless children. The Sisters of the Holy Family share the burden of parental care, they bring up the children, keep them neat in their attire, furnish them good meals to eat and little one to sleep in, a playground and all the appliances which go to make the life of a child happy. The Order has now 300 children in their charge, and the cost of their support is a very heavy item in the expenses of the Institution

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. I. HARE — EDITOR

—PRO-DIGOLETS—

I WOULD LIKE TO SEE.—
By Marmion.

As "oil" pay the piffers, whatever the sizes
And not alter them, lest he could!
The eight-letter square, that now is quite rare
Found in every department so good.

A few more fair writers, good charade-inditers
To make all the columns look neat;
Then we'll see the fighting and poor tyros
Retire in a fit of chagrin.

A 'rebus, or other to boot.
A league in rash city. Ahe! New's the pity
But few of them s'er can be found;
A Directory come out, where we'd find about
Addresses of friends, I'll be bound.

Meer bitatest shown, in the net, things have Doubtless
Quiet (of isle!)
And diehon new papers, that wouldn't cut capers
And suspend at the usual rate.

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 68.

1.—Avion, rooster, cushion, infants, stamin women.
2.—Sextet, alliste, pierce, tinder, inform, ewers.
3.—Gamut, shamer, strange, tamarn, amusement, sandal, dreams.
4.—Dunbar, upside, dudson, student, license.
5.—Eclipse, alliste, glisten, listers, estelle, sister, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
6.—Picket, complain, immense, spelter, blisters.
7.—Gamut, hunter, assault, sternum, shamer, ferment.
8.—Ragnar, sarate, gamma, greater, casting, ranger, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
9.—Sadness, lakeside, alarum, statute, lessons, sadness.
10.—Lemon, alabaster, camera, alandre, ebonite, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
11.—Alaska, amount, hanste, aperior, letters.
12.—Lemon, plaster, mentor, stricken, steel-ed, gamma, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
13.—Mamma, agaian, reverse, alemon, ammon, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
14.—Sewer, strange, snake, tremor, lakeside, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
15.—Gamut, nudum, sawsis, cluster, lantern, tumour, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
16.—Tamarn, lakeside, sagacious, sternum, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.
17.—Gamut, sternum, sagacity, shamer, hanste, sandal, sagacious.
18.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, sternum, sternum.
19.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
20.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, sternum.
21.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
22.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
23.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
24.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
25.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
26.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
27.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
28.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
29.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
30.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
31.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
32.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
33.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
34.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
35.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
36.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
37.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
38.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
39.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
40.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
41.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
42.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
43.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
44.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
45.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
46.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
47.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
48.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
49.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
50.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
51.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
52.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
53.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
54.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
55.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
56.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
57.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
58.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
59.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
60.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
61.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
62.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
63.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
64.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
65.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
66.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
67.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
68.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
69.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
70.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
71.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
72.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
73.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
74.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
75.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
76.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
77.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
78.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
79.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
80.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
81.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
82.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
83.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
84.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
85.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
86.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
87.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
88.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
89.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
90.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
91.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
92.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
93.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
94.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
95.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
96.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
97.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
98.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
99.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.
100.—Sagacity, sternum, tamarn, crusaders, tamarn, tamarn.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,

Respectfully announce that they have opened

THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—WITH A LINE OF—
GENT'S AND BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.

Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.

We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible

CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And line with JOHN A. CO.

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON
968 and 970 Folsom St.,
San Francisco.
WHOLESALE —
WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS
ESTABLISHED 1870.
We are selling Cheap for Cash and guarantee our goods.
The following for prices will convince you.
PER GALLON
White Wines ..... 50c, 75c, 75c, and $1
Angelica Wines ..... $1, $1.25 and $1.50
Port Wines ..... 75 c, $1, $1.25 and $1.50
Sherry Wines ..... 75 c, $1, $1.25 and $1.50
Cognac Brandies ..... $1.50, $1.75, $2 and $2.50
Jamaica Rum ..... $1.50, $1.75, $2 and $2.50
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc., $2 per gal. and upwards
Duke Wines and Liquors at low set rates.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.
—MANUFACTURERS OF—
Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes,
811 and 813 California Street.
Safes made for church and other uses. Second-hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

GENERAL
Atlantic Steam-Ship Agency,
613 MARKET STREET, 613.
Tickets sold over ALL Atlantic Steam-ship Lines
AT LOWEST RATES
DRAFTS PAYABLE ON DEMAND FRIENDS OR FAMILIES IN EUROPE, FOR SALE IN SUMS TO SUIT.
A. MALPAS, Agent.
C. E. HORTON, Assistant Agent.

RAILROADS.

SOUTH PACIFIC COAST R. R.

PASSENGER TRAINS LEAVE STATION, FOOT OF Market street:
8.30 A.M. daily, Alameda, Branch, Centerville, San Jose, Santa Cruz, Lo Gatos, Los Gatos, Wrights, Glenwood, Felton, Big Trees, SANTA CRUZ, and All Way Stations.
2.30 P.M. (except Sunday), Hayward, San Mateo, Alameda, Branch, Centerville, San Jose, Agnews, Santa Cruz, SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and All Way Stations.
4.30 P.M. daily, for SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and intermediate points.
8.5 STUNDAYS to SANTA CRUZ and 50 20 to SAN JOSE, Santa Clara, LOS GATOS and BURLEGAME, to return until MONDAY, inclusive.
8.00 A.M. every Sunday, Excursion to SAN JOSE and SANTA CRUZ.
$2 00 to SAN JOSE and SANTA CRUZ.
$1 50 to SANTA CLARA and SAN JOSE.

TO OAKLAND AND ALAMEDA.
14.00, 10.00, 17.00, 7.30, 1.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.30, 10.00, 11.00, 11.00 A. M. 12.00, 12.30, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 P. M.
From FOURTEENTH AND WEBSTER STREETS, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00, 12.00, 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 A. M. 12.00, 1.00, 2.00, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00, 7.00, 8.00, 9.00, 10.00, 11.00 P. M.
From FIRST STREET, ALAMEDA—46.15, 6.45, 10.15, 6.45, 7.15, 7.45, 8.15, 8.45, 9.15, 9.45, 10.15, 10.45, 11.15, 11.45 A. M. 12.15, 12.45, 1.15, 1.45, 2.15, 2.45, 3.15, 3.45, 4.15, 4.45, 5.15, 5.45, 6.15, 6.45, 7.15, 7.45, 8.15, 8.45, 9.15, 9.45, 10.15, 10.45, 11.15 P. M.
TICKET, Telegraph and Transfer Office, 202 Montgomery street, San Francisco.
L. PHILLIPS, Superintendent. R. H. RAPSATT, G. P. & P. Agt.

QUICK TIME
AND COMFORTABLE
To Eastern and European Cities
via the Great Transcontinental All rail Routes, CENTRAL PACIFIC R. R.
—OR—
SOUTHERN PACIFIC R. R.
Daily Expressed and Reclining Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East,
—AND—
New York & New Orleans
with the several Steamer Lines
TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.
PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS
attached to Overland Express Trains.
THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS
are run daily with Overland Emigrant Trains.
No additional charge for Berths in Third-class Cars.
Tickets sold, Sleeping car Berths secured, and baggage checked through from application at the Company's Offices, where passengers calling in person can secure choice of berths, etc.
RAILROAD LANDS
NEVADA, CALIFORNIA AND TEXAS,
For Sale on Reasonable Terms.
Apply in, or address,
W. H. MILLS, Land Agent, San Francisco.
JEROME MADDEN, Land Agent, Sacramento.
C. P. A. T. & S. F.
H. S. ASHBURY, Land Commissioner, G. M. & S. A. Ry. Co., San Antonio, Texas.
A. N. TOWNE, General Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt. San Francisco, Cal.

—THE—
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO.
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.
SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
OF
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.
SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.
My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
We need ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, though to a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys,
Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.
Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censors, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.
NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are, as Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
ALSO—
PURTHER NOVELTY of the Celebrated Lenten Edition, with all addresses to date.
Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
I UE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA . . . . CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of providing for young ladies, a lifelong expense, a moral and intellectual education. The fashions in particular should recommend this Academy, to the influence ever exerted in favor of the graceful manners and habits of economy and to render them useful members of society in after years.
The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences on the Second Monday of August and ends in June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $50
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA,..... CALIFORNIA
This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, covered promenades, swimming pond, etc. It possesses a meteorological observatory, a museum of Natural History, a Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus, and a collection of Minerals, Shells, etc., per mission. For the latter a new building 100x40 feet has been erected, that large enough for its intended purpose.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.$ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of Linen, Use of Bed, Mattress, Bedstead and Bedclothes, Table, etc., per session of five months.....$ 250 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.
REV. E. KENNY, S. J.
President.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Fifth and Jackson Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School for boys only, up to the age of fifteen years. Its object is to combine with the ordinary course of studies with the advantages of a healthy and pleasant location.
Purity and gentleness, fostering of sending their sons to a safe Boarding School, need only the Christian Brothers' name to secure patronage. The Brothers have spared no pains to perfect the arrangements and improvements of the boarding house, and furnish it with every comfort.
The present study embraces the Spanish branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included) $200 00
Washing 1 50
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution) 15
Piano, Violin, Guitar, Vocal Music, Dancing, Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
BROTHER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, is chartered by the State Legislature, and endows with all the rights and privileges of similar College Institutions in the United States.
Reference required. For terms and particulars address,
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE,
Twelfth and K streets,
SACRAMENTO.....CAL
A LIMITED NUMBER OF BOARDERS RECEIVE a fatherly care in acquiring a thorough education and, at the same time, enjoying the comforts of a home, in a home atmosphere.
TERMS: Board, Tuition and Washing, $21 per quarter, for particulars apply to SRO. GERVERN, Director.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,
Golden Gate Ave. San Francisco
CONDUCTED BY
THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.
THIS ACADEMY, PLEASANTLY SITUATED on the western addition offers every opportunity for a thorough education, at reasonable. Two terms of five months each. The scholastic year, 10 months. Pupils may enter at any time. All communications must be addressed
SISTER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME
THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1851, chartered in 1875 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Jackson street, between Jones and Leavenworth streets. For the latter a new building 100x40 feet has been erected, that large enough for its intended purpose.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.$ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of Linen, Use of Bed, Mattress, Bedstead and Bedclothes, Table, etc., per session of five months.....$ 250 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.
REV. E. KENNY, S. J.
President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
BENICIA .....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 1st of August, and ends about the 1st of June.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly).
Board and Tuition.....$ 125
Entrance Fee.....
Washing.....
Pupils not boarding in the Academy during Play will be charged $20.
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed with stamp.
SISTER SUPERIOR.

Convent of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary,
GILROY, . . . CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, CONDUCTED by the religious sisters of the M. H. and I. H. of M.
For terms, etc., apply to the superior.
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

URSULINE ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
The Fourth Annual Session begins
AUGUST, 1884.
For Prospectus and full particulars, Address
SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINE ACADEMY,
Santa Rosa, Cal.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,
SAN LUIS OBISPO . . . CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG ladies, conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.
The home is situated in the pleasant town of San Luis Obispo, in the Southern Coast Range.
SISTER RAYMONDA GERARDELLI, Principal.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING FOR sale advantages to young ladies who desire to receive a solid and refined education, was founded in 1851. In 1868, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and subsequently, it has been so extended that the College now is under all the rights and privileges of College Institutions.
It occupies large buildings, with extensive and shady grounds, covered promenades, swimming pond, etc. It possesses a meteorological observatory, a museum of Natural History, a Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus, and a collection of Minerals, Shells, etc., per mission. For the latter a new building 100x40 feet has been erected, that large enough for its intended purpose.
The scholastic year comprises ten months. It opens on the 1st of August, and ends about the 1st of June.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, (payable in advance.)
Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Spanish Branches, Washing and Lodging, and use of bedding.....$ 62 50
Entrance Fee.....
Pupils not boarding in the College.....
Painting in Water Colors.....
Painting in Oil, per lesson.....
Vocal and Instrumental Music, each.....
For further particulars, address,
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
San Jose.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Fifth and Jackson Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS A SELECT BOARDING School for boys only, up to the age of fifteen years. Its object is to combine with the ordinary course of studies the advantages of a healthy and pleasant location.
Purity and gentleness, fostering of sending their sons to a safe Boarding School, need only the Christian Brothers' name to secure patronage. The Brothers have spared no pains to perfect the arrangements and improvements of the boarding house, and furnish it with every comfort.
The present study embraces the Spanish branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly in advance)
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included) $200 00
Washing 1 50
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution) 15
Piano, Violin, Guitar, Vocal Music, Dancing, Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
BROTHER SUPERIOR.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
TERMS:
Per Quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $50
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
CHARTERED IN 1869, AND CONDUCTED by the priests of the Congregation of the Mission. Terms for scholastic year, $200 payable half yearly in advance.
REV. J. BURKE, President.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,
SAN LUIS OBISPO . . . CALIFORNIA
BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG ladies, conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.
The home is situated in the pleasant town of San Luis Obispo, in the Southern Coast Range.
SISTER RAYMONDA GERARDELLI, Principal.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, is chartered by the State Legislature, and endows with all the rights and privileges of similar College Institutions in the United States.
Reference required. For terms and particulars address,
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
Marysville, Cal.

MONITOR MENTION.

— Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 734 Market street.

— Watches or clocks cleaned, and warranted, 50c. Warerooms, 110 Third street.

— Chrome Dental Association, 842 Market street—Lady attendant. $7 per set; filling from $1; extracting, 50c; and with gas, of which we make a specialty, $1.

— Dr. Smith's Cholera Vile Oil is sure to take the first premium for healing ointment.

— Ladies' Call on Mrs. L. E. Jackson, milliner, 1443 Post street, near Van Ness Ave., where is kept the best goods in the latest styles.

— New Parlorkoir, 604 Howard street. Money for our benefit of ladies, on Clothing, Furniture, Jewelry, Bedding and all Household Articles. Business private.

— J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. Jewelry and fancy stores.

— If a set for teeth—warranted as good as can be made, Teeth filling, $1. Dr. Simms, Dentist, 828 Market street.

— The Prescott House, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under the proprietorship of Mrs. Jennie Prescott, continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. The rates for board and rooms range from $1 to $1 50 per day, or less by the week. Good accommodations for families, and country readers will find the Prescott cheap, central and accommodating.

— The National Surgical Institute, 319 Bush street, is the Western Division of the N. S. Institute of Indianapolis and Philadelphia, which is celebrated for the cure of all deformities and all joints crooked or stiff, also feet, legs and spinal diseases. Call at the above address and office for curing them. Reference given and cures made in your town. Reference given and cures made in your town.

— Mr. John Lambla, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of Lambla & Co., in the Licensed Employment Office, 104 Geary street. This firm was established in 1850, and has always business they have built up will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lambla, who has at his disposal at all times the best facilities for supplying families in the city or country with the most competent and reliable domestic, mechanical, mechanical or laboring household, agricultural desired by employers.

— Mr. Alexander of Alexander's Dyeing and Scouring Works, 638 Market, 106 Geary street, 6 F., describing the kind of help required, your wants will be faithfully attended to entirely satisfactorily.

— JAMES HANRAHAN,
Real Estate and Collection Agent. Prompt and Responsible in the management of Property, Building and Collecting. Legal Papers of all kinds drawn. Money to Loan, Rents and Bills of all kinds collected. Office, 1 Montgomery street, opposite Lick House, 1 to 3 P. M. business hours. Refers by permission to Hon. Philip H. Ryan, Hon. John Mullany, Hon. Jas. Mullany.

— The Wonder Flower and Feather Store, No. 1004 Market street, is now in the 11th year of its existence, and is daily gaining ground and popularity. Sent any to be sold at very cheap rates all kinds of artificial flowers, feathers, fancy goods, etc. Call and see if the store is well stocked. Ladies, the proprietor has on hand a fine assortment of ostrich feathers, which she will sell very cheap, and will always ready to show goods to visitors and customers.

— Dandelion Bitters regulates the stomach and bowels and heals.

— CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.
The Order C. K. of A., has already over 300 branches, and never failed to pay a death claim. All over the United States, there are branches, and the Order is growing at the rate of 10 and 12 each week. Any one from Most Reverend P. J. Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, and Primate of the United States, down to the humblest Catholic, is eligible to membership in the Order. Application blanks, and information, may be obtained from the Secretary of any branch, or from the Supreme Branch No. 1, P. Schmitz, 1007 Market st., San Francisco.

— Advice to Mothers.
Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once, produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the little child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-

— We will not be responsible for a cure unless Dandelion Bitters.

— Ladies, if you want an elegant and look smart, where Bailey's Walker Shoe Emporium, 1 Montgomery avenue, is the place to buy boots, ladies' fine and gaiters. Warranted not to rub off. Do not forget the place, 1 Montgomery avenue, opposite Lick House, San Francisco. Our boot by mail or express, 1 pair ladies' or gents' straight or tip, $2 50.

— A positive cure for dyspepsia, drink Dandelion Bitters.

STAINED GLASS
For Domestic and Church Uses,
Made up in the highest art by the
LA PARGE DECORATIVE CO.
Of New York.
The leading authority in the United States on Decorative Art.
MEMORIAL WINDOWS
A Specialty.
Samples on Exhibition at our Store. Call and Inspect.
Glacier Decoration,
or Imitation Stained Glass,
The best manufactured in the world. Suitable for all purposes and for any size. A full stock of various patterns constantly on hand.
C. W. CLARK & CO.,
Sole Agents,
641 and 647 Market Street, San Francisco.
WALL PAPERS,
American, French and English.
Artistic Designs.
REGILDING and all kinds of INTERIOR DECORATING done in an artistic manner by skilled artists.
Manufacturers of Window Shades, all kinds, plain or made to order. Corner Poles and Tiles.
C. W. CLARK & CO.,
643 and 647 Market St.
CATHOLIC PICTURE STORE!
D. J. QUIRK,
Importer and Manufacturer of Pictures, Mirrors and Frames,
Steel Engravings, Etc.,
48 FOURTH ST.,
Bet. Mission and Howard Sts., San Francisco.
Large Stock of every description made to order. Engraving, Lace Curtains, Cornices, etc. Agent for the Portrait Gem.
NEW SCHOOL BOOKS!
OLD SCHOOL BOOKS!
Sold, Bought and Exchanged
—AT—
A. BOURGOIN'S
AntiquarianBookStore
506 MONTGOMERY AVE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PACIFIC STEAM
CARPET BEATING
And Renovating Works.
WHITENING
In all its Branches Thoroughly and Promptly Done.
OAKLAND BRANCH—Twenty-first street and Telegraph ave. Prompt attention will be given to orders sent by Mail. Telephone 3238.
333 GOLDEN GATE AVE.
(TYLER STREET.)
CONKLIN BROS., Proprietors.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST.
Life Scholarships $70.

WHITE STAR LINE
U. S. AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS,
Between New York, Queenstown and Liverpool.
These steamers are among the largest and fastest vessels afloat and have all the modern improvements which tend to the comfort of a voyage. Saloons amidships, where the motion of the vessel is felt as little as possible. Cuisine unsurpassed. Passengers booked through to all points in Europe at the lowest rates. Steerage passengers will find their berths and meals of the best every where and at cheap as by any other first class line. Apply to any agent of the company.
48 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

E. DONNELLY, M. D.,
Physician, Surgeon and Accoucheur
OFFICE AND RESIDENCE:
150 FOURTH ST.
Cor. Howard, S. F.
Hours—8 to 10 A. M.; 1 to 4 P. M.; and Evening.
Surgical Operations a Specialty.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND . . . PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,
San Francisco.
Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,013½ barrels.

ESTABLISHED 1858.
J. O'KANE,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
HARNESS, SADDLES,
WHIPS, BLANKETS,
and Everything necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.
Boots and Rubber Goods a Specialty
Single Harness from $18 a set.
Repairing promptly attended to.
767 MARKET ST
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.
Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for horses. The only to all the principal racecourses and horsemen on the Pacific Coast.

ASK FOR
BROOKS' SPOOL COTTON
Superior to any other Thread in the World.
Strong, Smooth, Even, Elastic.
Always Reliable.
Unsurpassed for Machine Sewing.
Sold by all Leading Jobbers and Retailers.
Manufactured by the BROOKS MFG. CO.
Paterson, N. J.

UNDERTAKERS.

ATKINS MASSEY,
UNDERTAKER.
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKER, Tuscan's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fish's Metallic Burial Cases.
Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.
Office—841 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

F. A. O'BRIEN. A. F. HOZIER
O'CONNOR & SHEEHY,
UNDERTAKERS,
767 Mission Street,
Bet. Third and Fourth ..... San Francisco.
Every Requisite for Funerals furnished at the Lowest Rates and to the Best Manner.

TRAIN, PLANAGAN. E. A. CALLAGHER
FLANAGAN & CALLAGHER,
UNDERTAKERS,
No. 26 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.
EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

UNITED UNDERTAKERS
—AND—
Embalming Parlors,
27 and 29 FIFTH ST.
Telephone No. 2257.

NATHAN GRAY. C. S. WRIGHT. J. J. CRAVEN
N. Gray & Co.,
UNDERTAKERS,
641 Sacramento Street,
Cor. Webb ..... San Francisco.
EMBALMING.
Metallic Burial Cases and Caskets

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. HENLEY'S
CELERY BEEF AND IRON
(Vegetable Extract)
Combines the Wonderful Nutritive Properties of Celery, Beef and Iron, with the Tonic Properties of Calisaya Bark and Cascarilla.
A FABULOUS DISCOVERY.
Worth Millions to the Human Family—Cures as a Charm.
The habitual daily use of this vegetable is much more beneficial to man than most poisonous medicines. The writer, who is familiar with the virtues of vegetables with many men and women, whose various causes have become so much afflicted with nervous debility, that they entertain out their hands they chose life upon trees, but by a moderate use of celery and other vegetables, are strong to serve as other people. We have known others to be cured of paralysis induced by the use of celery. Hal. was recommended by Dr. Hunter of Portland, Oregon, a bottle of "Celery, Beef and Iron." We read of a man who was so paralyzed that he was relieved from his bed and from a wheel chair, presented by friends, who was able to walk and to be very engaged in business. We have heard of a lady who was so nervous that she was afraid to leave her room, who was cured by the use of Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron. We know of a man who was so prostrated with nervous exhaustion that he was unable to write his name, who was cured by the use of Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron. "We read of a man who was so nervous that he was afraid to leave his room, who was cured by the use of Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron." We read of a man who was so prostrated with nervous exhaustion that he was unable to write his name, who

POLITICAL.

Tilden's Letter of Declination.

HIS POLITICAL CAREER ENDED FOREVER.

THE STOCKTON DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

List of Nominees for Presidential Electors, for Congressional Districts and Delegates to the National Convention.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN'S LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The following communication from Samuel J. Tilden has been given to the Associated Press:

NEW YORK, June 10.

To Samuel Managhe, Chairman of the Democratic State Centennial, New York: In my letter of June 14th, 1880, addressed to the delegates from the State of New York to the Democratic National Convention, I said: "Having two terms my full share of labors and cares in the presidential and vexatious conflicts of the last four, and as I desire nothing so much as an honorable retirement, I hope to be allowed to spend the rest of my days quietly in the ranks of my party, and under the leadership of others." I adhere to that resolution. I desire nothing so much as an honorable retirement. I hope to be allowed to spend the rest of my days quietly in the ranks of my party, and under the leadership of others. I have never been in any full share of labors and cares in the presidential and vexatious conflicts of the last four, and as

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE MOUNTAIN STREAMS.

The mountain streams of Ireland,
How gaudily rolling down,
They laugh and leap in their glee and scorn,
By castle moats and towers:
They chase the exile in his woe,
Who sees them in his dreams—
The streams he loved long, long ago—
The rushing mountain streams.

They roll a frolicsome order down
They carry a captive rule,
And unmoved by the tyrants bell
Full many a thrilling tale:
They see the Danish barbs pass on,
And hoard their broken scheme
They see the Sassenach Irish rose—
The bright eternal stream.

Methinks thy ancient Earth, O Isle!
Poor bearer! doth tremble anon,
Where thy subjugation, rending springs
In dazzling beauty throng!
For yet your pregnant volume thrill
Of the olden heroic theme
Which haunt the exile's memory still,
Yet supposes mountain streams!

Oh, rushing, ah angle streams!
Ye are gushing here I've mourned,
For you and all your pastoral scenes
Ye shall be my theme forever!
Yet, yet I hope some time to roam
Where your banks of verdure
Along the utility, rushing river
Of Ireland's boundary, Oil.

DUBOIS.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

TO MY MOTHER.

"Shut down the curtain, Mother dear,
I'm tired of the world and care."

Endless blessings have it Bagnes
Even in the weakest hours,
Thy tender, loving, Mother's Heaven
Over the blow their mind impart.

Beauty's smile, love claim, how rapid
When the hour of death is near,
Let bind words there, and we have rapid,
Let bind words there, and we have rapid.
All the shores of life unfold.

What is life without kind feeling!
What are hopes with none to share!
What, then! is life without a friend?
Twere the happy home is one.

Kindred, sweet home, friends
When we bring friendship, dance,
Life is a joyous paradise
Worry upon deep heavy tears.

Kindness, kindness, love is Bagnes
Even in the roughest hours,
Gowing brighter, the Time's Bagnes
Comes the hour with God's art.

GUSSIE.

Literary Miscellany.

Tom's Crucifix.

A TOUCHING TRUTHFUL CATHOLIC STORY.

CHAPTER III.

Days and weeks passed by, and through Tom Rogers and nothing, the old man was still working in his mind, and he felt he could not be doing something to be happy, but he had of being a burden to Mrs. Kelly, and had hard work to support herself and her child.

But Tom's story to get employment in life in London, when he was a stranger, hoping who could be for better than he, and he was a stranger.

Poor Mary, thought struck him; why shouldn't he go to sea? He had heard a lot talking about it once, and saying what the great life of sailing boys when a day was long way to the sea, and Tom had no idea that a vessel could be found there in London.

One day he confided his wish to Mary, who was sorry to part with her friend, but, whether for him, Mrs. Kelly to come home. "If Mary, I be sailor," he said, "I'll be a sailor, if I need be true."

There was a perfect forest of masts—towards of all sizes, and the boy's spirits rose at the sight, for surely he would find some one to take him from amongst so many.

While he stood gazing vistfully a gentleman who had been watching his face, touched his shoulder, "Are you a strange boy, my lad, or are you looking for somebody?"

"I'm looking for somebody to ll take me a-board one of them ships and make a sailor of me," said Tom, looking up into the good-natured face.

"Where's your father and mother, boy?"

"Ah! I get say; I lived with a woman who had kind to me, but she'd hard work to keep herself, so I'm going to sea."

"How do you know you'll like it?"

"I know I'll like it; I can tell by the very looks of it."

The gentleman laughed. "How would you like to have a voyage with me? I've lost a boy in my ship, and we sail to-morrow morning."

"I'd like it uncommonly," said Tom, with glistening eyes.

"But then you'd have to speak a good word for you. How am I to know you'll behave yourself? You'll get a good rope-end if you don't."

"But Tom was in no way discouraged. "All right," he said, "I don't care so long as you'll take me."

"Well, come and see how you like the look of my ship, and then if you're in the mind and I'll give you a trial."

All Tom's fears and regrets were gone then, and he felt happy as he was young and good, and he felt happy. He followed his new master to a vessel that was lying in the middle of the stream, and he felt quite a sailor, and he felt happy.

Before many hours the old man between him and the few friends he had, who were sorry that time was drawing near for him to leave, but Tom got a good-natured sailor to write a few words to his own friends, to Mrs. Kelly, and this letter was put into the post before the vessel sailed.

Poor little Mary was in terrible distress when she found her companion gone, and was highly vexed when her mother let her in all directions. If it had not happened that a neighbour had seen him start with his bundle, nothing would have convinced her he was not kidnapped or gone off with some one could only persist in saying they should hear something of him yet, there was too much good in the boy for him to go off for any bad reason.

Now of course everybody had something to say. "Depend on it, Mrs. Kelly," said one, "you'll have a letter more or less, it shows the way if you've been kind to any one; they go off when they've had all kind of treat."

"Ah, I thought no good would come of such a stranger. "Yes you'll be for taking in street-boys again in a hurry, I'm thinking."

But in spite of all this Mrs. Kelly and Mary would think no harm of Tom, and they were not at all surprised when the postman brought a letter written in a newspaper, and addressed to Mrs. Kelly, and it could tell, were Tom's. This is what he said:—

"Dear Mrs. Kelly,—I hope you will not be angry with me for leaving you without a word, but I thought it would be better to go off and not let you know I was going to sea, for I thought I'd make a fortune and come home rich, and I'd be able to give you a good Christmas dinner, and I'd be able to give Mary a good Christmas dinner, and I'd be able to give Mary a good Christmas dinner, and I'd be able to give Mary

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SECOND YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper Published on the Pacific Coast.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1884.

CIRCULAR LETTER

—FROM—

Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., Archbishop of San Francisco.

TO THE CLERGY AND LAITY OF THE DIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO:

Dearly Beloved:—One of the greatest curse derelving upon the Bishop, as it should be an object of the greatest pride to the people, is the proper administration of the Clergy.

The Church of God is of divine institution, but it works through human agencies. The Eternal Son of God, coming down from heaven to establish his religion for the salvation of the world, selected the weak instruments of men for his work, and was himself the preacher of the first Christian sermon.

To them and to their successors, in the person of the Clergy of perpetuating his holy teaching, promising to remain with them forever.

He then ordained the world by that divine mission, and left in his Church, as heirs of his power of redemption, seven sacraments, to be administered to those because agents divinely chosen for the purpose. We see, then, that the salvation of souls depends on a duly-ordained ministry for all that pertains to our religious interests. But this week comes not from Our Blessed Lord's Gospel, the great Pastoral victory over the injustice of the Italian usurper. Our people will remember that we published the news a few months ago that the Pontiff was in Rome, where none the other of many exiles beneath conversional silence, was about to be denounced by excoriating Sheffield a statue to the Robber King—Victor Emanuel. The Holy Father protested against such an outrage being perpetrated in the ancient pagan temple dedicated to the worship of God, but the Italian Minister dy was determined to carry out this gross violation of religious worship, and accordingly, made all the preparations for its consummation. In the last month, however, a sober second thought seems to have taken possession of the despoilers of the Holy See, and they have abandoned their original plan, acceded to the desires of the Sovereign Pontiff, and agreed to be satisfied by erecting a tablet to the melodious memory of the Robber King. This is a concession to the Church which has taken the anti-Catholic element of Europe by surprise, for the reason that they have so publicly disavowed that the Pope has vastly more influence than they are willing to accord to him. This was one victory for the Vatican.

Our readers will also remember that after tedious litigation the Italian Government decided that all the Propaganda property in Rome belonged to the pontifical tree who robbed the Religious, confiscated convent property, pilfered from the priests, and stole everything they could by their hands on that was owned by the Church. So these vandals proclaimed their design of selling out the property of the Sacred Propaganda so as to add rule to the robbery already accomplished. "Uncle Sam"—that lover of fair play from foreign nations—heard of this contemplated unjust confiscation of Church property, and he dabbed his representative in Rome to tell the Italian Minister that if he attempted to sell a foot of property belonging to the Catholic Church in America, he must be prepared to pay dearly for then defrauding the Catholic citizens of this Republic. Minister Mancini saw that "Uncle Sam" was in dead earnest regarding this iniquitous proceeding, so he thought prudence the better part of valor, and in less than a day the American Colings, and all other American Church property in Rome, was released by the representative of the King, and "Uncle Sam" then saved the sacristaries of the Catholic Church from the Satanic claws of the Italian vandal.

Having succeeded so well in warding off Italian pirates from the property of the Propaganda in this instance, "Uncle Sam" has gone a step further, and, through President Arthur, instructions have been sent to the American Minister in Rome to act in concert with the Ministers of England, Austria, and Spain in an effort to obtain from the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs a mitigation of the decision of the Court of Cassation in regard to all the property of the Propaganda. So that the prospective outlook indicates that the Italian bandit will beat a retreat from its contemplated robbery before the combined influence of the representatives of America, Spain, Austria, and England.

This will be yet another victory for the Vatican, and one that will tend to prevent the persecutors of the Vicar of Christ that there always comes a time in the history of the Papacy when the Vicar of Christ proclaims to His persecutors: "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther," and then the Cross, seen by Constantine again embla the heavens, and the herald of God announces the triumph of patient, powerful truth over the infernal hordes of impious injustice. The advent of that longed-for hour can be hastened by the prayers of all Catholic peoples for the grace of God to descend upon the successor of St. Peter so that he may crush the enemies of Christianity by the power promised by the Son of God while on earth.

Evil Masonic Influences Exercised in Our Midst.

"A Papal Rescription was recently cast in the Catholic churches of England, warning the people against secret societies, especially those of freemasonry. It is marvelous what a blind infatuation some people have for secret societies, and how strong that infatuation is, much more than the Catholic Church has allowed in many lands. The following is the extract from one of the Pope than he does of the Bishops of Ireland, in which he expresses his feelings or judgment in the matter. This has to be taken with a good grain of allowance, for it is absurd not a jot from the line. There is much to be commended in the Encyclical, and I hope it will be observed. For churches look so well to the laws and welfare of the Church, and to the fidelity of most counties, and if they certainly, then, they are not so well to the laws of the State, and to the political more conducive of the temporal welfare of the people. Nothing is more conducive to the temporal welfare of the people. The Order of Jesuits has ever been a secret society, and yet it has done so much for the Church, and high in the esteem of its infidel enemies, that the Pope is best as a secret society, for he should commence at home before interfering with the affairs of the Church.

We clip the foregoing paragraph from one of our country exchanges, and mean to use it as a text whenever to found a few remarkable facts concerning the evil influences recently exercised by Masonry over in Masonry appertaining to civil rights of citizens who were non-Catholics in belief. Before coming to that part of our subject, however, we will first meet a few of the remarkably absurd assertions of our country contemporary so as to tear the veil of virtue from of the face of vice and exhibit Masonry in all its hideous aspects.

The writer of the foregoing paragraph insinuates, in the present way of all the wicked enemies of his anti-Catholic class, that Catholics stand in greater awe of the Pope than they do of the law of the land, yet there is actually no connection nor conflict whatever between the Pope's criticised Encyclical and the laws of this or any other land upon God's footstool. The Pope, as the Vicar of Christ, and the spiritual Head of His Church on earth, is obeyed as such in all matters pertaining to religion or morals, just as the civil and criminal statutes of the Individuals and are obeyed by all good Catholic citizens in this State. Hence, our Pontiff never uttered too soon, having—in his prudential opinion—seen in his blood-red comb for the good of day!

Our contemporary in one of the one counties thinks that secret societies are more of a benefit than a blemish to community, but where hands than this young rooster possesses has warned the American people against the evil influences which anti-bound secret societies exert in every portion of the world where they exist. Masonry, for instance, is the shelter of assassination in Europe, nor will its memory in this land ever be cleared of the stain of murder so long as the name of the unfortunate Morgan has a place in the public mind. In Italy, assassinations instituted by Masons and carried out by Masonic influences have been of frequent occurrence, and it is only necessary to call to mind the case of Count Rossi, Minister of the Interior under Pope Pius IX., in order to cite a case in point that they have recently discovered that the Pope has vastly more influence than they are willing to accord to him. This was one victory for the Vatican.

"Mr. A. S. Hatch, a well known banker and broker, was recently nominated as President of the Stock Exchange, New York, but owing to the suspension of his firm in the crash he was disqualified. On Tuesday week the nominating committee selected in place of Mr. Hatch a gentleman named John Edward Simmons. The N. Y. Sun's report says: 'When the report of the committee was read to the Stock Exchange yesterday afternoon by Chairman Mitchell, a move or more of broken shouted, cheered, and clew up lady hats. The rest of that 1,000 members of the Exchange, who were on the floor, turned each to his neighbor and inquired who John Simmons was. It was found that Mr. Simmons was a lawyer, who by some chance was a member of the Exchange, though this was quite unknown to the majority of the members. Nothing at all seems known about him except that he is a friend Master of the Masonic body of New York State. The indignant 900 brokers, unable to see why such a man should be made President of the Stock Exchange, so they proceeded to nominate a proper person. They settled on Mr. Charles E. Head, a member of the Exchange from the Board. The Sun says: 'The brokers were unable to discover why the committee should have gone outside of the actual membership for a President, and the opinion gained ground that the Masonic Order was about to become a factor in the Exchange politics, as was the case several years ago.'

So much for Masonic intrigue and its not very valuable moral influence upon the Board of New York brokers! Now let us state another recent case where the mystic influence was used to defraud "outsiders" out of their just dues so that rascally bank directors might evade the law. The case is that of the Penn Bank, which failed recently in Pennsylvania, and concerning which the Eastern press is daily publishing most damaging exposures, in the course of which one Pittsburgh paper says:

"The supposition that there is danger of the investigation into the affairs of the Penn Bank not being so perfect as it should be, on account of so many of those concerned being Freemasons, is not well worthy of consideration. And it is from, as is asserted, that Mr. Mellon is a Freemason, it is even worthy of no consideration. For with the exception of the Bank desire, is an investigation that shall be as full and searching as the law can make it. Masonry or no Masonry, the Grand Master will in any case make a perfectly fair investigation of the affairs of the Penn Bank. The brotherhood will be the first to be the first to cry out against the Grand Master if he fails to do his duty. It is the belief that so many of the officers and others connected with the Bank are members of the Masonic order that helps each side to explosion stronger, however unpalatable it may be."

Another Pittsburgh paper, commenting on this case, says:

"Masonry in America may not possess all the objectionable features that it does elsewhere, but it is certainly in a double degree. It is the refuge of those who are ready to take the course of justice, and to shield its members from punishment and disgrace. Only the simple-minded can be imposed upon by the assertion that it is a benevolent and benevolent society. Its history affords no warrant for such limitation. In every country and persecutions influence of the Masonic Lodge is to be traced the cause of the persecution. The secrets of others are sacrificed or imperiled, to keep members of the Order from harm."

If such a society is not "dangerous" in its workings there is no use hereafter in classifying dynamite among dangerous explosives. The danger from Masonry is that its influence permeates every avenue of society, and it is ever ready to use it, and to use it in favor of those who are members of the Lodge. Juries are tampered with whenever a brother Mason gets into trouble. Politics is run in the groove laid out by the Grand Lodge; combinations are effected in order to crush out anti-Masonic opposition in consequence; and in this way Masonry works its evil upon the community even in temporal affairs, while—at the same time—it works its anti-Christian influence to the detriment of the souls of all who are entrapped into its snare.

A Firebrand's Proposition to Free Ireland.

If all the various propositions evolved from the minds of men who undertook the work of releasing Ireland from English control were—if we may so speak—put in a column, it would be a very long one. Some of the propositions are so absurd that they would be unnoticed in the history of the world. The very latest method proposed by those ultra-patriots who have no patience with Parnell's parliamentary action is to manufacture bullcrons, fill them with nitroglycerine by gas and gas-makers with fire-works, set out from some central ground—if such a spot can be discovered—float along through ethereal space until the balloon reaches an English city, and then burst down as propelled upon the doomed inhabitants below! The result might be to kill Pat Murphy's pigs, to hurt the Widow Heffernan's hens, to so destroy Dan Mooney's cabbages, but what care such infated invincible imbecile so long as they wreak destruction upon something or somebody so as to keep their notoriety as the valorous representatives of the Irish people!

To the credit of the common sense and the Christian character of the Irish people, be it said, however, they repudiate the ridiculous and sinful scheme of such arrogant fanatics. They are for the very legitimate ways whereby Irish freedom can be accomplished—one is by the peaceful parliamentary procedure pursued by Parnell, the other is to await the coming of the time when England's difficulty will present Ireland's opportunity, and then be prepared for the contest prophesied by Davis in his poem on the Irish militia:

"The patient dint, and powder shock,
Can blast as empty lines a rock.
A soldier's life is the life for me—
A soldier's death, and Ireland's free."

But while patiently preparing for that time, it is wisdom to pursue the pathway of peaceful agitation when it points to the goal of Ireland's constitutional amelioration, and thus in time of peace prepare for war. But all such absurd and criminal conceptions as this aerial assassination scheme will serve only to fasten the manacles more tightly upon the Irish people, who are held accountable for the folly of all such firebrands as fulminate such schemes as that which the followers of James Stephens propose to carry out in their newly-discovered method to make the Irish people upon ripe, dreadfully innocent innocentlarin in the eyes of all sensible people throughout the world. We hope, therefore, to see all the gas let out of this balloon craze are some criminality is consummated.

—We present this week the annual appeal of our venerable Archbishop for funds to carry on the good work so auspiciously inaugurated by the establishment of the Provincial Ecclesiastical Seminary of St. Thomas at Mission San José, and we hope every Catholic in the Archdiocese will contribute liberally thereto. Money is needed so as to have a share in the holy offices of every priest whose education they help in securing. No work can commend itself more earnestly to Catholics than that which crowns the vocation of pious youth with the consecrated raiment of the priesthood, and all should assist in thus securing the services of priests for the glory of God and the spread of our holy faith.

The Absurdity of Political Platforms.

There was a time in the history of this country when political platforms had their use, but, like the bellows, snuffers, and the spinning-wheel, they have long since become obsolete and have been superseded by the intellectual "cuteness" of keen politicians who frames "platforms" merely to have them tumble down when the polls close on election day.

The two great organizations that divide public opinion in this land are the Democratic and the Republican parties. How many among the popular masses can tell what political issues keep them apart! They both profess to be the special guardians of the "dear people," both are determined to preserve this union, or perish in the attempt; both bemoan the "corruption" that afflicts "the opposition party," and both proclaim themselves the party of patriotic principles, pure intentions, and the immaculate and incorruptible protectors of the "dear people." Hence, the "platforms" are the proclamations, promises, and pledges printed in each party's platform, but the absurdity of publishing long documents which are manufactured in smoky, unventilated paper attics—for—is very transparent to all people who take the time and the trouble necessary to think out the situation of political parties in these times.

The plain truth is that political parties have ceased to be useful organizations, and have become simply the political machines of two great parties, which are manipulated by wire-pullers who are ever ready to throw dust in the eyes of the voters while the office-holders are depleting the treasury. A party in power demanding Civil service reform would seem as if "a guilty conscience needed no accuser"—and this is remarkably true in the present political instance. Still another plank declares that no public lands should be given to monopolies, aliens, or corporations, yet the party that makes this eleventh hour discovery has looked on in silence while millions upon millions of acres of the public land have been surreptitiously handed over to the very classes it now denounces! Could the force of political pettifoggery further go?

"Our navy must be restored" is pointed upon another plank of the Republican platform, yet for the last twenty-three years people had as Secretaries of the Navy, Wells, Horie, Robeson, Thompson, Goff, Hunt, Chandler, and Jackson—again—all Republicans, in a man! Yet "our navy must be restored" by the very party that placed it in "Davy Jones' locker"! This is the acme of inconsistent political absurdity!

Polygamy is not popular with decent people, hence the Republican platform makers had to denounce that iniquity after the formula in use for the last twenty-three years. But, in the meantime, Mormonism has grown from a small reptile into a poisonous lentacle of mammoth proportions whose growth has been attained during the official career of the very party that now pretends to desire its destruction! How very natural it comes to professional politicians:

"Compound for sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to."

Mormonism is a foul spirit that will not down by the platforms of any political party but they must—and hardly, so long as parties and platforms and nominations are the Lodon Table well observes: "Our great provincial cities have grown rapidly since the accession of Queen Victoria; industries and trades have arisen which were then never thought of; an immigration from the steige isle of Ireland has brought a large Catholic population to these centres," and also in England, as America, Australia, Africa, and every where throughout the world, the seed of salvation is planted alike in pagan and Protestant soil by the soul-devoted piety and the self-sacrificing example of the scrifaithful Irish Catholics. What a sublime mission! And so faithfully, persistently, and fearlessly they have performed it. In the cause of God the Irish race have suffered and persecuted, and in return they have received the invaluable, and natural gross of "final perseverance." Hence, we Catholics—Irish Catholics—along all the closer to the Cross, even though it brought the crucifix of Calvary and its agonizing sufferings. Where other nations proved recreant, Irish loyalty to the God of St. Patrick never once wavered, and they remain to-day as the only people who never faltered in the defense of Catholic faith, and the result of their religious steadfastness may be seen in the propagation of the Catholic faith in every country in the world, and in the preservation of Ireland's

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. CRANE . . . EDITOR

—PRO-DIGIOUSLY—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 20.

1st.—Sense-bubble. 7th.—Valentine.
2nd.—P
3rd.—T
4th.—R
5th.—
6th.—
7th.—
8th.—Wardall. 9th.—P. G. Lee Antey.
9th.—FRESHER 10th.—HORSE
BEARDS OCHERY BRIGADE BRIGADE
BRIGADE BOGGY SHOULDER VALUE
STREET EYRIES
9th.—Sheppton. 10th.—Atco.
9th.—P 10th.—
SAD COT
SAPIN COS
BOLDER RING
RALTWATER CAND
BIGARREAU CAPTIVE
BIGARREAU CAPTIVE
SEAS CONTINENT
SEAS DESERTER
Puzzle in "Leisure Hours" No. 19, by Professor Hoffman, Boston, Mass.—"Ne Sutor Ultra Crepidam." Solved by Mrs. J. Bolton, Speech, S. A. R.—"J. L. T." Camp Lyons, Ky.; Miss Ida Bennett, Jersey City, N. J.; Miss Ella Bennett, Jersey City, N. J.; Miss Ella Bennett, Jersey City, N. J.; Miss Ella

MICHAEL DAVITT.

A CONTROVERSY WITH ALEXANDER SULLIVAN.

The Land League History.

Light on a Most Important Period in Irish Affairs.

Though we do not serve with Mr. Davitt in all his theories, and especially that concerning the holding of land, yet we think it best his life be let on readers square the subjoined letter which he has sent us in a New York morning paper, and which appeared on 8 supplementary page of that journal one day last week:

BALLYMAGE, Dublin, May 21, 1884.

To the Editor of the World.—A recent issue of the World contains what appears to be an official communication from Mr. Alexander Sullivan, and as the able President of the National League commands my same with some statements which are calculated to mislead your readers on certain points relating to the origin of the Land League and the principle upon which it was founded, will thank you to allow me to correct the errors which want of fuller information has led Mr. Sullivan into, regarding the subject he has thus written upon.

THE ORIGINAL SULLIVAN'S ASSERTIONS.

Mr. Sullivan says: First—"The Land League was an American idea." Second—"It also bears the drawn in the city of New York, in the month of April last." Third—"The Land League is the lineal descendant of the Irish National League of 1879." Fourth—"The second above mentioned League was founded in the following manner up in New York had been thoroughly discussed by the Irish National Land League of Ireland, and adopted by them." Sixth—"It is all the same League, and subsequent to its foundation, the Irish National Land League of Ireland was merely the Parliamentary or the only mode of expression, and the constitutional, of the Irish people. The most of these statements are true in the main, but are misleading or partially or partially inaccurate—while they are all I can recall, or remember, which are material in determining the opinion of your readers.

THE WORK OF THE LAND LEAGUE.

First—The Land League was not of American, but of Mayo origin, at as much name or organ, as any other. Second—The Land League was the outcome of discontent in Connaught, 1878 of a great deal of which I was the cause, and of which I was the mouthpiece, and which I, in the name of the people, "which was the subject-matter of the Land League." Third—The Land League was not the lineal descendant of the Irish National Land League of 1879, and was not

Poetry.

HEARTH AND HOME.

Out of the noise and rut of the strife,
To the hearth to calm and bright,
The men come home with loving life
In the Double's happy light.
For hearth and home are the sweetest place
Where love is ever a blessed grace
And home is there a blessing found
From our Father's home above.

The merchant, and the baby's son,
Then all adorn the fixed hearth;
The man and plate of the busy day,
Like sunshine dreams depart.
The man—joy shines in the loving smile,
That welcomes the door one home;
While with a kiss is the sobbing smile,
In out of tough palace dome.

Oh, God! love, grant our cry each heart,
All—our beautiful home!
Let spite towards life's problems be
To me—one not made with hands.
Yea home! and home is the dearest place
To men and women who love;
Home—home is home is a blessed place
From our Father's home above.

SOME ONE'S SERVANT GIRL.

She stood there leaning wearily
In the window frame
Her face pinched, and sad sweet
Beneath coarse and plain
Her dress was of a faded brown;
I pity poor a girl—
But her eyes were sweet and
Some one's servant girl.

Some one's servant girl, I thought
Her face on the street,
Grieve troubling about
Her sweet and patient still;
Some one's servant girl
Is cheerfully she moved,
Is with quick willingness
Unless much her hope
Slight labor, and love

I thought a gentleman,
Nothing today be
Some one's servant girl
Is the hands
For the sake of the
And the busy mind
For her to be a gentleman
The same one's servant girl.

Ah! well, it is that God above
Looks in upon the hard,
And never judges life or lot
By just the outer part.
Full the soul be pure and good
He will not mind the rent,
Nor be unfriendly to the garments worn
In what the form was dressed.

And may a man be proud of woman like
By Jesus—reared and bred,
Allowed for a moment to have him
With the one who were their bread,
When they have passed away from life,
Beyond the gates of pearl,
Will meet before the Father's throne
With many a servant girl.

THREE OLD LADIES.

Then you as old lady, all dressed in silk,
Who lived upon income and housework
Who lived in a house with a number of place,
She counted the cold all over her feet

Another old lady of dressed in poplins,
Lived on a small income and housework
So the world, it made her struggle and cry
And, one as poor rabbed hers, Ayes or no

Another old lady, all many and neat,
Lived on a small income and housework
Dedicated, when she heard of their trouble,
Of poor old lady

For the world was somebody could live on forever
Now children, take your choice
Which of these three would you call
There are certain thoughts and behaviors
And thoughts all good and sweet;
Which of the three lady's work on—
Is a question that I leave with you
Will come to you to me.

Literary Miscellany.

Bread Cast upon the Waters.

A STORY WITH A MORAL TO IT.

The panic came like a simoon. The whole world was in a rush and flurry at first. American workmen had been so long used to plenty of work and good wages that they could realize what was in store for them. The village of Greenfield had always been proud because Jesse Carter had built his mills there; but the element struck him at last. The mills stood still.

Then came the awful day for Greenfield. Man with hungry face, woman with sad eyes and pinched lips, and children with pallid faces. Women, with sore eyes, and hearts ready to break, that they might have been the arms of operatives, called to make an angel visit of whom fame vast was stamping all that is fairest in childhood, followed at the heels of the men and women of Greenfield. Others, scarcely less poor, yet with some fragments of bold hope, barred their door, and crouched in corners, dreading the coming of the angry, hungry, desperate men whose banner was sounded faintly in their ears.

Father Riordan came out of his little house near the chapel and spoke to the people. Some of them had left the sacred hospital beside; but the most of them listened respectfully and then passed on. He could only pray before the Blessed Sacrament for the poor who were tempted so sorely.

And so the day wore on, and the mob had done no violence. As the sun went down, the mob came from its powerful majesty, and showed the fears of starving men and women more plainly in its ghastly light. Then one, with eyes like fire, stood out from the crowd, and uttered words that fell on heart and brain like burning brands; and cried at length: "To the mansion! to the mansion!" and his words were echoed in a great roar by the mob: "To the mansion! to the mansion!"

The mansion was the home of Isaac Carter, the owner of the town mills. There he lived with his daughter Helen, a fair haired, blue-eyed girl, whom all loved. Her mother, unable to obtain orders for his goods, he had closed his mills and the hundred men and women had been out of work. With all his unfeeling sternness when opposed, he had been a fond, and, at times, a kind master, and they bore this patiently. Heaven knows the poor are patient!

But the time had come at last, when their little savings were all gone, when men, women and children cried for bread; not for plenty, but just enough to keep life within their starving frames. But it came not. Who could be patient then? But the best of all. Then it was they rose at last, and were as restless as a sea.

But times had gone hard with Carter too. In his stern pride he would keep it from the world to the last; and only father and daughter knew that the mill-owner was insolvent. Men had failed on him wherever where, and it was only a matter of time so to when his name would be among the list of bankrupts.

His daughter, Helen, was of age, and through the will of a deceased relative, rich; but her father, in spite of her pleadings, had refused to touch a penny of her money. They were sitting together, he bent and broken; yet not so much so but he could still stand uncompromisingly, boldly, before the world; she sweetly helpful, his stone good angel ministering to him. They both wanted for what the father had said would be inevitable—the coming of the mob.

Father Riordan had tried to gain access to the house; but Helen had met him in the hall.

"He will not see you, Father," she said, wringing her hands. "I have never seen him so stern."

Father Riordan entreated and commanded; Carter would not see him.

"Trust in God, my child," said the priest. "He will direct you; but I must stay here until the mob come. There are few Catholics among them; but this cruelty ought to speak to all."

Carter would not hear of this; he was inflexible; he would meet the crowd alone, and Helen would not leave him.

Carter had reluctantly consented to Helen's conversion to the Catholic faith; and the priest's persuasions irritated him. Father Riordan saw this. "He of good cheer," he said to Helen, "God will inspire you."

"Let them come," said Carter grimly, and he pointed significantly at two revolvers on the table.

But Helen pleaded with him for them.

"I have money, it is yours," she said. But he was stubborn.

Isaac Carter yet; they shall not come."

Long ere the crowd had reached the house, they heard its roar, which, as it drew nearer, was "like the sound of many waters." Hundreds of men, women and children trampled upon the flower beds. Although the house was full, they carried torches, and swinging them around, made lurid rings of flame.

Isaac Carter stepped to the window and looked out upon them. They howled at him, and shouted:

"Work or bread! work or bread!"

The man's spirit was up in spite of their terrible shouts. He turned his face to them set in stern defiance. The starving men and women were maddened by that sight, and one cried out:

"Isaac Carter, your life or bread!"

The crowd took up the cry so wildly that its sound seemed to beat in giant waves against the unflinching old man.

"Your life or bread!"

Although he had shaped his hand to still them, his face was white with passion. The crowd followed for a moment to hear him. With his tremor in his tones, he answered fiercely:

"Neither my life nor bread! Starve, you hounds—starve!"

Quickly he closed the shutters. Just in time, for against them beat a shower of stones.

"The door! the door!" yelled the mob, and strong men threw themselves against it, till the old mansion trembled.

Helen had heard without entering a word through all this; but now she was all determination and action. Her father had returned to his chair. In each hand he held a revolver. She pleaded with all the fervor of her nature. He was seemingly unconscious of her presence, and did not even place a hand on her to draw her down. She had resolved on what she thought the only course to pursue. Quickly she hurried out into the hall, locking the door behind her.

Her father, now aroused, cried:

"Helen, come back!"

For the first time in her life she must disobey him.

"No, father. Though you are armed, you can but kill one or two of those poor creatures, who know not what they do. Give you will die."

Her tones were nearer, half pleading, half supplicating, but she did not hear it. At that moment the door burst open, and the crowd came rushing up stairs and into the hall. There was a bright light there, and they paused involuntarily at the sight that met their eyes. The girl, never more beautiful, but back against the door, faced them fearlessly. In her eyes was her father's fearless of purpose, tempered by a kinder heart. The mob was quieted on the instant, as if they might have been in an angel cloud in their way. One, the man who had started the cry of "Your life or bread!" stepped towards her.

"We wouldn't harm you, miss, but we want your bread."

"Can this be you, James Lawrence?"

Helen's eyes flashed. There was reproach in her tone that the man blushed; she had been kind to him and he made a little. Back on one who had been insulted, he called, "Jane!" Jane" Jane" Out from the crowd stepped his wife, the very ghost of a woman, holding in her phantom arms an infant of the dead. "Here was my wife and child. Jane Lawrence to speak, nor dold. It was a sight to make an angel weep. Out of whose form vast was stamping all that is fairest in childhood, followed at the heels of the men and women of Greenfield. Others, scarcely less poor, yet with some fragments of bold hope, barred their door, and crouched in corners, dreading the coming of the angry, hungry, desperate men whose banner was sounded faintly in their ears.

Father Riordan came out of his little house near the chapel and spoke to the people. Some of them left the sacred hospital beside; but the most of them listened respectfully and then passed on. He could only pray before the Blessed Sacrament for the poor who were tempted so sorely.

And so the day wore on, and the mob had done no violence. As the sun went down, the mob came from its powerful majesty, and showed the fears of starving men and women more plainly in its ghastly light. Then one, with eyes like fire, stood out from the crowd, and uttered words that fell on heart and brain like burning brands; and cried at length: "To the mansion! to the mansion!" and his words were echoed in a great roar by the mob: "To the mansion! to the mansion!"

The mansion was the home of Isaac Carter, the owner of the town mills. There he lived with his daughter Helen, a fair haired, blue-eyed girl, whom all loved. Her mother, unable to obtain orders for his goods, he had closed his mills and the hundred men and women had been out of work. With all his unfeeling sternness when opposed, he had been a fond, and, at times, a kind master, and they bore this patiently. Heaven knows the poor are patient!

But the time had come at last, when their little savings were all gone, when men, women and children cried for bread; not for plenty, but just enough to keep life within their starving frames. But it came not. Who could be patient then? But the best of all. Then it was they rose at last, and were as restless as a sea.

But times had gone hard with Carter too. In his stern pride he would keep it from the world to the last; and only father and daughter knew that the mill-owner was insolvent. Men had failed on him wherever where, and it was only a matter of time so to when his name would be among the list of bankrupts.

His daughter, Helen, was of age, and through the will of a deceased relative, rich;

THE COST OF LIVING.

Present Prices of Some Articles of Food Compared with those of Eighty or Ninety Years Ago.

WASHINGTON, June 21st.—In view of some current efforts to increase the cost of living—some of them, perhaps, on the ground that it costs two or three times as much to live now as it did when these efforts were created, it may be well to recall sundry statistics given by Hamden George of Mississippi in a recent speech.

The speech referred to found no objections to the modern increase of official salaries met by the broad assertion that it costs three times as much to live now as it did when the Government was founded, he determined to be no longer put down by this statement without finding out exactly how far it was true. He found among the books of the Congressional Library, and the conclusion he reached was that "in all the subsistence of life, all the necessaries and comforts of life, the prices were higher during Washington's and the elder Adams' administration than they are now. I allude especially to provisions, things consumed by man. Of course, we all know, as to clothing, that the improvements in labor-saving machinery, the invention of the sewing machine, have greatly reduced the cost of the same commodities. Fuel, I have took State that, and the price of coal is now less than it was during the administration of Washington.

Bacon, of good average quality, was at 12½ cents per pound, and lard at 12½ cents. In fact, "but a few months, they were on the spot. There by the baby, cohort: a little disease, of the wild-eyed, dead. Terribly wounded, a man was stretched upon the sidewalk, death stamped on his face.

The mother's cry of joy, as she pressed to her bosom her child, was changed to a scream of compassion as she looked at the man who had purchased its life with his.

Helen was wounded in his breast (they could see it through his torn clothing), blood was flowing in a stream which no skill could stop. Moment by moment, swiftly and surely, it was ebbing away his life blood away; yet there was a smile upon his lips, and on his face the tender look of compassionate appreciation of that which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard."

Husband and wife took each a hand of the dying man.

"I am going to see Jane and the boy," he whispered. "They have gone before."

What a smile was upon his face as he answered: "You need say nothing; I have only paid a debt."

"Do not say that, James Lawrence. What did do you owe me, that you should pay it with your life?"

He asked them to raise him slightly, that he might lay his head upon her shoulder; they saw that he was not her—answered so one that beholds a vision.

"Jane, I owe you all the happiness I have had since I left you. Ten years ago, I was a man upon this hill, and I was poor. I was starving, my wife and child are starving. I am crazed and have not what I do. I could stain my hands with blood; but I shrinked at murder, as an angel—stand in my path. The instinct of crime dies from my heart. I have that angel my wife and child who are dying for want of bread. Then the angel came, and gave us food and work. I had a long to live her hand; and tell her I am never forgot, and my life is love from my heart. . . . I am dying."

Before he had finished speaking, Helen's husband had unclasped her hand. Isaac Lawrence had known no religion; but death was stamped in Hare his clouded soul. When the priest came, he grew meek and humble, as a child—and he died.

The grief which Helen had met on the waters had returned after many days.

Living too Fast.

Men are living too fast. Idleness and indulgence have begotten pride and disorder. The spirit is thirsty for luxury. The very paupers of our cities scorn the pauper's allowance and sneaky here which once satisfied the well-to-do; the young clerk must have his wine and his cigar; the mechanic, at that of his employer's, though he used to support his establishment; the servants rival their mistresses in the costliness and elaborateness of their attire. By the time a man has saved his savings they need to keep them from vast and rain. The young people who begin a home must have it as thickly decorated as that of those who have toiled for years; and there is an utter unwillingness on the part of too many to be content with simple surroundings, to lower their ideas of comfort, and learn to rate people at what they are and what they have. This is the money-worshipping age; man of vicious principles, through the chinks of gold, assumes honor of admirers; others are tolerated for the sake of his rich wealth; others, who are others are permitted to occupy posts of honor in the society and state, which they only obtain by their wealth. Man live in the fear of gold and not of God, and seek the image of man and not the honor that cometh from above. There should be a return to more honest ways of living. It should be deemed dishonorable to live beyond one's income; no man should be counted the equal of a foreign peer in the eyes of his rank of breaking down and making a dishonorable ending.

Values in the Time of Henry VIII

In the early part of the sixteenth century, just before the Reformation, the ounce of silver was worth 3s. 4d. or, in other words, the shilling of Henry VIII. was in intrinsic value 5.00 of the modern coin. The wages of any ordinary laborer were 6d. per day. The rent of cottages varied from 2s. 8d. to 4s. per annum. Six or eight days' labor was, therefore, sufficient to pay the year's rent. At the present day, taking an agricultural laborer's wages at 15s. a week, and cottage rent at 2s. a week, or £5 a year, it requires forty days' labor to pay the yearly rent. No doubt the cottages at that time were more hovels; but I fear a large number at the present day are little better. About the same period wheat was bought at 5d. per quarter, the product of a pig 3s. 4d., and of a cow, 16s. A laborer earning 6d. a day, or 3s. 6d. per week, could purchase a quarter of wheat with a fortnight's labor, which would now require three weeks, or a little more than one week's work, which would now require the labor of three. Leaving out of view the cost of clothing, and of the higher expenses which modern habits require, there can be no doubt that the condition of the laborer is "deteriorated" inasmuch as amount of rude substance which he never does been enough.

Here is a story apropos of the Copyright Bill.—When Thomas Hood, the poet, died, he left for the first time in debt at the hands of many of the publishers, who had known publication. Mr. Hood's Magazine came to the Dickens family on his hand, and said, "You are a very good boy, you are a very good boy, take care of the poor of the greatest priests on earth."

—In injurious efforts out before the eye of Argyle Arbor Dust in the immediate of medical because it is a remedy for the cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Hoarseness, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and speedy cure for Night Sweats and Nervous Debility. Physicians recommend it as a strengthening and invigorating cordial. Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents and $1.

Farm and Home.

Flannel as a Household Remedy.

To any one who is aware of the healing and restoring power of flannel, it gives a great shock to be told that thousands of mothers live who never apply flannel to the sick or ailing children they bring into the world, and that, as a rule, they do not know of its use.

It is a rule that may be safely adopted, that medicine should never be given internally if outside applications can be made to produce the desired effect. A little flannel will certify that, finding at bedtime a child somewhat feverish and croupy, a warm well-oiled piece of flannel (doubled, if the case was severe) pinned above the chest, has been sufficient to make the child breathe regularly and freely all night and cause it to appear perfectly well the next morning. For earaches and toothaches in their early stages, for neuralgia, sore throat, rheumatism, rheumatism, diseases of the kidneys, colds in the head—for anything, in short, that is produced or aggravated by cold—pieces of flannel applied to the affected part are sure to afford relief, and many times to completely remove the trouble in the invalid manner. Arnica, witch-hazel, various painkillers, and ungents may be used in conjunction with the flannel, but in the healing warmth of the woolen cloth itself that does the most good. Therefore, save all your pieces of flannel. Insist upon their return from the dyeing, after having had your garments washed, and keep them carefully in your drawers or closets.

Many object to putting it near in the sick room, and to calling it a "disease," because, "they say, "they suffer on taking it out."

If a thick piece of flannel has been on a dislocated wrist, or around a sore throat, and a cure seems to have been nearly accomplished, a thinner piece may be substituted, and the thick one laid by until the time for it to come at it will not be worth wondering. Yet, for a cold, or for any thing, it should be flannel may be removed when dressing in the morning, and put on at night, at the same time—and the part which has been protected by it may be rubbed thoroughly with alcohol or some other stimulating preparation. This will be found in all cases, and will be found to be worth any ill effect from removing the warm flannel.

Plain Talk to Girls.

Your every day toilet is a part of your character. A girl who looks like a "fury" on a slovenly in the morning, is not to be trusted, until the day is over, and evening. No matter how humble your room may be, there is one thing it should contain, viz., a mirror, washstand, soap, towel, and a pail and tooth brushes. Those are just as essential as your breakfast, before such you should make good and free use of them. Parents who fail to provide it, if children with such appliances, are not to be blamed, but they do commit a sin of omission. Look up in your room, and if you find it wanting, or improper, your toilet.

Make a rule of your daily life to "Dress up" in the afternoon. Your dress may, or may not be costly, but it should be neat, but with a ribbon, or flower, or some bit of ornament, you can have an air of self-respect about you, that invariably comes with being well dressed.

Hospitality to Children's Friends.

I know that children's company is apt to make some trouble to a home mother; but when children's company is apt to make trouble to a home mother; but when children's company is apt to make trouble to a home mother; but when children's company is apt to make

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1884.

Catholic Belgium Achieves a Great Victory.

The proverb which instructs us that "Union is strength," was never better illustrated than in the instance of the recent election in Belgium, where a united Catholic contingency won a splendid victory at the polls over the bigotry of their political enemies united under organized leaders who were either open or secret foes of the Catholic Church.

Like other countries in Europe, Belgium had fallen under the rule of the Masonic enemies of the Catholic religion through the employment of Catholics themselves. The [illegible] secret period in which could from [illegible] revolution which talk in that [illegible] Belgium labouring under the [illegible] their foes, and, consequently, [illegible] of their rights and denied [illegible] justice by the very men [illegible] to protect them.

[illegible] by the secret society which [illegible] a reduction into office by means [illegible] ruin, the governing hide in Belgium [illegible] Catholic party [illegible] until at last it came to pass, in a Catholic country, that the huge and overwhelming majority, backed by the power of the secret society, that has its rights which the Masonic ministry was bound to respect. But when unnatural politics ceased to be [illegible] Catholic majorities ceased to be [illegible] to continue and to enjoy the power and the rights whose belonged to them—both in their civil and their religious capacity. Accordingly, they [illegible] their forces for the fair political contest, and now they find themselves precisely where they ought always to have been—masters of the situation.

The returns of the late election indicate a clear gain of more than twenty additional seats in the Chamber of Deputies by the Catholic party. In the Senate, Belgium, the only place in the world where all the strength of the Masonic conspiracy was concentrated, the Catholic voters succeeded in securing the total Catholic candidates, and elected representatives who will legislate for a restoration of the civil and religious rights of the Belgian people.

The result of this glorious victory will be to throw out the Cabinet of Frère-Orban—which has been most tyrannical in its maltreatment of Catholics—and the election of a Catholic ministry which will give back to the Belgian people the rights out of which they have been cheated by the chicanery of Masonic influence.

The education question in Belgium has been one of the bones of contention over which the contest has been hottest fought. For years the Masonic Government has maintained a hostile attitude toward Catholic schools and Christian teachers. Masonic schools, secular schools, godless schools, were encouraged, and, as a consequence, which declared that the time was to be struck at the Church and at the religious education of the children of the Catholics of this country. Accordingly, the Catholic party made the question of the education of the Catholic children

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. H. FRANK ..... EDITOR

—PROGNOSTIC—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 96.

1st.—Variant.
2nd.— M 5th.— S
CAN RIP
MALAY PANT
MALAYSIAN PLANTAIN
SUREST TRINITY
SUR SENNIO
TUR S
T M
3rd.—Adroit. 9th.—Only two feet because cats have paws not feet.
4th.—ROTASAL 10th.—PARTERE
CARDINE PARTERRE
ARBUTUS SIPCOAT
OPPOSITE REPIPING
INTOMBS STENEN
ERRATIC ERRATIC
5th.—Calandra. 11th.—Alphabet.
—VERPETUFIVE
—ROTASAL 12th.—S
CARDINE
RACCOLTO DURES
ARBUTUS CARPET
RILED TOMMETIL
ERRATIA SERPENTIA
VER BENTWEED
ARE APES
TIN TIN

In "Leisure Hours" No. 99 you invited Los Angeles, Will Dunlap, I. Gorman, Frank Jones, Harry Jones, Jno. Jones, Frank Lee, Lindsay, P. C. Lee Ashby, Hall, Chas. Hill, Jno C., Rose, and hubby.

In "Leisure Hours" No. 97 you invited Los Angeles, Will Dunlap, I. Gorman, Frank Jones, Harry Jones, Jno. Jones, Frank Lee, Lindsay, P. C. Lee Ashby, Hall, Chas. Hill, Jno C., Rose, and hubby.

[redacted]

RAILROADS.

SOUTH PACIFIC COAST R. R.

PASSENGER TRAINS LEAVE STATION, FOOT OF Market street, much side.

8.30 A. M., daily, Alameda, Newark, Centerville, Wrights, Glenwood, Felton, Big Trees, SANTA CRUZ, and all Way Stations.

2.30 P. M. (except Sunday), Express: Ed. Eden, Alvarado, Newark, Centerville, Felton, Big Trees, Santa Cruz, SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and all Stations 2 SANTA CRUZ.

4.30 P. M., daily, for SAN JOSE, Los Gatos, and Intermediate points.

$5 EXCURSIONS to SANTA CRUZ and $3.50 to SAN JOSE, on SATURDAYS and SUNDAYS, to return until MONDAY, inclusive.

8.00 A. M., every Sunday, Excursion to SAN JOSE and BIG TREES, and SANTA CRUZ.

$2.50 to BIG TREES and SANTA CRUZ.
$1.75 to SANTA CLARA and SAN JOSE.

TO OAKLAND AND ALAMEDA.

16.00, 14.35, 12.05, 7.35, 8.05, 8.35, 9.05, 9.35, 10.05, 10.35, 11.05 A. M.; 12.05, 12.35, 1.05, 1.35, 2.05, 2.35, 3.05, 3.35, 4.05, 4.35, 5.05, 5.35, 6.05, 6.35, 7.35, 8.35, 9.35, 10.35, 11.35 P. M.

FROM OAKLAND AND ALAMEDA.

6.00, 6.30, 7.00, 7.30, 8.00, 8.30, 9.00, 9.30, 10.00, 10.30, 11.00, 11.30 A. M.; 12.00, 12.30, 1.00, 1.30, 2.00, 2.30, 3.00, 3.30, 4.00, 4.30, 5.00, 5.30, 6.00, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 P. M.

[illegible]

In "Leisure Hours" No. 99 you invited Los Angeles, Will Dunlap, I. Gorman, Frank Jones, Harry Jones, Jno. Jones, Frank Lee, Lindsay, P. C. Lee Ashby, Hall, Chas. Hill, Jno C., Rose, and hubby.

[redacted]

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,

Respectfully announce that they have opened

THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
—WITH A LINE OF—
GENT'S AND BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.

Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.

We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible.

CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And late with JONES & CO.

SUMMONS.

IN THE SUPREME COURT, DEPARTMENT NO. 1, City and County of San Francisco, State of California. — The People of the State of California, to Jacob Schlueter, Joseph Schlueter, Joseph Schlueter, Trustee of the Estate of Jacob Schlueter, Deceased, and the Unknown Heirs of Jacob Schlueter, Deceased, and the Unknown Heirs of the Estate

OUR SCHOOLS.

Annual Commencement Exercises in Catholic Schools.

MOUNT ST. MARY'S ACADEMY, GRASS VALLEY.

The regular yearly examination of the various classes of Mount St. Mary's Academy, Grass Valley, took place on the 23rd ult. The pupils passed through the ordeal of a searching examination, acquitting themselves in a manner highly creditable to themselves, and to their worthy teachers. They displayed a laudable and exact acquaintance with the intricacies of English grammar, gave evidence of proficiency in mental philosophy and astronomy, and displayed an astonishing familiarity with the higher departments of arithmetic, algebra, and applied geometry. They also showed themselves conversant with general history and English literature. Prior to receiving diplomas the young ladies of the graduating class, were entertained to a lengthy examination, conducted by competent and efficient examiners. The following young ladies received diplomas: Misses M. McPhee, M. P. Mooney, Maggie M. Kane, Fitzgerald M. F. Amelly, Villain M. 22, Jessie David H. Comstock. A been noteworthy feature upon for themselves.

On Wednesday, the 25th, the feast of St. Patrick's School, under the charge of the Sisters of the Convent, were examined. A very favorable impression was made on the audience by the neat, tidy appearance and the lengthy attendance of the one hundred young lads who spoke as one school; it was evident to demonstrate the care and attention bestowed upon by their kind and accomplished teachers; only answers of these young boys to the questions put to them by examiners, Rev. Father Shinnick, Dr. Gallagher, Dr. Gallagher, Dr. Gallagher

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

OLIMPEN OF THE SUPERNATURAL.

Legends o'er which to dream
When all the pulses flow,
Forest, and hill, and stream,
In twilight hazely crest,
Fraught with breath of flowers,
A dream of beauty lies
Watching thro' passing hours
Her one blue heaven skies.

When 'tis we hold most dear
The same to the heart,
When care, and toil, and fear
Of its burdening wings depart,
As from their chiding heavens
Bright Angel hosts descend,
And with mysterious power
The past and present blend.

Thought pleasures then each tale
Of fairy elfin page,
Of Gnome, which in vale
Or cave, or hollow hold,
Of goons, of phantasm showers
In traveling gabbl lulls,
And with the strengthening dower
Life's mending for foxwalls.

God bless the hand that traced
These pictures gay and quaint,
Bless the heart that warmed
Such cool beloved Saint,
Bless the spirit that
In faithful labors brave,
Thus to the Monitor
Its Mental and Moral.

MARGARET A. FITZGERALD.

Stony Woodland, 1884.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

THE MODERN ARGONAUTS.

Sir "Gorey Alley" had dormed on Butter Creek, Where gold "more 'n Philippine" had shown half his cheek,
The Tracy Oak, the Tuolum and the Creek,
With only Columbia's cone were westward bound.
Sir Gorey Alley said, "There is need to go this Ere the Pacific Ocean's waters are frozen
Ere the Rockies, the Sierras, and the Cascades
Ere the Sierra's slope

THE MONITOR.
TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.
WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

— Mr. M. P. Scanlan of the archdiocese of San Francisco, was among the students ordained subdeacons on St. Mary's Seminary in the Baltimore Cathedral recently.

— Archbishop Moran has been presented by the clergy of the Diocese of Ossory with a magnificent gold chalice, and an address expressing the deep sorrow they felt at the approaching departure of his Grace for Sydney, New South Wales.

— We regret to learn, from a recent issue of the Catholic Sentinel of Portland, Oregon, that it has suspended publication. We hope, however, that the Sentinel is not dead, but only sleepeth, and that after a brief rest it will resume its weekly round along the Northwestern section of the coast.

— Father Sam Mellish of the Little Rivers of the Poor, who recently entered that order in Albany, left last week for the Mother House in France. She is a cousin of the late Archbishop Mellish of Tuam, and the late Very Rev. John O'Grady, P. P., Athenry, county Galway.

— Bishop-elect Thomas H. Bradley was consecrated at Manchester, N. H., on Wednesday week, by Archbishop Williams, of Boston. The Bee of Manchester, created the most dangerous representative that thunders the stability of this Republic.

We notice this unseemly outrage upon the rights of the people at large more particularly at this time, because we learn from our contemporary that the corner-stone of the Convent Hospital in Fort Jay was laid last month with all the Masonic ceremonies that squinal sect formulates. First among the documents deposited in the corner-stone was "A list of the officers of the Masonic Grand Lodge," and among the articles was "An impression of the seal of the Grand Lodge," together with other Masonic documents and diabolical designs. Now, by what right had the Masons the privilege of depositing their anathemas, statistics, and seal in the corner-stone of a building to be paid for by the public at large? If the Masons had such a right, why not give the same privileges to all the other secret societies such as the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Red Men, and all the same age and hob-tail of the whole secret society bemarks?

What makes the matter worse, in the present case, is the fact that every inch of Queens City is Catholic ground. Dr. John McLaughlin, who built the first house on the township, died a Catholic, and is buried beneath the pro-Cathedral. The parish church erected in the place was built in 1865, and was scarcely a year erected before it was enlarged into the full dimensions, among whom was the distinguished citizen, Hon. Peter H. Burnett, of this city. The first boys' school organized in Oregon City was taught by a Catholic priest; the first girls' academy was under the superviseon of the Sisters of Notre Dame; the nest of the first Catholic See in the Northwest was Oregon City. And yet, notwithstanding these unmistakably Catholic antecedents, the Masonic nest is permitted to impose its presence upon a public occasion, and not a solitary Catholic voice is raised to resent the outrage!

ABBOT HERMAN.

The following priests of the Diocese would have been present at the Synod except for disabilities sufficient to entitle them to a dispensation:

Rev. Antoine Ravalli, S. J. and M. D., a native of Rome, born in 1812, and a priest in the Mission Church for forty-five years, but now in hopeless decline at St. Mary's, Bitter Root Valley.

Rev. L. Van Gorp, S. J., a native of Belgium, born in 1827, and a priest of the Society of Jesus, Superior of the Rocky Mountain Mission, at Helena, for a number of years, residing at Gonzaga, the Fleathesda, St. Ignatius' Mission, a native of Italy, and well known in Montana for his Arabic-to-English dictionary, at the Cathedral.

Rev. P. Damiano, Rector of Deer Lodge since 1866; born in Flanders, Belgium.

Rev. J. Giuli, S. J., a Roman, resident visiting missionary at the Cathedral.

Rev. F. Ansiaux, S. J., missionary among the Crows; a native of Mexico.

Rev. J. Lindemann, O. S. A., Shoshone; born in Columbiana county, Ohio; a graduate of a university of Germany, and a deacon of the order of the 1st of 1882.

Rev. J. Jaillet, O. S. A., Bozeman; a native of Belgium.

Rev. Frederick Aberville, S. J., Rector of the Jesuit College in Santa Clara, California.

Rev. J. Damiani, S.J., Superior at St. Peter's Mission; a native of Rome.

Rev. L. G. Trombley, S. T. L., Lionsdale in Montana; Rector of Frenchtown, Michigan county; a native of Montreal, Canada.

ABBOT SEBASTIAN.

The following priests of the Diocese would have been present at the Synod except for disabilities sufficient to entitle them to a dispensation:

Rev. Antoine Ravalli, S. J. and M. D., a native of Rome, born in 1812, and a priest in the Mission Church for forty-five years, but now in hopeless decline at St. Mary's, Bitter Root Valley.

Rev. L. Van Gorp, S. J., a native of Belgium, born in 1827, and a priest of the Society of Jesus, Superior of the Rocky Mountain Mission, at Helena, for a number of years, residing at Gonzaga, the Fleathesda, St. Ignatius' Mission.

Rev. J. Bandini, S. J., a native of Italy, and a missionary among the Indians in Montana for twenty years, now residing at St. Peter's Mission.

Rev. P. Damiano, S. J., born in Italy, resident at St. Ignatius' Mission.

Rev. J. Le Jeune, a native of France, missionary among the Cheyenne Indians.

Rev. F. Prando, S. J., a native of Italy, a missionary among the Blackfeet.

There are the priests who co-operated with Rt. Rev. John B. Brondel in laying the foundation of the new See of Helena, and in training ecclesiastical law for its future. Among them are many veterans in the vineyard of our Lord. Holy men who have literally lived—like St. John the Baptist in the wilderness—on "locusts and wild honey," in order to plant the infallible faith of God in the hearts of the Indians. How well such devoted apostles of our holy Faith have earned the love of that heavenly Mother in whose honor the first church and mission in Montana were named!

As above stated, there are missionaries in Montana whose spiritual divine or clergy are kept away from the Synod, and among these is one to whom (without any disparagement of his brethren in the great Order to which he belongs)—we may apply the well-known Shakespearean phrase, as being "the noblest Roman of them all:" Rev. Antoine Ravalli, S. J., the cherished companion of the pioneer of the Cross, has resided continuously among the mountain missions for forty-four years, during which he has helped to change numerous nomadic pagan Indian tribes into industrious and civilized Christians whose many writers describe as models whose morals white men might copy with great spiritual benefit. The good accomplished and the hardships endured by this Apostle of the Cross will never be known to man. For years both himself and his companions lived principally on acorns roots and dried berries. They then procured some seed wheat, which they boiled in the ear like corn, for four of losing even a single grain, so precious was the

An Outrage that Should be Stopped.

We notice that it is becoming quite common in this country to lay the corner-stones of public buildings with what is known as Masonic ceremonies, and we earnestly hope that when next such an unseemly and unnecessary insult is offered to Catholic citizens residing in any village, town, or city on this coast, they will enter their protest against its consummation.

By what right does the Masonic sect intrude its mummeries and its mockery of the religious rites of Catholics into the ceremonies at such occasions? Do they consider the entire taxpaying body? Is this a Masonic Government? There are questions which our mem every citizen in America, and when they are answered according to the spirit of the Constitution it will be found that no sect has any right to impose its presence upon occasions where the money of the whole people is contributed to erect buildings to be used for, and supported by, the entire taxpaying community, whether Masons or anti-Masons, Catholics or Calvinists, Church of England people, or Christians.

When the corner-stone of any public building is laid the proper persons to supervise the ceremonies on such an occasion are the officers of the county or city authorities, such an edifice is projected. They are the people's representatives on all such occasions, and when the people permit the Masonic sect to usurp the place of their duly elected officials, they are acting unwisely in thus infringing a portion of their rights by permitting an outrage that is an insult to every Catholic citizen, as well as to many other citizens who believe that secret societies are the most dangerous organizations that threaten the stability of this Republic.

We notice this unseemly outrage upon the rights of the people at large more particularly at this time, because we learn from our contemporary that the corner-stone of the Convent Hospital in Fort Jay was last month with all the Masonic ceremonies that squinal sect formulates. First among the documents deposited in the corner-stone was "A list of the officers of the Masonic Grand Lodge," and among the articles was "An impression of the seal of the Grand Lodge," together with other Masonic documents and diabolical designs. Now, by what right had the Masons the privilege of depositing their anathemas, statistics, and seal in the corner-stone of a building to be paid for by the public at large? If the Masons had such a right, why not give the same privileges to all the other secret societies such as the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Red Men, and all the same age and hob-tail of the whole secret society bemarks?

What makes the matter worse, in the present case, is the fact that every inch of Queens City is Catholic ground. Dr. John McLaughlin, who built the first house on the township, died a Catholic, and is buried beneath the pro-Cathedral. The parish church erected in the place was built in 1865, and was scarcely a year erected before it was enlarged into the full dimensions, among whom was the distinguished citizen, Hon. Peter H. Burnett, of this city. The first boys' school organized in Oregon City was taught by a Catholic priest; the first girls' academy was under the supervision of the Sisters of Notre Dame; the nest of the first Catholic See in the Northwest was Oregon City. And yet, notwithstanding these unmistakably Catholic antecedents, the Masonic nest is permitted to impose its presence upon a public occasion, and not a solitary Catholic voice is raised to resent the outrage!

ABBOT SEBASTIAN.

The New Diocese of Helena. Wonderful Growth of the Church in Montana.

The month of June in the present year will ever be memorable in the annals of the Church in Montana—that being the time when the first Diocesan Synod was convened within the boundaries of the See of Helena. Rt. Rev. John Baptist Brondel, the holy and zealous Bishop of that section of the Lord's vineyard, has at last brought order out of chaos in the important portion of this great Catholic country of the future, which is the Year of Grace 1884 placed under his jurisdiction, and which in scores of time is destined to become one of the most flourishing Dioceses in the Union.

Montana may well be called the cradle of the Catholic Church on the Pacific Coast of North America. In 1840—before California was forcibly wrested from its Spanish owners and claimed as American territory—that eminent and holy missionary Father Peter J. De Smet, S. J. (God rest his soul!) and his two companions, founded the Faith in Montana by establishing the Mission of St. Mary's in Bitter Root Valley, where the glories of the Blessed Mother of God have been chanted daily ever since! With what prophetic vision did not Longfellow exclaim:

"This is indeed the Blessed Mary's Land, Virgin and Mother of our dear Redeemer!"

The little log church erected to our holy Faith by the first Indian converts, sanctified by the sons of St. Ignatius, has increased and multiplied in manifold manifestations that its prosperity proves that any good work for God's glory, placed under the patronage of the Queen of the Most Holy Rosary—is sure to be prosperous for the propagation of the Faith and the salvation of souls in the province in which it was founded. Oregon paper that the corner-stone of the Convent Hospital in Fort Jay was last month with all the Masonic ceremonies that squinal sect formulates. First among the documents deposited in the corner-stone was "A list of the officers of the Masonic Grand Lodge," and among the articles was "An impression of the seal of the Grand Lodge," together with other Masonic documents and diabolical designs. Now, by what right had the Masons the privilege of depositing their anathemas, statistics, and seal in the corner-stone of a building to be paid for by the public at large? If the Masons had such a right, why not give the same privileges to all the other secret societies such as the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Red Men, and all the same age and hob-tail of the whole secret society bemarks?

—The corner-stone of a new church in Dale, Switzerland, has just been laid. It will cost about $85,000. There are 19,000 souls in the parish, and 1,700 children in the parochial schools, which are conducted by the Brothers of Christian Schools of Ferdinand. The Pope has been so pleased with the good work that he recently gave a large sum of money to it.

—Preacher Marvin, the Portland Congregational moonbeam who is crazy with Popery phobia, has at last left his congregation for his congregation's good. Last week he withdrew from the contest with his demented brethren, and left them masters of the situation, after raising such sound as must have made Satan laugh. He rejoices over Marvin's success as a mischief-maker.

—The principal of one of the most eminent educational institutions in the Eastern States, in sending for twenty copies of the Monitor, says: "Your editorial, 'Gentlemen, Give Your Hearts to God,' should be read by every Catholic graduate in the land." We think the distinguished teacher for the tribute of his esteem, and we also tender our thanks to the many kind friends all over the coast, who are constantly sending us additional names as new subscribers to what one of them very emphatically calls "the grand old Monitor."

The "Occident" on Col. Hinton's Conversion.

It would be just as impossible to pass a camel through the eye of a needle as to get a Presbyterian organ to voluntarily tell the truth regarding anything Catholic. There's the Occident, for instance, which in its issue for the convention of Col. Hinton in New York, says that he is to great loss to the Christian Church, and that Heaven's Blessing is to be upon Pontius de Pilate themselves (a thing hitherto unknown to Popish people). The gospel is to be preached to the Romish "dupes" and the conversion of even one sinner, but we doubt if over the conversion of a Presbyterian affected the heavenly hosts a half-hundredth part as much.

Again, the organ of the Phariseec says that Col. Hinton became a Catholic because he had a Catholic wife, but this is only telling half the truth, because the lady in question was an Episcopalian when she became Col. Hinton's wife. Subsequently she became a Catholic, and—like a good wife—she helped her husband towards Heaven by prayer for his conversion. That is the simple truth; hence, all the Occident's diabolic stories about "the wily priest" and the "devoted wife" are merely diabolical promptings of some Presbyterian mind mortgaged to the devil. The Occident says: "Great is Monsignor Capel of the Papists!" It should rather say: Great is the Father of Lies, the Pride of the Presbyterian!

Pastor Forbers Bern's Church.

New York, July 7.—The Tribune has the following, under date: "Father Bern's old Catholic church in New York who would like to meet that their attachment to the Holy See is unofficial yet, and a subscription for the relief of the old Sun Cacine Hotel Church which then a good opportunity to express their confidence, and when the Church of Father Joseph Bern will have been rehabilitated it will be in order to put a proper monument over the site of the historic edifice at Gulnem, where J. W. Marshall found the first gold in California.

The Political Heresy of "Harper's Weekly."

Every reader of American history is familiar with the fact that the hordes of Hessians hired by England to stamp out the fire of freedom upon American soil were the meanest cut-throats that ever faced the Continental army. The most of the hired breed were buried without military honors or mourning of any kind, and the only souvenir we now possess of that prose of English paid hirelings, is the Hessian fly which tortures American farmers, and the Hessian fly are the literary lineings of Harper's Weekly.

The course of Harper's Weekly during the Civil War is well known to all intelligent people. It maligned the character of the Chief Magistrate of this Union—Abraham Lincoln. It hired its nasty artist to cast contempt upon the Union cause, and if it did not succeed in planting the secession flag on the capitol at Washington, it was because three modern Hessians, like their hireling prototypes of old, were overpowered by the patriotism of American public opinion.

In order that there may be no mistake about the trail-cross attitude assumed by this treacherous tribe of turn-coats, we lay before our readers a couple of quotations from issues of that malodorous sheet during the Civil War, as that they may see also how naturally the Hessians of Babylon because his policy is opposed to English supremacy upon American soil.

On March 22d, 1862, Harper's Weekly published a disgusting cartoon of Abraham Lincoln, in which the President was represented in a state of maudlin intoxication and in long-tailed coat, with a pocket full of half-drunken loafers, while through the window of the bar-room was seen a passing funeral, on the pretext of which was inscribed "Union and Constitution." In the same month an editorial appeared in this English journal, the tone of which we clip these disunion sentiments:

"It is well that they (the Secessionists) should try the experiment, and that it should be without so much with us. God forbid that we should stop them. If the Union is really into those, then, Heaven forbid that we should in our presence stop it."

And this was the anti-Union attitude of this mongrel sheet during the whole conflict for the perpetuity of the American Union. Even down to the time when an every patriotic heroes fell at Fredericksburg, these contemptible parasites of British power continued their personal attacks upon the President, his Cabinet, and the very soldiers who were dying in order to save their country from the traitors' destruction. Here is what General Rosencrans said concerning the mendacious conduct of the Hessians in Harper's after the battle of Fredericksburg:

"Can any one who ever saw the cruel cost that attended the battle of Fredericksburg, and the Fredericksburgs, representing indignant Union, and the Fredericksburgs, representing indignant traitors her, with his broad Atlantean shoulders, bear the sneers of a Harper's Weekly?

Leisure Hours.

GEPT. F. FRANK ..... EDITOR

—PRO-GNOSTICATE—

ANSWER to Leisure Hours No. 28.

1st.—Ad A. DRAGAN
PARAMOUS
REDUCTEN SEVERELY BENEFIT SENSELESS SENTENCES

2nd.—Prognostic. 7th.—Margin.

3rd.—OPERATIC 8th.—Ib
PYRAMID SUD EMPIRE RIMED
RATED SILICON
AHIM DOMINATOR
IU DECAYS
O DEAF
O NOD
ORE

4th.—Water-spout. 9th.—Down-fall.

5th.— SKARK 10th.—ABILENE
SKARAB ALBERTS
SKARCE ALLEGORY
SKARCH ALLEGRO
SKARCE INFERENCE SKIN SEVERELY

6th.—Admiration. 11th.—Bottle-field.

12th.— ASTRAL
ANGULA
ANGULA
ROMADE
ROMADE
ROMADE
HICCOUGH SEXETS
IRREPARABLE TYCOON
IRREPARABLE TYCOON
CHARLES PATROUNS
CHARLES PATROUNS
FREEBOOTERS
FOOTER
FOOTER FEEBLE
FEEBLE
FEEBLE

Puzzles by Lalage Pierce, Mr. Sparkhall, Ethel Maude, Ethel Maude, Ethel Maude

OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

Sights and Scenes in Indiana Country.—A Call on the Sacramento.—Stopping Through a Stump.—A Visit to Rio Vista.—A Prosperous Town and a Splendid Catholic School.

RIO VISTA, June 30, 1864.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:—

Dear Sir:—On my recent trip through the interior of Solano county I found a hopeful feeling existing everywhere amongst the people under the inspiriting prospects of a bountiful harvest. The grain fields never looked better or in finer condition if I except a few inconsiderable patches of sand here and there, but which will not of course be absolutely lost. I noticed many extensive tracts of hay, to be sure, that were in all probability rendered unmalleable as a first-class article, by one of recently entirely destroyed, as much of it can be used to advantage by stockmen and farmers themselves for cattle.

THE FIRST CROP AS A WHOLE

will be light this year, especially in the lowland districts which have been subjected to a severe drain last year by the prolonged rains drowning out and in some places completely destroying the growing fruit on the young vines.

From here I took in a call based up the Sacramento and with a party of friends visited the Rock, Tyler, McMillan of Rio Vista, which is a complete stump of Grand Island and belong to the noble and hospitable descendants of a family of Indian Chiefs, Chas. and Gregorio Crosby, who are living the name of the former has been perpetuated in the name of the present Rio Vista, which is a flourishing town of some 1,500 inhabitants, and which, I understand, is to be the terminus of the Stockton and Sacramento Railroad, which will run on the south side of the Sacramento River, and which will be finished before the end of next year. A large portion of the ties of the railroad which the chieftains of the tribe of Crosby have cut and delivered on the river bank, are intended by them for the purpose of building a house, or wharf, or both, on the land they own in the town of Rio Vista, which is planning some to look upon.

DITTO.

On the 19th inst. I left my place, and heads of the 19th inst. I left my place, and heads of the 19th inst. I left my place, and heads of

THE MONITOR,

A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL

DEVOTED TO THE PROPAGATION AND DEFENSE OF CATHOLIC PRINCIPLES.

Published by THE MONITOR PUBLISHING CO. Office: 604 Clay street, San Francisco, California.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Per Year by Mail (in gold or its equivalent) $1 50
Per Year by Mail (if not paid in advance) 2 00
Six Months (if paid in advance) 1 00
Six Months (not paid in advance) 1 50
Three Months (if paid in advance) 50
Three Months (if not paid in advance) 1 00
Payment in full of the Subscription (in advance) $2.00, (not in advance) $3.00.

☞ Address all communications, Postmasters, Postmasters, checks, and postal orders to

E. J. McCARRY, Editorial Manager,

Monitor Office, Box 1911 P. O., San Francisco, Cal.
Post Office—as Second Class Matter.

Entered at the San Francisco

The Monitor.

THE MONITOR

is now in the twenty-seventh year of publication, and its well-established reputation as a standard religious newspaper, has gained for it a wide circulation and an influence which make THE MONITOR a valuable medium for advertisers. Advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

Communications, to secure insertion, should be handed in not later than Tuesday of each week.

No communications will be inserted unless accompanied by the author's real name. This is required as a private guarantee of good faith.

Communications will be gladly received from all interested in the issues advocated by this Journal. Correspondents should be as brief as possible, and should write legibly, and on one side of the paper only. We cannot undertake to return the MSS. of unused articles.

All contributions and communications, whether on business or otherwise are to be addressed to the Manager.

For thy God we not ashamed to say the Truth..... Strive for Justice for thy God; and even unto Death fight for Justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for Thee. (Ecclus. iv. 33

SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1884.

VOL. XXVII. NO. 41.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.
TRY IT. DRUGGISTS SELL IT.
Made By
H. B. SLAVEN,
The Baldwin Building.

COLD, SILVER AND NICKEL PLATING.

— Every Description of —
Church and Altar Ornaments
ALSO HOUSEHOLD GOODS
Secured and Plated
As good as new, equal to the most beautiful and durable manner at the
SAN FRANCISCO
Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating Works,
653 and 655 MISSION ST.,
(Near Montgomery and Third Sts., San Francisco.)
R. G. DENNISTON, Proprietor.

BOOTS AND SHOES!
MOORE & MURPHY,
Importers and Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of Ladies' and Gent's
BOOTS AND SHOES,
Of Full Lines of the Best Eastern Manufactures and Gentlemen's Boots and Shoes constantly on hand.
Remember the Number:
138 SIXTH STREET, 138
Bet. Mission and Howard.

THE GENUINE DR. JAYNE'S FLESH CORRECTOR for the Flesh (Corset) on the Coast—This is not a patent medicine nor a patent corset, but a medicine for the flesh, giving the proper shape to the human form, home and abroad, by mail or express. Sold only by the Sole Inventor and Manufacturer, DR. JAYNE, 1004 Market St., S. F. Ladies can consult the Doctoress at the Office. Gentlemen can consult the Doctor.

M. H. OBER & CO.,
Boston Dress Reform Rooms.
Sole Agents for the Celebrated Dr. Jayne's Flesh Corrector.
NOTICE OF REMOVAL!
M. WARDS & CO.
Are now located at their new store, 1 Montgomery Avenue, (Commercial Block), by the South Side, near Second Street.
N. B. cor. Sansome and Commercial Sts.
Dealers in Ready Made Clothing, Hats, Caps, Boots and Shoes, Trunks and Valises, Furnishing Goods, Blankets, Quilts, Flannels, Cottonades, Jeans, Tweeds, Cassimeres, Satinets, Linseys, Shirtings, Prints, Ginghams, Linen Goods, Notions, Etc., Etc., Etc.
Our Goods are all of the latest styles and of the best quality, and we are prepared to sell at the lowest possible prices. Our Motto: "Quick Sales and Small Profits."
Country Merchants and others will find it to their interest to call and examine our Goods and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.
Orders from the Country will receive the same attention as if the purchaser were present.
M. WARDS & CO.

COMPLETE SET OF TEETH
Warranted for $7.00
DR. HENRY GRAGIEN,
DENTIST,
818 Market st., (formerly in Jewell building.)

HALL'S SARSAPARILLA
YELLOW DOCK
AND IODIDE OF POTASS.
THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER AND TONIC ALTERATIVE IN USE.
Hall's Sarsaparilla cures all diseases originating from a diseased state of the Blood and Liver, including Scrofula, Scrofulous Humors, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dropsy, Loss of Appetite, Nervous Prostration, Female Complaints, and all diseases arising from an impure state of the Blood or a torpid Liver.
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Scrofula, Gout, Dropsy, Tumors, Salt Rheum and Mercurial Pains yield to the use of Hall's Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock and Iodide of Potass. Nature's Great Purifier of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Healthy, the Complexion Bright and Clear.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
J. R. GATES & CO., Proprietors,
17 Sansome Street, cor. Commercial, S. F.
Gen. Agents. Gen. Lessees
STACK & LACOMBE,
Practical Hatters,
639 MARKET STREET,
Under Palace Hotel..... San Francisco

Masonry and its Offshoots.

THE ORIGIN OF THE BOGUS KNIGHTS.

HOW MASONRY MIMICS THE ORDERS OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

A Scathing Lecture Exposing the Sinful Sham.

Rev. A. M. Santandreu, Rector of the Church of that Lady of the Pillar, Spanishtown, supplemented the reading of the Encyclical of Pontiff against the Masonic sect with the following historical discourse revealing the origin of the principal mock "Knights" and other secret orders of modern Masonry.

The Catholic Church has always fostered in her bosom the ways and means which promote Christian perfection, and renders easier and surer the salvation of her children. Hence the Church from the beginning has always approved and encouraged societies and orders which had for their object the promotion of piety and the perfection of life among their members, by professing to obey—in addition to the laws of the Church—certain rules and regulations conformable always with the Church, the observance of which has been invariably condemned by the Church when their rules and regulations have not been in conformity with the spirit of the Church, or have failed or ceased to obtain the proposed or approved end.

ONE OF THESE ORDERS IN THE KNIGHT TEMPLAR.

which was founded at Jerusalem A. D. 1118 by Hugo de Payens, in order to protect the Holy Sepulchre and the pilgrims resorting thither, and also in order to defend Christianity and the Catholic Church with word and deed, shedding if necessary, the last drop of their blood. To attain this end the members made three vows, viz., chastity, poverty and obedience; and as it was a religious and military order, it was supposed that part of their lives would be passed in the monastery which was built next to the Temple, a palace given to them for that purpose by the Patriarch of Jerusalem. The rules of the Order were drawn up by St. Bernard and they received the approval of the Church. Their deeds of heroism and Christianity were highly esteemed in the 12th century by St. Bernard, who no doubt manifested at that time the general feeling of the Church towards them.

But unfortunate in less than two centuries they grew puffed with pride, wealth and power, and displayed a scandalous magnificence and pomp, and dwelt in gorgeous palaces, but handsome ecclesiastic property, despoiled the churches of their titles and material possessions, and finally the property of the Holy See as Innocent III. complained, consumed all kinds of enormities and evils.

NUMEROUS ENEMIES EMERGE FROM THE FAITH.

These charges were brought constantly against them, and in their trial 72 Knights of Order even confessed to feed before the Pope the general custom of the Order was to deny Jesus Christ, to spit and trample on the Cross—which, however, they said was practiced in secret as a mere ceremony and substitute for the Grand Master of Paris and six hundred Knights of the various Lodges of France made the same confession. The Pope himself travelled over Europe to inform himself more of the abuses and found that their corruption was not personal or local, but general in the Order whereby Clement V. published on the 22d of April, 1312, the Bull of Suppression of the Order, and that no one before or thereafter might enter the order, wear its habit or bear the name of Knight Templar. The Kings of France and England enforced immediately in their respective kingdoms the bull of suppression, and I may safely say that the date of the bull was the date of the death of the order, which ceased to exist entirely, but after four centuries the Free Masons reconstructed the phantom of said defunct order.

MASONRY WAS ONE OF THE VARIOUS SECTS

of the Church in the middle ages. All the principal sects were masons, architects and artisans, generally employed in the art of architecture. The object was to obey the Church, and to study more and more the rules of architecture in order to be able to build to the honor of God grand churches and cathedrals, and at the same time to protect themselves, they were enrolled called Free Masons because they were exempted by the Church, on account of their services, of certain laws and burdens, which other artisans not affiliated with the guild had to observe. This guild created several centuries and flourished as lodge as it was under the patronage of the Church. Their work remains yet in the shape of churches, cathedrals, public and private monuments, though many cathedrals of the Gothic style were built during the 19th and 20th centuries by masons not affiliated with the guild.

In the 18th century some secrets and rules were introduced which were by no means in conformity with the Church, and what had been practical Masonry in the 18th century became theoretical, so that any one could be a member. This new Free Masonry became a secret society as it is known at the present day, according to Catholic writers—from the year 1717, Church history—and also to many non-Catholic writers—from the year 1717, though as a writer in Chambers's Encyclopedia, says: "Fabled imagination has traced the actual Free Masonry origin to the Roman Empire, to Pharo, to the Temple of Solomon, to the Tower of Babel, to the ark of Noah; and yet the fact remains that its founder was Elias Ashmore, and the first lodge for the established in Hamburg (Germany, A. D. 1733), and he defines it in these words: "Masonry is an innocent mystification, uncommected with the guild of Masons."

THE SECTS CONSIDERING SAID SOCIETY

highly prejudicial and antagonistic to her doctrines, in the year 1738 it was condemned by Clement XII, and it has been repeatedly condemned since, especially by Pius IX., and lately by Leo XIII. Once it was condemned, then the Masons resuscitated the buried Knight Templars of the 13th century, and hence every Knight Templar is a Free Mason. Wilkie, a Protestant historian, says: "The pretended modern Knight Templars do not resemble the ancient Knights but in name and a little in dress. They are merely the excrement of Free Masonry, unconnected with the former Knights, their religion is child's play and their official creed is mockery and atheism."

We are in a position to be able to judge whether these words are true or not, having had an opportunity of examine them just a year ago in their meaningless conclave in San Francisco. They made a public and general confession in a wholesale style and received absolution from a Protestant Bishop, and furthermore confessed in the public petition that they believed in the holy Catholic Church.

In the first place in the Church we never make that kind of funny confession, and secondly we never go to receive absolution from the hands of a Protestant bishop, and thirdly did any of these so-called "Knights" enter a Catholic church to hear Mass or receive the sacraments? They came with all the pharphernalia of the Middle Ages and with sabres and modern arms, and arches of triumph were erected by the people or by themselves, and they promenaded triumphantly through the streets of the city. Now I will ask any candid and sensible person, What victory were they commemorating? Perhaps the victory of Hernando Cortez or the defeat of the Armada? In clear words what good have the modern Knights done as a body in this or any other country? If any one can say truly that we owe to them the 4th of July, our liberty or our national glory, then I will say he can be given to whom honor is due, and on the contrary, we shall let the monkey dress as king, but monkey remains. How let them place themselves as knights, but in reality they remain a mockery. Finally, Free Masonry has been the natural mother of Illuminati, Carbonari, Hill Fellows and many other secret societies.

THE ONE REASON

heralded through a local paper a few weeks ago, that this society is older than its predecessors, by tracing its origin to the Roman Empire, yet the historical fact remains that the first lodge was founded in Manchester in the year 1717, and, according to Chambers, "is an humble imitation of Masonry, and is generally called the daughter of Free Masonry."

The reasons why these societies are condemned by the Church are fully given in the last Encyclical of Leo XIII, which for word and deed, shedding if necessary, the last drop of their blood. To attain this end the members made three vows, viz., chastity, poverty and obedience; and as it was a religious and military order, it was supposed that part of their lives would be passed in the monastery which was built next to the Temple, a palace given to them for that purpose by the Patriarch of Jerusalem. The rules of the Order were drawn up by St. Bernard and they received the approval of the Church. Their deeds of heroism and Christianity were highly esteemed in the 12th century by St. Bernard, who no doubt manifested at that time the general feeling of the Church towards them.

But unfortunate in less than two centuries they grew puffed with pride, wealth and power, and displayed a scandalous magnificence and pomp, and dwelt in gorgeous palaces, but handsome ecclesiastic property despoiled the churches of their titles and material possessions, and finally the property of the Holy See as Innocent III. complained, consumed all kinds of enormities and evils.

NUMEROUS ENEMIES EMERGE FROM THE FAITH.

These charges were brought constantly against them, and in their trial 72 Knights of Order even confessed to feed before the Pope the general custom of the Order was to deny Jesus Christ, to spit and trample on the Cross—which, however, they said was practiced in secret as a mere ceremony and substitute for the Grand Master of Paris and six hundred Knights of the various Lodges of France made the same confession. The Pope himself travelled over Europe to inform himself more of the abuses and found that their corruption was not personal or local, but general in the Order whereby Clement V. published on the 22d of April, 1312, the Bull of Suppression of the Order, and that no one before or thereafter might enter the order, wear its habit or bear the name of Knight Templar. The Kings of France and England enforced immediately in their respective kingdoms the bull of suppression, and I may safely say that the date of the bull was the date of the death of the order, which ceased to exist entirely, but after four centuries the Free Masons reconstructed the phantom of said defunct order.

MASONRY WAS ONE OF THE VARIOUS SECTS

of the Church in the middle ages. All the principal sects were masons, architects and artisans, generally employed in the art of architecture. The object was to obey the Church, and to study more and more the rules of architecture in order to be able to build to the honor of God grand churches and cathedrals, and at the same time to protect themselves, they were enrolled called Free Masons because they were exempted by the Church, on account of their services, of certain laws and burdens, which other artisans not affiliated with the guild had to observe. This guild created several centuries and flourished as lodge as it was under the patronage of the Church. Their work remains yet in the shape of churches, cathedrals, public and private monuments, though many cathedrals of the Gothic style were built during the 19th and 20th centuries by masons not affiliated with the guild.

In the 18th century some secrets and rules were introduced which were by no means in conformity with the Church, and what had been practical Masonry in the 18th century became theoretical, so that any one could be a member. This new Free Masonry became a secret society as it is known at the present day, according to Catholic writers—from the year 1717, Church history—and also to many non-Catholic writers—from the year 1717, though as a writer in Chambers's Encyclopedia, says: "Fabled imagination has traced the actual Free Masonry origin to the Roman Empire, to Pharo, to the Temple of Solomon, to the Tower of Babel, to the ark of Noah; and yet the fact remains that its founder was Elias Ashmore, and the first lodge for the established in Hamburg (Germany, A. D. 1733), and he defines it in these words: "Masonry is an innocent mystification, uncommected with the guild of Masons."

THE SECTS CONSIDERING SAID SOCIETY

highly prejudicial and antagonistic to her doctrines, in the year 1738 it was condemned by Clement XII, and it has been repeatedly condemned since, especially by Pius IX., and lately by Leo XIII. Once it was condemned, then the Masons resuscitated the buried Knight Templars of the 13th century, and hence every Knight Templar is a Free Mason. Wilkie, a Protestant historian, says: "The pretended modern Knight Templars do not resemble the ancient Knights but in name and a little in dress. They are merely the excrement of Free Masonry, unconnected with the former Knights, their religion is child's play and their official creed is mockery and atheism."

We are in a position to be able to judge whether these words are true or not, having had an opportunity of examine them just a year ago in their meaningless conclave in San Francisco. They made a public and general confession in a wholesale style and received absolution from a Protestant Bishop, and furthermore confessed in the public petition that they believed in the holy Catholic Church.

In the first place in the Church we never make that kind of funny confession, and secondly we never go to receive absolution from the hands of a Protestant bishop, and thirdly did any of these so-called "Knights" enter a Catholic church to hear Mass or receive the sacraments? They came with all the pharphernalia of the Middle Ages and with sabres and modern arms, and arches of triumph were erected by the people or by themselves, and they promenaded triumphantly through the streets of the city. Now I will ask any candid and sensible person, What victory were they commemorating? Perhaps the victory of Hernando Cortez or the defeat of the Armada? In clear words what good have the modern Knights done as a body in this or any other country? If any one can say truly that we owe to them the 4th of July, our liberty or our national glory, then I will say he can be given to whom honor is due, and on the contrary, we shall let the monkey dress as king, but monkey remains. How let them place themselves as knights, but in reality they remain a mockery. Finally, Free Masonry has been the natural mother of Illuminati, Carbonari, Hill Fellows and many other secret societies.

THE ONE REASON

heralded through a local paper a few weeks ago, that this society is older than its predecessors, by tracing its origin to the Roman Empire, yet the historical fact remains that the first lodge was founded in Manchester in the year 1717, and, according to Chambers, "is an humble imitation of Masonry, and is generally called the daughter of Free Masonry."

The reasons why these societies are condemned by the Church are fully given in the last Encyclical of Leo XIII, which for ever and ever, shedding if necessary, the last drop of their blood. To attain this end the members made three vows, viz., chastity, poverty and obedience; and as it was a religious and military order, it was supposed that part of their lives would be passed in the monastery which was built next to the Temple, a palace given to them for that purpose by the Patriarch of Jerusalem. The rules of the Order were drawn up by St. Bernard and they received the approval of the Church. Their deeds of heroism and Christianity were highly esteemed in the 12th century by St. Bernard, who no doubt manifested at that time the general feeling of the Church towards them.

But unfortunate in less than two centuries they grew puffed with pride, wealth and power, and displayed a scandalous magnificence and pomp, and dwelt in gorgeous palaces, but handsome ecclesiastic property despoiled the churches of their titles and material possessions, and finally the property of the Holy See as Innocent III. complained, consumed all kinds of enormities and evils.

NUMEROUS ENEMIES EMERGE FROM THE FAITH.

These charges were brought constantly against them, and in their trial 72 Knights of Order even confessed to feed before the Pope the general custom of the Order was to deny Jesus Christ, to spit and trample on the Cross—which, however, they said was practiced in secret as a mere ceremony and substitute for the Grand Master of Paris and six hundred Knights of the various Lodges of France made the same confession. The Pope himself travelled over Europe to inform himself more of the abuses and found that their corruption was not personal or local, but general in the Order whereby Clement V. published on the 22d of April, 1312, the Bull of Suppression of the Order, and that no one before or thereafter might enter the order, wear its habit or bear the name of Knight Templar. The Kings of France and England enforced immediately in their respective kingdoms the bull of suppression, and I may safely say that the date of the bull was the date of the death of the order, which ceased to exist entirely, but after four centuries the Free Masons reconstructed the phantom of said defunct order.

MASONRY WAS ONE OF THE VARIOUS SECTS

of the Church in the middle ages. All the principal sects were masons, architects and artisans, generally employed in the art of architecture. The object was to obey the Church, and to study more and more the rules of architecture in order to be able to build to the honor of God grand churches and cathedrals, and at the same time to protect themselves, they were enrolled called Free Masons because they were exempted by the Church, on account of their services, of certain laws and burdens, which other artisans not affiliated with the guild had to observe. This guild created several centuries and flourished as lodge as it was under the patronage of the Church. Their work remains yet in the shape of churches, cathedrals, public and private monuments, though many cathedrals of the Gothic style were built during the 19th and 20th centuries by masons not affiliated with the guild.

In the 18th century some secrets and rules were introduced which were by no means in conformity with the Church, and what had been practical Masonry in the 18th century became theoretical, so that any one could be a member. This new Free Masonry became a secret society as it is known at the present day, according to Catholic writers—from the year 1717, Church history—and also to many non-Catholic writers—from the year 1717, though as a writer in Chambers's Encyclopedia, says: "Fabled imagination has traced the actual Free Masonry origin to the Roman Empire, to Pharo, to the Temple of Solomon, to the Tower of Babel, to the ark of Noah; and yet the fact remains that its founder was Elias Ashmore, and the first lodge for the established in Hamburg (Germany, A. D. 1733), and he defines it in these words: "Masonry is an innocent mystification, uncommected with the guild of Masons."

THE SECTS CONSIDERING SAID SOCIETY

highly prejudicial and antagonistic to her doctrines, in the year 1738 it was condemned by Clement XII, and it has been repeatedly condemned since, especially by Pius IX., and lately by Leo XIII. Once it was condemned, then the Masons resuscitated the buried Knight Templars of the 13th century, and hence every Knight Templar is a Free Mason.

A Chapter in "Progress and Poverty."

SOME OF HENRY GEORGE'S FALLACIES EXPOSED.

THE PSEUDO-REFORMER VERY INACCURATE IN THE USE OF THE TERMS OF ETHICS.

His Principles Opposed to Christian Teaching.

BY JOHN HEALY, D. V. G., ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

But some one may say—in fact it has been said to us—surely Mr. George cannot mean all this. His language is no doubt extravagant and inaccurate, it seems to imply that the private and exclusive ownership of land is unjust even in strict commutative justice between man and man, but he only means that it is against the principles of legal and distributive justice; that the toleration by the State of private property in land is greatly opposed to the common good; that it pampers industry, fosters idleness, promotes luxury amongst the richer, and the oppression of the poorer classes.

We have tried honestly to ascertain if such were indeed the real meaning of the language of Mr. Henry George, and we can confidently say that not only the language he uses, and of which we gave specimens above, but also the reasoning which is based on these statements, implies that every man in the community has, according to the law of the land, a strict right to a share in the land, a right which it is robbery to deny. All I ask is that he, and others, lead up to his inferences presupposing that he rejectsany other theory. I present 28th of the series and omits, such as: all men are unchastically born in a state of sin, man is not just title land, and, labor, chattels are more considers immortal. Such a theory of the rights of property, not as a science, but as a mere pretence for the purpose of inducing people to believe that it is an absurdity in the sense implied; it would lead to interminable confusion and universal anarchy. If it were true of individuals it would be equally true of communities. Not only would the Commons man have a right to abandon his barren soil and develop his energies in the fertile plains of Meath, but the English chief would have an equal right with the native owner's right to see if he could make more of himself by growing vines in the richest soil of France, or planting olives under the sunny skies of Italy.

The last sentence of that logical paragraph which we have quoted is like the rest, a proposition he maintains that "there can be no the ownership of anything no rightful title which is not derived from the title of the producer, and does not rest upon the natural right, of a man to himself," and consequently to the fruits of his own labor. He then goes on to show in his first paragraph, what nobody can deny, that a man has a right to ownership in the fruits of his own labor, which is derived from the right a man has by himself. But in the second paragraph he undertakes to prove that this right of ownership in the produce of labor excludes the possibility of ownership from any other title. We shall give this paragraph in his own words as a specimen of the argument that, forsooth, begs no question, and uses no equivocation:

"21. This right of ownership that springs from labor excludes the possibility of any right of ownership. If a man be rightfully entitled to the produce of his labor, then no one can be rightfully entitled to the ownership of anything which is not the produce of his labor or the labor of some one else which has passed to him. If production gave to the producer the right to exclusive possession and enjoyment there can rightfully be no exclusive possession and enjoyment of anything not the production of labor, and the recognition of private property in land is a wrong. For the right to the produce of labor cannot be enjoyed without the right to the free use of the opportunities offered by nature, and to admit the right of property in the produce of labor, then no one can be rightfully entitled to the ownership of anything which is not the produce of his labor or the labor of some one else which has passed to him. If production gave to the producer the right to exclusive possession and enjoyment there can rightfully be no exclusive possession and enjoyment of anything not the production of labor, and the recognition of private property in land is a wrong. For the right to the produce of labor cannot be enjoyed without the right to the free use of the opportunities offered by nature."

The right to the produce of labor cannot be enjoyed without the free use of the opportunities offered by nature, and to admit the right of property in the produce of labor, that is to its produce in other words, it is a pretence for the purpose of inducing people to believe that it is an absurdity in the sense implied; it would lead to interminable confusion and universal anarchy. If it were true of individuals it would be equally true of communities. Not only would the Commons man have a right to abandon his barren soil and develop his energies in the fertile plains of Meath, but the English chief would have an equal right with the native owner's right to see if he could make more of himself by growing vines in the richest soil of France, or planting olives under the sunny skies of Italy.

The last sentence of that logical paragraph which we have quoted is like the rest, a pretence for an argument founded on an equivocation: "When non-producers only claim as rent a portion of the wealth created by producers, the right of the producers to the fruits of their labor is to that extent denied." Yes, if they do not receive as an equivalent for their rent a something to which they would otherwise have no title. But the statement is evidently untrue if they receive such an equivalent for the rent, and an equivalent to which they have not a shadow of a title from any other source. Such are the principle arguments used by Mr. George and repeated through all the moods and tenses throughout this "Sacred Book". From time to time he introduces other and even still more childish fallacies. For instance: "All men have an equal right to the land, because God created the earth for all, gave the earth as a free gift to all." Yes, to be acquired and possessed by some of these legitimate titles to the land created and conferred by the law of God.

THE TRADITION OF MANKIND

and the common consent of all civilized nations. He gave it in that sense, and he gave it in no other sense. We cannot now stay to explain what these titles are, or how they originated. Our only purpose in these few pages was to show the true moral character of the doctrine advocated by the Californian professor, to point out a few of the consequences of its application, and to exhibit a specimen of the reasoning on which it is based."

Mr. Henry George in one place cautions his readers against a delusion resulting from the tendency to confound the accidental with the essential in this matter of land. This is the very delusion which has completely blinded him in his reasoning. He confounds the gross abuses which have been incidental to land tenure in various countries, and nowhere more than in Ireland, with the essential character of such tenure in itself; and from the grave evils resulting from the restraints, defects or abuses of private property in land, he infers the essential injustice of such private property in itself. This is what has always happened with all pseudo-reformers. Instead of trying to remove patiently and legally the defects of a system, they reject the system itself, they denounce it, they calumniate it, and always end by intensifying the evils which they proposed to remove. We cannot now undertake to point out the disastrous consequences to the community that would follow from the adoption of any such system as that advocated by the author of "Progress and Poverty." It is enough for us to have shown that its fundamental principle is not only opposed to the teaching of the Catholic Church, but fraught with great dangers to the welfare of society, and that its adoption would be the consummation of that robbery and injustice which it purports to denounce.

—Catholic Herald.

I Book VIII., ch. I.

"Representative Catholics."

Some of our Western contemporaries want to know "what is the matter with the Catholics of New York and Brooklyn that they are not able to secure the poor boon of freedom of conscience for the unfortunates of their creed." The matter is that the Catholics of both New York and Brooklyn have been for many years afflicted with a very bad case of "representative Catholics" in politics, and they are not partially cured of it.

One of these representative Catholics—in politics—who had been allowed to feed at the public crib for many years, because of the popular belief that he represented the Catholic vote, recently informed his pastor that unless he—the pastor—ceased to condemn the public schools, he—the representative Catholic in politics—would be compelled to give up his pew, and attend another church, as the fact of his countenancing the priest's utterances, even by his presence, was likely to injure his political prospects.

This is not at all a solitary case. There are a number of just such representative Catholic politicians to be found on any fair day lingering in the shadow of the city hall, either in Brooklyn or New York. There are others in the Legislature and in many other positions. Whenever there is a hard league meeting held in their districts, these men are on hand; whenever there is a church entertainment they occupy front seats; at church fairs they are ubiquitous and philanthropic, and they usually belong to all the Catholic societies.

This costs little, and is no manner compromise the representative Catholic in politics. When, however, the school question is broached, he usually shrugs his shoulders and remarks that he is disposed to take a "more broad and liberal view of it, you know," than is the church; and when measures of vital importance to Catholics, like the freedom of Consecrate Ball come up, he is a very poor stick, indeed.

The Catholic public is very patient, and it has supported these hamstrings for a long time, but it is at last becoming restive, and there is a strong probability that it will ere long throw them overboard. The sooner it does so the quicker will it secure those rights for which it has long contended, and which it would long since have obtained had its advocates been of the right stamp.

The representative Catholics who use his religion as a means of improving his political prospects is usually a very mean kind of a Catholic, and a very useless one as well. When they offer themselves as candidates for political positions, Catholic voters should bear this in mind.—Catholic Examiner.

—It is well known that the warmest sympathies of Pope Leo XIII. are directed towards the Oriental Churches, and that perhaps his dearest wish is the reunion of the separated Greeks with the Holy See. No man, perhaps, is in a position to do more towards this happy result than the patriarch and patriot-bishop of Dakota, Mgr. Strossmayer, at present staying in Rome. An eloquent article of the Monitor de Rome recounts the merits of this eminent prelate, and the great benefit conferred by him upon his fatherland. Thus he founded the Academy of Agram, supplied the first means for the establishment of the University there, built at his own expense the superb cathedral in his episcopal city, erected the Croatian picture gallery, and maintains at his own cost a great number of artists and students of every kind. The Holy Father has no other pupils who seconds him with equal zeal and success; every day the obstacles which have stood in the way of the reunion of the Churches are disappearing, and there really seems considerable hope of a strong movement setting in among several of the Eastern nations towards a return to the centre of Catholic unity.

CATHOLICITY IN BOSTON.

A Protestant Clergyman's Testimony to Its Wonderful Growth.

The Rev. George T. Rider, a Protestant clergyman, writes as follows in the June number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine:

We conclude that upon with a closely summarized sketch of the Catholic church in Boston, its founding and development. Not far from 1792, Mass was first celebrated in the city, and immediately the formation of the first parish was attempted. The first service was held in a hall on School street, and the church built on Franklin street. The prejudice of numerous complaints of the Catholics, from the outset in this city, is gathered up in the history of this church, of which has now become the archdiocesan of Boston.

Certain stellar clusters of that history furnish an unpalatable retrospect, and it may in all justice be assumed that even the fairest Protestantism of our day would not, in its opposition to the Catholic church, again resort to the brutal logic of the incendiary torch, and burn down their convent home over the heads of a handful of saintly Christian women, or hound them through the streets with a blasphemous mob of infuriated miscreants. It would be worse for the Protestant sire of the sequent to say, the first Catholic bishop of Boston was the admirable Cheverus, a French emigrant, who afterward died with great sanctity, the cardinal bishop of Bordeaux, to which sign he had been transferred in his later years. He was succeeded by Bishop Fenwick, whose successor was Bishop Fitzpatrick, who undertook the preliminary labor of founding the cathedral; but it was reserved for his deceased for his successor, Archbishop Williams, to lay the corner stone in 1867, bishop, afterward archbishop, Bagley preaching the sermon. It was finally dedicated in 1875.

After the fierce opposition of the early days had died out, little is heard or seen of the Catholic clergy and church outside the field of their legitimate ministrations. They were unknown in what is called "society." They participate in no controversies, nor in the discussion of public questions. The rapid influx of a foreign population, and its preparation for the duties and responsibilities of a new and genuine citizenship under such changed conditions of life, seem to have utilized the energy of the Catholic clergy to the utmost. There was no empty treasury, yet churches were to be built, schools, academies and colleges established, religious orders of men and women set at work at necessary points, homes of refuge and hospitals to be built and sustained, and necessary priests trained and educated for pastoral work. It is not strange then that any deserted, cast off home of worship was gladly seized upon and fitted for the priest of Christ's religion. Until the Jesuit Church of the Immaculate Conception, scarcely a comely, attractive Catholic church was to be found in the city. It was a serious grab of the ornate, elegant, Italian ritual upon the ugly, unadorned squareness of the Puritan meeting house.

The growth was silent but rapid and astonishingly vigorous. Expressing few and inconsiderable losses from her own children, there has succeeded an almost incomprehensible drift from Protestantism toward the Roman Catholic communion; not heavy or swollen, but significant, and baffling the usual lines of analysis and inquiry. According to the terms, "extremes meet," but the logical impulse is yet to be uncovered which brings Puritan and Unitarian into religious fellowship, with the Roman Catholic. Sources of information are not easily accessible to the public, yet it clearly appears at present there are 27 churches in Boston, served by 110 priests, who have the spiritual care of about 100,000 souls. There are in the city 11 orphanages and hospitals, mostly charitable and gratuitous, served by nearly 150 sisters and brothers of religious orders; 9 parochial schools, under the charge of 110 sisters of various orders, with lay assistants; and 7 convents, in which three consecrated women and men find their sweet home. Boston College on Harrison avenue, under the Jesuits, educates 220 students, and important educational work is being carried on elsewhere by the various clergy. The conviction forces itself upon one that those people make much of the old saying—Labor ut ores; that a supreme preposition carries and keeps them outside the range of merely secular pursuits and interests; that culture, art, the amenities and elegancies of life, with them, fall into a respective relation of indifference or contempt, as if they were already enriched to the full with something inexpressibly better.

A Child Struck Dead.

During the thunderstorms that have prevailed in many parts of England, recently, several persons have been struck by lightning. In spite of repeated warnings, people fail to realize the danger of standing near a tree at such a time, and the consequence is that most of the accidents from lightning occur to persons who expose themselves to special risk in the way. But the sad occurrence to which we move particularly refer took place within doors. It appears that a boy of thirteen had retired to bed at Birmingham and was talking to his mother, who was in the room, when a flash of great brilliancy was seen. The boy immediately said: "Mother, it is dark; what is the time?" His then full back insensible. On a surgeon being called in, he found that the lad was suffering from concussion of the brain, the result of an electric shock. An examination of the body showed that blood had effused under the skin, especially on the left side, and the outside tissue of the left eye was completely cut across. This showed that the electric fluid had been attracted by the iron bedstead, probably after coming down the chimney, and it had swept along the left side of the body and struck the eye.

—Bishop Spalding, assisted by a large number of priests, laid the corner stone of a new Catholic church at Streator, Ill., on the 20th ult., in the presence of a large number of people. The edifice will be of brick and will cost $15,000. During the day the bishop and priests went to Eagle Township, 4 or 5 miles west of that city, where they laid the foundations of another church there, which will be a $10,000 structure. In the evening the Rev. Dr. Spalding lectured in the Opera House on "Reason and Morality."

—The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Pennsylvania has a membership of about 16,000.

Poetry.

FOR THE MONITOR.

LADY IRENE.

Fair Lady Irene, in her boudoir so fine,
Sat musing by rubies, whose shimmer and shine
Kindled the rose-tint upon her soft cheek as they had
And beamed on their lady so stately and grand.
The haughty St. Albans, Irene was to wed,
Rich Sir Bell's fury chariot three circuits had sped,
His name of the nobles, his love and his pride,
All all, in her keeping, his treasures untold.
The lords their fairer rival had found a rival in gold;
Clear,
Its luminous rays, hale a trues, to all fear;
Secure in her love, in her hopes, and her pride,
The proudest and fairest of all the land of Irene.
"A beggar is here; shall I send her away?"
The servant then asked, with a sneer scarce away
The lady turned carelessly round: "Give her this
And food," then returned to her musing of bliss.
"She seeks not your gold nor your maid," he also Sneer
"Why, I will repeat, to you now would be glad, Shall I be jar off. "You may tell her to rest."
I'll never refuse her a moderate sum."
The beggar maid stood in her shabby attire
And said to the lady: "I know you desire
To act with all justice; so here I appeal
A pleader for justice, to you I now kneel.
Your gems are lovely, and wealth—but this fear I Was lost. Far from home and from friends that are dear,
I wander a beggar—an outcast—alone,
And he has wrought a prize, while I must atone.
I too had great beauty and he praised it high,
He now but a week, you too wretched to be,
He offered me gold, but I spurned it in wrath.
Gold daily I have you and yet the beggar's hard path,
I ask for revenge, for the hour is now here,
To you I have come with my story so dear,
And you, in your purity, rarely won't wed,
The man, of the man who has lied, and yet need
Your story's and one. But why come to me?
And pleading for vengeance! What can it all be?
"Hers a pale—and away! Thou most not come again!"
"Dost not understand! At the face of his child!
Look! Gone. Soon proof of my story so wild!
These immaculate nobly, perfect and rare
Proclaim him most truly, Sir Albion's true heir.
Let them behold and they will see the truth,
Thy haughty proud face has the look of the dead,
Oh, lady, I pray thee, but pity my boy,
And spare him the fate of his father's red ivy!"
"Away! Dare not stay! Thy presence too long
Begone! I am all—and, the beggar's wife
Left the lady alone, and, the lady's white arm
Lightly upon thy face, all the dead but to
"Thy heart has no pity for wretches like me,
So prayer of the beggar is vain—I go, for I see
To Heaven for vengeance, I'll call not, to vain!
Lip—lost remorse, well may you pale.
The beggar's maid stony the lady's heart seared
Like burning hot iron with life-blood benumbed;
And yet for the beggar no pity she knew,
Nor cared that the iron had entered there too.
Still tapping the marble her musing had left
And still all her sorrow away out of sight,
Yet the beggar's prayer she wanted a sign,
Forgetting—for pride and ambition was high.
Upon Pandora's gay portal but Lady Irene,
To marriage in waiting forth swept, like a queen;
Nor dear the loss figure that crouched near the door
Till gone at her side stood the beggar once more.
"Thy word she said to-morrow? Oh, answer me
No!
Then God and his angels will bless thee I know—
"What lawlest talk! from a beggar maid too;
Away! let me speak, I am nothing to you.
"Oh, woman have pity, oh, think of my boy,
Of parents who've toiled their last of all joy
Of hearts that are broken; of hopes that are dead
Of lives whose sole end is a revenge and fed!"
In vain all her pleading, no pity was there,
But Lashing and scorn, fill the plaintiff's despair,
"Oh Irene, that tinged so to the thing that you
scorn,
Raise you to the height on which angels look down!
I swear by the heels that are best in disgrace,
By the innocent smile on the lips of my child,
I swear by my honor, by my soul that is dead,
Aye, truly, for Sir Albion you never shall wed!
The lady fell back in her cushiny chair,
"Drive on and keep beggars away, if you please!"
The knave spoke onward, then cracked his
Jolt—and a scream—when the beggar bemoaned
Was dragged from the street—but a pitiful moan
Unknown and unwept by the strangers that pass.
Then sorrow grew and the tears flow down
And from the proud heart with their omnious breaks.
And now for the morrow all anxious thoughts
fled,
What man-to fear, when the morrow's dawn
Dark clouds in her heart, there's a tender thrill,
A sigh that has, a sunshine—like—
The wedding day dawned, silver bright and serene,
A clerkess day for the Lady Irene.
In dishes of silver of gold—perfumed white,
And laces and jewels that flashed in delight.
Was stands by Sir Albion to beg at last,
Neither in her love, the now stands by his side
Anything but happy feels that pressed on his bride.
"Irene with thee take for thy wife, here to day?"
For answer a shriek and "Away!" Away!
With eyelids distended in terror and fear
As if a fearful spirit, Father John, near.
Outstretching his arms to ward off the dark form
He fell to the ground and blabbed a certain lessed,
The creaky voice rose relent to release when he
As lips of her lover poured forth the red tide.
The wedding day sank into darkness and gloom,
From chamber of bridal to bachelor's tomb,
Pale Lady Irene, in her morning attire
Carissed the pale lips, unresponsive as stone.
M. L.

Literary Miscellany.

The Financial Crash.

AN AMERICAN SKETCH IN THREE PARTS.

PART II.

"Truth in sight is want of faith in sit."

Eleven years have passed since the failure of the Bellfront Bank. Many a hasty judgment people have not forgotten it, for nearly every farmer for miles around had some deposit in the bank, and almost all suffered more or less, by the collapse. The unhappy event gave an appreciating advantage, in that class of people who never save any money. "We told you so!" they said. "A bank managed by two men power! Ridiculous! We never deposited anything." And some of the unlucky ones were more angered by this cool assumption of sagacity than by the loss of their money.

After a time, however, the creditors were paid in part out of the wreck of the bank, and frequent remittances came from James Bellfront, in Brazil, for that purpose. In 187, Albert Verner died at Hedon-Indian. "It is the best thing he could do," said his good wife bitterly. "A disgraced man is safest in his grave."

The woman who spoke those hard, cold words had been one of the most loving of wives, but her husband's disgrace seemed to have changed her nature. She was the stern Calvinism in which she believed was not likely to soften it. She was well-educated, energetic, and work was the only thing that would make her forget. She toil at early and late, sewing, sewing, sewing, as if it sure her one hope in life. Unvary-ing industry and economy at last enabled her to start in business as a dressmaker. Even in crowded New York she held her own, and succeeded in giving her son a profession. The day on which Albert Lewis earned the privilege of writing "M. D." after his name his mother wept for the first time in many years. The joy pride that had frozen her heart melted for a moment under the influence of a daughter's tender pride in her son.

Father John Lewis—everybody calls him Father John—has afew more wrinkles in his face, his tall form is more stooped, and he has much more to need for spectacles than he had eleven years ago.

He is growing old; but for him the time has not yet come, "when no man can work. He seems two shadows, ten miles apart, and, if you consider that the road, or rather path, between them lies through Jersey sand, you will admit that his office is no sinecure.

His house, rambling old structure—which was considerately bequeathed to him by a grateful parishioner—stands on a hill not more than fifty yards from the beach. In the stillness of the night, the roar of the ocean of ocean seems to shake the timbers of the house.

It is Sunday evening. Vespers have been sung in St. Paul's and the red afterglow of sunset still lingers on the crosses at the top of the wooden spire. Father John is sitting on the porch of his pastoral house enjoying his only luxury—a cigar.

"Father John! Father John!" cries a cracked voice, in a tone that no living person might use in calling "Sir." But Father John does not start; he is used to it. It is only his old housekeeper, Cynthia Ann Spence, who makes her appearance from the house carrying two letters. As usual, Cynthia Ann looks scornful; as usual on Sundays, Cynthia Ann wears a dress with many flounces; as usual, on week days and Sundays, indoors and out, Cynthia Ann wears a calico and cardboard sunbonnet.

"Beggin' letters," snaps Cynthia Ann. "Tim Rooney has brought 'em from the post-office. There 'am in the fire, I reckon, reckon 'em. I would." And Cynthia Ann disappears in the house.

It is not yet dusk. Father John puts on his glasses, and opens the letter with the New York postmark.

DEAR BROTHER—Many times you have expected a wish to paper letters to me are an Albert. I have not sent him to you sooner, though I have you could help in his behalf much, because I feared that in your hands he would become a Papist. I speak plainly. Forgive, however, he is old enough to take care of himself. He is a man, the 'Old and the Tests' are already behind him, and he always been my custom to make himself a Papist. Albert is a Catholic, besides taking his baptism. Rev. Job Hardwickles three services, he is a Papist. My address impressions are, I know, I am not very strong. I warn you, however, that if you attack him with Catholic sophistry, you combine confound you with his Scriptural knowledge. You have probably heard of a tract about "wisdom in the mouth of the babes and sucklings," which you learned by rote. For I have often heard Rev. Mr. Hardwickles say that with you Romanists the Bible is a dead letter. My son does not know of his father's wealth. I do not wish Him to know of it. I, John Lewis, and let it be forgotten that he ever had a rich relative. He has taught himself to be free will use by the enclosed paragraphs from the Bellfront Herald, which you will see is true, and never to make him to enter on his duties as a soldiers of Christ. I remain, yours, JAMES BELLFRONT.

Your sister.

M. LEWIS.

Father John laid down the first letter with a sigh, and opened the second.

PARIS, May 1, 18—.

DEAR OLD FRIEND—A steamer, reaching here on its way to Rio, gives me the opportunity of writing to you. The mail is about closing, which accounts for this unusual haste. You know, for I have told you several times that my fortune is gone and you have made no reply may safely say it—rich. A large amount of my wealth is invested in valuable property in New York and Rio Janeiro; besides I have paid many of the debts of the old firm. I am growing old, and intend to start North to little Rio as soon as I can wind up affairs here. I want to see Albert. When I see him, I will tell he the story of my misfortunes. Meanwhile, I will send a few lines to Albert. Write to him, and tell him to be a Catholic. Tell him I am a Papist. Tell him I am a Papist. Tell him I am a Papist

THE MONITOR.

FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1886.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intercession of St. Francis de Sales, patron of Catholic journals, who desired to be placed, the writers in Catholic journals who defend the Church against the wiles of the wicked, and who, if possible, live, and adhere to its doctrine and precepts in his devotion and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is the greatest social power. It is, in the chief agent in popularizing land; and pops latest ideas economic opinions, and regulate prices the world. In our view, religious journalism is not only the most important journalism, but it is the most powerful possible for the highest good of the highest publics. What is and what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism, but to constant error and delusion the truth, whatever it may be—among all, the Divine truth.—Archbishop Hughes, Provincial Council, 1854.

CIRCULAR LETTER

From His Grace Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., Archbishop of San Francisco.

The following Letter was read in all city churches on Sunday last:

Rev. Dear Sir—Please announce from the Altar, next Sunday, that we have reason to believe that two persons, calling themselves respectively Brother Jerome and Brother Aloysius, are collecting money in this City for a Church in Ireland, entitled "Our Lady Paralytic, which, by the Decree of Rathgar, approved by the Holy See, they should have obtained. Not knowing their character nor the authenticity of their credentials, and all our dioceses being in much need, we deem it our duty to caution the people on the subject.

Yours truly in Christ,

✠ J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10, 1886.

Editorial Notes.

—Alexander Sullivan, Rev. Charles O'Reilly, and the other members of the Executive of the Irish National League, presented the question of "Absentee Landlords in the United States" before the National Democratic Convention in the shape of an address which will publish next week.

—An English paper states that James Anthony Froude has concluded not to visit America this year, and that it is doubtful if he will ever cross the Atlantic again. This news, to us, however, is not very startling, as the poor man is evidently in dreadful fear of ghost Father Tom Burke might haunt his stage wherever he went. Froude—and other fields—never forget the lightnings they receive whenever they essay to falsify Catholic faith or the cause of Irish freedom before the world.

—Catholic parents or guardians who desire to place their children or wards in any Catholic college or boarding school in California will find the title, terms, and location of all the prominent Catholic educational institutions in the State from an advertising column on another page. The next session will open the forthcoming session with the increase of inmates.

—His Holiness the Pope has ordained that the Ordinaries will celebrate in their Dioceses a solemn Triduum on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of September of this current year of 1886, in honor of the Most Blessed Virgin, similar to that which was recently celebrated in the Church of Santa Maria Sopra Minerva. Partial indulgences are granted to those who assist at this Triduum, and a plenary indulgence to those who fulfill the usual conditions at that time. His Holiness also desires that the Triduum should be celebrated in the Basilica of Loretto, and he has warmly approved of pilgrimages to that sanctuary from the 1st of September to the 10th of December inclusive.

—We publish this week the nominees of the National Democratic Convention, together with brief biographical sketches of the candidates, and having thus placed the nominees of the two principal political parties in the Union before our readers, we leave each of them entirely at liberty to answer the question: Who will be next President? But so far as the notion of political parties or individual politicians may offend Catholic principles or interfere or impose on the rights of Catholic citizens, the Monitor will continue to defend the civil and religious rights of its co-religionists. Our mission is the propagation and defense of

The Right, the Pure, the Beautiful, the True.
With partisan politics we've nothing to do.

—The Public School Directors hereabouts are taking rather singular methods of inculcating morals into their wards. The Chronicle charges them with stealing the lumber, paint, and other material for roofing to the City School Department, for the purpose of building houses for themselves! It is also charged that thousands of dollars have been paid out of the treasury for work never performed for the public schools. In Sacramento the School Directors engage in street fights over a school scandal of some sort. And this is the system which is to make good American citizens! The stream cannot rise above its source, and if the scholars emulate the Directors it is time to begin to enlarge all the penal institutions in the land!

—We heartily congratulate the N. Y. Freeman's Journal upon having celebrated its thirty-sixth anniversary, and trust that it may continue its vigorous fight for Catholic rights for many years to come. For over a third of a century James A. McMaster has been the fearless champion of the Church, and for the first ten years of that time he stood almost alone in the defence of Catholic principles. He has grown gray in the service of God and the Church of his adoption, and he deserves the hearty God will of every Catholic in America. The Freeman's Journal is the third oldest Catholic paper in America, having been established in 1840. The veteran Catholic Telegraph outstrips it by nine years, and the Boston Pilot dates from 1837. All three sterling periodicals have done heroic work for our holy faith.

Enlargement of the Monitor.

We have long desired to be in a position where we could give our subscribers interesting reading matter on our pages of the MONITOR, but the numerous applications for increased advertising space in our columns has hitherto prevented us from accomplishing this desirable object. This week, however, we have lengthened each column of the paper nearly two inches, which will enable us to give each week nearly six columns more reading matter than hitherto.

The MONITOR is now much larger than the majority of Catholic papers in the Union, and we mean to keep up its reputation as among the best.

On the first page of the present issue will be found six columns of interesting Catholic reading relating to the Church and her attributes. The second page furnishes five columns of Catholic stories and selected miscellany, as well as an original poem which will please all who peruse it. The third page comprises five columns of reading, and among it we may notice that valuable contribution to current literature—Mr. Frank Hugh O'Donnell's article on the Manx cat. This page contains seven columns of editorial matter which speaks for itself.

On the fifth page we present our readers with six columns of reading matter, including the soul-stirring farewell address of Bishop Moran, and local topics of interest to all readers. Also another letter from our talented Irish correspondent, whose effusions from the Emerald Isle are read with great interest all over this coast. The young lady who writes them is evidently inspired with that spirit of patriotism which the daughters of Erin have ever been renowned for, and we hope her aspirations for Irish freedom may be gratified ere many years to come.

On the sixth page, those of our readers who are fond of cudgeling their brains solving sphinx-like problems will find in "Leisure Hours" sufficient interesting puzzles to keep them from feeling lonesome for a week. On the seventh page we have opened a new department under the head of "Our Young Folks," where we mean to furnish reading matter for the juvenile fraternity of the MONITOR's clientage every week. We hope, also, that the pupils of Catholic schools will send in occasional contributions for this department. On the eighth page we give our readers four columns of reading matter, including the result of the Democratic National Convention, news from Ireland, and other matters of general interest to Catholic readers.

—By this arrangement we are enabled to furnish our readers a very large amount of reading matter which we have hitherto been unable to find room for, and which will greatly enhance the value of the paper to our subscribers.

We take the present opportunity to thank the correspondents who have heretofore furnished us with Catholic news from all over several localities, and we again ask our readers all over the coast, as well as in the city, to be vigilant in the matter of furnishing us with Catholic news. Our main desire is to make the paper worthy the generous support which has been so heartily extended it by Catholics in every portion of the Pacific slope, as well as in the Eastern States, the Islands of the Pacific, and in Australia; in Ireland and other portions of Europe.

We also desire to thank the numerous ladies and gentlemen who make up the staff of contributors to the columns of the MONITOR, and we are proud to number among them some of the most gifted Catholic poets in America and some of the most talented writers among the Catholic clergy and laity. We highly appreciate the share our contributors had in making the paper so popular with all classes of Catholics, and we sincerely hope that the good work they are engaged in may gain for them manifold temporal and eternal blessings.

Catholics can promote the interest and the circulation of Catholic publications by using their personal influence in securing new subscribers, hence we ask all the friends of "the great old Monitor" to help us place a copy of this paper in every Catholic family in the coast. We will be next President! So far as the notion of political parties or individual politicians may offend Catholic principles or impose on or impose on the rights of Catholic citizens, the Monitor will continue to defend the civil and religious rights of its co-religionists. Our mission is the propagation and defense of

The Right, the Pure, the Beautiful, the True.
With partisan politics we've nothing to do.

The Proper Tone for the Catholic Press.

Some busybody with more brass than brains bounced the editor of the Catholic Citizen because he had the audacity to call his readers the names of the Presidential candidates nominated on the Republican ticket and to make a few brief comments thereon. This drew forth a declaration of the position occupied by the Citizen, which is precisely the same as that we set forth for the Monitor on a recent memorable occasion. The Catholic Citizen strikes the right keynote when it sounds this tocsin of truth:

"The Catholic Citizen presumes it is entitled to talk politics occasionally. But it is a mistake to imagine that the Catholic Citizen is, in any sense, a political 'organ.' With the advocacy of partisan politics, it has nothing to do. It is neither distinctively Democratic nor Republican, Greenback, Prohibition, or Green-back.

"Nor has the Catholic Citizen discussed political men and measures. Its standpoint is purely that of independent journalism. It has no disposition, and is returning to credit the intelligence of its readers with the good judgment in exercising its rights both Democratic and Republican aspirations for their weakness and misconduct.

"Those who imagine that the Catholic Citizen is to be much longer in its Democracy to acknowledge any good qualities in a Republican Presidential candidate, have found out their mistake. And those who fancy that because those good qualities have been set forth in these columns the Catholic Citizen has, therefore, 'endorsed the Republican ticket,' had better wait and see. The Catholic Citizen will 'endorse' and 'support' whatever it thinks Truth and Common Sense, considered on an independent platform."

—Under the head of "Protestantism in Mexico," a New York dispatch was published yesterday boasting of the wonderful spread of sectarianism in that Catholic country. We are just in receipt of a letter from a San Francisco gentleman traveling in the interior of Mexico, which we will publish next week, and which will show up that sham pretty effectively.

Heroes and Heroines of the Catholic Church Compared with Miroling Preachers.

The Asiatic cholera is in France, and among the first victims in the holy cause of Christian charity was the Superior of the Sisters of Charity, and two of her companions in religion, who died at Toulon last week, however, we have lengthened each column of the paper nearly two inches, which will enable us to give each week nearly six columns more reading matter than hitherto.

The MONITOR is now much larger than the majority of Catholic papers in the Union, and we mean to keep up its reputation as among the best.

On the first page of the present issue will be found six columns of interesting Catholic reading relating to the Church and her attributes. The second page furnishes five columns of Catholic stories and selected miscellany, as well as an original poem which will please all who peruse it. The third page comprises five columns of reading, and among it we may notice that valuable contribution to current literature—Mr. Frank Hugh O'Donnell's article on the Manx cat. This page contains seven columns of editorial matter which speaks for itself.

On the fifth page we present our readers with six columns of reading matter, including the soul-stirring farewell address of Bishop Moran, and local topics of interest to all readers. Also another letter from our talented Irish correspondent, whose effusions from the Emerald Isle are read with great interest all over this coast. The young lady who writes them is evidently inspired with that spirit of patriotism which the daughters of Erin have ever been renowned for, and we hope her aspirations for Irish freedom may be gratified ere many years to come.

On the sixth page, those of our readers who are fond of cudgeling their brains solving sphinx-like problems will find in "Leisure Hours" sufficient interesting puzzles to keep them from feeling lonesome for a week. On the seventh page we have opened a new department under the head of "Our Young Folks," where we mean to furnish reading matter for the juvenile fraternity of the MONITOR's clientage every week. We hope, also, that the pupils of Catholic schools will send in occasional contributions for this department. On the eighth page we give our readers four columns of reading matter, including the result of the Democratic National Convention, news from Ireland, and other matters of general interest to Catholic readers.

—By this arrangement we are enabled to furnish our readers a very large amount of reading matter which we have hitherto been unable to find room for, and which will greatly enhance the value of the paper to our subscribers.

We take the present opportunity to thank the correspondents who have heretofore furnished us with Catholic news from all over several localities, and we again ask our readers all over the coast, as well as in the

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1886.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 24.

Sunday—Seventh Sunday after Pentecost.
Monday—St. Praxedes, Virgin.
Tuesday—St. Mary Magdalen, Penitent.
Wednesday—St. Appollinaris, Bishop and Martyr.
Thursday—St. Christina, Virgin and Martyr.
Friday—St. James the Greater, Apostle.
Sat. Aloisa—Mother of V. M.

CATHOLIC MUTUAL BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION.

Election of Officers for the Ensuing Year.

The annual convention of this organization held recently in the Basement of St. Mary's Cathedral. After hearing the report of the outgoing officers, the new convention was called to order and the following officers were elected: President, Hon. J. B. McNally of West Oakland; First Vice-President, Hon. Thomas Bulfin; Second Vice-President, Hon. Frank Pixley; Recording Secretary, William Watson, late Assemblyman; Financial Secretary, Hon. Thomas F. McGrath; Treasurer, Hon. Frank Lynch; Marshal, Jas. Fagan; Assistant Marshal, Jas. Ryan; Guard, Jas. Hogan; Trustees, Hon. J. J. Dwyer, Jas. Fagan, Hon. A. J. McGovern, Hon. Frank Lynch. These gentlemen, who in conjunction with the President and Secretary, will constitute the Executive Committee of the National Beneficial Association of the Archdiocese of San Francisco, are well known and esteemed members of the convention aforesaid, and we feel that the interests of the society, and of its members, are in safe hands. We understand that the Supreme Council of the Society, which is to be held in the Presidio Barracks, early next month, will be attended by a large number of delegates, and we hope that the Catholics of every portion of this Province will interest themselves in the matter of the representation of worthy both of the Church it represents, as well as typical of the grateful memory which Catholics should cherish for the pioneers of the Cross who labored for the propagation of the Faith.

Under the title of "The Cross in California," we intend to insert a series of articles in these columns which will give very interesting information connected with the early planting of the Cross in California, especially as regards the Franciscan Missions when under the supervision of that saintly son of St. Francis whose pious zeal whose earthly labors will be commemorated next month.

Misquoting St. Augustine.

In an article on Divorce, published in the Companion of the 10th ult., there occurs this paragraph:

"In the celebrated confession, St. Augustine tells us that it was a marvel; among the matrons of the Roman Empire, that not one, even after the Mother, never bore any traces of blows received from her husband, and that the husbands, for shaping her lonesome and cheerful father 'either the warlike letter of the law.'"

We "marvelled" much when we saw such language as the foregoing attributed to the great Bishop and Doctor of the Church. Accordingly, we consulted the chapter in St. Augustine's "Confessions," wherein he speaks of his parents, and here we find a quite different

"And when some other women, though matches to those of her husband, perceived in her the marks of their blows and, quoth of their husbands, as a quarrel ensued, they told it as their secret grief, that through their tongues so slipped the bitterness of their married state, which they, for the peace and honour of their houses, were wont to bear the remains of calumniating cranks of the Presbyterian persuasion!

Having thus put an everlasting "extinguisher on this part of the Presbyter ian calumny against the Church of God, let us knock the rest into smithereens after the same fashion. Here it is in all its covering of neat

"In some cases she (i. e., the Catholic Church) has proved herself a fair and tolerant lady, for instance, the Bible says, 'Thou shall not steal.' But Holy says, 'Servants may steal from their masters as much as they judge their labor is worth, more than the wages they receive.' (Molina vol. iii. p. 1206.) The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' Holy says 'If a calumniator will not cease to publish calumnies against you you may slily kill him as publicly, but secretly, to avoid scandal. Thus the Church commands you to be secret and most cowardly form of murder. She says also, 'Be deceitful cowards.' Holy says 'Lie and excuse whose testimony may respond your lies.'"

When we read such rampacious rubbish as the foregoing we instinctively ask ourselves this question: Is it possible that any number of people can be so stupefied in sectarian stupidity, and so prejudiced against the Church as to believe the calumnies concocted by Presbyterian bigots without a particle of corroborative? To ask such foul charges seems almost useless, because Holyoke's citadel of calumny is kept by the Calvinists, and they can fabricate falsehoods much faster than we can contradict them. These Pharisees are adepts in the art so suitably described by Milton when he alludes to the fallen angels:

"That practised falsehood under saintly show,
Deep malice to conceal couched with revenge."

Falsehood is the cement used in fabricating false preachers of a false gospel, and no lie is too broad, too long, too black, or too blasphemous whenever bigotry seeks to bring the fair face of the Bride of Christ. Old as it is regarding the unchristian and inhuman theories advanced by the Rhodian doctrines of the Catholic Church, Catholic authors may have curious ideas regarding religion, and they may grant them, but we hold the Church responsible for the writings of all who belong to her fold is to destroy her authority at one blow. The Catholic Church has never declared it of faith that men may steal or that assassination is legitimate. The Church abhors crime, yet here is an organ of the Presbyterian sect charging the very Church that has preserved the law of God throughout all ages with teaching that the vilest transgression of the Decalogue is commandments is no sin. Shame upon the sectarian bigots who could thus calumniate the Church of Christ.

The doctrines taught by the Church are open to every man and woman, and they can be found freely scattered through hundreds of Catechisms and controversial works, but, alas! it is the treasure of falsehoods when he wants to find the stilettos of Church and of the Republic, and this is the work from whence the writers in the Companion have drawn the inspiration which has such a marked effect on them.

The Companion complains that nearly all the bonfires blazed in San Francisco boiling the "Roman pontiff" in oil. Well, suppose they did! If the class of boys and girls designated "loodloms" were thus disposed of it would be a blessing to society. It would be well for the country. Society is to blame for many of the sins of the hoodlums, because it is there is a class in every community that are a disgrace to the name of Christian. They comprise the oily-tongued Pharisaical back directors who thank God, with true Presbyterian pride, that they are not like other men, and then rob the depositors of their funds and fly to other regions where they "get religion" afresh. Another type of this dangerous element is the psalm-singing sensualist who leaves her in his so-called "praying" attitude in his pew, and then "mashes" the lady of his congregation under the cover of his diminished hand. Still another "bad egg" in the nest of society is that "whited sepulchre" who wilfully maligns the character of the Catholic Church in order to satisfy his hatred by spitting slander on the Rock ascribed by the Saviour of our Blessed Saviour: St. Matthew, in the new version of the Protestant New Testament before us, calls this class of hypocritical Presbyterian preachers "whited sepulchres which outwardly appear beautiful, but inwardly are full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness. Even so ye outwardly appear righteous unto men, but inwardly ye are full of hypocrisy and deceit.

The Monitor's Suggestion Seconded.

We notice that our suggestions concerning Commencement exercises have met the general approval of the Catholic press all over the Continent. The Boston Pilot, alluding to the matter, thus pays the Monitor a high compliment, which we appreciate as coming from such a Catholic journal of the Atlantic Coast:

"The San Francisco Monitor, one of the best Catholic papers in the country, makes some pertinent suggestions in regard to school exhibitions, which we hope will be taken up by our Catholic brethren of more or less moment to about half the time, and devoted to the moral education, and instructions under the circumstances necessarily attendant on such occasions. We hope the suggestions of Brother Jonathan will be taken up by our contemporary, and we know that generally speaking, the Monitor's suggestions are good ones."

—San Francisco foreign born citizens are doing considerably better for the cause of the school population than are the natives born. The recent school census shows that there are born of native parents 29,904 children, one parent foreign, 14,878, both parents foreign, 48,216, foreign born, 2,108. To give these figures their full effect, it is necessary to add that by the census of 1880 the foreign born population of the city was 104,690 and the native born 127,000. The native stock makes a poor showing in this comparison.

Archbishop Alemany's Circular Letter.

We print in another column the Circular Letter of His Grace Archbishop Alemany, O. P., which was read in nearly all the churches throughout this Archdiocese on Sunday last, and in duty bound we always we want to bury the remains of calumniating cranks of the Presbyterian persuasion!

Having thus put an everlasting "extinguisher on this part of the Presbyter an calumny against the Church of God, let us knock the rest into smithereens after the same fashion. Here it is in all its covering of neat

"In some cases she (i. e., the Catholic Church) has proved herself a fair and tolerant lady, for instance, the Bible says, 'Thou shall not steal.' But Holy says, 'Servants may steal from their masters as much as they judge their labor is worth, more than the wages they receive.' (Molina vol. iii. p. 1206.) The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' Holy says 'If a calumniator will not cease to publish calumnies against you you may slily kill him as publicly, but secretly, to avoid scandal. Thus the Church commands you to be secret and most cowardly form of murder. She says also, 'Be deceitful cowards.' Holy says 'Lie and excuse whose testimony may respond your lies.'"

When we read such ramorous rubbish as the foregoing we instinctively ask ourselves this question: Is it possible that any number of people can be so stupefied in sectarian stupidity, and so prejudiced against the Church as to believe the calumnies concocted by Presbyterian bigots without a particle of corroborative? To ask such foul charges seems almost useless, because Holyoke's citadel of calumny is kept by the Calvinists, and they can fabricate falsehoods much faster than we can contradict them. These Pharisees are adepts in the art so suitably described by Milton when he alludes to the fallen angels:

"That practised falsehood under saintly show,
Deep malice to conceal couched with revenge."

Falsehood is the cement used in fabricating false preachers of a false gospel, and no lie is too broad, too long, too black, or too blasphemous whenever bigotry seeks to bring the fair face of the Bride of Christ. Old as it is regarding the unchristian and inhuman theories advanced by the Rhodian doctrines of the Catholic Church, Catholic authors may have curious ideas regarding religion, and they may grant them, but to hold the Church responsible for the writings of all who belong to her fold is to destroy her authority at one blow. The Catholic Church has never declared it of faith that men may steal or that assassination is legitimate. The Church abhors crime, yet here is an organ of the Presbyterian sect charging the very Church that has preserved the law of God throughout all ages with teaching that the vilest transgression of the Decalogue is commandments is no sin. Shame upon the sectarian bigots who could thus calumniate the Church of Christ.

The doctrines taught by the Church are open to every man and woman, and they can be found freely scattered through hundreds of Catechisms and controversial works, but, alas! it is the treasure of falsehoods when he wants to find the stilettos of

Sold by all Druggists.

Centennial of Padre Junipero Serra.

Inasmuch as little more than a month intervenes when the people of California will be called upon to celebrate the centenary of one of the most important anniversaries in the history of the State—the death of Padre Junipero Serra, we think it opportune to remind our readers that the entire Episcopate of this Province, as well as some of the most distinguished laymen of the State, are heartily in sympathy with the movement, and will do all in their power to give it success on the occasion.

H. Rev. Francis Mora, Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, has given Father Casanova, of Monterey, his grateful thanks for his zealous efforts in endeavoring to restore the ruined church of San Carlos Mission, wherein rest the remains of the venerable founder of the Cross, Very Rev. Junipero Serra, the founder of the Franciscan Missions in this State.

The centennial of the death of this immortal missionary will be celebrated on the 28th of next August, but as yet the ceremonies for the occasion are not sufficiently in shape to submit them to our readers. We hope, however, that the Catholics of every portion of this Province will interest themselves in the matter of the representation worthy both of the Church it represents, as well as typical of the grateful memory which Catholics should cherish for the pioneers of the Cross who labored for the propagation of the Faith.

Under the title of "The Cross in California," we intend to insert a series of articles in these columns which will give very interesting information connected with the early planting of the Cross in California, especially as regards the Franciscan Missions when under the supervision of that saintly son of St. Francis whose pious zeal whose earthly labors will be commemorated next month.

Misquoting St. Augustine.

In an article on Divorce, published in the Companion of the 10th ult., there occurs this paragraph:

"In the celebrated confession, St. Augustine tells us that it was a marvel; among the matrons of the Roman Empire, that not one, even after the Mother, never bore any traces of blows received from her husband, and that the husbands, for shaping her lonesome and cheerful father 'either the warlike letter of the law.'"

We "marvelled" much when we saw such language as the foregoing attributed to the great Bishop and Doctor of the Church. Accordingly, we consulted the chapter in St. Augustine's "Confessions," wherein he speaks of his parents, and here we find a quite different

"And when some other women, though matches to those of her husband, perceived in her the marks of their blows and, quoth of their husbands, as a quarrel ensued, they told it as their secret grief, that through their tongues so slipped the bitterness of their married state, which they, for the peace and honour of their houses, were wont to bear the remains of calumniating cranks of the Presbyterian persuasion!

Having thus put an everlasting "extinguisher on this part of the Presbyter an calumny against the Church of God, let us knock the rest into smithereens after the same fashion. Here it is in all its covering of neat

"In some cases she (i. e., the Catholic Church) has proved herself a fair and tolerant lady, for instance, the Bible says, 'Thou shall not steal.' But Holy says, 'Servants may steal from their masters as much as they judge their labor is worth, more than the wages they receive.' (Molina vol. iii. p. 1206.) The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' Holy says 'If a calumniator will not cease to publish calumnies against you you may slily kill him as publicly, but secretly, to avoid scandal. Thus the Church commands you to be secret and most cowardly form of murder. She says also, 'Be deceitful cowards.' Holy says 'Lie and excuse whose testimony may respond your lies.'"

When we read such ramorous rubbish as the foregoing we instinctively ask ourselves this question: Is it possible that any number of people can be so stupefied in sectarian stupidity, and so prejudiced against the Church as to believe the calumnies concocted by Presbyterian bigots without a particle of corroborative? To ask such foul charges seems almost useless, because Holyoke's citadel of calumny is kept by the Calvinists, and they can fabricate falsehoods much faster than we can contradict them. These Pharisees are adepts in the art so suitably described by Milton when he alludes to the fallen angels:

"That practised falsehood under saintly show,
Deep malice to conceal couched with revenge."

Falsehood is the cement used in fabricating false preachers of a false gospel, and no lie is too broad, too long, too black, or too blasphemous whenever bigotry seeks to bring the fair face of the Bride of Christ. Old as it is regarding the unchristian and inhuman theories advanced by the Rhodian doctrines of the Catholic Church, Catholic authors may have curious ideas regarding religion, and they may grant them, but to hold the Church responsible for the writings of all who belong to her fold is to destroy her authority at one blow. The Catholic Church has never declared it of faith that men may steal or that assassination is legitimate. The Church abhors crime, yet here is an organ of the Presbyterian sect charging the very Church that has preserved the law of God throughout all ages with teaching that the vilest transgression of the Decalogue is commandments is no sin. Shame upon the sectarian bigots who could thus calumniate the Church of Christ.

The doctrines taught by the Church are open to every man and woman, and they can be found freely scattered through hundreds of Catechisms and controversial works, but, alas! it is the treasure of falsehoods when he wants to find the stilettos of

Sold by all Druggists.

OUR IRISH LETTER.

Bonfire-night in Ireland.—How the Irish Land Bill Passed the Irish Parliament.—The Irish Free Trade.—The Spirit of Liberty Still Lives in Erin.—Convictions of the Bar Leviths Prisoners.—New Westmeath is Depopulated.—The Beautiful Banks of the Shannon.—The Return of the Exile, Etc.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

"Crown land is inalienable, unless it be merely beautiful and of no material value."

"Ireland's crown is clasped by seven a purple zone, bounding in its many islands, a land land of surpassing beauty, of all the surpassing beauty—and it is the jewel of Europe."

"Land and liberty bind your waves that roar around her back like a wall."

"Ireland's land and liberty shouting round the bonfires of freedom."

"Let none be called the exile's heart—to those the exile exists."

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR—

Dear Sir—The shades of evening are gathering round Emerald Isle. The sun has disappeared for behind as it glides over the mighty Atlantic towards the golden West to lend its light to other lands, yet Erin lies not in darkness although that brilliant luminary has taken its evening leave.

THIS IS "BONFIRE NIGHT" IN IRELAND, and that light which shed a lustre on her darkest hours—the light of liberty—is represented by the ever-lasting—indestructible—of an ancient faith, embrace Erin's green isle, to-night and shines out along her misty coast, reflecting its flames on the waves whose boom and expanding its light over the waves, as the thousands who have gathered have done in carrying the light of faith and hope of patriotism across the Atlantic wave for years. Although long centuries have now passed away since the first bonfire was kindled, it has never ceased to burn in Ireland's heart. Each succeeding anniversary finds it brighter than before, and which has shone among the mountains of the earth ever true to her ancient faith and traditions. During the most sorrowful epoch of her history that faith has been her consolation in many hands. Faith's spark found gladness in her heart in Ireland. In the city North as well as the sunny South, by the mountain side and along the prairies of the West the light was kindled, which the gale towards the North-east, Sorrow and every cruelty their freshest winds could invent, were unavailing to extinguish it in the majority of the people. Ireland's day of martyrs was the will which monitored the Church in Philadelphia. It was only the small seed of Erinnes dollars in nearly 50 years. They are now gathered from scattered members in the organization, and up to the end of the last year, Philadelphia had lost six or seven dozen men by accident, sickness and death. The Catholics of this county will be lost a personal testimonial of the Church their praise. Mr. Watson, the Secretary, has left the Law Office in Phelan Building, his address is P. O. Box 1887.

NEW CONVENT AT WOODLAND, YOLO COUNTY.

The foundation stone of the new convent for Rev. Father McGinty proposes to erect in Woodland, Yolo county, was laid on Sunday last by the Most Rev. Archbishop Riordan, assisted by Rev. Father Wrotnowski, of Sacramento, Rev. Father Brolly, and Clergy of West Oakland. The site selected is a most beautiful one, and will be lined with a very large number of non-Catholics, who will be pleased to see the Sisters, as the Big Family Refinery to raise the funds to pay for the building, which will be a monument to the importance of Christian education in the new Catholic Church that has preserved the law of God throughout all ages with teaching that the vilest transgression of the Decalogue is commandments is no sin. Shame upon the sectarian bigots who could thus calumniate the Church of Christ.

The doctrines taught by the Church are open to every man and woman, and they can be found freely scattered through hundreds of Catechisms and controversial works, but, alas! it is the treasure of falsehoods when he wants to find the stilettos of

Sold by all Druggists.

Correspondence.

We regret that our correspondents do not furnish the Publisher of this Journal with money. Subscriptions to the Publisher of the Monitor are payable in advance.

All communications should reach him office by Tuesday morning to insure insertion in the issue of the week.

MASONIC INFLUENCE IN AID OF MASONS.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR—

Dear Sir—Your article in the Monitor of the 24th ult., concerning Freemasonry is well timed and has had well illustrated the fact. The Masonic order to-day, in the United States, holds the balance of all the political parties. The Masons are persistent in their efforts to put kith and kin, by office and power and patronage, the members of their order. Especially is this so of all officers under the Federal Government. Point out a Mason of any prominence in any part of the country, and note what efforts are made to "puff" and keep him before the public, for place and preferment. Much of the injustice that is done and much of the abuse that is heaped on the administration of the law comes from the influence of Masons.

As members of a party, as judges on a bench, as governors of the State, city, county, and village, as legislators, as jurors, as witnesses, as clerks, and as jailers, they are ever ready to lend a helping hand to the brother who has fallen into the clutches of the Law. The principles of the order, the oaths taken by its members, cause them to act as a guard to free government and free institutions. The history of the Masonic order and its benefits sometimes shows that whenever and wherever they have had a foothold, they have been generally and oppressively crushed all that would interfere with the free exercise of their power. The greatest rebellion of all and struggle that ever was made against the Church of Christ, was the work of the Masons of Spain, and the Inquisition was established in Spain to crush out the Masons and their influence. The Masons

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. R. HARE, EDITOR

HALF SQUARES.

The following half-squares were collated from weekly issues of Bell's Life:

XIII.—1. A letter. 2. A consonant. 3. To jide. 4. A sea of Italian. 5. A distinct instrument of music. 6. A fashionable watering place. 7. The hundredth part of a pound. 8. Skyey. 9. Distinction among the Scots. 10. Ancient. 11. Little mills. 12. A River Highlandman making the 1000th unit. 13. Wrong of nations.

XIV.—1. A letter. 2. Iron, (plur.). 3. Interesting. 4. Four herrings. 5. One who defies. 6. A thorough or proposition so sure of permanentness as to be almost self evident. 7. Ladies. 8. Vigilance. 9. F. D. Cousin to. Wm. 10. An officer of artillery, who experimentals the composition of fire-works. 11. Hearty, not fallows.

XV.—1. A letter. 2. A prefix. 3. Dutch painters, 1650-1700? 4. To jaunt. 5. A movement of the crowd in fencing. 6. A small or imperfect use of malm. 7. Lofty, (poet). 8. A chatterer. 9. Italian poet, 1261-1348. 10. Self-measured. 11. Additional or subsequent entries.

XVI.—1. A letter. 2. A prefix. 3. Proud. 4. The hub of a wheel. 5. Stick. 6. To fly. 7. To merge again. 8. Tabbedness. 9. The inhabitants of Bohemia. 10. A separate from each other in collating lines. 11. Separate organs.

XVII.—1. A letter. 2. Rod. 3. Village of Palestine. 4. Ancient. 5. A prefix meaning half. 6. Ancient, or derived from, Julius Cæsar. 7. Pertaining to high favor or place or most elevated. 8. Long. 9. Kinds of fish, some lions dwelling in Wyoming. 10. A foreign tenant. 11. Aspersion.

XVIII.—1. Colouring of shoft divisions with breaths. 2. Immortal. 3. Granted back. 4. One who pots in order. 5. A farm steward or bailiff. 6. A dog that hunts this proceed. 7. Corrupt matter from sores. 8. A part of the wall of a house between the windows or doors. 9. A contemptible. 10. A sick or sovereign. 11. A letter.

XIX.—1. A lamp. 2. A plane of epidote. 3. One hundred thousand. 4. A green color, regarded in a drawing or engraving by parallel lines sloping downward toward the right. 5. Pertaining to a kind of ancient Greek verse. 6. Irritable temper. 7. Entertainment. 8. Whitpoints. 9. Small, less should be placed on the under side of some letters. 10. The mother of Gargantua, in Rabelais's celebrated romance of this name. 11. Ancient Persian city.

XX.—Across:—1. A letter. 2. To reach. 3. Ancient Rome. 4. Pertaining to a component of the Turkish empire. 5. One who repeats. 7. A vessel for holding liquids. 8. Ceases. 9. Hands taken in Lent. 10. The work over a fire-place in front of the chimney. 11. Conspicuous.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. A season. 3. A small river of England. 4. An old game at cards. 5. Italian poet and philosopher, 1627-1748. 6. A month-full. 7. Suspended. 8. Station. 9. Cool-whatever. 10. A species of cornelian cherry. 11. Pronoun.

XXI.—Across:—1. A letter. 2. Sunday, (abbr.). 3. The leaves of vine. 4. The stem or stalk of grain. 5. A kind of narrow ribbon. 6. One who melts. 7. A prefix. 8. A dependency. 9. A kind of dance. 10. French writer, 1607-1757. 11. The wives of sultans.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. Ire. (abbr.). 3. Ability, power. 4. Ancient Rome. 5. The sea of stable at Augeas. 6. A covering for the head. 7. A drink made of rye or barley. 8. Two possible spondaics. 9. Side of an oven or cook side of the thread, as both of the wings of two-winged insects. 10. Hydrate. 11. An instrument used by stone-cutters and carpenters to trace and form angles. 11. Reason. 12. Instrument used by musicians to support superfluous bulk.

XXII.—Across:—1. A letter. 2. A musical syllable. 3. To person. 4. A mole. 5. The indicated joint of bovine and some other vertebrates. 6. As earnest. 7. Glowing with heat. 8. An officer who has the charge of the king's forest. 9. A small beaver or fog, carried on the mass of vessels, or on military weapons. 10. A particular gland. 11. West Indian plants.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. A name of a month. 3. To wager. 4. To vanish. 5. A musical matter on a larger scale. 6. F. O. Chopin, (abbr.). 7. Ancient Rome. 8. Pertaining to a kind of ancient Greek verse. 9. A period of time. 10. A kind of potato, baked and observed in Ireland. 11. Pertaining to a Greek. 12. Poem written, 1650-1757, Milton.

XXIII.—1. Cassels & Dowd. 2. Filled. 4. Engraved. 5. One who swindles. 6. Hoes by reaping. 7. Lake, Upper Austria. 8. Money lender, Upper Austria. 9. As sweet. 10. A [illegible] performed by the ordinary rules of musical design, but in which the authors fancy never under little restraint. 10. Brulose or inflate to the flesh, producing an lean in appearance wound. 11. A concerto with two or more instruments, with accompaniments for a band. 12. Kindnesses.

LAWRENCE, MASS. A. F. HOIT.

—PEO-OBSOLETE—

TWO YEARS HAVE FLOWN.

Two years of "Leisure Hours" have flown,
Since the "first hour struck the tone,
And week by week the hours have sped
Like some stream's tide, still hastening on.

Here in this column has been spoken
Both "forms" and "facts" in beauty traced,—
Marquess of mystic lore, and fair
For those, who wish, to win and wear.

Here couplets of concern have shown
Each with a nutmeggity his own,
Rare jewels in his ordinary set,
To form his "dozen coronet."

With Editor to superview,
And with kind words and liberal prize
To urge along the "Mystic Knew,"
Each week has given something new.

And worthy of the poet's pen,
With the remark (fable men,
The cloak that winter to enfold
And bring to light the hidden gold.

Here, Power, still there's room for you,
Still your good wishes to impress
With pen and each type and wake,
Gem up for Pustelow's own sake.

Here, Salvum, come and bear your powers,
In solving future "Leisure Hours."
Which still, as in the past, will be
Sent forth each week for you to see.

And may the "Hours" still pass along
As mirrors of some pleasant song;
Nor cease till after "two years" more,
Or five—still, call it half a score.

NUMBER XCVIII.

This number of LEISURE HOURS is respectfully dedicated to Leip.

1ST ROCK.—HALF-SQUARE.

1. Tiles of precise shape. 2. Lists of incomes. 3. Made costly or expensive, (Rk). 4. Lone heavy spare. 5. Wooden frames for photographs. 6. Weddings or the base of a column. 7. Pasture in a church. 8. An abbreviation. 9. A Florida painter. 10. A letter.

Forest River, N. J. LAMONOT.

3RD ROCK.—CHARADE.

My friend, Nick Nolan, was a jovial soul,
Who often tossed his pipes in merry song;
His nose, I guess, which was a cheek, and strong,
And when the fuel from his throat would roll,
As coal stoves, which safe keep by control
In iron-bound Calipes, along
The river towns, when at night a thing
Of people gather—good friends, cheek by jowl,
You'd think the "music of the" [illegible] you heard.

Or distant Dunlove, on some summer eve,
When pains poured down by prime poor usual
tunes;
Such music slightly take, by friendship spurned,
Its love, by 'Ma, or fortune-hunter to achieve,
By calling, for a purpose, on a rich, sick maiden
aunt.

Dubuque, Ill. ASTRIO.

3RD ROCK.—SQUARE.

1. A town of Spain. 2. A poet-hunter of Beatles Co., Mich. 3. A government of Russia. 4. One of a sect of visionaries. 5. One of a group of crustaceans. 6. A note of interrogation. 7. A town of Asiatic Turkey.

Milwaukee, Wis. PEPPER.

4TH ROCK.—CHARADE.

To "WM."

I borrowed from first cousin's store—
When in the Northwest fighting—
A pound of hard-tack, nothing more,
Which kept me busy biting.
And when the commissary's van
Once more gave us our rations
I settled with him liberally
Remembering late privations.

For to say that cousin's true
Had proved a friend unfeeling,
Complaint and he thought heavily through
The thought our hearts searching.
That when the deadly sixth was done
Our fourth would still be cherished
After when parted Lee's latest gun,
Remembrance of us perished.

Full (that's his name) an amount got
Because on hard-tack left him,
Enough of his health, the conflict lost
Forever had bereft him.

And I, as arm I lost, lost that
Hitm not but little pension
That I am the reverse of late—
Thanks for your kind attention.

CHARLEY.

NEW ROCK.—HALF-SQUARE.

1. Pertaining to a compact variety of sulphide of lime or gypsum of fine texture usually white but sometimes yellow, red or gray. 2. One who has a license to exercise a profession. 3. Cards or dice that have but one spot on their sides. 4. Dressed with paint, (O.). 5. Double. 6. Essential. 7. Fringes. 8. Those who desert their party or countries. 9. A prefix, meaning a disease. 10. A letter.

Brooklyn, N. Y. N. OATS.

5TH ROCK.—CHARADE.

Without my first the festive board
Would scarce be deemed complete;
My second is impertinent
Though far entirely for more meet;
The whole in rural scenes is found
In thatch-spars, too a name renowned.

Moore's Station, Ind. LILY.

TRI ROCK.—CHARADE.

To Lizzie.

Dear friend, why do I ask here in true to me,
Whose every the night, hath been for my success,
Who, that I very good than, hath ever thought less
But loved with still greater intensity,
Dear Lizzie, now for away from thee,
There is a longing in my weary heart,
For thy bright smile. Ah, Lizzie, I feel
The loss in early years. Could I see
Thy face and hear thee say I am forgiven—
I know that peace is still for me, Lizzie.
O Earth love false, how full of sin, death,
Thou't tempt me, and I yield to thy wiles.
Yet all forsaken, save one—and that dearer
Than ever, for, where loving spirits meet.
I've learned, dear one, since last I left thy side
I've learned to love thee, Lizzie, sweet maid (if so,
For oft to them my thoughts would longing flow,
And oft for thy company would I hasten
And thy with others kind, I filled with Tears took that place within my heart that thou
Hast lost half it fast security.
Mistrustest love my life, and would, I feel,
Across the water, hence, I'd follow thee
Entirely cure, to bind and watchful, true,
A balm. And tears of joy dish steal
Adown my cheek. My Charlie!, so kind,
Good great! may entire be with you.

MANSIOT.

5TH ROCK.—SQUARE.

1. Hostess. 2. A town of Palestine. 3. A seaport of Naples. 4. A town of France. 5. A principality, but then a part of the Turkish empire. 6. Ancient. 7. Ancient Rome. 8. Ancient. 9. Ancient. 10. Ancient. 11. Ancient. 12. Ancient.

Across:—1. A letter. 2. To reach. 3. Ancient Rome. 4. Pertaining to a component of the Turkish empire. 6. One who repeats. 7. A vessel for holding liquids. 8. Ceases. 9. Hands taken in Lent. 10. The work over a fire-place in front of the chimney. 11. Conspicuous.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. A season. 3. A small river of England. 4. An old game at cards. 5. Italian poet and philosopher, 1627-1748. 6. A month-full. 7. Suspended. 8. Station. 9. Cool-whatever. 10. A species of cornelian cherry. 11. Pronoun.

XXI.—Across:—1. A letter. 2. Sunday, (abbr.). 3. The leaves of vine. 4. The stem or stalk of grain. 5. A kind of narrow ribbon. 6. One who melts. 7. A prefix. 8. A dependency. 9. A kind of dance. 10. French writer, 1607-1757. 11. The wives of sultans.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. Ire. (abbr.). 3. Ability, power. 4. Ancient Rome. 5. The sea of stable at Augeas. 6. A covering for the head. 7. A drink made of rye or barley. 8. Two possible spondaics. 9. Side of an oven or cook side of the thread, as both of the wings of two-winged insects. 9. Hydrate. 10. An instrument used by stone-cutters and carpenters to trace and form angles. 11. Reason. 12. Instrument used by musicians to support superfluous bulk.

XXII.—Across:—1. A letter. 2. A musical syllable. 3. To person. 4. A mole. 5. The indicated joint of bovine and some other vertebrates. 6. As earnest. 7. Glowing with heat. 8. An officer who has the charge of the king's forest. 9. A small beaver or fog, carried on the mass of vessels, or on military weapons. 10. A particular gland. 11. West Indian plants.

Down:—1. A letter. 2. A name of a month. 3. To wager. 4. To vanish. 5. A musical matter on a larger scale. 6. F. O. Chopin, (abbr.). 7. Ancient Rome. 8. Pertaining to a kind of ancient Greek verse. 9. A period of time. 10. A kind of potato, baked and observed in Ireland. 11. Pertaining to a Greek. 12. Poem written, 1650-1757, Milton.

XXIII.—1. Cassels & Dowd. 2. Filled. 4. Engraved. 5. One who swindles. 6. Hoes by reaping. 7. Lake, Upper Austria. 8. Money lender, Upper Austria. 9. As sweet. 10. A [illegible] performed by the ordinary rules of musical design, but in which the authors fancy never under little restraint. 10. Brulose or inflate to the flesh, producing an lean in appearance wound. 11. A concerto with two or more instruments, with accompaniments for a band. 12. Kindnesses.

LAWRENCE, MASS. A. F. HOIT.

—PEO-OBSOLETE—

TWO YEARS HAVE FLOWN.

Two years of "Leisure Hours" have flown,
Since the "first hour struck the tone,
And week by week the hours have sped
Like some stream's tide, still hastening on.

Here in this column has been spoken
Both "forms" and "facts" in beauty traced,—
Marquess of mystic lore, and fair
For those, who wish, to win and wear.

Here couplets of concern have shown
Each with a nutmeggity his own,
Rare jewels in his ordinary set,
To form his "dozen coronet."

With Editor to superview,
And with kind words and liberal prize
To urge along the "Mystic Knew,"
Each week has given something new.

And worthy of the poet's pen,
With the remark (fable men,
The cloak that winter to enfold
And bring to light the hidden gold.

Here, Power, still there's room for you,
Still your good wishes to impress
With pen and each type and wake,
Gem up for Pustelow's own sake.

Here, Salvum, come and bear your powers,
In solving future "Leisure Hours."
Which still, as in the past, will be
Sent forth each week for you to see.

And may the "Hours" still pass along
As mirrors of some pleasant song;
Nor cease till after "two years" more,
Or five—still, call it half a score.

NUMBER XCVIII.

This number of LEISURE HOURS is respectfully dedicated to Leip.

1ST ROCK.—HALF-SQUARE.

1. Tiles of precise shape. 2. Lists of incomes. 3. Made costly or expensive, (Rk). 4. Lone heavy spare. 5. Wooden frames for photographs. 6. Weddings or the base of a column. 7. Pasture in a church. 8. An abbreviation. 9. A Florida painter. 10. A letter.

Forest River, N. J. LAMONOT.

3RD ROCK.—CHARADE.

My friend, Nick Nolan, was a jovial soul,
Who often tossed his pipes in merry song;
His nose, I guess, which was a cheek, and strong,
And when the fuel from his throat would roll,
As coal stoves, which safe keep by control
In iron-bound Calipes, along
The river towns, when at night a thing
Of people gather—good friends, cheek by jowl,
You'd think the "music of the" [illegible] you
heard.

Or distant Dunlove, on some summer eve,
When pains poured down by prime poor usual
tunes;
Such music slightly take, by friendship spurned,
Its love, by 'Ma, or fortune-hunter to achieve,
By calling, for a purpose, on a rich, sick maiden
aunt.

Dubuque, Ill. ASTRIO.

3RD ROCK.—SQUARE.

1. A town of Spain. 2. A poet-hunter of Beatles Co., Mich. 3. A government of Russia. 4. One of a sect of visionaries. 5. One of a group of crustaceans. 6. A note of interrogation. 7. A town of Asiatic Turkey.

Milwaukee, Wis. PEPPER.

4TH ROCK.—CHARADE.

To "WM."

I borrowed from first cousin's store—
When in the Northwest fighting—
A pound of hard-tack, nothing more,
Which kept me busy biting.
And when the commissary's van
Once more gave us our rations
I settled with him liberally
Remembering late privations.

For to say that cousin's true
Had proved a friend unfeeling,
Complaint and he thought heavily through
The thought our hearts searching.
That when the deadly sixth was done
Our fourth would still be cherished
After when parted Lee's latest gun,
Remembrance of us perished.

Full (that's his name) an amount got
Because on hard-tack left him,
Enough of his health, the conflict lost
Forever had bereft him.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,
Respectfully announce that they have opened
THE LARGE STORE,
873 Market Street,
GENT'S "&" BOY'S
CLOTHING,
Furnishing Goods,
HATS, CAPS, ETC.
Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.
We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible
CARROLL & TILTON,
873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,
And late with JONES & CO

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON
968 and 970 Folsom St.,
San Francisco.
WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS
Established 1858.
We are selling Cheap for Cash and guarantee our goods.
☞ The following low prices will convince you that we are wanted.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Valls, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
Osteneorisms, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.
NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy and are, as Attested by Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,
Latest Edition, with all Additions to Date.
PUSTET'S PRAYER BOOK HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND - - PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,013½ barrels.

JOHN A. SELLER. THOS. V. SIMPSON
SIMPSON & MILLAR,
Successors to C. V. Gillespie,
Searchers of Records and Conveyancers
Rooms 16 and 17, Exchange Building, 308 Montgomery Street, San Francisco.

CUT THIS OUT AND KEEP IT FOR REFERENCE.
BEFORE AFTER WEARING THE PATENT
Duplex Galvanic Belt.
THE UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF THIS MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT is due to the fact that it contains, instead of Acids, Poisons, Blisters, Electricity, Compounds and all Liver and Kidney Diseases caused by Nostrums, have never cured in 10 years. It is not the only Galvanic Belt in the Market, but it is the only one that possesses the Electrical Current, and is the only one that can be used for the purpose for which it is adapted in self treatment and cure of Lost Manhood, Impotency, Nervous Debility, Lost Vitality, Lost Vigor, Premature Decay, Rheumatism, Kidney Diseases, Etc. Sent, prepaid, on receipt of price, $10. Send pamphlet address for one, and 3 stamps for 2, to address DUPLEX GALVANIC CO., 172 Kearney St., Rooms 5, 6, 7, San Francisco.
☞ The Duplex Galvanic Belt is PATENTED. Beware of imitations.

ESTABLISHED 1855.
J. O'KANE,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER OF
HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,
And Everything necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.
Boots and English Saddlery a Specialty
Single Harness from $18 a set.
☞ Repairing promptly attended to.
737 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.
Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for horses. Call order of all the principal trainers and horsemen on the Pacific Coast.

PILES Anakesis gives immediate relief and cures in 10 to 14 days. Price $1, at druggists, or by mail. Anakesis, Box 1, Jersey City, N. J.

An Extraordinary Razor
HAS BEEN INVENTED BY THE QUEEN'S CUTLER, which will shave the most wiry beard as easily and PLEASANTLY AS NEWLY GROWN HAIR. The Queen's Cutler has invented a razor of the form and at a price to suit the million, which will shave a beard as easily as a lady. It is CREATING A GREAT EXCITEMENT in Europe among the upper ten, and is PERFECTION. Two dollars is its price, and it is sent to any address on receipt of the price, by the Queen's Cutler, 842 Chestnut, San Francisco, Cal. Only place in the United States where the razor can be obtained. Three months' wear is ample for any razor, and yet they are so durable that we can afford to sell them for a trifle. Mention this paper. Address as above.
The Queen's Own Cutlery, including celebrated razors, AMERICAN PEARL and IVORY CARVING KNIVES, TABLE and POCKET KNIVES, and other cutlery, which for durability and fine work are unsurpassed by any other manufacturers.

NEW SCHOOL BOOKS!
OLD SCHOOL BOOKS!
Sold, Bought and Exchanged
—AT—
A. BOURGOIN'S
AntiquarianBookStore
206 MONTGOMERY AVE.

CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO.
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.
SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore,
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
OF
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.
SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.
My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
☞ To seed ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight is a great object saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Valls, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese and Bohemian.
Osteneorisms, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.
NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy and are, as Attested by Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,
Latest Edition, with all Additions to Date.
PUSTET'S PRAYER BOOK HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society!)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
648 MARKET STREET.
BRANCH,
1152 MARKET ST.
LAUNDRY,
170 St. Ist, Folsom and Howard. S. F. Cal.

CATHOLIC PICTURE STORE!
D. J. QUIRK,
Importer and Manufacturer of Pictures, Mirrors and Frames,
Steel Engravings, Etc.,
131 FOURTH ST.,
Bet. Mission and Howard Sts., San Francisco.
☞ Frames of every description made to order. Repairing a specialty. Gilding, Gilding of Gesso and all art work executed.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.
SANTA CLARA - - - - CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, INSTRUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of procuring for young ladies, at a moderate expense, a moral and intellectual education. One feature in particular that should recommend this Academy, is the influence exercised to form the pupils to views and habits of economy and to render them useful members of society and good Christians.
The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.
Terms are required at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, payable in advance.
Entrance Fee, Tuition, to be paid once, Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $60.
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.
French and Spanish lessons free.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA, - - - - CALIFORNIA.
This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies imposing buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasiums, swimming baths, etc. It is furnished with complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable Cabinets of Natural History, Chemistry, Anatomy, Mineralogy, Conchology, Geology, Botany, Zoology, and Ancient Relics. For the latter a new building 160x40 has just been finished, which has nothing to do but receive specimens.
Diplomas are given in two departments, the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial Course.
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $15.00.
Tuition, English, Latin, Greek, French, German, Spanish, Bookkeeping, Elocution, Vocal Music, Instrumental Music, Drawing, Painting in Water Colors, per annum, $50.00.
Tuition in the Preparatory Department, $30.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Commercial Classes, $30.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes, $40.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Literary Classes, $50.00.
Music (Vocal and Instrumental), Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons form an extra charge, as in Boarding Schools, but lessons in French and Spanish are given gratis to those who wish to learn them.
Bed and Bedding, $20.00.
Washing, $50.00.
Fuel, $5.00.
Physician's Fees (in case of sickness), Medicines and Doctor's fees are payable at the discretion of each half-term, in advance.
SISTER TOO MUCH.
Terms per month, (cash in advance.)
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Collegiate Classes, per month, $8.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Collegiate Classes, per month, $10.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes, $6.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes, $8.00.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Literary Classes, $10.00.
Music (Vocal and Instrumental), Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons form an extra charge, as in Boarding Schools, but lessons in French and Spanish are given gratis to those who wish to learn them.
Bed and Bedding, $2.00.
Washing, $4.00.
Fuel, $0.50.
Physician's Fees (in case of sickness), Medicines and Doctor's fees are payable at the discretion of each half-term, in advance.
SISTER TOO MUCH.
Bedding must be furnished by the pupil.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
Pupils are received at any period of the year.
Pupils are received at any period of the year

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Cleveland and Hendricks the Choice at Chicago.

How the Nominations were made. Re-capitulation of the Ballots.

Chicago, July 11.—The convention was called to order at 11 o'clock and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke of Grace Church, Chicago. A delegate from Pennsylvania then moved that the committee proceed to a second ballot. Ordered. Then Snowden of Pennsylvania wish thanks to those who had voted for Samuel J. Randall, withdrew that preliminary motion. The second ballot was entered at 11.20 with the following results: Alabama gave Bayard (said absent), 2; Michigan, 1, Cleveland 12; Arkansas for Cleveland 14, (absent), California for Thurman 10; Colorado for Cleveland 2; Connecticut for Cleveland 12; Delaware for Bayard 6; Florida gave Cleveland 6, Bayard 2; Georgia gave for Cleveland 14, Bayard 10.

Illinois gave for Hendricks 1. Here there suddenly broke out a scene of wild, general and enthusiastic applause, the waving of hats and handkerchiefs, the shouts of a number of all parts of the house, the speaker was at his height, waving and stamping on the platform and announcing that the request of the Indiana delegation he withdrew the name of Joseph McDonald for the purpose, at a proper time, of asking the vote of Indiana for Thomas A. Hendricks. This occasioned renewed cheering which was kept up for several minutes longer. At length the roll of the vote of Illinois was announced as follows: Cleveland, 36. Illinois continued for Bayard, 1, McDonald 1, Indiana gave for Hendricks 20, Iowa gave for Cleveland 22, Hendricks 4. The call of the roll proceeding, Kansas gave for Thurman 1, Bayard 1, Cleveland 17.

When Kentucky was called, McKenzie, who had announced Carlisle, withdrew the nomination and announced the vote of Kentucky 12 for Cleveland, 1 for Bayard, 1 for Hendricks 13, (absent) Louisiana, Cleveland 8, Maine, Cleveland 12, Maryland, Cleveland 16, Bayard 6, Massachusetts, Cleveland 2, Bayard 1, Hendricks 12½; Cleveland 3, Bay, Michigan for Hendricks 13, Cleveland 23, Minnesota for Cleveland 14, Missouri for Cleveland 17, Bayard, Hendricks 1, Mississippi for Bayard 18, Cleveland 2, Hendricks 2, Cleveland for Bayard 1, Cleveland 2, Hendricks 2, Hendricks 1, Thurman 1, Bayard 12, Cleveland 12; Vermont for Cleveland; Virginia for Cleveland 1, Bayard 3, Hendricks 2 Thurman 1; West Virginia for Thurman 2, Randall 1, Hendricks 1, Bayard 1, Cleveland 8; Wisconsin for Hendricks 2, Cleveland 20 (as the candidate of the Democracy). Arizona for Cleveland 1, Dakota for Cleveland 2, District of Columbia for Cleveland 2, Idaho for Cleveland 2; Montana for Cleveland 2; Washington Territory for Cleveland 2; Nebraska for Cleveland 4, Bayard 1; Utah for Cleveland 1, Hendricks 1; Wyoming for Cleveland 1.

The vote of Pennsylvania was then called for, and the chairman announced for Cleveland 47 (another applause, demonstration which interrupted the further announcement) Pattersy, one, for Hendricks 1, Randall 1, Bayard 3, Thurman. Illinois corrected its vote as follows: Cleveland 36, Bayard 1, McDonald 3, Cleveland 37. Kansas changed its vote to Cleveland 18, Cleveland 12, Thurman 2. North Carolina charged her 22 votes from Bayard to Cleveland. Ohio changed her vote and cheering; Virginia changed her vote as follows: Cleveland 16, Bayard 1. Georgia changed her vote as follows: for Cleveland 22, Bayard 8.

At this time all the delegates were upon their feet, and many of their representatives were in motion. Florida changed her vote to Cleveland. Ohio did also West Virginia. The changes were so numerous and so confusing that it was impossible to follow them. Cleveland was nominated. Up to the time of the announcement of the nomination announced the change of the 24 votes sold to Cleveland. This set off the enthusiasm again. The cheering was deafening. An archer in the gallery waved a large New York delegate, and a staff made was carried in procession. The band struck up more patriotic airs, flags and banners were waved, and the excitement pulsed the live; points between the Cleveland votes had nearly reached the necessary two-thirds. The chairman announced the vote of Cleveland was certain, some of the minority delegates left the hall. Outside the artillery began to boom and inside the orchestra was tremendous.

Nominations were then called for. Vetoes for Cleveland. Bayard. Texas gave her whole 18 votes to Cleveland. Ohio changed her votes as follows: for Cleveland 27, Thurman 19. Tennessee changed her vote to Cleveland. At this moment an immense oil painting of Gov. Cleveland was carried in front of the speaker's stand and exhibited to the enthusiastic spectators, who stood in their places and whistling, waving everything that could be put into requisition for that purpose, while the band played "Marching Through Georgia," "Hail, Columbia and Bite" and other airs.

The several result was announced as follows at 1.10 p. m., total number of votes cast, 866 necessary to a choice, 547. Cleveland received 683 Hendricks 60, Bayard, 81; McDonald, 1, Randall, 4; Thurman, 4.

Evening Session.

It was half past 8 o'clock before the evening session was called to order. The convention then proceeded to call the roll for the nomination of Vice-President. Speaker of California came to platform. He presented the honored name of General Wm. F. Rosecrans. Speech of Colorado nominated Joseph E. McDonald. Senator Wallace of Pennsylvania said he nominated as a candidate for Vice-President a man conversant with public affairs throughout the whole life—an honored statesman, a pure and upright citizen, a child of the people, and one deeply interested in the American people—Thomas A. Hendricks. (Applause.)

Congressman Long of Massachusetts, was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, the convention standing in a tumor degree the cheers which took place at the morning session in honor of the same gentleman.

Morgan of Indiana declared very emphatically that Mr. Hendricks was not, and could not be a candidate for the Vice-Presidency. He had been authorized by Mr. Hendricks himself to say so. He therefore warned the convention not to do that which it would have to undo. Wallace of Pennsylvania said that Mr. Hendricks had been once chosen Vice-President, and had been deposed of the office. The Democracy of the republic demanded of him again his name as a candidate, and they would not take "No" for an answer. He moved by acclamation of the convention Thomas A. Hendricks as a candidate for Vice-President. Cheers and applause followed.

Hubbard of Texas, made a speech in favor of giving Hendricks the office out of which he had been pushed. Wood of New York, regretted that Mr. Hendricks should be called, so as to put on record the sentiment of the Democracy. Wallace accepted the suggestion, withdrew his motion to nominate by acclamation, and moved that the nomination now close. The motion was agreed to and the clerk proceeded to call the roll of the States. The result was the unanimous nomination of Thomas A. Hendricks as the candidate for Vice-President. This was received with cheers and applause.

The convention at 7.55 adjourned sine die.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Sketch of the Life and Public Services of the Hon. Grover Cleveland.

The Hon. Grover Cleveland, the Democratic candidate for President, was born in the town of Caldwell, Essex county, N. J., March 18th, 1837. His family was of New England origin, his father, the Rev. Richard Cleveland, having been a Presbyterian clergyman at Norwich, Conn., whence he removed to New Jersey some time before the death of his father, which occurred in the middle period of his earlier childhood. His first intention was to go to Cleveland, but stopping with an uncle in Buffalo, for a time, he concluded to make his home there. He studied law, and was admitted to practice in 1859. In 1863, he was appointed assistant district attorney of Erie county, and acquitted himself with marked ability in that position. Two years later he was the Democratic candidate for the office of District Attorney, but was defeated by a small majority by Lyman K. Bass. Mr. Cleveland pursued his professional practice with success until 1870, when he was chosen Sheriff of Erie county, holding the office three years. He then returned to active practice of his profession, and not long after became the head of the firm of Cleveland, Bissel & Sicard, which has won a leading position at the Buffalo bar. He declined into the full blaze of political prominence in the election of the Fall of 1881.

HIS ELECTION AS GOVERNOR.

His conduct of affairs as Mayor of Buffalo drew public attention to him, and in the Fall of 1882, he was nominated and elected Governor of the State by an immense majority, nearly 200,000, defeating Successor Folger and receiving the unusual number of votes from the Independent Republicans of the State. He is known as a "Reform Governor." One of his principal acts in office has been the veto of a bill to reduce the fees in the New York statutes of fees to the State. It has caused him to receive much of praise as well as censure.

HIS PERSONAL APPEARANCE.

A friend of our direction has personally appeared: "His face, no less than his figure and action, indicates strength. The lines of that solemnize consolidation of facilities which is not expressed in the phrase "a cool head." Those traits which are in part the result of early and constant self training have given him the air of conscious and quiet power which belongs only to the triumphant autocrats of the civilized world. His figure is tall, has a Napoleon strength of chest, and is well proportioned. The face is in the smooth full moon of a man who uses it for signal utility of character, with the suggestion of physical vigor in the soft brown moustache that strongly contrasts with the scantiness of hair on his head. There is no trace of the scholastic—he is nearly the case in vital temperament—and a double chin is beginning to hang down over the simple white necktie. There is nothing phenomenal in the manner of his face lights up a sympathetic smile, and without becoming animated and brilliant, he is at once interesting, unaffected and intensely real. His business habits are well illustrated, and the ease with which a caller can secure access to him is shown by the striking contrast in the time he listens to the public set up in gubernatorial chambers.

Governor Cleveland is unmarried. He has been engaged to be married for some time to Miss Harriet Desmond, Hendricks.

Although Cleveland Stephen Grover Cleveland, was born in a parsonage, he was named after his mother's maiden name Stephen and has since written his name Grover Cleveland.

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

Public Career of the Vice-Presidential Candidate.

It has become a tradition with the Democracy to give the second place on the national ticket to some Indiana man. For years it was Hendricks, English, eight years ago as now it was Thomas A. Hendricks. The Vice-Presidential candidate therefore are now as to the American people, being better known than Hendricks, Tilden 2, Thurman 2, Hendricks 2; Cleveland 2, Hendricks 2; Cleveland 2, Hendricks 2; Pennsylvania was given to Hendricks 1, Cleveland 2, Cleveland 6; South Carolina for Bayard 1, Cleveland 8, Hendricks 1; Tennessee for Bayard 10, Thurman 11, Cleveland 2, Hendricks 1; Texas for Cleveland 18; Vermont for Cleveland; Virginia for Cleveland 1, Bayard 3, Hendricks 2 Thurman 1; West Virginia for Thurman 2, Randall 1, Hendricks 1, Bayard 1, Cleveland 8; Wisconsin for Hendricks 2, Cleveland 20 (as the candidate of the Democracy). Arizona for Cleveland 1, Dakota for Cleveland 2, District of Columbia for Cleveland 2, Idaho for Cleveland 2; Montana for Cleveland 2; Washington Territory for Cleveland 2; Nebraska for Cleveland 4, Bayard 1; Utah for Cleveland 1, Hendricks 1; Wyoming for Cleveland 1.

The vote of Pennsylvania was then called for, and the chairman announced for Cleveland 47 (another applause demonstration which interrupted the further announcement) Pattersy, one, for Hendricks 1, Randall 1, Bayard 3, Thurman. Illinois corrected its votes as follows: for Hendricks 1, Bayard 1, McDonald 3, Cleveland 37. Kansas changed its votes to Cleveland 18, Cleveland 12, Thurman 2. North Carolina charged her 22 votes from Bayard to Cleveland. Ohio changed her vote and cheering; Virginia changed her vote as follows: Cleveland 16, Bayard 1. Georgia changed her vote as follows: for Cleveland 22, Bayard 8.

At this time all the delegates were upon their feet, and many of their representatives were in motion. Florida changed her vote to Cleveland. Ohio did also West Virginia. The changes were so numerous and so confusing that it was impossible to follow them. Cleveland was nominated. Up to the time of the announcement of the nomination announced the change of the 24 votes sold to Cleveland. This set off the enthusiasm again. The cheering was deafening. An archer in the gallery waved a large New York delegate, and a staff made was carried in procession. The band struck up more patriotic airs, flags and banners were waved, and the excitement pulsed the live; points between the Cleveland votes had nearly reached the necessary two-thirds. At this juncture, when the excitement of the Cleveland votes certain, some of the minority delegates left the hall. Outside the artillery began to boom and inside the orchestra was tremendous.

Nominations were then called for. Vetoes for Cleveland. Bayard. Texas gave her whole 18 votes to Cleveland. Ohio changed her votes as follows: for Cleveland 27, Thurman 19. Tennessee changed her vote to Cleveland. At this moment an immense oil painting of Gov. Cleveland was carried in front of the speaker's stand and exhibited to the enthusiastic spectators, who stood in their places and whistling, waving everything that could be put into requisition for that purpose, while the band played "Marching Through Georgia," "Hail, Columbia and Bite" and other airs.

The several result was announced as follows at 1.10 p. m., total number of votes cast, 866 necessary to a choice, 547. Cleveland received 683 Hendricks 60, Bayard, 81; McDonald, 1, Randall, 4; Thurman, 4.

Evening Session.

It was half past 8 o'clock before the evening session was called to order. The convention then proceeded to call the roll for the nomination of Vice-President. Speaker of California came to platform. He presented the honored name of General Wm. F. Rosecrans. Speech of Colorado nominated Joseph E. McDonald. Senator Wallace of Pennsylvania said he nominated as a candidate for Vice-President a man conversant with public affairs throughout the whole life—an honored statesman, a pure and upright citizen, a child of the people, and one deeply interested in the American people—Thomas A. Hendricks. (Applause.)

Congressman Long of Massachusetts, was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, the convention standing in a tumor degree the cheers which took place at the morning session in honor of the same gentleman.

Morgan of Indiana declared very emphatically that Mr. Hendricks was not, and could not be a candidate for the Vice-Presidency. He had been authorized by Mr. Hendricks himself to say so. He therefore warned the convention not to do that which it would have to undo. Wallace of Pennsylvania said that Mr. Hendricks had been once chosen Vice-President, and had been deposed of the office. The Democracy of the republic demanded of him again his name as a candidate, and they would not take "No" for an answer. He moved by acclamation of the convention nominate Thomas A. Hendricks as a candidate for Vice-President by acclamation. Hubbard of Texas, made a speech in favor of giving Hendricks the office out of which he had been pushed. Wood of New York, regretted that Mr. Hendricks should be called, so as to put on record the sentiment of the Democracy. Wallace accepted the suggestion, withdrew his motion to nominate by acclamation, and moved that the nomination now close. The motion was agreed to and the clerk proceeded to call the roll of the States. The result was the unanimous nomination of Thomas A. Hendricks as the candidate for Vice-President. This was received with cheers and applause.

The convention at 7.55 adjourned sine die.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Sketch of the Life and Public Services of the Hon. Grover Cleveland.

The Hon. Grover Cleveland, the Democratic candidate for President, was born in the town of Caldwell, Essex county, N. J., March 18th, 1837. His family was of New England origin, his father, the Rev. Richard Cleveland, having been a Presbyterian clergyman at Norwich, Conn., whence he removed to New Jersey some time before the death of his father, which occurred in the middle period of his earlier childhood. His first intention was to go to Cleveland, but stopping with an uncle in Buffalo, for a time, he concluded to make his home there. He studied law, and was admitted to practice in 1859. In 1863, he was appointed assistant district attorney of Erie county, and acquitted himself with marked ability in that position. Two years later he was the Democratic candidate

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

GREAT VICTORY FOR "UNITED IRELAND."

O'Brien Gets a Verdict Against Cornwall.

London, July 1.—There was great excitement in Dublin today when the jury rendered a verdict for Mr. William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, in the suit for $5,000 damages for libel brought by the Marquis of Cornwall, mayor of the Dublin Post Office, for an article in the United Ireland. The article charged Cornwall with having betrayed the cause of the country. The Marquis brought the suit in the Queen's Bench, and laid the damages at $5,000. The Judge conducted three hours in summing up the case, and his charge to the jury was strongly in favor of the plaintiff. The jury was absent one hour and a half. Mr. Cornwall was unable to hear the response of the interval, and left the court room. Mr. O'Brien remained, appearing unmoved and assured, although he, too, was obliged to go outside occasionally to seek a breath of fresh air, as the temperature in the court room was like that of a furnace. Whenever he appeared outside he was greeted with cheers by the enormous crowd which surrounded the Court House.

The verdict was delivered amid a breathless silence. Then when its purport was realized, there arose a great cheering inside the court room, which resolutely drowned the order of the Judge, who indignantly, but vainly, commanded silence. The cheers were taken up, and became a roar that was repeated by the crowds which blocked the streets along the Liffey for a half a mile down. Several prisoner and other friends of O'Brien in the court room at once hugged the victorious defendant, and he dove from the Court House to the Imperial Hotel his progress was a continuous ovation from the cheering crowds.

The news of the trial's correspondent saw Mr. O'Brien at his hotel. He said: "I have been expecting this verdict for days, and I would not now that confidence is exchanged for certainty. I have to thank the jury most heartily for the service they have rendered to the cause of Ireland. I have been enabled to expose the odious crime of betrayal, and to show that the laurels gained by loyalty cross with nothing high public spirit. I have, too, had I have the sympathy and appreciation of the public, for I have received letters from all parts of the United States, thanking me for championing the cause of morality.

Fight at Cornwall to Sustained.

DUBLIN, July 12—The statement that the Marquis of Cornwall intends to resign the Secretary of the Dublin Post-Office, for the offence charged against him in a recent libel suit, has produced excitement in the Irish capital. The Government has already taken steps to find out the threat. Detectives have been sent to Cornwall to watch the movements of the secretary. It is reported tonight that the detectives have lost sight of the Marquis in Scotland, and the story is that he has been secretly conveyed to Cornwall. The Marquis is at Mountbellew and Castle Mahon, Ire

Poetry.

FOR THE MONITOR.

THE WRECK OF THE SEAHORSE.

BY JAMES K. GAYIP.

On the beach of the picturesque and bathing town of Tingore, on Wexford Bay, there lay a wreck, bearing the name of those ill-fated Spanish galleons which, in the sixteenth century, ever visited adverse fate before reaching a port of Spain whether they had gone in the interest of Philip, the over-zealous successor of a war-mad Charles, or had been from the storied vessels. A gloom peculiarly still pervaded the place where lay the wreck, and a sense of solitude almost death of those mariners.

Fair hopes filled every breast that morn,
As through the sparkling waves we sped forlorn,
Short youthful hopes, and short-lived joy
Needs fear of the heavens, and crushing spars.
We sailed from Cadiz, with a fair breeze,
Our decks laden with the fruit brown blow,
That for the northlands dwell
From God's own hours—that day herself—
Then God was calmed at Galilee
The surgings of the stormy sea.
Could ad life will time which scale
Upsoles, and in the stormy main,
Despite the skill of sailor, or skill
The ingrate crew all overboard—
But heedless of the waters blue,
Blithely leave the Seahorse flew.

For hours they swept the boiling sea,
Bright good ship, gaily sailing on smilingly;
Defied the billows heavy and swift
When powerful in their wrath fell
The air seemed to shake with the roar
Of the war fear sent fore and aft,
Then the ship seemed to ocean fall
And directly rolls the coming squall;
Then, drops of rain, then lightning's glare
And thunder clape—the heated air
Overtaken some of the awful death
Which threatens them at every breath;
Fright charged sailors, and the ship rose
Wallat prayers and curses now are mixed;
The shouted prayer falls of fear—
They know that they must perish here;
Dark night shut over the ocean
The storm ceases, the timbers shake,
The stormed heavens are yield to fate,
They see their peril, but too late;
The surf is hoarse, the ship is dashed
And friend or friend is amongst the dead;
Wind and wave, and rock and wind,
Before storm fierce, pushed on behind,
Rolls, rolls, rolls, rolls in the sea,
All lost! and the Seahorse!

FOR THE MONITOR.

THE OF AUSTIN.

(In imitation of Father Prout's "Bells of Shandon.")

With fond affection and deep dejection,
I often think of my native dale,
The days of childhood, and lonely wildwood,
Among whose scenes my memory dwells.
As mile i wander, time I remember,
Weeping as the slender, lovel lile of thee,
But O, my fond dream,
I'm only one wish higher,
That in city Austin there be a home for me.

I've heard whistle sounding, saw cries bounding,
To the noisy commanding, to die the free,
But the age of freedom, may God speed him,
To free my poor beloved native shore,
Where the yelling, the in mine dwelling,
Their thoughts regarding, dark slavery,
But the pal of the manner,
Would that I could be,
Or to the romantic borders of the river Lee.

I've heard bells tolling, saw mourn strolling,
The mourning, the sorrowing, "Requiescat in Pace,"
Some fair, precious, others loaming yearnings,
And little maidens in grievous appeal to pity,
Could ever boast it his dying case.
Ah! Austin, Austin! with devotion,
Thou, Thou, Thou!
Thou, from cross to cross,
Proclaiming liberty; landing those who made us
Free.

There is a bell in Austin at St. Augustin,
Whose sweet tones call one to prayer,
The man of Shandon, Dunegal and Bandon,
All alike are invited there.
Then none of Erin do not stand staring,
When you hear the sweet bells in chiefly,
Come! as on Erin's sod
When to the chapel you trod
With fond devotion to your God,
And the Son of Jesus will smile approvingly.

The Little Chapel at Monamullin.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENE ROBINSON.

CHAPTER I.

The priest gazed at the young man of about five-and-twenty, six feet high, with crisp, brown curling hair, long beard on Quaire, broad forehead, and manly, sun-burnt neck and face, attired in a suit of light homespun tweed, a blue flannel shirt very open at the throat, a scarlet tie knotted sailor fashion, and heavy shoes, broad-toed and thick-soled.

"Hey! you are Mr. Brown," he said. "I am an artist. I have walked over from Castlebar. I am doing picturesque bits of this lovely country—not your cultivated beauties tracks, but the nooks which must be sought like the violet. I have very little money, and needs must rough it. This stick and knapsack, and a good appetite, and, his Cesar, I have carried my Commentaries before now in my teeth while bridging a river after a sun on fire, and I asked for the inn, and I was referred to Father Maurice."

"I can answer for it, Mr. Brown, that you will find every house in Monamullin willing to shelter you; and, further, that you will find this to be possibly the best, an unfortunately unpaved by travel seven miles along the coast to-night, but will be back, please God, to-morrow; in the meantime my housekeeper will try what broiled fish and a dish of ham and eggs can do towards appeasing what ought to be a giant's appetite. And I am sawyer for the shoes being well sized, having pulled the lavender myself in which they are periodically underlined."

Father Maurice ushered his guest into the cottage with a welcome so genuine that Mr. Brown felt at his ease almost ere the greeting had died upon the priest's lips, and proceeded to hang up his hat and knapsack with the air of a man who was completely at home.

The neat little parlor was easily furnished. A genuine bit of Dunings mahogany stood in the center of the room, and round it half a dozen plump horse-haired, brass-nailed chairs, with a "Come and sit on us, we are not for show" air about them peculiarly inviting. A respectable brown, black-as-sheep from age, and brass-mounted, ornamented as one expect, and opposite to it a plaster of Paris bust of Pius IX. upon a fluted pedestal, while the recesses at either side of the fireplace were furnished with antique book-cases containing a well-thumbed library of ecclesiastical literature, the works of St. Augustine being prominently conspicuous. Over the mantelpiece hung a portrait of Daniel O'Connell, with the autograph of the great Liberator in a small frame beneath, and at his right and left engravings, and of no mean order either, of Henry Grattan and John Philpot Curran. The walls were adorned with copies of the cartoons of Raphael, a large Crough Patrick from Clay Bay, a bird's eye glance at St. Peter's, and an illuminated address from the inhabitants of Monamullin to their beloved pastor on the completion of his thirtieth year on the mission—an address the composition of which conferred undying renown on Tim Rafferty, the school-master, and begat for the boy who wrote it a fame only second to that of the erudite pedagogue.

"You are delightfully snug here, Father Maurice," observed his guest, seating himself, and glancing admiringly round the apartment. "What a treasure of an antique bureau! Why, the brokers in London are giving any amount of money for such articles; we are all vandals, and ever than. If you could get it whispered that Dean Swift or Joe Addison worked at that desk, it would be worth its weight in gold. It's Queen Ann now or nothing.

"You are an Englishman!"

"A base, bloody and brutal Saxon!"

"We have not a great distance between Italian and Japanese," burst in the artist.

"Confound your impertinence," repeated Father Maurice. "We have some sifter than that! What think you of Thermanscrutinies? But, as I was saying, Mr. Jyvecote liked the valley so much that he brought his family over in the following year. Mr. Jyvecote was delighted with the place, and he bought the lodge, extended it, and at length determined upon building a castle. The castle—Moynally Castle, he calls it—was completed about three years ago, the bare walls alone costing seventy thousand pounds. Except the Viceregal Lodge in Dublin, added the priest, "there is nothing so grand in all Ireland."

"I must walk over there some day. Which way does it lie?"

"It's between us and Westport, along the coast, almost out upon a rock."

"What a strange lion to put such a lot of money into such a corner."

"It isn't! It's completely out of the world. The nearest railway is fifty miles."

"Then I forgive Mr. Jyvecote. I shall off say to him, I shall congratulate him. Oh, my dear Father Maurice," exclaimed the artist enthusiastically, "you who live in such tender tranquility, with the moon of the sea, the lullaby, and the rustling of the ecstatic feeling attendant upon leaving stress fifty miles behind one, to simply a new beatific existance! And so Jocelyn Jyvecote is within ten miles," he added, more in the tone of a person engaged in thinking aloud than by way of observation.

"Are you acquainted with him" asked the priest.

"Oh! yes—that is, very slightly." There was a decided shadow of embarrassment in his manner that would have struck an ordinary observer, but the simple minded clergyman failed to notice it.

"The yoke's at the doorc, yer riverence, as I've done I want what wants will be here be the hills beyant Theonig na Coppagh," shouted Morty Mulligan, thrusting his stock head into the apartment.

"How unfortunately this happened!" exclaimed Mr. Brown. "I have not slept out of this cottage for nearly thirty years, and the very night I would have wished to be there, I am compelled to go elsewhere. However, Mr. Brown, I leave you in good hands, and before I start I must make you acquainted with my housekeeper.

Morty have returned to the kitchen considerably baffled.

"He's gone to step the night, Mrs. Clancy," he reported to the housekeeper.

"Who's going to step the night?"

"The stranger gintleman above."

"Where is he goin' for to step, I'd like for to know! Mrs. Dooley's childer is down wid mayzles. The gauger is billeted at Mooney's—"

"He's goin' to step here in this house. I heard his riverence tell him so."

"Arrah, bothersha!" exclaimed Mrs. Clancy, in a tone of astonishment. "Mrs. Finney, Jone's daughter, lady must have a chest entirely for hellow consumption. If my bed could speak, sure it would tell a story of awaken till the pooir returns from Jyvecote. How disagreeable to meet Jyvecote in the lowness occupied by the blessed star, and to doubtless the same one that blazed forth in 1572. The discovery that it existed let astronomers to search astronomical records, and it was found that similar bright stars had appeared in the same region of the sky in 945 and 1264. Counting back three periods from 945, we are brought to the near vicinity of the birth of Christ. Observers of the Middle Ages, with poetic fancies have naturally connected the two events, and have inferred that the star in the east, pointing to the place of the Nativity, was a sudden outburst of this wonderful star. For this reason it has received the name of the Star of Bethlehem.

About 24 of these temporary stars have appeared in the last 2,000 years, subject, like the star in Cassiopea, to sudden outbursts followed by a return to their normal magnitudes. They are now classed as "Novæ." Some of them have undoubtedly due to eruptions of blazing hydrogen, and which are followed by long periods of quiescence. According to this theory, the star of 1572 is a variable star, with a period of a few more than 300 years. The last period was 308 years, if the bright star of 1264 be the same, and the same, we may therefore hope for a repetition of the uncomprehensible phenomena in the immediate future. The star was due in 1869, if it appears at all it will surely blaze forth by 1880. There is a possibility, therefore, that the long-lost Star of Bethlehem, the Pilgrim Star, the star of Magi, or Tycho Brahe's star—for it is known by all these names—will once more become a shining wonder in the sky. Such a celestial visitor will be warmly welcomed by astronomers, and far more acceptable than a great comet spanning the heavens with its gossamer tail.—

Harsford's Acid Phosphate For Overworked Females.

Dr. J. P. Cowan, Ashland, Ill., says "It proves satisfactory as a tonic both given dyspeptic conditions of the stomach, with general debility, such as we find in overworked females, with nervous headache and the accompaniments.

WALKING IN THEIR SLEEP.

Some Remarkable Freaks of Somnambulists.—A German Who Writes Poetry in His Sleep.—Curious Case of an Italian Nobleman.

A story is told of a German student—a somnambulist—who on one occasion arose from his bed and wrote a poem on the subject which he had vainly wrestled with when awake.

"Are many such stories told of somnambulists?" asked the reporter, who was fond of a well-known physician.

"There are," was the reply. There is a case recorded of a man at Milledgeville who used to arise in his sleep and go out on the roof of his house and walk along where it would have been utterly impossible for him to have stood had he been awake. In falling from one of the walks was accustomed to go down the steep side of a mountain, undress, and go in and take a bath. He would then come out, dress and return home, all the time being wholly unconscious of what he was doing."

"Is he a somnambulist?"

"I don't know. The somnambulist seems to drop, and to have the power to act that a sleeping man has not. Some of them relate so dreamy what they do when they take their night walks. There is a story told of a young nobleman in the city of Innsbruck who was accused by his brother to rise in his sleep, put on his cloak, having opened the casements, to mount by the help of a pully to the roof of the building. There he was seen to tear in pieces a magpie's nest and wrap the young birds in his cloak. He returned to his apartment, having placed his cloak, with the birds in it, on one morning to his astonishment he found his apartments in the Hall-Moon Street, Piccadilly, closed. Then he became a day when the sun shone and toody thought of him no more. The days of his disappearance passed over him and he was forgotten. Sic ter sotre.

"Somnambulism has been known to fall from dangerous heights, and even to be killed in being awakened while taking their sleep walks. The affection is said to be hereditary, and is sometimes caused by intemperance.

Right and Left.

M. Delaunay, of Paris, has made an extended and careful investigation to ascertain, if, in the majority of cases, the right upper and lower extremity be crossed over the left or the left over the right, and which side most preponderates to when in the sitting posture. According to M. Delaunay, the majority of dogs, horses, Newfoundlands, and poodles, cross the left upper over the left. The Chinese and Japanese cross the left over the right. Rejoicers cross the right over the left. M. Delaunay observed that infants under three years of age cross the left arm over the right, and that children cross the right over the left, 50 per cent, doing so at six years of age. Robust children cross the right arm over the left; the idiotic and weak, including those who are incapable of walking, cross the left over the right. The Calmucks and Arabs cross the right over the left, like the Europeans.

Robust children cross the right leg over the left rather than their weaker phenomena. Persons who cross the right leg over the left lean towards the left when sitting; those who place the left upperment lean to the right.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which should be taken by everyone who desires to be healthy. It is a vegetable preparation, and is a most thorough blood purifier and invigorator. Unequaled in malarial fevers, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, and constipation. Invaluable to aged persons.

RIP VAN WINKLE'S ORIGIN.

Where the Story Which Irving Wrote had its Rise.

A correspondent of the Boston Courier says "All the thousands of people who have read Washington Irving's famous story, "Rip Van Winkle," comparatively few have any idea that it was founded on a legend with Irving, but was taken from an old German legend, in which most features are identical with the narrative of the American author. The tale was originally called "Peter Claus," of which the following is the original version.

Peter Claus was a good herd of Sittendorf, and tended his flocks in the Kyffhausen mountains, where he was accustomed to leave them rest every evening in a mead, surrounded by an old wall, which he made his master of them; but for some days he had remarked that one of his finest goats had always disappeared some time after coming to this spot, and did not join the flock until late. Watching her more attentively, he observed that she slipped through an opening in the wall, up which he crept after the goat, and found her in a sort of cave, busily employed in gleaning the oat grains that dropped down singly from the roof. He locked up and shot his eyes amid the darkness, and at length he fell asleep upon him, but with all his inquiry could discover nothing. At last he heard above the stamping of horses, and from whose mangers it was probable the oats had fallen. Peter was yet speaking in consternation of the sound of horses in so unusual a place, when he heard a voice cry, "Up, up, and out speaking a word, dearest him to follow." The herd's girl of about 14 years, who had passed over a walled court, into a hollow, round in a hillside, by a lofty gate, and entered a spacious hall through the overspreading foliage of the vine, which hung in festoons from the lawn he found twelve knights playing gravely at nine-pins and dressed in the fashion of Charles V. Beside Lesser Peter was installed into the office of the boy, and served them.

At first he performed his duty with knees that were knocking together with fear and awe and then stole a partial look at the long hands and slashed doublets of the strangers, and at last he ventured to taste one of the goblets of wine, which he found a most delicious odor. The glowing juice made him feel as if reanimated, and whenever found the least weariness he again drew fresh vigor from the inexhaustible goblet. Sleep at last overpowered him.

Upon waking Peter found himself in the very same place where he was wont to tend his herds. He rubbed his eyes, but could see no sign of either dog or goats, and a dense fog, and a Cloud, which at the high grass and shrubs and trees which he had never before seen, surrounded him. Not knowing what to think, he continued his way over all the places where he had been wont to frequent with his goats, but nowhere could he find any traces of them. Sore at heart, he turned homeward, and at length with hasty steps he descended.

The people he met in the village were all strangers to him; they had not the dress of the country, and they all spoke exactly their language; and when he asked for his goats, all stared and smiled ironically, and at last he did the same, almost involuntarily, and found his beard length. Soon a crowd gathered round him, he began to conclude that himself and those strangers were mad, and he ceased to chastisement. Still, he recognized the mouse of his father, and he ran to the house, the houses, too, with their yards and gardens, were all familiar to him, but the inmates were strange to him, and they replied by the name of Sittendorf.

Peter's son was grown up, now walked through the village, and he was called by his name, but he was not known. At last, in rage, that growing and anxiety when he spoke to him. He then entered through an opening which he knew, but it was not there. Here, too, he found all so changed, and he was accosted by a man who, he thought, was his father, and addressed him as if intoxicated and called his wife and children by names, but none heard, none answered.

In a short time women and children thronged around the stranger with the long, heavy beard, and all, as if for a wager, stared in amazement at the man who, before his own house to ask after his wife or children, he was compelled to wager that to get rid of these questions and stares he must name that occurred to him, "Kurt Steffen."

The bystanders looked at each other in silence, at last one of the woman said "He has been in the churchyard these 12 years and more, he lies buried."

"Velten Meier?"

"Died on the 1778. His career Claus answers had lasted for half a century, and at last the stranger, who had listened with the greatest attention, it was dying fast, and the sweat stood in drops on his forehead. "Hearest thou not, Kurt Steffen?" said the old man, and he laid his hand on his shoulder. He gazed at him, and at the sight of his own relations, and his own features, and his own dress, and the old man's face, and a shudder, and a deep sigh, and a groan, and a cry, "Heaven rest his soul." He has been there thirty years, and he is my father." Peter shuddered, as in the last speaker he recognized his neighbor, who seemed to have suddenly grown old; but he had lost all desire for further questions. At this moment a brisk young woman pressed through the crowd, and, exclaiming, "Here comes the old man," she ran to the stranger, and, taking his hand, she led him to the house, and, as he followed, he heard the whispers of the crowd, "Poor Peter Claus, he is a little crazy." The stranger was conducted to the Kyffhausen Mountains, where he found the cave, and, with a sigh, he sank down on the ground, and, leaning his head on the stone, he fell into a deep sleep, and when he awoke he found himself in his own bed, and his wife and children were around him.

"Dear Peter Claus, he cried, "I am Peter Claus and come home," and he smoothed the child from his daughter's arms. All for a moment stared petrified, until one voice and another exclaimed.

"Yes, this is Peter Claus. Welcome, neighbor! Welcome after 20 years."

English as she is Pronounced.

"Pan American know how to pronounce the names of English families prominent in society," said a gentleman who has travelled much abroad. "And I don't wonder, for I found them very surprising. Now, there is a Cholmondeley pronounced Chumley, and Marjoribanks pronounced Marshbanks, and Auchinleck, which is called Okeler. Then we have the poet's name Cowper spelled Cooper, and the Earl of Derby, and Mainwaring is called Manering, just as Cooper is called. The Duke of Argyle, of Paris of the 16th century, was burned by the commonalty because he was called Argyle, and consequent so contrary to religion, morals, and the Scriptures."

THE MONITOR.

WEEKLY OFFICIAL YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and guard through the intercession of St. Francis de Sales, under whose protection they work to be powerful, the whole of Catholic journalism which defend the cause of religion, its rights and those of the Holy Apostolic See, and adhere to its doctrine and precepts with devotion and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is a most formidable power, because it is the chief agent in promulgating false and perverted ideas constitutes opinion, and opinion governs the world. In our time, religious journalism is not only a useful and serious occupation, but early a vocation indispensable to the welfare of society, and to the salvation of souls. It is a vocation which requires a special grace of vocation, whether it be the founder of the Univers, Louis Veuillot.—BISHOP, THOMPSON'S MONTHLY CHRONICLE.

Editorial Notes.

— Owing to the large increase in our circulation we are compelled to go to press early on Wednesday morning, and our forms have to be closed up on Tuesday evening. Correspondents and advertisers are requested to note this, as matter received after Tuesday noon may be too late to be inserted.

— The new General of the Jesuits has issued an address to the members of the Society of Jesus, which we print this week, and which should receive careful perusal at the hands of every Catholic. Father Anderledy's suggestions regarding Catholic Sodalities and other kindred societies are very pertinent and well-timed.

— In St. Patrick's Irish Catholic colony in Scott county, Minn., there is no saloon, and all the young men under 16 years of age are members of a total-abstinence society. Bishop Ireland, who has done so much in the cause of temperance in his diocese, will evidently be interested in this movement by advocating high license and temperance organizations, is the principal patron of the St. Patrick's colony.

— We conclude this week the remarkable article contributed by Mr. F. H. O'Donnell on the Masonic sect. So successful has the writer been in depicting the iniquities of Masonry that he has received several telegrams threatening and insulting letters, in which he is roundly abused for his audacity in thus exposing the underground workings of the worst organization in the world.

— It is noted as a somewhat curious coincidence that Switzerland numbers three of her citizens filling exalted religious positions—the General of Orders—the General of the Society of Jesus, Very Rev. Father Anderledy, of Valais; the General of the Redemptorists, Very Rev. Father Manron, of Fribourg; and the recently elected General of the Minor Capuchins, Very Rev. Father Bernardinde Christen, of Andermatt.

— The Am Maria has recently been seeking out some of the utterances on the subject of secret societies, of our most prominent Americans, and the result of the search is a very interesting reading. Our readers will find a page of it in a subsequent issue.

— Owing to the hard times and the depression of business, the number of Catholic journals which have ceased publication during the past year, has been very large. Many of these journals were published at a loss, and their discontinuance is a matter of congratulation to the Catholic public, as it means that the Catholic public will be better served than it has been by the journals which have succeeded the defunct ones.

— The New General of the Jesuits has issued an address to the members of the Society of Jesus, which we print this week, and which should receive careful perusal at the hands of every Catholic. Father Anderledy's suggestions regarding Catholic Sodalities and other kindred societies are very pertinent and well-timed.

— In St. Patrick's Irish Catholic colony in Scott county, Minn., there is no saloon, and all the young men under 16 years of age are members of a total-abstinence society. Bishop Ireland, who has done so much in the cause of temperance in his diocese, will evidently be interested in this movement by advocating high license and temperance organizations, is the principal patron of the St. Patrick's colony.

— We conclude this week the remarkable article contributed by Mr. F. H. O'Donnell on the Masonic sect. So successful has the writer been in depicting the iniquities of Masonry that he has received several telegrams threatening and insulting letters, in which he is roundly abused for his audacity in thus exposing the underground workings of the worst organization in the world.

— It is noted as a somewhat curious coincidence that Switzerland numbers three of her citizens filling exalted religious positions—the General of Orders—the General of the Society of Jesus, Very Rev. Father Anderledy, of Valais; the General of the Redemptorists, Very Rev. Father Manron, of Fribourg; and the recently elected General of the Minor Capuchins, Very Rev. Father Bernardinde Christen, of Andermatt.

— The Am Maria has recently been seeking out some of the utterances on the subject of secret societies, of our most prominent Americans, and the result of the search is a very interesting reading. Our readers will find a page of it in a subsequent issue.

Protestantism in Mexico.

"New York, July 14.—Rev. J. Milton Greene told a Presbyterian congregation yesterday of the success of the mission in Mexico. He said: 'We have established 50 parish churches, with a regular membership of 10,000 members; Sunday schools, 2 girls' seminaries, and 2 boys' seminaries, with 1,000 students in attendance; also missions. All our work is carried on in Spanish. Of the prominent political parties the Clericals are stopping the schools of progress, while the Liberals show a disposition to imitate American push. The Mexicans show great intelligence and are zealous to learn."

It is no new thing for Protestant preachers to pervert the truth whenever they speak of the phenomenal spread of Protestantism. The vast majority of non Catholics who contribute the funds to support Protestant Foreign Missions require to be told that "converts from Romanism" are rushing into the arms of the Parsons at the rate of about 10,000 a year, in order that much coin may be poured into the clerical exchequer. It takes very many dollars to support "fifty-six churches, seventeen Sunday schools, a girls' normal school, and a theological seminary," so when J. Milton Greene told his gullabilized gospel crowd that such establishments existed in Mexico, of course they gave him munificent donations for the magnificent Munchausen story which he concocted for the congregation.

In order to show our readers how utterly at variance with the truth this reverend romancer is, we append a letter from a gentleman well known in this city who is at present traveling in Mexico, wherein he sets forth many facts that plainly exhibit the mistake of entertaining as it actually exists in Mexico. His letter was written to the MONITOR without any solicitation on our part, but it comes at a very opportune time in order to puncture the gas bubble which Mr. Greene inflated for his own financial benefit. We hope every news paper that sold the yarn to its columns to the Munchausen story of Mr. Greene will also have the honesty to insert the truth as told by our correspondent in a manner which will strength to every assertion he makes. Here is the spirituo which shows Protestantism in Mexico in its true colors:

MEXICO CITY, July 6th, 1884.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR—

Dear Sir:—Thinking that you would like to know something of the progress of Protestantism here, I take the liberty of sending a few items that will tell the truth as I saw it demonstrated by actual experience. On Sunday June 29, went to the Protestant Church here to make observations. They have become possessed of a large church which was formerly owned by the Catholics, viz: the Church of San Francisco, but they came possessed of it, in a manner I shall not stop to reply to the recent Encyclical. "What we have said or will say, must be considered as the expression of a great part of the societies, not of the individual members of the sect, viz: "To Arms Mr. Editor" remarks. If the Grand Lodge of England repels the sectarian associations and assumes a consequence of Catholic other secret societies, it rests on less open the principle of Catholicism, that is to say, upon the negation of Christianity and of all religion. The Protestants have possession of this church but in a manner illustrative the blind obedience which they impose on their followers. Of the class of people who attend it, I may not take them place in the full light of publicity.

The Grand Lodge of England, Sir, should not forget that it was from Great Britain that Freemasonry spread upon the Continent, in France, in Italy, and in other countries. The Grand Lodge of England, Sir, should not forget but the natural and logical development of the general laws with which the Knights secret societies of the last century were inspired. Let us have early in the 19th English lodge have been assigned by those of the Continent. But, nevertheless, do they not continue relations with these latter? If they disperse of their tendencies, why do they not separate from them? Whatever may be the point of view one takes, it is not difficult to conclude that all the secret societies are united by the same bonds and rest on the same principles, and that the Grand Lodge of England has no right to protest against the condemnation of which the Encyclical, in the remarkable Encyclical, strikes the tenebrous association, which, in the 19th century, is the offspring of the Reformation. Do they preserve the essential character of the sect? then they remain in the Encyclical. Or is it a mere Masonic society, and then why not have the Grand Lodge of England to answer and the bond which it has in common with real Freemasonry.

How the Faith Spreads.

Frequently in these columns we have illustrated the wonderful growth of the Church by statistics taken from parishes in the Eastern States, but we are happy in having here in California numerous evidences of the progression of the Faith, which proves that Catholic progress is not confined to any particular locality in America.

An illustration of this fact is found in the parish of Visalia, Tulare county, which embraced, in 1876, about three hundred miles in circumference. Within the limits of this parish were included Tulare, Fresno, Kern, and Inyo counties, and the Church of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, Visalia, was then the only Catholic church in all that vast region of California. The same territory at present contains three parishes, viz: Fresno, Rev. J. Augustine, Rector; Visalia, Rev. P. Carrasco, Rector; and Bakersfield, Rev. P. M. Bannon, Rector. There are now churches in Madera, Hanford, Fresno, Visalia, Bakersfield, Santa Rosa, Bakersfield and Tejon, a room in Tulare, and lands to build as soon as possible. By the end of the year, Sundays, instead of one, there are now eight churches where the faithful may worship God, to whom be glory forever.

It is not in the building of churches alone, however, that the propagation of the Faith is mainly manifest. Several converts have been received into the Church, among whom we may mention the estimable wife of the late Senator Fowler. The Indians in that vicinity have also been well attended to spiritually, between seven and eight hundred of them having embraced the Catholic Faith. And thus it is that the name and glory of God is propagated in every portion of the world from day to day.

The Tenth Volume of a Great Work

Already in three columns we have alluded to the publication of the remarkable writings of Orestes A. Brownson, under the supervision of his son, Major Henry F. Brownson, of Detroit, Michigan. Hence it is only necessary to again call the attention of our readers to the invaluable collection of Catholic literature now published with a single volume of this great work, in order to estimate the priceless value of the entire collection of the writings of the great philosopher that ever adorned the literature of America.

The articles in the tenth volume are enumerated under the following titles: Catholicity Necessary to Sustain Popular Liberty; Native Americanism; Labor and Association; Vatican's Funeral Urn; Socialism and the Church; Authority and Liberty; Channing on Social Reform, Communism and Religious Liberty; The Church in the Dark Ages; Conversions of an Old Man and his Young Friends; The Edinburgh Review on Hermannus Doubt; Christianity and Heathenism; Willfort, or Protestant Persecutions; Protestantism and Government; Protestantism Not a Religion; Curtius' Hermann Es says; Luther and the Reformation; Protestantism in the Sixteenth Century; Paganism in Education; Schools and Education; Sick Calls.

These articles are all written on subjects that never grow stale and are as fresh and as interesting to-day as they were in 1848, when some of them were written. As a scintillation of Brownson's style, we subjoin this unique paragraph of the different lessons through which poverty is looked at by the Yankee Parsons and the true Church of God: "It is necessary to be on our guard against the Yankee Parsons, coupling rags and dirt with vice. The Yankee identifies virtue with cleanliness and thrift, and wherever he sees rags and dirt he can discover nothing but the seal of eternal reprobation. He has no conception that it is possible for virtue to have an ear washed face, to dwell in a dark and dirty tenement, or that a man who has no capacity for rising in the world can ever get to Heaven. Yet we would rather take our chance with the dwellers in these filthy courts, and dirty garters and collars, than with the rich and whose parlors front land and spacious streets, and who are externally as clean and neat. The gems poor are the jewels of the Church, hardly shall the rich enter into the kingdom of Heaven. Moreover, we believe that the most abject of our poor have even in this world more real enjoyment, more true happiness, than the rich and the great."

How truthfully Brownson depicts the frown of the Pharisee as he looks at honest poverty clad in rags, and wonders if such "Popish paupers" can ever enter the kingdom of Heaven his geniality has prefaced as the abode of the Godly Evangelical gent. And how generously the giant of Christ places all his intellectual vigor on the side of the poor, wisely preferring them to the purple and fine linen Pharisees who pamper and painted palaces he knew intimately partook more of heaven. Should receive a large circulation in California, and we hope all who can afford the work will procure copies.

Priests at their Posts of Duty.

We intended to say something regarding the fallacy set forth in the dispatch announcing that the Pope had ordered the priests in the cholera-afflicted districts of France to remain at their posts, but the Rome correspondent of the Northwestern Chronicle entirely covers the case and illustrates the fact that it requires no mandate from any authority to keep the true priest of God at his post in the hour of danger.

Our Minnesota contemporary says very correctly that it does not need the command of the Holy Father to make the priests of the Catholic Church stay at their posts during an epidemic. "The secular world looks upon priests as simply clergymen, that is, members of a profession. But Catholics throughout the world look upon them as priests, as men devoted to the service of God and God's people. Priests do not run away from epidemics; when the scourge comes they stay, to be stricken with their flocks, to give them the consolations of religious comforts, necessary for the cure both of soul and body. The priest that would run away from a cholera-afflicted district would be not only disobeying his God, he would be considered unworthy of his high and holy office.

We remember reading of the case of a young priest, not long ordained, who was sent by his Bishop (it was in this country) to a place afflicted by small-pox. The young man shrank from the duty and begged his Bishop not to send him to certain death. The Bishop granted his request, but within an hour was busied several miles on his way to the afflicted place. Nearing the town he was overtaken by the young priest, who, getting off his horse, knelt in the roadway and in tears begged God's and the Bishop's pardon, besought the Bishop to return and permit him to go to the afflicted town. The Bishop forgave him, but said: "My son, we will go there together, and you will learn from me what is the duty of God's priest towards God's poor." This is the only case that we have ever heard of, of the cowardice of a priest. We know of the case of a priest who visited a dying woman to give her the last Sacraments when a loaded and cocked pistol was held to his breast by the disguised Protestant husband. We have known young priests to stay by the bedside of poor persons dying of small pox, administering the medicines left outside by the scared physician, and, cooking up for food for themselves out of other things from which neighbors and blood relations shrank.

Let MM know that his priests never run away. This is our reason for doubting the Pontiff's order regarding the cholera epidemic in France.

The Committee engaged in the work of revising the Old Testament have finished their labors. After a labor of 11 years the revision is now ready for the press. The Committee consisted of the twenty-seven members have died during the revision.—Exchange.

Bless the Lord even for small favors!

THE CROSS IN CALIFORNIA.

America the Land of the Holy Cross. Its Designation as Ancient Charta. The Crosses Once Planted by Columbus. Spanish Discoveries on the Pacific Coast.

FIRST ARTICLE.

The designs of Divine Providence will only be fully accomplished in America when the Cross and the Pope had ordered this priests in the cholera-afflicted districts of France to remain at their posts, but the Rome correspondent of the Northwestern Chronicle entirely covers the case and illustrates the fact that it requires no mandate from any authority to keep the true priest of God at his post in the hour of danger.

Our Minnesota contemporary says very correctly that it does not need the command of the Holy Father to make the priests of the Catholic Church stay at their posts during an epidemic. "The secular world looks upon priests as simply clergymen, that is, members of a profession. But Catholics throughout the world look upon them as priests, as men devoted to the service of God and God's people. Priests do not run away from epidemics; when the scourge comes they stay, to be stricken with their flocks, to give them the consolations of religious comforts, necessary for the cure both of soul and body. The priest that would run away from a cholera-afflicted district would be not only disobeying his God, he would be considered unworthy of his high and holy office.

We remember reading of the case of a young priest, not long ordained, who was sent by his Bishop (it was in this country) to a place afflicted by small-pox. The young man shrank from the duty and begged his Bishop not to send him to certain death. The Bishop granted his request, but within an hour was busied several miles on his way to the afflicted place. Nearing the town he was overtaken by the young priest, who, getting off his horse, knelt in the roadway and in tears begged God's and the Bishop's pardon, besought the Bishop to return and permit him to go to the afflicted town. The Bishop forgave him, but said: "My son, we will go there together, and you will learn from me what is the duty of God's priest towards God's poor." This is the only case that we have ever heard of, of the cowardice of a priest. We know of the case of a priest who visited a dying woman to give her the last Sacraments when a loaded and cocked pistol was held to his breast by the disguised Protestant husband. We have known young priests to stay by the bedside of poor persons dying of small pox, administering the medicines left outside by the scared physician, and, cooking up for food for themselves out of other things from which neighbors and blood relations shrank.

Let MM know that his priests never run away. This is our reason for doubting the Pontiff's order regarding the cholera epidemic in France.

The Committee engaged in the work of revising the Old Testament have finished their labors. After a labor of 11 years the revision is now ready for the press. The Committee consisted of the twenty-seven members have died during the revision.—Exchange.

Bless the Lord even for small favors!

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1884.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 2nd.

Sunday Eighth Sunday after Pentecost, St. Veronica, Virgin.
Monday, 28, St. Pantaleon, Pope and Martyr.
Tuesday 29, Felix II., Pope and Martyr, The Anniversary of Translation of Most Rev. J. S. Alemany from the See of Monterey to the Archbishopric of San Francisco. Pontifical Mass at the Cathedral.
Wednesday 30, Abdon and Sennen.
Thursday 31, Germanus, Bishop.
Friday 1, St. Peter's Chains.
Saturday 2, Stephen, Pope and Martyr.

A BRIDE OF CHRIST.

A Sublime Spectacle in St. Mary's Chapel.

There are few ceremonies in the Catholic ritual more affecting than that which changes a worldling into a sister of Charity. Women without a young lady gifted with talents that would win for her the world's applause, possess a disposition calculated to please, and personal charms which would grace the drawing-rooms where, we say, such a gifted, gaited young lady was seen to shine, yet, impelled by some inscrutable motive, she leaves all these behind her, and, with a glimpse at the spiritual, she enters the Novitiate of the Order of Charity, or Sisters.

We witnessed such a ceremony in the beautiful chapel of the Sisters of Mercy, attached to St. Mary's Hospital, on Thursday morning last, when Miss Mary O'Brien, the lady referred to in the opening lines of this sketch, entered that sacred asylum where, when once she passes the portals, she is lost to the world. The chapel was well filled with the relations, friends and acquaintances of the Bride, who, on the parade ground below were assembled with their carriages, ready to convey the happy friends of the young lady to the place of her nativity, to which place it is the custom of the Order to send the friends of the Novitiate, to witness the ceremony of the Reception of Mary O'Brien.

After the Gospel had been preached by the Rev. Father Brouillet, the Bishop, in his robes of office, and his mitre, and crosier, and the Novitiate, with her friends and the clergy, left the altar, which was in the form of a cross, and proceeded to the Sanctuary, which was in the form of a circle, and, in the centre of the Sanctuary, was a chair, which was placed there for the occasion, and, in front of the chair, was a table, covered with a white cloth, on which was placed the Bible, the Crucifix, and the Novitiate's Cross, which, when she has completed her probation, she will be entitled to wear, and, in front of the table, was a kneeling stool, on which the Novitiate knelt, while the Bishop, in the sublime language of the Church, asked her if she was willing to be a Sister of Charity, and, if she was, he asked her to place her hand upon the Bible, and, in the most solemn manner, he

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. N. FRANK, EDITOR

PROGNOSLETS.

NUMBER XCVIII.

1st HOUR.—HALF SQUARE.

T.—Ty. U. N.

1. To lowerdale. 2. Along. 3. Putting away from (it). 4. Bizarre ornamental books. 5. Contrite. 6. A bird with long legs. 7. Twice (Gallic). 8. A member. 9. An adversary in Public Good. 10. A letter.

Formed Silver, N.J.

2ND HOUR.—SENTENTIAL.

At sleep down I to? see soon,
To mill in passers, who seen green,
Or little pointed in the Tracie,
In merchandise, in cities made.

As total turns itself second,
Or tyrant by force within it found,
(To be precise) as those "poor cocks,"
Thus trapped, are dealt with as the brutes!

Flavoid, like a sheep when slain, we'll say,
As long as they have sought to pay,
Then hooted out, with boisterous shall,
When on another jobs they call.

Then it goes on from week to week,
(With them displaying greater cheek,)
As in an 8 (1) we see
Urnste running through continually.
Dubois, Ill. ASPIRO.

3RD HOUR.—SQUARE.

1. Both are grounds. 2. The act of waving. 3. The polar name of different species of acetic acids. 4. A sort of grape. 5. Prose. (Rd.) 6. A group with a bank to it.

New Orleans, La. MAGOR ETC.

4TH HOUR.—CHARADE.

When one rare's seen in cultured fields,
(A grain that an abundance yields,)
The lofty river of England's crown—
Separate—to have a floating time,
And businesses are in demand.
Of this great poet, to tell the last.

We stole in fairy of many a year,
Has seen the loss are spend with grove,
Though from the gas white over we are
The now, by which a harm is done.
Each country has of pests a list,
Not only America ten missed.
Dubois, Ill. ASPIRO.

5TH HOUR.—SQUARE.

1. A character in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." 2. A feminine name. 3. Scarring. 4. A kind of sink. (R.) 5. A beginning. (Rd.) 6. To writhe. 7. A station in Lander co., Nevada.

Hyde Park, Mass. DORA TIMKIN.

6TH HOUR.—ANAGRAM.

"GYE, N. HOPNETE TI. HAS ACTURED,
AS HOUSE WORKS, FIRED HIS A FIRE.
It has other, helped you, whether,
Puzzles hard, and made all clear.

How we rely o'er thy pages,
Solving with all sides and sight,
Through the many coming ages,
Then she's shine,—a guiding light.

When all editors shall name thee
Sole authority of the time,
For the art so dear I'll claim the Millennium at last has come.
Buffalo, N.Y. MARNION.

7TH HOUR.—CHARADE.

(A Sonnet—To the Carpenter.)

A power so fleet now sweeps upon the tide,
When winds are low, and boisterous has a care,
Whether or not the reckless makers erase,
As oft they do, abandoning their pelts,
Which aside pinched now, thought scarcely tried,
Will never do, go matter how or where
Disaster falls, he spoil their prospects fair,
But ever in good properties abide—
In he, who made a hole in the place,
A fool, holding timbers of a roof,
Lead by an overnight his Super round,
Will never show his passion in his face,
Or utter cable, descriptive sharp reproof,
But bear, through painful, already his wounds.
Dubois, Ill. ASPIRO.

8TH HOUR.—SQUARE.

1. The beach. 2. A number. 3. To wave away. 4. Town, Tarragona, Spain. 5. To back. 6. Home. Fraser, Cal. SIR A.

9TH HOUR.—CHARADE.

"Ye Andes, lise always."
When thro' the world dirt rang out Freedom's lay.
To free the slave and level Southern pride,
Those more dear not high wisdom ever all
That bade the soldier own his cause with pride.

"Shoulder shall complete in time to wrong,
Only be faithful, striving for the right,
The darkness may be deep, the struggle long,
But Truth will buckle you in the end, her fight."
That voice was heeded, and on every hand
Rose sturdy champions to unfurl the cross
To battle joyous marched that countless band
To vindicate their country and her laws.
New York City. CHARLY.

10TH HOUR.—SQUARE.

1. Cedar river. 2. An ore of uranium. 3. Edible sea-weeds. 4. A soft composition, used as a tempting remedy. 5. Having the form of a cup. 6. A herald. 7. Pertaining to the day last past.

Little Rock, Ark. ELBERT.

11TH HOUR.—TRANSPOSITION.

See poor sad faded couplets,
Within his scientem stand,
A wringer at his fort,
A paper in his hand,
A column see him sans,
With very sager fans,
How pain he looks, and wan,—
He finds the looked for place.
And this is what it reads:

"Your "sons" destined with tinnin,"
Disappointment which lance
To keep them from the ranks.
Dubois, Ill. ASPIRO.

"Do all probably have
Where the East lasting lie,
Where only eagles lale,
And dusky maidens sigh.
"Tis better that we conspired,
With power is invested,
To see that lard's enclosed,
And that It's not molested.
He also rents the mens,
Collects the money due,
And his official hone,
Should now be seen by you.

Republicans and Democrats
Now hold their lone shanties,
And have their politician's gaze,
Through their one many dentes.
And just such little strife
Pleased your sage eye
Before we forms had life
And still have caught of we.
It then we Whigs and Nuts
And Democrats and anti-nuts,
And fought on such pretexts
Then seem to so silent.

Pretty Paris, and Helen of Greece,
Had a wonderful struggle,
Of remains a delicate piece,
And we all know the trouble it made.
Of the great Trojan War rose the scene,
With warriors the boldest of bold,
Menelaus have gained much applause
By his valor, and sense of gold
And at last the memorable siege
Which brought the long strife to a close
A spell on two nations is cast,
And sweet then humanities woes.
Newark N.J. BARSTARD.

12TH HOUR.—HALF SQUARE.

1. A small town of Honduras, on the north coast. 2. Influence. 3. The inner part of the mold in which spoons are cast. (Pl.) 4. Failed. 5. A poet village of Mendicino co., Cal. 6. A species of red or yellowish-red dyeing material. 7. A town of Upper Austria. 8. A pretty town of Arabia. 9. Half an ox. 10. A letter.

Milwaukee, Wis. PETER.

☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.

Answers to Seed-Work No. 35.

1.—"Amendment in youth is blishly commendable."

2.—
CARAT FELT DALES SEED
SETON

3.—Hippopotamus. 4.—Hanging Gardens of Babylon.

5.—
ARE ROPE ABANDON APPROACH
ERE
N

6.—
TAUT
PLUSIA
BRON
TIN
N

7.—Aware.

8.—
N
FEW FATED NATURAL BOTRYNEYI
RASTAMANDEL
NORTHLESSERIS
TERRIFICKEYS
DINOPALIE
LEPIDAS
TALMA
N

Puzzles in "Hard-Work" No. 35 were solved by Aspiro, Aurora, Blanch, Barnard, Camillo, Hoss Tabor, Emerald, Grace, Hazel Kirke, Jack, Lilac, Lily, P. V., Lee Arby, Sullins, Violet and Zacchoeus.

HARD LIST.—Aspiro, seven answers.

Answers to Hard-Work No. 35.

1.— CANADA
SAPOUR
FEWTER
SERVES LAIRET
BAKERS

2.—Wiesmann. 3.—Serve, secret, verse.

4.—DRABBLED 5.—II
RIVALED HEP
AVENUE FINN
BANIM HEBETOU
BLEM DELEGATES
LEE POTANCE
EU NOTCH
D OKE
S

6.—Elk, American Rock, Ione. 7.—Adjusted.

8.—
CAPT TAR
CIRCUIT TITHIN
VAVASORDIOUS
TESTARDIOUZ
TOEAGERUE
TAGEDIUS
PAREKOWNAR
PARTIALITY
RAMBLERS RAMA
BROWN BRASSIA
BUN BUM
TA
A

Puzzles in "Hard-Work" No. 35 were solved by Aspiro, Daisy, Dentie, Hoss, Tabor, Barnard, Emerald, Edna, Grace, Hazel Kirke, I. Scream, Jack, Lilac, Lily, Lee Arby, P. V., Sullins, Violet, Pop Corn, Hiram Bailey, Rosebud, Lee Shore, Rosemary, Josephine, Sirron, Sunflower, Lily, Vivian, Water Lily, Zenobia, and Zacchoeus.

HARD LIST.—Aspiro, seven answers.

C. N. F.

A PUZZLE FOR PUZZLERS.

(The following substantial puzzle is submitted for the consideration of our puzzling friends.—Ed.)

We have the answer at hand but will not publish it for a couple of weeks in order to give the Knights of Puzzle time to display their skill. Mr. Warren:

"You students all who seek for knowledge,
Have passed through school and pass to college.
Pray solve this problem, though rather blind,
Work out this sum, the answer find.
There is a circle, round and true,
The distance round I work give you.
We start two men on a given place,
They walk each day till line to face.
When minutes more, one takes the round,
The other takes the line, we found.
The distance round is equal to know;
The distance round to figure show."

THE LANCE THAT PIERCED OUR SAVIOUR'S HEART.

It was the right side of Jesus that was pierced, as was predicted by Zechiel (xiii. 7) Et videbunt quem confixerunt, Vidi aquam egredientem de templo, dicentem, Alleluia. St. Francis, on receiving the five stigmata, had his right side, his hands, and his feet pierced. The lance seems to have transpierced the body. In entering it passed through the heart, and the point came out in the left side under the breast. Isaac, St. Bernard and St. Bonaventure are of this opinion. Innocent II. has said: "The chalice is placed at the right side to receive the blood which is to be served to have from the right side of Christ." The Bibliquas version of the gospel of St. John reads: "His right side." The right side of Jesus was opened on the side towards the West, naturally presented itself to the view of the soldiers coming to Calvary from the East portion.

Dede relates that in his time the lance, set in a cross of wood, was conserved in the porch of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and that the wood, broken in two parts, was conserved in the city. In 1050 it was found again in Antioch, in St. Peter's Church, where it was brought to Jerusalem, and afterwards to Constantinople, when Jerusalem was taken by Godfrey de Bouillon. Baldwin gave the point of it and the sponge to St. Louis. The rest of the lance was preserved at Constantinople in the Church of St. John. Mohammed II., after taking taken the city in 1453 with the treasures of the emperor and the relics of the saints, kept it in security; as of Injacet, his son and successor, sent it in 1492, by an ambassador, to Innocent VIII, who placed it in the palace of the Vatican.

—Sister M. Agatha Rankin of the Order of Mercy, died in St. Paul's Orphan Asylum, Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 29th ult., aged 56 years, 35 of which had been spent in religion. Her sister, a daughter of Mr. John Rankin of the county Kildare, Ireland.

—Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia officiated at a solemn requiem mass in honor of the late Convent of the Good Shepherd, St. Louis, on Oct. 31. Among the clergy present were Rev. Mary of St. Eugenie Michelson of Stockholm, Sweden and retired of the Sacred Heart.

MONITOR MENTION.

E. Dennis, N. D., in business and respects, our fourth and fifteenth Monitor operations and the remains a special.

—Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724 Market street.

—Crescent Dental Association, 932 Market street—Artificial teeth, per set, $10; Filling from $1 up; Rubber, and with gas, of which we make a specialty, $1.

—Dr. Sapolio Cure Oil is sure to take the first place among healing remedies.

—Ladies Fall or Mark, T. Jackson, Jefferson, Jefferson Pack street, formerly of Virginia City, where is kept on hand a supply in the latest styles.

—New Pawnbroker, 404 Howard street. Money loaned for any length of time on Clothing, Furniture, Jewelry, Bedding and all Household effects. Business private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and Diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. 1 Kearny and Geary streets.

—If a safer tonic—warranted as good as can be made, Tonic Bitters, $1. Dr. Simms, Dentist, 825 Market street.

—The Present House, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under the proprietorship of Mr. J. W. Brooks, continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. Its rate for board and room ranges from $1 to $1.50 day, or less by the week. The accommodations are first-class, and country visitors will find the Present choice, convenient and economical.

—The National Surgical Institute, 319 Bush street, is the Western Division of the Dr. Sims Institute of Indianapolis and Philadelphia, which is so celebrated for the cure of all deformities and humanities, diseases of the spine, hips, knee, and all joints crooked limbs, club feet, spine pain, piles and fistula. Call and see patients, and our facilities for curing them. Information given and circulars sent if desired.

—Mr. John Lambla, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of Sims & Co., in the Imperial Employment Office, 106 Geary street. This firm was established in 1856 and the creditable business they have built up will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lambla who has at his command the best facilities for supplying families in the city or country with the most competent and reliable household, agricultural, mechanical or laboring help of any nationality they desire. Call and see. Just drop a card or call at the Employment Office, 106 Geary street, S. F., describing the kind of help required and your wants will be faithfully attended to satisfactorily.

The Wonder Flower and Feather Store.

No. 106 Market street, is now in the 7th year of existence, and is daily gaining custom and popularity. Here may be had at very cheap rates all kinds of artificial flowers and feathers for ladies' head wear. The ladies of San Francisco, and of the Pacific Coast, will find it to their advantage to call at such low prices. The proprietors deserve success, and will do much low prices. The proprietors deserve success, and will do much to deserve it by their attention to the wants of their customers.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.

The Order C. K. of A. is already one of the important and most thinkered societies all over the United States. It is a Catholic Order, and is under the ban of the Pope. It is 17 years of age, and has a membership of 17 thousand. Archbishop of Baltimore, and Primate of America, has a special and sentimental interest in the Catholics who united to borrow members, can supply you with the Revolving Rotary of the San Francisco Branch, Dr. J. F. Schmidt, 1017 Market st. San Francisco.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, reduces all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-Five cents a bottle.

Leiter's Photograph Gallery.

10 Third street. Large Life-size Photographs $10; Photographs, $3 to one specimen; and upwards in proportion. Call and see.

All kinds of Photographs, Ambrotypes and Tintypes taken at Leiter's Photograph Gallery, 10 Third street, opposite Lick House. Photographs in Crayon and Indian Ink, from life or from good photographs, or ambrotypes, or tintypes, or any other kind of pictures, at Leiter's Photograph Gallery, 10 Third street, opposite Lick House.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,

Respectfully announce that they have opened

THE LARGE STORE,

873 Market Street,

—WITH A LINE OF—

GENT'S AND BOY'S

CLOTHING,

Furnishing Goods,

HATS, CAPS, ETC.

Having been in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.

We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible

CARROLL & TILTON,

873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,

And 5th with DUNDAS & CO.

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON

968 and 970 Folsom St.,

New Hamburg, ... San Francisco

—WHOLESALE—

WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS

Established 1870.

We are willing Cheap for Cash and guarantee our goods.

☞ The following low prices will continue you 'till further notice:

PER GALLON.

Table Wines	50c, 60c, 75c, and $1.
Angelica Wine	$1, $1.25 and $1.50.
Sherry, Vintage	17 yr. $1, 15 $1.25.
Fine Old Port or Sherry	$1.25, $1.50 and $2.
Fine Old Port or Sherry	20 yr. old, $2.50 and $3.
Bourbon Whiskey	$1.50, $1.75 and $2.
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc.	$2 per gal. and upwards

Other Wines and Liquors at low cost rates.

MURPHY, CRANT & CO.,

IMPORTERS OF DRY GOODS,

And Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast

OF THE ....

Veuve Xavier Jouvin Kid Gloves

Bush and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, ad13

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.

JOHN WIELAND . . . PROPRIETOR

SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,

San Francisco.

Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,013½ barrels. ma'83

JOHN S. MILLAR. JOHN T. SIMPSON

SIMPSON & MILLAR,

Successors to C. V. Gillingham,

Searchers of Records and Conveyancers

Titles examined and Abstracts furnished to land in any County in the State.

ALAMEDA COUNTY A SPECIALTY!

326 CALIFORNIA STREET, 326

CUT THIS OUT AND KEEP IT FOR REFERENCE.

WEARING THE PATENT

Duplex Galvanic Belt.

THE UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF THIS MEDICAL belt is true even of Acute Rheumatism and Female Complaints, Lame Back, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Loss of Vitality, Weakness and Loss of Energy, Nervous Debility, Insomnia, Impotence, Premature Decay, Want of Nerve Force and Nerve Power, Lost Manhood, Sciatica, Lumbago, Pain in the Back, Seminal Emissions, Nocturnal Losses, Leucorrhœa, Uterine Weakness, Sexual Exhaustion, Impotency, Gleet, Stricture, Piles, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick Headache, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Epilepsy or Fits, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Nervous Debility, Insomnia, Impotence, Premature Decay, Want of Nerve Force and Nerve Power, Lost Manhood, Nervous Irritability, Hypochondria, Hysteria, Mental Depression, Loss of Memory, Premature Old Age, Impotency, Gleet, Stricture, Seminal Emissions, Nocturnal Losses, Leucorrhœa, Uterine Weakness, Sexual Exhaustion, Impotency, Gleet, Stricture, Piles, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick Headache, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration, Epilepsy or Fits, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Nervous Debility, Insomnia, Impotence, Premature Decay, Want of Nerve Force and Nerve Power, Lost Manhood, Sciatica, Lumbago, Pain in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Loss of Vitality, Weakness and Loss of Energy, Nervous Debility, Insomnia, Impotence, Premature Decay, Want of Nerve Force and Nerve Power, Lost Manhood, Sciatica, Lumbago, Pain in the Back, Seminal Emissions, Nocturnal Losses, Leucorrhœa, Uterine Weakness, Sexual Exhaustion, Impotency, Gleet, Stricture, Piles, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick Headache, Female Complaints, Nervous Prostration Junipero Serra's Anniversary.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE 28TH OF AUGUST.

Father Casanova's Experiments in the Old Mission Church in Carmelo Valley.

FULL DETAILS OF THE COMING CELEBRATION.

A correspondent of the Bulletin, who spent last week in Monterey, thus describes the work Father Casanova has undertaken in order to restore the Old Mission Church at Carmelo:

FATHER SERRA'S ANNIVERSARY.

On the 28th of August next will occur in Monterey commemorative exercises on the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Padre Junipero Serra, the founder of the Indian Missions. The Mission of San Carlos, first established at Monterey on the 3d of June, 1770, and removed to Carmelo in December of the same year, was the second Mission founded in upper California. The ashes of Padre Serra rest within the old San Carlos church walls.

The restoration of the church is considerably advanced, although the contributions are very much less than it has been hoped they would be. The details of the celebration have also been in some degree arranged. Saul Rer, Angelo D. Casanova yesterday "The work is progressing. We have a force of twenty men at work. The original estimate that $15,000 would be required to fully restore the church is found to be too low. Some from San Francisco, well versed in building and decoration, told me that to entice and refresh the edifice in every detail might cost $30,000. I think the expenses will be about $20,000 for what will be done. Already $11,000 have been expended and more will not, if you visit the mission, it will be been accomplished. From the subscription fund we hoped more would be realized than has been. The heads show the receipt of less than one thousand dollars. There has been a great deal to do and much still remains. The entire south wall from the corner of the chapel to the corner of the back gable is new. Back of the gable nearly all is new. On the other side of the church we had to raise twelve feet of the wall of the sacristy. Then the curatage wall for a distance of 100 feet had to be raised from eight to twelve feet. The new corners are solid. They are twelve by twelve feet. Much has been done in the interior, and on the roof. I have been at work quietly for three years getting ready. We have had a force of men occupied since last February constantly. It was difficult to get building material. For the first setting of wall of 150 feet we had to send to Monterey for the stone and lime. We had to haul the stone a distance of 100 feet and to haul the lime a distance of 20 miles away.

REPORTS AS A MEMORIAL.

"When the work shall be completed the church is too far away to hold services in it regularly. It is a labor of love to restore it. There is no question of pew rents. When the mission is restored it will be closed except on special occasions and I shall keep the care of it. It will be a memorial to the life and work of good Padre Serra. The indications are that the attendance will be worthy of the occasion. There will be excursions by land and by sea. We expect that there will be people from all over the country. It is said that about 10,000 will come here from San Francisco alone. The remainder of the State will be largely represented. Catholics and Protestants will be there. How to feed the crowd has become a question. The Mission is so far away from the town that refreshments must be served on the grounds. I am now looking for proposals from restaurant and refreshment men for gentlemen on the day of the celebration.

DETAILS OF THE CELEBRATION.

"The celebration will consist of a religious and civic feast. The general character of the demonstration will be much like the Centennial celebration at the Mission. The religious feast will occur within the church. Archbishop Riordan will be the orator. At the civic feast Senator Del Valle of Los Angeles will be the orator. He will speak on the picnic ground. Archbishop Alemany will speak to the people in Spanish. There will be a large attendance of the clergy. Archbishops Alemany and Riordan, Bishop Mora, Father Prendergast and from forty to fifty priests will be here from both dioceses. The officers of the State of California and many others largely identified with the interests of the State are expected. The occasion ought to tell to inspire interests among all classes. The altar will be consecrated several days before the celebration of the church. Several hours are consumed in consecrating an altar which is a sufficient reason for the plan proposed. The procession will move to and around the church. Blessing of the day of commemoration. The services will be those customarily observed in blessing a church building. The altar will be of marble and will rest upon. In the ceremonies relics of saints and especially all religious people should contribute. They will thereby help to perpetuate a historical landmark."

HOW THE MISSION LOOKS.

The work of restoring the old Mission attracts a continually-increasing number of spectators to the site. From the crest of a rolling hill the winding road leading from the Carmel bay and Carmel valley. After riding some distance farther the Mission is seen, standing by itself, in a transition state. Passing through a gate, which a small Spanish girl holds open, presently extending one hand for a fee, and the preparations for restoration become apparent. The crumbling walls of adobe around one side of the enclosure and the ruined cells of ancient adobe dwellings within the outer walls, have fallen in rain and wind until any one more than half entered to original dost, and flowering weeds sprout from the crevices. The Mission is surrounded by a stockade and on the new roof are many trim packages of modern redwood shingles. Within the church the light which comes through the old windows is divided by other windows. A carpenter's bench stands near where ancient altar was, and redwood shavings litter where the floor of the Church. At one side of the altar is a table, on which are two books, one for subscriptions and one for the names of visitors. The fly-leaf of the register contains the following statement: "This Holy Church was dedicated to God in the name of Leo XIII., being Sovereign Pontiff, Joseph S. Alemany, D. D., Metropolitan of the Province of San Francisco, Right Reverend Francis Mora, Bishop of this Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States of North America, and Irenaeus Stoneman, Governor of the State of California. This first book for the names of the Mission Church of San Carlos in Carmelo valley was presented by Rev. Angelo D. Casanova, Director of Monterey, 1884. The first two names entered are those of Francis Mora, Bishop of Los Angeles and Rev. Angelo Casanova.

The following statement is included in a frame within the altar space

THE DEAD PADRES

The following R. I. C. (requiescant-in-pace) are buried in the sanctuary of this Church of San Carlos in Carmelo valley:

First—The Rev. P. Juan Crespi, born in Spain, died here on the 1st of January, 1782, of sixty-nine years of age. Buried near the main altar on the Gospel side.

Second—The Very Rev. Fr. Junipero Serra, D. D., President of all the Missions, born in Mallorca, Spain, died here on the 28th of August, 1784, at the age of seventy-one years, and buried in the sanctuary frontispiece of the altar of our Lady of Seven Dolors on the Gospel side.

Third—The Rev. Fr. Julian Lopez, born in Spain, died here on the 24th of July, 1792, of thirty-five years of age, and is buried in the sanctuary, on the Gospel side in the tomb near the wall on the left.

Fourth—The Very Rev. Fr. Fermin Francisco Lasuen Vicar Vicar, second President of all the Missions, born in Spain, and died here on the 26th of June, 1803. He is buried in the sanctuary on the Gospel side in a stone tomb near the main altar.

Regulation in Peace

Taken from the records of the Church. Angelo D. Casanova, V. P., Director Monterey.

The repairs upon the old church are not far enough advanced for any ornamentation to begin on the interior. The cross surmounting the front has been regilded. The front of the church has been painted. Like the old inscriptions within the church, only a fragment of one remains. These words remain legible:

"O Corazon de Jesus Sempre ache Vosjaelcoss."

Below this legibly remain the words "Angelus" and "Sanctus." The remainder is lost. The design is to restore the church as nearly as possible to its ancient shape. Over the flat gables the swallows nest in the crevices, and under the eaves the doves raise down fragments of century old mortar from the walls, little disturbed even by the laborers.

The Irish National League Convention in Boston.

The decorations at Faneuil Hall, on the occasion of the Convention of the Land League of the Irish National League, will be on an elaborate scale. The main or platform decoration is a green and white arch. This piece is of original and peculiar design. Beneath and in the centre of the main arch will be a sunburst seven feet in diameter, drawn back in the beams some five feet. The sunburst will be surmounted by an Irish harp in gold. The centre of the main arch will have a modified gilt drop, and the top of the same will be crowned with an elegant ornamental centre surmounted by the Goddess of Justice with drawn sword in the right hand, and in the extreme left the emblematic scales. This figure is flanked upon either side with glories of Eagles. Surmounting the columns that support the main arch are shields, upon each of which is the harp in gold relief; over the capitals of these are bannerettes four feet in length, the staffs to which are tipped with lances of silver.

Upon the face of the arch will be the motto "Right will triumph over wrong," beneath will be festoons of green material decorated with gilt stars upon the left and gilt shamrock upon the right.

The bases of all the columns will be decorated with maltese crosses in relief, and the columns with medallions and scroll work in gold. Upon either side of the main arch will be smaller gothic arches, the space of each being backed with a gilt glass blue, decorated with gilt stars, overtopping which will be bannerettes flanked by glories of flags. Surmounting the columns to the gothic arches will be crocketed spires two feet in diameter. Those near the main arch upon either side will be in light blue ground edged with gold, and in these circles will be American shields in gold relief. The circles surmounting the outside columns will be of green ground-work edged with gold, with the harp of Erin in gold relief. The three arches will be draped with lace work. In the spaces between the main and gothic arches upon either side will be panels of light blue with diagonal stripes of white, bearing the name of Swift, Molyneaux, Grattan, Emmet, Flood, O'Connell, Dwyer and Parnell.

The right gothic arch will bear the date 1782, and the left 1884. Extending from the first gothic arches upon either side obliquely to the platform will be festoons of red, white, blue and green. The width of the arches upon the platform will be twenty-six feet and height nineteen feet. Upon either side and midway of the hall will be a set of three arches. The main arches will be fifteen feet in width. The circles above are five feet in width. The circles of the centre arches will be circular pieces in green and gold with gold medallion in relief in the centre, and the circles will be flanked by oblique shields and surmounted by gothic arches. The bannerettes that support the arches will be surmounted by circular pieces in silver ground edged with gold, and the centres will bear maltese crosses in blue striped with gold, surmounted with arrow heads of silver, overtopped with bannerettes four feet in length. The smaller arches will be alternately surmounted by an American shield upon one side and upon the other a harp of Erin upon the face in gold relief. These shields will be flanked by glories of flags and surmounted by bannerettes.

The festooning of the centre arches will be red, white, blue and green bunting, and the smaller arches will be backed with green. The main arch upon one side will be inscribed, "The land of every man belongs to the people of that country," and the one upon the opposite side of the hall will bear the inscription, "England's Difficulty, Ireland's Opportunity." Over the main entrance will be erected a large arch, fifteen feet in height. The crown of the arch will be a new-land medal, surrounded by glories of flags and a bannerett.

The supporting columns will be surmounted with shields placed obliquely, backed with short sticks of blue and gold, surmounted with a glory of flags. Beneath the centre of the arch will be an ornamented drop, and festooned from that will be streamers red, white, blue and green.

The arch will bear the inscription, "America for Americans, England for Englishmen, Ireland for Irishmen. To secure the whole and fasten the ball in the form of a canopy will require 5,000 feet of bunting.

Numerous ornaments of different designs will be placed about the hall.

Decoration contract taken by Mr. Raymond Kennedy, of Hudson.—Pilot.

"PIETY'S OFFERING.

PIETY'S OFFERING. A collection of Hymns, Addresses and Poems composed by the Sisters of Mercy and in their schools. San Francisco: McCormick Bros., Printers, 1884.

The neat little poetical pamphlet of which the above is the title has just been issued. It is dedicated to the Benefactors of Our Lady of Mercy's Home for Aged and Infirm, and the proceeds of the sale will be donated to that charitable object. All the characters have a religious note and each contains some moral or lesson to impress the heart. "The Holiness of Children," for which they were written, by the pupils of Mercy, and from the copies of which book can be had in any quantity desired.

Rescued from the Grave.

Great interest prevailed here with regard to the sick and destitute, who when through apparently skillful attendance, and every possible means, failed to arrest consumption, and from which there is little or no hope, the sufferer is induced to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and after a few months of its use, to be in a state of apparently good health and strength. Such cures are not rare, but are the results of the use of this medicine. Sold by all druggists.

THE BELLS OF LIMERICK.

BY J. T. MCCARTHY.

The bells, they are the beautiful Irish station by Bonn Church, Limerick on the death of the Archbishop of Limerick, Dr. Ryan, who died on the first Easter last year.—Ed. Monitor.

A back bound for Erin lay waiting, he entered Fair winds in the full purple sails led him soon to the Shannon's broad channel.

Twas an evening that Florence might envy, so it was and the harbor lay calm.

As it lay on Lone Scattery's island, or lit the Lighthouse that guides the stranger.

The wide-spreading old elect river roll'd his waters as smooth and as still

As of Connach, with all her bright mantle, and some time from the far fairy hill

To fling her enchantment around on the mountain, the air, and the lily.

And to soothe the weary heart of the oldman who looked from the dark vessel side.

Borne on the current, his vessel glides smoothly but awfully away,

By Carrickshock, and by many a green shipley beside and by Limerick

Twist Curlew's blue hills and green woods, and the soft sunny shores of Clare

And now the fair City of Limerick spreads out on the broad back before.

Still nearer and nearer approaching, the mariner hears a low far the tower,

The old man even taught but St. Mary's square tower, with its battlements low.

His Patron, as yet all is silent, but now with a sudden surprise,

A rich peal of melody rings from that tower through the quiet morning air.

One note is enough for the mariner, his heart Is indeed overcome, he sinks down

He has found home—the home of his labors—his musical, magical bells!

Each note of the bells, the bright past returneth, around him the sweet Avon shines.

His children—his dollies Francis—his popular-eled trellis of vines!

Leaning forward, he listens—he pauses—he hears in that wonderful strain

The long-dear voice that is dumb, "Oh! leave us not, father, again!"

Oh! the magic—the magic—the magic

Breath from his white lips hath fled—

Father he is no more! he is children—the old Campanaria dead.

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM—IRELAND.

AN ORANGE RUFFIAN.

Violent Sectarian at Londonderry, Ireland.

Londonderry, Ireland, is greatly excited over the most scandalous affair which has yet cropped out in the Orangeism of Ulster. A party of prayers on a recent Sunday afternoon in one of the churches, and while the priest was celebrating the Magnificat, a man, still with his hat on, entered the church and climbed up to the top of his stacey view "Look out you papists, look out!" The church of Ireland was filled the service and caused the startled worshippers to turn to the door. The intruder ran with all his might down the centre aisle, hurling and cursing as he went. He reached the sanctuary rail before any of the frightened people could recover themselves. With a bound he jumped over the rail and ran up the steps to the altar. The altar rails, the altar cloth, the cross, the candlesticks and vases were thrown to the floor, the flower pieces standing outside the tabernacle.

The whole building was in the utmost confusion, the people and priest. Disrobing himself of his clerical habiliments, he dashed out the door and then snatched up the altar cloth and ran with it to the door, where he was met by the scene in the church was of terrible excitement, and during the panic screams were uttered. Finally the officiating priest and a number of the congregation recovered their self-possession and rushed upon the ventilating criminal. He was hustled out of the church and would have torn limb from limb but for the interference of the constabulary. The man was in a terrible state and he was not conscious until some policemen had taken him in hand. He had taken a strong hold with his teeth upon the altar cloth and it had to be torn from his mouth. He was overtaken and he was taken to the police station. The man is a well-known character in the city, and he has probably demented during the excitement, or pretends to have.

He was removed to an asylum.

O'Brien's Prosecutor Arrested.

DUBLIN, July 14.—Mr. Cornwall, ex-Dublin City Commissioner of Police, who prosecuted Mr. O'Brien, was arrested yesterday on a charge of forgery. The charge is based on the fact that he forged a letter purporting to be addressed to Mr. Dwyer Gray, country to run Sexton. Evidence was given that the letter was written by Cornwall himself. The prisoner was remanded for a week.

Quiet in Ireland.

Irish matters continue to be without incident. Mr. Parnell's proposal of Ireland continue to show generally a peaceful spirit. The Land League is now in a position to work in harmony with the political classes of Ireland. Together the leaders are hopeful of a satisfactory settlement of the land question, to be given effect to the Ulster and proposed to be given effect to the Ulster and proposed to be given effect to the Ulster and proposed

Poetry.

FROM THE MONTHLY.

AT THE ROCK OF CASHEL.

BY JAMES K. BAGEY.

The Rock of Cashel, situated in the south of Ireland, was built by Cormac, King of Munster, towards the close of the ninth century, and was long the seat of the ancient Irish royalty. Among its remains, the Cormac chapel and a fine round tower, the latter the best back and tall in a state of excellent preservation, a feeling of religious awe and dread steals insensibly on the mind of the visitor as he wanders through its lonely and desolate aisles and lofty corridors, which are tenanted only by the bat and the owl, and have seen no change in the past or the future.

Pale relic of days departed
The sun of my morning is set,
But thou hast survived time and time
To rain in over their pyre!
Thy walls in all wilderness and hoary,
And desolate drooping o'er the sod,
Where the children sleep that glitter'd thy glory,
Now rest in the temple of God.

The monarchs that sat in thy palace,
The pentitent knelt at thy shrine,
The priest that uplifted the chalice
Rich filled with the mystical wine,
Thy chieftains so heedless of danger,
Thy chancons that rallied to wave,
Are gone, and the dust of the stranger
Is mingled with them in the grave.

No more to the blessed bell swinging,
High set in thy tapering tower,
Come the sweet toned eclipse ringing
The passing of mortal hour!
And gaulins the footsteps that falter,
Thy weary, the wayward, the lone,
No more in the gloom of thy altar
Flashes the holy flame.

Through the shadow, the burden the sullen,
Through the set, the deep and the Shrouded in gloom, and
But the tempest awaking and sleeping,
Shrieks on the ghostly way,
Like the spirit of some sleeper
For the long ages of a bygone day.

Yet holier, Cashel, and fairer
Thy ruin dismantled and drear
For the worship of Christ, than the glitter
Of splendour of a later year,
And soon in the morning thou wearest
More touching thy beauty sojourn,
As the valley looks brightest and fairest
In the sunset and shade.

A. M. E. G.

THE ISLAND OF SAINTS AND SCHOLARS.

The Irish Land, the Irish Land, our own dear mother Isle,
Her varied sward, her emerald green, her mingled tear and smile,
Have founded a home for countless songs on many a tuneful lyre,
While the story of her wrongs has wakened a fervour fire,
Scares from her love, scarce free to love, her poets through the night,
Each with his little torchlight steers her gloomy path to light!
The bard of that song "Sweet Innisfail" had other chords, I ween,
And his lyre was strung to breathe the veil of "Dark Rosaleen."

The Irish Muse, the Irish Muse—look back from age to age,
And you will find its record traced on History's every page;
In Inisfail's half of state, in peaceful walks of fame,
With you or elsewhere—everywhere you'll meet an Irish name,
And yet, strange fate! their native land so richly blessed by Heaven,
Was forced to banish from her strand the sons that God had given,
And those, who have to mass one say the country of their birth,
Are pilgrims in the world today, the exiles of the earth!

The Irish Church, the Irish Church, since blessed Patrick came,
And bade the Druid lore give place to Faith's undying flame,
The faithful Irish Church has stood, the fiercest storms rose to try her,
As true to God, as true to Rome, as Patrick would desire!
From the remotest island of the West, as from a source of light,
Went forth the spiritual messengers that chased the old world's night;
Nay, when the Papal silence decreed, that they shou'd be priests no more,
Her exiles still showed her Faith's seed—as Apostles—their!

The Irish Saints, the Irish Saints, what should the wave their,
What minister, what charity, what ecstasies and prayers?
St. Patrick and St. Bridget, St. Brendan, Columbkille,
St. Ita, Dymphna, Malachy—their names are honored still!
Not in their native Isle alone, no European state,
But even in Irish exactitude, a debt recording great.
Kenny, Lanes and Tarantine, Beaumont, Meehlin, Hyne,
In Irish Apostolic men send up a filial cry.

The Irish Priest, the Irish Priest, Oh, loved and honored name!
At home, or in the West, or East, still faithful, still the same!
Here, in the fever-tainted room, or fainting, awful scene,
Letting God's resistable light the gloom, resting despair and crime.
Abroad, where spreading prairie rolls, or by Australian bay,
Tending his fellow exiles' souls—as exile for their sake!
Lent time should been or distance move the links that bind to Erin's shore,
Thy tenures less sacred bind! their love for the old land at home.

Above the Britain of the South, the English banners wave,
But Ireland there undoubtedly exerts supreme sway!
Her sons are on the pastoral thrones, for well Rome knows
Faith's seed is never deeper sown than by true Irish hands,
And now another patriot priest" our Fatherland sends away,
The avenger of a mighty Sou is trusted to his care.

And Erin's exiles sagely, across the waters wide,
Implore his coming speedily, their father and their guide.
And who more fitted for the task than he whose studious
So loved to tread the dusky past, a searcher after truth,
That he might clear our native land, our race, our ancient, our ancestors,
From calumny's insinting brand, or ignorance's fetters,
Old Ireland's name is safe with him, her fame shall have no law
In those wild regions far away beneath the Southern Cross,
May countless blessings follow him and mark his future way!
Such is our prayer who feebly thus would many deile repay!

S. M. S.

* The Most Rev. Dr. Horne, Archbishop of Sydney, on Friday morning, 7th instant, received the consecration, at Holy Cross Cathedral, Chisholm, from Dr. Vaughan.

The Chaplain of Libby Prison Dead

Rev. A. L. McMullan, S. J., of the faculty of St. Mary's College, Emmitsburgh, Md., died in St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore, on the 19th inst. Father McMullan was one of the most prominent men of the Church in America. He was born in Maryland and educated at Georgetown College. He was ordained as a priest in the Society of Jesus by Archbishop Eccleston in 1841. For many years he had a chair in the Catholic University at Worcester, Mass. In 1861, his health failing, he went South, being arrested while crossing a rebel spy. He was released after being detained some time, and finally he went to Richmond, there becoming the chaplain of the famous Libby prison, where his kindness and benevolence greatly attached him to the prisoners and gave him a national reputation. May he rest in peace.

A Cure for Heart Disease.

Some years since one was given out by Dr. Kenyon Stone, of London, who was afterwards killed by an omnibus while in the act of getting into one. He said: "Let a man, if he be a sufferer, go to the Hanwell Asylum, and there he will see a man who is a sufferer from disease of the heart, and who, if he be a man, will be cured by the sight. Let him see the maniac foaming at the mouth, and he will return to his home and his family with a light heart and a thankful spirit, and he will be a man for the remainder of his life." Let the man who is a sufferer from disease of the heart go to the Asylum, and he will be cured.

Literary Miscellany.

The Little Chapel at Monamullin.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENE ROBINSON.

CHAPTER II.

Mrs. Clancy mal him at the door.

"I was afraid ye were lost, ye," she said, as he entered the hall.

"Not lost, my good lady, but found. I suppose you lock the door here earlier than this."

"Lock!" she exclaimed almost indignantly—lock, indeed! There's not a bowl, nor a bar ner a lock on the whole house, Arrah! who would rob Father Maurice but the cold boy!—ah! he'd be afeard. He daren't lay a hand on anything here, ye well he knows it, God be good to us."

"I suppose you've been a long time with Father Maurice, Mrs. Clancy?"

"Only seize me man—the Lord rest his soul, amin!—was lost in the night av the great storm, nigh fifteen year come the fourteenth av next month, on a Frida' night. He was a good man, an' a fine provider, an' wud have left quite a farm an' comfortable but for the bad times—God's mercy be praised, ye know, sir, I'm a poor widow."

"Harm! a few turns, its straight enough, sir."

The words had hardly escaped his lips when the wheel attached to the side of the wagon which the priest was sitting came into contact with a pile of stones, the car was tilted upwards and over, Father Maurice shot into a thorn hedge, and Murty Mulligan landed up to his neck in a ditch full and muddy as water, while the jaggy stag, was of wood, a golden cross ornamenting the front part, and raised to point the heavens in the background, while the tabernacle consisted of a rudely-cut imitation of a dove covered sinopies. A picture of the crucifixion hung over the altar and painted from the ceiling, and, as this was regarded as a masterpiece of art by the inhabitants of Monamullin from time immemorial, we will not discuss their enthusiasm here. The Stations of the Cross were represented by small colored engravings in mahogany frames, and the holy water font consisted of a large boulder of granite which had a large hole scooped out of it.

"This will never do," said Mr. Brown, pacing restfully at the several works of art. "What a splendid place for me! I shall paint as the old masters did, under direct inspiration. What a sublime sensation, when my picture shall have been completed, to witness the reverential admiration of the poor devout people here! I shall be regarded as a benefactor. "Fanny my hung a benefactor to anybody or anything" Heighho," he sighed, "what a glorious thing to be rich! Church, a prayer in stone, a portion of the money bags, Brown's Cure thousand! Hung last March into the bank in Paris, Lord! and dragged back over the waters of Time, he sat down on one of the wooden benches, overwhelmed by the rush of his own thoughts. At the length of time he remained thus absorbed, he made no count. The dead lace of the misspent past rustled drearily in his heart, and he felt as if he had a load of irreprensible sadness—a sadness so overwhelming that he sighed—and two hours had come and gone ere his reverie had ended.

Happening to raise his eyes towards the altar, he was startled by perceiving a female kneeling before it, at the railings, litha, and attired in costly and fashionable raiment. Her face was hid, by the long golf linsh of her prayers, and, with a deep, reverential inclination in front of the altar, swept past him with that graceful, undulatory motion which would seem to be the birthright of the daughters of Spain. She was tall, elegantly formed, and possessed that air of distinction which makes itself a language. Her bright chestnut hair was braided tight, yet full from an oval face, and hung in massive plats at the back of her head. Her eyes were soft brown, her complexion milk-white.

"What a vision, and in this place, too!" he said, as he left the Catholic religion. The churches are always open, inviting one to come in and pray. I wonder who she can be! Some tourist. "Pshaw! poor tourist doesn't trouble this quarter of the globe. To see, to be seen, to dress, and wangle over the bills at palatial hotels, seems tourist life nowadays. Some country lady over to do a little shopping, but there is no shop in Monamullin, and the nearest town opposite, and they apparently sell nothing there but marbles, tobacco-pipes, lotte and pipe clay. Ah! there it comes, and or coming for a plunge in the Atlantic—a rendezvous, although I go to Mass at Thomastown.

"I say you, would my dear child but I have no indicaments to offer you, so I'm obliged to—ahem! I'm sorry, I'm so flurried the arrival of the guest to whom Mrs. Clancy was paying the rule of shelter for the night.

"Harm! a few turns, its straight enough, sir."

The words had hardly escaped his lips when the wheel attached to the side of the wagon which the priest was sitting came into contact with a pile of stones, the car was tilted upwards and over, Father Maurice shot into a thorn hedge, and Murty Mulligan landed up to his back in a ditch full and muddy as water, while the jaggy stag, was of wood, a golden cross ornamenting the front part, and raised to point the heavens in the background, while the tabernacle consisted of a rudely-cut imitation of a dove covered sinopies. A picture of the crucifixion hung over the altar and painted from the ceiling, and, as this was regarded as a masterpiece of art by the inhabitants of Monamullin from time immemorial, we will not discuss their enthusiasm here. The Stations of the Cross were represented by small colored engravings in mahogany frames, and the holy water font consisted of a large boulder of granite which had a large hole scooped out of it.

"Ye shall never do," said Mr. Brown, pacing restfully at the several works of art. "What a splendid place for me! I shall paint as the old masters did, under direct inspiration. What a sublime sensation, when my picture shall have been completed, to witness the reverential admiration of the poor devout people here! I shall be regarded as a benefactor. "Fanny my hung a benefactor to anybody or anything" Heighho," he sighed, "what a glorious thing to be rich! Church, a prayer in stone, a portion of the money bags, Brown's Cure thousand! Hung last March into the bank in Paris, Lord! and dragged back over the waters of Time, he sat down on one of the wooden benches, overwhelmed by the rush of his own thoughts. At the length of time he remained thus absorbed, he made no count. The dead lace of the misspent past rustled drearily in his heart, and he felt as if he had a load of irreprensible sadness—a sadness so overwhelming that he sighed—and two hours had come and gone ere his reverie had ended.

Happening to raise his eyes towards the altar, he was startled by perceiving a female kneeling before it, at the railings, litha, and attired in costly and fashionable raiment. Her face was hid, by the long golf linsh of her prayers, and, with a deep, reverential inclination in front of the altar, swept past him with that graceful, undulatory motion which would seem to be the birthright of the daughters of Spain. She was tall, elegantly formed, and possessed that air of distinction which makes itself a language. Her bright chestnut hair was braided tight, yet full from an oval face, and hung in massive plats at the back of her head. Her eyes were soft brown, her complexion milk-white.

"What a vision, and in this place, too!" he said, as he left the Catholic religion. The churches are always open, inviting one to come in and pray. I wonder who she can be! Some tourist. "Pshaw! poor tourist doesn't trouble this quarter of the globe. To see, to be seen, to dress, and wangle over the bills at palatial hotels, seems tourist life nowadays. Some country lady over to do a little shopping, but there is no shop in Monamullin, and the nearest town opposite, and they apparently sell nothing there but marbles, tobacco-pipes, lotte and pipe clay. Ah! there it comes, and or coming for a plunge in the Atlantic—a rendezvous, although I go to Mass at Thomastown.

"I say you, would my dear child but I have no indicaments to offer you, so I'm obliged to—ahem! I'm sorry, I'm so flurried the arrival of the guest to whom Mrs. Clancy was paying the rule of shelter for the night.

"Harm! a few turns, its straight enough, sir."

The words had hardly escaped his lips when the wheel attached to the side of the wagon which the priest was sitting came into contact with a pile of stones, the car was tilted upwards and over, Father Maurice shot into a thorn hedge, and Murty Mulligan landed up to his back in a ditch full and muddy as water, while the jaggy stag, was of wood, a golden cross ornamenting the front part, and raised to point the heavens in the background, while the tabernacle consisted of a rudely-cut imitation of a dove covered sinopies. A picture of the crucifixion hung over the altar and painted from the ceiling, and, as this was regarded as a masterpiece of art by the inhabitants of Monamullin from time immemorial, we will not discuss their enthusiasm here. The Stations of the Cross were represented by small colored engravings in mahogany frames, and the holy water font consisted of a large boulder of granite which had a large hole scooped out of it.

"This will

THE MONITOR.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER DEVOTED TO PUBLICITY.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct throughout the Intercession of St. Francis Xavier, under whose protection their work is placed, the writers of Catholic journals who defend the cause of Jesus Christ, the Spouse and Queen of the Holy Ghost, and the Mother of Mercy, and promote a Catholic devotion and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is the greatest moral power, because it is the chief agent in popularizing ideas; and popularized ideas constitute opinion, and opinion governs the world. In our time, religious journalism is not only a means of instruction and edification, but it is also a weapon in the warfare of society, and a crown of social honor. What is and what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism, but to combat error and defend the truth, whatever it may be—science all, the Divine and Truth.—Cardinal Wiseman.

Editorial Notes.

— While Archbishop Ryan was a chaplain in the army, during the war, he baptized more than six hundred soldiers.

— The Belgian Catholics have achieved another victory over their infidel opponents. The result of the general Senatorial election is to place the Catholic party in the Upper Chamber in a substantial majority.

— It is stated that the appointment of twelve Catholics to the Prussian Privy Council is regarded at Rome with great satisfaction. The negotiations between the Holy See and Berlin are, it is added, making good progress.

— The Western Watchman says that the late Catholic victory in Belgium was due solely to the Catholic political organizations instituted a few years ago, through which newspapers were established and the true souls and aims of the infidel propaganda brought to the knowledge of the Catholic voters.

— All Hallows College, Ireland, sends forth an immense number of missionary priests to all parts of the world. On the feast of St. John the Baptist priests were ordained for New Zealand, Australia, England, Canada, Newfoundland, West Indies, and the United States. Among the latter were Rev. Peter McDonnell, Rev. Patrick Cahoe, Rev. Thomas Tobias, and Rev. Francis Reynolds, all for the Diocese of Grass Valley.

— The second volume of the great edition of the works of St. Thomas has just issued from the Propaganda press in Rome, and a copy of it was presented some days ago to the Holy Father. This splendid volume contains the commentary on the eight books of the Physics of Aristotle, occupying twenty chapters and 484 folio pages. The text is preceded by an introduction, an index of the matters contained in the work, and an alphabetical register.

— A great pilgrimage has just taken place to the shrine at Pomager, La Vendee. The procession from the railway station to the altar was led by the Bishop of the Diocese, Mgr. Catteau, and upwards of fifty priests, clad in their vestments, 11,000 of the faithful following, and of these 300 in the foremost ranks bore lighted candles. The streets of the town were decorated with flowers and banners, and the ceremony throughout gave great joy to the inhabitants.

— We get a sense of the horrible evils of the drinking curse when we read, in a report by the Chaplain of the Magdalen Asylum, of New York, that of eighty-nine fallen women in the Asylum at one time, but two had fallen through drink, daily missionary among this class says, that of two thousand known personally to her, none were only too sober in which liquor, acting liquor were not in large part responsible for their fall.

— The resolution taken by the Duke Frederick Paul of Mecklenburgh Schwerin to resign his position in the German army, springs from the fact that he has had all his children baptized Catholics. A decree of Frederick William IV. forbade all Protestant officers who married Catholics to give the pledge always demanded by the Church that the children should be brought up in the true faith. Having disobeyed this statute, the Duke had no alternative but to retire from military life.

— Every devout client of the Mother of God will be glad to learn that the Bishops of the whole Catholic world have petitioned the Pope, asking that the month of October be consecrated to devotion to the Queen of the Most Holy Rosary, and that the festival of the Most Holy Rosary—which falls on the first Sunday in October—be raised to the rite of the first class throughout the world, and also that the proper office recited by the Dominican Fathers be extended to the whole Church.

— We have the great pleasure of announcing on the authority of Charles Stewart Parnell that Hon. Thomas Sexton, M. P., by friends and foes acknowledged the most brilliant orator in the British Parliament, and Hon. John E. Redmond, M. P., with whose eurnestness and eloquence Irish-Americans are already acquainted, will, at the conclusion of the Boston Convention, address the representatives of Irish race on the Pacific coast, on the outlook for liberty in their native land, and will convey to them important information on the plan, hopes, and expectations of the National organization.

— The procession of Blessed Charles the Good will take place at Bruges at the beginning of August. The relics of the servant of God will be carried through the town. Catholic Belgium can now count one of her sovereigns among those whom the Church holds up for imitation and veneration. Charles Le Bon was the son of the saintly King Canute of Denmark. He was assassinated in the Church of St. Donatus, Bruges, in 1127. The continued devotion of the faithful and the miracles performed through his intercession have been the cause of his beatification, which, with singular fitness, takes place just at the Catholic electoral victory of 1884.

Non-Catholic Reverence for the Mother of God.

It is a hopeful sign for the future welfare of the world to witness the growing devotion demonstrated everywhere for the Blessed Virgin Mother of God. Even within the memory of man, the name, dignity, and glory of the Immaculate Queen of Heaven have become much more familiar to Catholics and far more widely propagated throughout the world even within the Church, than in any former era since the Son of God said to His believed disciple: "Son, behold thy Mother."

The Christian who does not love the Mother of God has no place in the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Looking at the matter from even a human standpoint, what man in the world would grant a favor to any individual who would say to him: "I honor you, but I hate your mother!" God is the searcher of every human heart, and those who think they can win His grace by ignoring or belittling the celestial dignity of His Immaculate Mother, are too unreasonable to be worthy of the name of Christian.

Every truly Catholic heart is a furnace wherein exists a perpetual fire of love for the highest and holiest mortal that ever entered Heaven! The earthly Handmaid of God, the Mother of the Most High, the model of all virtue, and the pearl of all purity—what heart so putrified by prejudice, what soul so scored by scepticism, as to refuse to honor, love, and venerate the Virgin Mother of God?

We are always surprised when we see those who are outside the pale of the Church join the Catholic clients of Mary in spreading the salutary reverence due to the Queen of Heaven, hence, when we see eminent and scholarly authors and distinguished writers like Professor John Ruskin and Nathaniel Hawthorne paying homage to the holiest of the earthly body; we always hold our heart in gratitude to God that from the lips even of those who are unacquainted in Catholic doctrine proceed the praises of that purest creature of all God's creation:

Every reader of current literature is familiar with the name of John Ruskin, the World-famous writer on art, especially painting, but the readers of his works are mostly confined to those who have a taste congenial to the great teacher himself. For this reason, Ruskin's writing are not generally read, hence the following beautiful eulogy on the ever Blessed Mother of God is like a gem hidden in a deep mine, to be discovered only by those whose skill and taste lead them in that direction:

"Of the sentiments which in all ages have distinguished the gentleman from the churl," says the distinguished non-Catholic scholar, "the first is that reverence for womanhood which, even through all the cruelties of the Middle Ages, developed itself with increasing power until the Virgin Mother of our Lord became consummated in the imagination of the Madonna, which ruled over all the highest arts and purest thoughts of that age.

"To the common Protestant mind the dignities ascribed to the Madonna have been always a violent offence; they are one of the parts of the Catholic faith which are open to reasonable dispute, and least obvious deviation to the Blessed Virgin: "I have always envied the Catholics their faith in that sweet, sacred Virgin Mother who stands between them and the Deity, interceptin somewhat of His awful splendor, but permitting His love to stream upon the worshiper more intelligibly to human comprehension through the medium of a woman's tenderness."

Hawthorne was mistaken, however, when he said that "Protestants never can give the Blessed Virgin somewhat "intercepted" our adoration for God's awful splendor. Its intercepting, if any, is that love and worship of the Mother, thereby worships, adores, and glorifies in a greater degree the God who gave us such a glorious advocate in Heaven! What have non-Catholics to be thankful for who do not cherish a love for the Blessed Virgin! They have no faith, because self-esteem is such a supernatural virtue, and every non-Catholic who constitutes the Decalogue and the Divine Word to suit his own convenience virtually foresaws his own creed-maker and assumes Almighty God in the curriculum of Christianity. This is as true as gospel, and the sooner those outside the fold discover its potential influence upon their eternal future, the better will it for themselves hereafter.

How different the holy love of the truly Catholic heart that offers to God a double allegiance—the individual adoration of a doubtful child perfumed with the love of that Immaculate Virgin of Nazareth whom God so loved above all other created works of His hands as to elevate her to the supreme and unapproachable dignity of becoming the Mother of the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity! How brightly the beautiful fire of Christian thanks to God burns in every Catholic heart for giving us such a Son and such a Mother! How ardently and devotedly we cling to that Cross on which the Son died for us in a cruel death, and at whose feet stood the Mater Dolorosa whose heart was pierced by pangs of a more greater than all the anguish the world ever knew! Ah! how little non-Catholics know of the depth, intensity, and gratitude of a Catholic devotion to the Mother of God! It is the sun-ray of our holy faith that vivifies every virtue in the human heart and makes it blossom as the rose in the garden of religion! With Catholics there can be no divided allegiance, no contact of love between that adoration due to God the Father of all, and the veneration due to His handmaid. In honoring Mary we glorify her Maker. Just as the power, the splendor, the sublimity, and the spaciousness of the sky proclaim the glory of that God who created them, so does every truly Christian heart recognize in the Immaculate Mother those supernatural virtues which place God's creators in communion with—and even superior to—the Cherubim and Seraphim which surround the throne of the King of Kings and the Lords of Lords.

Fruits of the Holy Father's Encyclical.

We are glad to learn from our European and American contemporaries that the Encyclical of the Sovereign Pontiff against the Masonic sect is everywhere bearing good fruit. Masonry is everywhere being driven from the pale of the Church. To such glad tidings the Monitor is happy to add the fact that even in China the effect of the Encyclical has resulted in converting the Christian converts who were led away by the false lights of the Masonic mirage. The following letter shows that the Encyclical of Masonry has attracted attention even in the East, and there, as elsewhere, we see from the favorable result that the discussion of this theme invariably leads to proves the truth of the maxim that "truth is mighty and will prevail," and also that the Papacy still retains the power to wield a wonderful influence for the regeneration of mankind throughout the whole Christian world:

SHANGHAI, China, June 23, 1884

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

Dear Sir: The recent Encyclical of the Pope on the subject of Masonry and its kindred and affiliating organizations has created a most favorable impression among foreigners of all nationalities at these ports. A couple of effects put forth a few days ago in the local newspapers of justification of such association were promptly met by such convincing and overwhelming rejoinders that they dropped flat to the ground without a leg to stand upon, leaving scattered in their wake, as the foundation of such institutions—out of which many have, and no doubt many more will be brought, to plunge into the living waters of God's truth in His Church, never to return to the ranks of the Demon that would envelope His light in darkness and eclipse the benignant influence of His Church on the spiritual and temporal welfare of men."

Amongst the number, I was very happy to learn from his own lips this morning, when quietly (under Bishop Reilly) over the Soochow Creek is Dr. Sloan, well known in California in former years, a friend High Priest of the (final) Lodge of Freemasons of this district." He has been some of the richest, and is no longer a Mason.

The very same of his existed position to his Order, taken in connection with the principles and practices of the craft, fully justifying and confirming the awful truth of the Pope's witness against the religious aspect, that it is "nothing more or less than to attain a certain absurd view of the Divine Nature while denying its truth. Disclose my name, and have the honor to be, dear sir, Your most obedient servant, C.

—Lord Petre, a notable English Catholic, died recently in London. He leaves a family of twelve children. The oldest son is the Hon. and Rt. Rev. Monsignor Wm. Joseph Petre. The oldest daughter is married. The third, fourth, and fifth daughters are Nuns, and the sixth is a Sister of Charity at Darlinghton. Three other daughters are married. The son attended during his long sickness by one of his daughters, who is a Sister of Charity, and this was his real happiness to him. R. I. P.

— His Holiness the Pope presented to Miss O'Callaghan the splendid Pectoral Cross, exquisitely wrought in gold and set with amethysts, which he destined for the Coadjutor-Bishop of Cork, requesting her to hand it to her brother. A handsome ring of the same amethyst, surrounded by the arms of Leo XIII., was also sent by his Holiness to the new Bishop.

What Caused the Cholera in France?

No well instructed Catholic needs to be told that Almighty God sends trials and tribulations, epidemics and contagious—just as He has sent death—as a punishment for crimes committed against His laws. The sceptical world, which ignores God, seeks to discover the cause of the spread of contagious diseases in some transgression of the laws of hygiene, but the practical Catholic who—like the untutored Indian of the Great Prairie—

"Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind," looks far beyond nature, and up to nature's God, in order to trace the source of earthly tribulation.

There are many theories afloat regarding the causes which led to the outbreak of cholera in Marseilles, France, and its continuous fatality among that afflicted people, but when Catholics reflect upon the fact that God's Bishops, priests, and virgins have been forcibly exiled from France, when we remember that God's law has been transgressed and the teachers of that law turned out of the country—"So we need not wonder that contrition covers the land and its curse is felt in every community.

This is not the first time that Marseilles has felt the chastening rod of the Most High, as we learned from a conversation we had last week with a city Rector who spent several years in that city, that many years ago Marseilles was threatened with depopulation in consequence of the visitation of a contagious disease that carried off thousands of its inhabitants. At length the civic authorities—finding that scientific efforts to stay the plague were unavailing—visited upon the Archbishop of Marseilles and requested him to institute religious services for the purpose of petitioning God to stay his scourge. He then informed them that he would accede to their request upon the condition that the city officials signed a document agreeing that they and their successors would annually join in a procession on the first Friday after the feast of Corpus Christi, in thanksgiving to God for having relieved the city from the scourge of sickness and death. This document was signed, sealed, and placed among the city archives. The Archbishop, the clergy, the civic dignitaries, and the whole Catholic people then marched in procession—carrying the Blessed Sacrament to several depositories erected specially to receive it—through the streets of Marseilles. The prayers and penitential works of pastor and people were accepted—the plague was stayed—the city disappeared. This procession was continued annually until the God-hating Gallicans who expelled the Religious from among them, and—as the cholera raged in Marseilles destroyed the document that their predecessors had signed, and forbade the year the annual solemn procession in thanksgiving to God for delivery from pestilence. But by one of those providences by which we see with the eyes of Faith the wonderful power of God, on the very day on which the prohibited procession was to take place, the cholera broke out in the city. And from that moment it has spread in fourteen other sections of France, carrying death, disaster, and dismay throughout the whole country.

Fortnightly Convention of the Irish National League in Boston promises to be a most imposing demonstration. Preparation was in the importance of the occasion. Accommodations will be provided for 25,000 people, and seats will be furnished on the platform for 1,000 invited guests. There will be a grand chorus of 1,500 voices, assisted by consolidated bands, aggregating 100 instruments. The President of the National Leagues will preside, and be introduced by the Massachusetts State Executive committee of the League, Thos. A. Ryan of Hudson, Mass. There will be some twelve addresses, occupying ten or fifteen minutes each. We presume the Pacific coast will be represented by proxies.

The Archbishop of Rouen, when he visited the Pope lately, gave him a bouquet made of little shells by the Abbe Blanchard, who has been rewarded with medals at several exhibitions. The imitation of flowers is perfect. Between the flowers some Hagallian birds were artistically concealed His Holiness appreciated the gift highly and sent a gold medal and a letter to the skillful artist.

—Mr. Michael Davitt will remain in Ireland until the Parliamentary elections have been held.

THE CROSS IN CALIFORNIA.

Jesuit Missions in America. Protestant Tributes to their Wonderful Zeal. Planting the Cross in Lower California. Difficulties Encountered and the Good Accomplished.

SECOND ARTICLE.

The American people should ever bear in grateful remembrance the grand missionary labors of those holy and heroic soldiers of the Cross—the disciples of St. Ignatius of Loyola. To the Jesuits belong the glory of having furnished the first martyrs for the Faith on American soil, and, no one can read the writings of Bancroft, Parkman, Kip, and other non-Catholic authors who have written on the missionary toils, trials, and triumphs of the Jesuits in America, without feeling that the holy missionaries who planted the Cross in regions of America still then unexplored, were endowed with supernatural courage, and every Catholic must feel that they have received the supernatural reward promised to those who proclaim God's glory before mankind.

It is not alone as missionaries of the Cross—though that is their greatest and highest ambition—that the Jesuits are entitled to the gratitude of the American people, but to their extensive and overwhelming services in the cause of civilization. The wild hunter, or the adventurous traveller, who penetrating the forests, came to men and strange tribes, often found that years before, the disciples of Loyola had preceded him in that wilderness. . . . . But how little is known of these men! The history of their Calvary and sufferings, toils and trials, has been comparatively neglected.

We might address a dozen other non-Catholic Americans prepared to prove the high place which the Jesuit missionaries have been accorded by historians, but with our brief introductory we must remove the threat of our narrative from where we left off last week and return to the consideration of the labors of the Jesuits in Lower California, where the Faith was founded and propagated without government aid, but by the potency of that Omnipotent Power which blesses the cause wherein

"The Missionary is the Soldier of the Cross, The mystery of the Cross shines forth."

The first missionaries who evangelized Lower California were three Jesuits who accompanied Admiral Otondo's expedition, which arrived June 3d, 1683, and remained in the country nearly two years. Father Kino, sojourning in the country, the Jesuits labored assiduously to propagate the Christian faith among the several Indian tribes with whom they came in contact, and so well did they succeed, that four hundred aborigines were instructed for baptism, but as the Fathers were compelled to accompany the expedition back to Mexico, they baptized no neophytes save such as were in danger of death.

The work thus abandoned when under the control of the civil power, was destined, a few years afterwards, to be resumed and carried on under the auspices of Heaven alone, and the success then achieved was marvellous as to compel even non-Catholic writers to acknowledge the presence of God in the direction of the enterprise. The English navigator, Sir George Simpson, in his "Journey Round the World," speaks of the Jesuit Missions he derived from a visit to Lower California "The Jesuits, before they were supplanted by the Franciscans, had created the Arcadia of Lower California with the monuments, agricultural, architectural, and economical, of their patience and spirit, and, not having learning to inscribe on epic-scale models and tolerable workmen, but also bequeathing to them the invaluable lesson that nothing was impossible to an energetic and persevering."

Alexander Forbes, another Protestant authority, in his history of Lower California, speaks glowingly of "the zeal and disinterested motives of the Jesuits," whom he justly styles as "virtue soldiers of the Cross," and records "the monuments but not the ruins of their labors which they maintained for so many years against the rude natives of California and its still ruder soil, and which, when they were driven from the former, and as much over the latter as was possible."

Mr. Brantl Bartlett, a traveller of the time of Lower California, in 1854 says that at the Mission of St. Ignacio, founded in 1705, though abandoned for many years, the results of Jesuit industry are still apparent.

The master hand in the great work of bringing into the fold of Christ the Indian tribes of Lower California was Father Ignatius Lopez, who died at the Mission of Loreto October 19th, 1697, accompanied by only eight persons. This important event in the history of the Church in California is thus commemorated by Father Kino in his well-known work "A suitable place near the shore having been chosen for the encampment, the provisions and the baggage were landed from the vessel. Temporary barracks were erected for the five soldiers, a hut served for a chapel, which was erected of the Christian wrecks, decorated with garlands of flowers, was erected in a prominent position, never again to be removed from the land. The Immaculate Mother of God having been chosen patroness of the Mission, her statue was brought in procession from the vessel and placed in the church. Thus, under such humble, yet not entirely unfavorable auspices, the conversion of the California aborigines began by the Jesuit Father John Maria Salvatierra, of the Society of Jesus, on the 19th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1697. On the 25th of the same month possession was formally taken of the country by the Father, in the name of his Majesty, Philip V."

Here, again, we behold the designs of Providence in exalting the dignity of the Blessed Virgin, to whom, as the Lamp of Lourette, we confidently look for her dwelling wherein the glory of God was proclaimed to the natives of California. The natives had already received instructions in the Christian doctrine from Father Kino, Copart, and other Jesuits who accompanied Otondo's expedition, and although twelve years had elapsed since that time, they recognized the sacred symbol of Christian faith, and the moment they saw the Cross worn by Father Salvatierra they rushed toward him, with signs and cries of joy, and, as well as the language of the Queen of Heaven that he carried in his hands. And when the Mission Cross had been erected, and the first beams of the setting sun reflected its shadow upon the newly baptized soil of California, the little Christian band, kneeling around the sign of Redemption, and from their enchanted hearts was wafted to Heaven a Te Deum of thanks to God that the command to go "preach to all nations" was thus so gloriously consummated by the planting of the Cross in Lower California.

And thus where Cortez failed and Ulloa met only disaster, a holy, humble Jesuit and his little band of five soldiers and three Indian converts, laid the foundation of the Christian edifice in California, and established a superstructure which still endures forever.

Reinforcements of Fathers soon after arrived, and although danger and difficulty surrounded them on every side, so zealously did this band of brave missionaries labor in the propagation of the Faith and the instruction of the Indian tribes in the arts of industry, that in a comparatively short time they succeeded in establishing sixteen missions at different points along the coast of the peninsula, at each of which the number of Christian natives increased from year to year, so that the result of a census of each mission exhibited the following statistics: The Mission of Our Lady of Loretto, founded in 1697, population, 1,000. St. Francis Xavier, founded in 1699, population, 450. Our Lady of Dolores, founded in 1699, population, 400. St. Louis de Gonzaga, population, 500. St. Rose of Malegar, founded in 1705, population, 500. St. Joseph of Comondu, founded in 1708, population, 300. Immaculate Conception, founded in 1718, population, 350. Our Lady of Guadalupe, founded in 1721, population, 550. St. Ignatius, founded in 1728, population, 850. Our Lady of Dolores of the North, population, 348. St. Mary Magdalen, population not given. St. James' villages three, population, 350. All Saints, founded about 1737, population, 300. St. Francis Borgia, population, 1,500. St. Gertrude, population, 1,000. St. Mary, population, 350. Total number of Christians in all the missions—7,628.

Such was the prosperous condition of the Indian tribes in Lower California when they armed with the royal decree of April 25, 1767, arrived in Lower California and announced to the Jesuits that the Monarch Charles III., that the Society of Jesus having been suppressed in Spain, the members of the Order should be expelled from all Spanish possessions. The sad news fell upon the ears of the astonished Fathers as the death knell of hope, and when, on the 3d of February, 1768, they were about to take their departure from the scene of their labors and turn over to the Franciscan Fathers the result of their arduous and, their indefatigable industry, and their eloquent example, their Indian converts were inconsolable at the prospect of being left by those who had opened for them a heaven they never beheld until they became enrolled under the banner of the Cross.

"O! sorrowful, O! sad was the day that arrived which was to separate on earth, at least, the spiritual Father from his flock, and the deceptive hope of a reunion in eternity could not lessen the pangs of the parting. Some of the Fathers were present at the departure of their brethren.

All the Jesuits and a lay brother assembled in all, being the exact number of those who died on the peninsula during their missionary career—assembled at the Mission of Loreto, and, having, the Mother House of the order. The 31st of February was the time set for departure, but in order to avoid any outward demonstration of sorrow on the part of the Indian population, the Viceroy ordered that their embarkation should take place at night. Hot even this precaution could prevent the sighs and groans of the Indians when the time came for the Fathers began to assemble for their final preparations, word was dispatched that the embarkation would take place at daybreak, the entire assembled at the place of departure. With a common impulse, the multitude cast themselves upon the ground and began to utter such cries of sorrow as to make the stoutest hearts tremble, and the former, and as much over the latter as was possible."

St. Benedict Barbier, a native of the country of Lower California, in 1854 says that at the Mission of St. Ignacio, founded in 1705, though abandoned for many years, the results of Jesuit industry are still apparent.

The master hand in the great work of bringing into the fold of Christ the Indian tribes of Lower California was Father Ignatius Lopez, who died at the Mission of Loreto October 19th, 1697, accompanied by only eight persons. This important event in the history of the Church in California is thus commemorated by Father Kino in his well-known work "A suitable place near the shore having been chosen for the encampment, the provisions and the baggage were landed from the vessel. Temporary barracks were erected for the five soldiers, a hut served for a chapel, which was erected of the Christian wrecks, decorated with garlands of flowers, was erected in a prominent position, never again to be removed from the land. The Immaculate Mother of God having been chosen patroness of the Mission, her statue was brought in procession from the vessel and placed in the church. Thus, under such humble, yet not entirely unfavorable auspices, the conversion of the California aborigines began by the Jesuit Father John Maria Salvatierra, of the Society of Jesus, on the 19th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1697. On the 25th of the same month possession was formally taken of the country by the Father, in the name of his Majesty, Philip V."

Here, again, we behold the designs of Providence in exalting the dignity of the Blessed Virgin, to whom, as the Lamp of Lourette, we confidently look for her dwelling wherein the glory of God was proclaimed to the natives of California. The natives had already received instructions in the Christian doctrine from Father Kino, Copart, and other Jesuits who accompanied Otondo's expedition, and although twelve years had elapsed since that time, they recognized the sacred symbol of Christian faith, and the moment they saw the Cross worn by Father Salvatierra they rushed toward Brothers of the Christian Schools.

The name of the Christian Brothers is familiar to every Catholic on this coast, and their fame as teachers needs no eulogy from us, but we feel that our readers may appreciate the high estimation in which the disciples of the venerable de La Salle are held even by those who are not of "the household of the faithful." We therefore reproduce the following appreciative notice from an apostolical publication:

"The Christian Brothers, however, which needs more than a passing notice, since its collection of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, is well and interesting to the whole educational world. The Brothers are a teaching order, and, as such, have particularly to do with the education of the young. Their mission is one of the highest importance, and, as it is well known, they have succeeded in establishing a system of schools which shines out like gilt-edged and adamantine diamonds, amongst the numerous schools of every and nothing, so

"Our readers are aware, no doubt, of the delight of a bright pair that sustains no peer, weak matter, under the most severe trials and difficulties, just as the life and soul of the Christian Brother have known or read of instances in the history of his life, which, in the hands of those inferior masters, as they have thought, or still show, over his course, so we see them meeting successful, and, in the end, triumphant. We, for a time, or in which we have had shown our own disparaging, to affirm our lack of sympathy with the Brothers, and to open the outcome there have always shared in the Christian soldier, and, in the end, triumphant. We

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. FRANK EDITOR

—PRO-DOBOLETS—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 36.

1st.—MEGALOPOLIS
SAMARITAN
TETANIC
LITERS
NOY
R

2nd.—Benzyle. 7th.—Hissing.

3rd.—DAMASKEEN 8th.—Cat
AMERICES CUB
MENDANA CUBONAL
ARDENT CONCORDAMEN
KENT BONAREE
EKA LET N LAEL
S

4th.—Navics. 9th.—Flower Garden.

5th.—PROTESTANT
REPENTERS
REPENTINE
TENDERS 10th.—47
ENTERS SIP
STIRS SERA
TEDS SCIENTIST
ARE SERVIETTE
NO (CONSTELLATIONS)
T FREELETS ARTICLE
STATE
LAME
S

6th.—Tree value lies in the middle, between the extremes otherwise and rashness.

12th.—FIRSTMOVERS
ORDEYNIST
RIDDLER
TRIVIA SAY
T
LOT AVERER
CONTINE
EXPLANATE
DIADELPHOS

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 30 were solved by Aspiro, Will Dexter, *J. M., Simon Lane, I. Scream, S. A. M., N. Guth, Emerald, Hancer, Thetis, Marmion, Lack, Hazel Kirke, P. Q. Lee Arity, James Flynn, Flora S. Foil, Class Foil, Lily, Nellie Coakley, Buzz, Hoss Lon, and Lady Blue.

BIBY LIST.—Aspiro, 11 solutions.

PRIZE WINNERS.

1.—For best batch of "fate."—Charley.
2.—For best last batch.—Not won.
3.—For the best anagram.—Marmion.
4.—For the best charade, in two sonnets.—Marmion.

NUMBER XCIX.
ABC DIAMONDS.

(The number of Leisure Hours is respectfully dedicated to our staunch friend and supporter, Aspiro.)

1.—To Aspiro.—1. A letter. 2. A species of the genus. 3. A piece of ordnance. 4. Ascends. 5. Uttered with a strong emission of breath. 6. A kind of cameo. 7. A southern constellation. 8. A large basin. 9. A letter.

II.—To Rolla.—1. A letter. 2. To pledge. 3. Appearance. 4. Contrary. 5. Species of will. 6. A kind of weak fish. 7. Branches of a family. 8. To recover. 9. A letter.

III.—To Crescent.—1. A letter. 2. To under-run. 3. To spread out the limbs. (Pl.) 4. A genus of weak fish. 5. Flesh color. 6. Pulpy substance. 7. Mingled. 8. A Hebrew measure of liquids. 9. A letter.

IV.—To Dan Tobias.—1. A letter. 2. Infirm. 3. Certain plants. 4. Messengers. 5. A little fellow. 6. Relative to a celebrated oracle in Greece. 7. A European song-bird. 8. Accustomed to. 9. A letter.

V.—To Emerald.—1. A letter. 2. A Turkish code. 3. Introduction. 4. One whose power of speech is not limited. 5. Esteemed. 6. Be-work. 7. Boundaries. 8. Certain coins. 9. A letter.

VI.—To Fire Proof.—1. A letter. 2. To draw. 3. Salient. 4. Climb. 5. Pertaining to a manufactoring building. 6. Entered by force. 7. A beast. 8. Unclosed. 9. A letter.

VII.—To Goose Quill.—1. A letter. 2. An iron punch used by miners. 3. Pertaining to Europeans fish. 5. Genuine of fossil shells. 6. Fabled. 7. Filled. 8. After. 9. A letter.

VIII.—To Hazel Kirke.—1. A letter. 2. A relation. (Scots.) 3. A bone for stays. 4. An European fish. 5. A species of sacred writing. 6. A native of the Netherlands. 7. Merriments. (pl.) 8. The bark of the oak. 9. A letter.

IX.—To I Speak.—1. A letter. 2. Around. 3. Canaa. 4. A female name. 5. Weakness. 6. Dismissed with blue. 7. Strained. 8. Happy. (Sagacs). 9. A letter.

X.—To Aspiro.—1. A letter. 2. To polish. 3. A musical instrument formerly used. 4. A watch or timepiece. 5. Fastened. 6. Part of a watch or clock. 7. To fasten. 8. A color. 9. A letter.

XI.—To Eldee Bonaparte.—1. A letter. 2. Ten hundred thousand. 3. Sometimes used by the war. 4. A standard. 5. Species of gray foxes. 6. A large, close marriage. 7. Ordered. (Obsol.) 8. A letter.

XII.—To Cassidoo.—1. A letter. 2. The shape of a sword. 3. French mechanician, 1700-1750. 4. Hence, (O.) 5. Tandies. 6. A female name. 7. Gallinaceous. (O.) 8. SOCRATES.

Orleans, La. New Orleans and Delivers in five weeks.

Tete-a-Tete.

LITTLE FAIRY.—I would like to hear from you again.

—The July number of The Sacramental Parlor contains good reading for the Knights of the Mystic Arena.

Spectator.—Rather favor from you would be highly appreciated.

—At a meeting of the G. S. F. L., held July 12, 1884, Zero was "suspended for one year" for a flagrant violation of rules.

HAZEL KIRKE.—All of your precious gems have been set in good style. A few more will meet the same reception.

—Tom O. Mason has removed from Indianapolis, Ind., where he was, to Indianapolis, Ind., where he will dwell in future.

—Tom O. Mason, Ind., where all mail must be addressed, wish Ben 72, Valparaiso, Ind.

—I would be pleased to receive contribs from ("fate" in particular) from Adonis, Aspiro, Brownie, C. Lucas, Dan Tobias, Fire Proof, Fire Proof, A. F. Holt, I. Speak, Lady Blue, E. Aeon, Madcap, Madcap, Martinez, Maud Lyon, Herbert Morphy, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Jim, J. Wilshe, Sam, 303-6, Sigmund, Simon Ease, Sir Tilly, Tom, A. Hawk, T. Kaufer, and Will Dexter.

C. N. F.

ESTABLISHED 1856.

J. O'KANE,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER OF

HARNESS, SADDLES, WHIPS, BLANKETS,

And Everything necessary for Horse or Carriage Use.

Boots and Italian Saddlery a Specialty

Single Harnesses from $16 a set.

☞ Repairing promptly attended to.

767 MISSION STREET

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Special attention given to the manufacture of "Boots of all kinds for Horses. Can refer to all the principal trainers and horsemen on the Pacific Coast.

MURPHY, GRANT & CO.,

IMPORTERS OF DRY GOODS,

And Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast

OF THE ....

Veuve Xavier Jouvin Kid Gloves

Bush and Sansome Sts., San Francisco.

aug2

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.

JOHN WIEDEMANN - - - PROPRIETOR

SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,

SAN FRANCISCO.

Amount of Beer sold in 1883, 62,012½ barrels.

my28

JOHN J. CLARK,

ARCHITECT,

408 California Street,

Next: Bank of California, Rooms 12 and 13

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,

PRINCIPAL OFFICE,

648 MARKET STREET.

BRANCH,

1128 MARKET ST.

LAUNDRY,

1128 St. bet. Folsom and Howard S. F. Cal

McCORMICK BROS.,

Book and Job Printers,

636 Clay Street, 636

(Sacramento Building at Merchant's Office.) San Francisco.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

737 MARKET STREET, 737

SAN FRANCISCO,

Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.

SPECIAL AGENT FOR

Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.

The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock

OF

CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS

In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.

SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY

SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.

My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS

Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.

☞ No need ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight is a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.

MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF

Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys,

Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General

PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS

In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.

Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.

When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are, as Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."

General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated

PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,

Latest Edition, with all addendas to date.

Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,

737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000

Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!

THE UNIVERSAL

BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.

(This is Not a Secret Society.)

INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.

HOME OFFICE,

1038 MISSION STREET, 1038

San Francisco, California.

ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF

$1000 to $2,000,

PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE

OR AT MATURITY.

Send for Circulars and Papers.

RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.

THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION

1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE LOS ANGELES, CAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE

SANTA CLARA, ... CALIFORNIA

This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies two large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasium, swimming tank, etc. Its Museum is a complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, treasures of Art. Its Library contains upwards of 15,000 volumes. For the latter a new building 140 by 40 feet, three stories, has been added to the old one.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches (Washing and Mending), per session, 250 00
Schoolbooks, medical attendance and Medicines, Bed and Bedding, etc., per session, 50 00
Use of Bed, per session, 10 00
Washing, per session, 50 00
Day Students, per session, 50 00
Music and Drawing, from extra charges. For further particulars address

REV. A. J. BERAR, S. J., President.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL course receive a diploma of the Board of Studies, Schools, Colleges, Universities, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a practical business education in the shortest time.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the classes.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Bedding, $250 00
Entrance Fee, 10 00
Diploma Fee and Medicine, 10 00
Washing at College, 50 00
Day Students, 50 00
Music and Drawing, from extra charges.

For further particulars address the President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

This Institution, (CHARTERED AUTHORITY) is the Same of the State of California, and enjoys the rights and privileges of a University. Los Angeles possesses for the salubrity of its climate and healthfulness of its locality. The College is supported by the Catholic Clergy of the Archdiocese of San Francisco, and is under the Spiritual Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of San Francisco, as well as the Intellectual and moral advancement of its students, are the objects of the College.

The College has large, well-ventilated and lofty rooms, with every convenience for the health and comfort of its students. Its Museum is complete in all the Natural Sciences, and its Library, containing over 3,000 volumes, is open to the students, and include works of every class.

The Instructors and the classes conducted with the Course of Studies, are those of a University. The Course of Studies is that of the Universities of Europe, as laid down in the documents of Washington, and the Universities of Europe. Its Commercial Course includes the Business and Professional Education of a Merchant, Banker, Lawyer, Civil Engineer, Surveyor, Mechanical Engineer, Architect, Physician, etc.

The morality of the classes here set forth, and of the Institution, is that of the Catholic Church, and no one, of a contrary faith, is admitted.

For additional particulars apply to the President.

Studies will be Resumed on August 4th.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels.

SANTA CLARA, ... CALIFORNIA

This Institution, conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of parents for young ladies, at a trifling expense, a moral and intellectual education. This feature is particular that should recommend this Academy, is the influence exerted upon the pupils to views and habits of economy and to render them useful members of society in after years.

The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.

Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, payable in advance.

Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once.
Board, Tuition, Washing and use of bedding, $50
Vocal and Instrumental Music form extra charges.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,

Golden Gate Ave. San Francisco

CONDUCTED BY

THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.

This Academy, PLEASANTLY SITUATED IN the Mission District, has been organized to afford a thorough and Christian education. Two terms of 5 months each, commencing on the first Monday in August and the first Monday in February.

SISTER SUPERIOR.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE,

Twelfth and K streets,

SACRAMENTO ..... CAL

A LIMITED NUMBER OF BOARDERS REQUIRED. Pupils will be received at any time, and will be charged from the date of their entrance to the end of the current quarter.

TED GENSEN, President.

School of the Holy Cross.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies,

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF CHARITY (Sisters of the Holy Cross) Yo., the Director particulars, apply to the Superiors.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME

This Institution, founded in 1851, is situated in the Richest part of the Garden Image of the State of California, and empowered to confer Academic Honors, is situated on Broadway, opposite the Old Mission Church.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

TERMS:

Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per annum, $250 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

Piano, with use of Instrument per annum, $60 00
Harp, with use of Instrument, 60 00
Vocal Music, Private Lessons, 50 00
Drawing and Painting, 50 00
Painting in Water Colors, 50 00
Painting in Oil Colors, 50 00
Vocalization, per lesson, 50 00
Vacation spent at the College, 50 00
Graduating Fee, 10 00

Physician's Fees for use of sickroom, and Medicines, and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SILVER DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Class Classes, $6 00
Tuition in the 3d and 4th Class Classes, 5 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes, 4 00
Tuition in the 3d Primary Classes, 3 00

Music (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing, Painting and Fancy Work, Elocution, Lessons Extra.

Pupils will be received at any time, but no less than 3 and Separate Classes, but no less than 3 and Separate Classes, Pupils are charged from the date of their entrance to the end of the current quarter.

For further particulars address

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

SACRED HEART CONVENT OF MERCY,

UKIAH, MENDOCINO CO., CAL.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Conducted by the Sisters of Mercy.

This Institution offers every facility for acquiring a solid, useful and accomplished education. Terms very reasonable. For particulars address the Sisters of Mercy, Ukiah, Cal.

Convent of the Sacred Heart,

OAKLAND, ... CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY

The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

This Institution, PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding a view of the Bay and Surrounding Country, is supplied with all the modern improvements, and possesses every facility for the Education of the Young.

The course of studies embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and essential education.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board and Tuition in English, French, Spanish and Drawing, $250 00
Washing, 50 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

URSULINE ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

The Fourth Annual Session begins

AUGUST, 1884.

For Prospectus and full particulars, Address

SUPERIORESS OF THE URSULINES,

Santa Rosa, Cal.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.

This Institution, established in 1851, is incorporated by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of similar College Institutions in our United States.

Reference required. For terms and particulars address,

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

Marysville, Cal.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,

SAN LUIS OBISPO ..... CALIFORNIA

BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG Ladies, conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

This convent is the Mother House of the order.

SISTER RAYMONDA CHERMAYEFF, Superior.

MISS IDA NISSEN,

8 Mason Street,

Teacher of Piano, Singing and Modern Languages.

Diplomas from the Conservatories of Vienna and Paris. Terms moderate.

CAYUGA LAKE MILITARY ACADEMY,

AUBURN, N. Y. 50th N. Y. FIRST, through

MISCELLANEOUS.

CARROLL & TILTON,

Respectfully announce that they have opened

THE LARGE STORE,

873 Market Street,

WITH A LINE OF

GENT'S AND BOY'S

CLOTHING,

Furnishing Goods,

HATS, CAPS, ETC.

Buying here in this business many years, we can promise that all our goods will be as represented.

We buy for Cash and sell as low as possible

CARROLL & TILTON,

873 Market Street, Opp. Powell,

And late with JOSTS & CO.

PILES Anakesis" gives immediate relief and cures in from 1 to 14 days. Pamphlet free. $1, at druggists, or by mail on receipt of price. Dr. Lyons, Philadelphia, Pa.

BOOKS BOUGHT AND SOLD, BY A BOOKBOUND Bookmarks.

Our Young Folks.

☞ Short, original contributions of merit will not be rejected because of their length.

Address Young Folks, Monitor Office, San Francisco. Communications should be signed, or if not, short only, with pen and nom de plume.

MOTHER'S VOICE.

THERE'S MUSIC—

There's music in mother's voice,
There's music than listeners sighing,
Mix its tones with the world's noisy din,
Till—you feel ever dying.

There's love within a mother's breast,
Its deep as its self-sacrificing,
That's ever ready to shield the weak,
Till—you feel ever dying.

There's angels in a mother's tear,
When forced to finally taking,
That as the heart of pity pauses,
It scarcely keeps from breaking.

And when a mother kneels to heaven,
And for her child is crying,
Oh, who shall half the fervor tell,
That burns in all she's saying?

A mother! how her tender note
Can soothe the throat of sadness!
And though the gloom of life come more,
Hid shine the star of gladness.

A mother! when, like evening star,
Her voice was heard before us,
Hush! hushed! hushed! hushed!
And finally watches over us.

The Changes Not All Gone.

Jerome A. Williams was born and reared on a rocky farm in Pennsylvania, and he used to go to a country school in summer with bare feet and a straw hat with his hair sticking out through the crown. In his day he was about twelve years old, sorry as one by his father a dollar with their proposals to survey the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. The boy looked at the money and wondered what it meant. Next year the rails came and with them a locomotive. That was enough for Jerome. He would neglect his chores and steal off to the local station whenever he could. Sometimes he would avoid rules on the grand transit and associate with the workmen. When the road was completed and used from a water station, Jerome turned up missing. Active search was made for the boy, but he was not found, nor was he ever heard of. He was a Tuckaman on a coal train at a place south of a station. The station agent hoar his father's farm but had not seen Jerome. The old folks were furious, that was about twenty-two years ago. There is a model village in the big city of Scranton, Pa., now thriving. In it is a general superintendent of the Central and Southern Pacific field road system, and everywhere recognized and admired as one of the leaders of railroad management in the United States. He is only in his thirty-seventh year, and, perhaps, he should feel ashamed to be a little bald, and to have the company's services. Boys, the chances are not all gone by any means.

Mamma's Story.

One afternoon Maud and Dotty Nott were seated on the library floor, their mamma. Mrs North was writing a letter at a table near by.

Maud was fond of her younger sister, but she had herself much better. She was also fond of chemistry, but had a great dread for the worms that are often found in them.

"Now, Dotty, she said, "you just listen attentively, and see if it is wrong, but I think it is.

Dotty did as she was told and Mrs. North looked on, but said nothing at the time.

As the day drew near its close the children participated in a quarrel, and Dotty, in her mother's great easy chair, was begged for a story.

"I will tell you a very old story, said Mrs North, "three years ago there was a monkey who had a great liking for chemistry and having found a few in the kitchen pantry he set to work to see what he was learning on the hearth-to-morrow. The family came home and found the house in flames. Now, when the nuts were done, they were so hot that the monkey did not venture to handle them himself so he took poor kitty's paw in his own, and pulled the nuts out of the fire.

"I, what a mean, old, naughty monkey exclaimed Maud "I'd like to kick him.

"But he's only a monkey," replied her mother. "I wonder if you would be a little girl, who did the same sort of a thing?

I am conscious. She wanted a chestnut, but was afraid it was not safe, and it made her little sister bite it for her, just enough to find out that it was safe, and then she took it and ate it."

"Oh mamma, said a voice from the back of Mrs. North's chair, "I'm afraid it was me! I wouldn't be like that horrid monkey for anything.

"Then, dear, don't ever ask anybody to do for you what you are unwilling to do yourself."

How a Lazy Boy Became a Great Saint.

Saint Anscarius lost his mother when he was only five years old. He was sent to a convent school, but it was a long time he would make learn his lessons nor obey the teachers who had charge of him. He was too fond of play, and spent his time in amusing himself and in distracting lessons. Instead of learning his lessons. He might have grown up to manhood in this way, if God had not chosen him by a means of a dream. It is true, we must not believe in dreams, but sometimes even dreams may teach us a good lesson.

One day at school, Anscarius fell asleep over his books, and as he slept he dreamed that he was going through a hold which was dark and marshy, and he could scarcely walk, because at every step he took his feet sank deeper into the mire and became all covered with mud. Along the side of the hold was a spacious road, with gardens on one side of it, full of beautiful trees and sweet-smelling flowers. Among alone this road, he thought he saw Blessed Lady, surrounded by a multitude of holy women dressed in white, and amongst them he beheld his own dear mother.

He knew was filled with joy when he saw her and he tried to run at once and throw himself into her arms; but he could not move from the spot where he stood, because his feet were fixed as firmly in the soft ground. He stretched out his hands to his mother and begged her to take him with her; but she only shook her head and said, "No, child, it is not time for you to come to us. Go back to your mother in the world, and when you have grown better then you may come to us. For you will never reach us in heaven if you continue to be lazy and disobedient. You must henceforth be diligent and pious, and you must do everything your superiors tell you to do; for in doing that you will serve God, and those who serve God on earth will one day see Him in heaven.

When Anscarius awoke he was that he had been dreaming, but the dream seemed to be always before his mind. From that day he became a better boy. In a very short time he was at the head of his class, and none of his companions were able to get above him.

His superiors wondered how this sudden change had been brought about, and how one who had given them such much trouble had become all at once so good and obedient. But the boy kept his secret to himself, and told no one it was only dreamed afterwards, when he became an apostle among the Danes, that people knew of the dream.

and of the firm resolution and determination of it.

The Pious Sister.

James and Anne were quite alone in the house.

"Come," said James to Anne, "let us look for something to do, and let us thoroughly enjoy ourselves.

"Very well," replied Anne, "if you can take me to a place where noone can see us, I will go with you.

"Well, then, said James, "come with me into the dairy, and let us have a dish of the delicious cream.

"No, no," and Anne, "Our neighbor, who is cleaning wood in the street, can see us there.

"Well, then, come into the kitchen," said James. "There is a pot full of honey in the kitchen press, and we will dip our bread into it.

"No, no," Anne replied, "our neighbor who sits spinning at her window can see us there.

"Well, let us eat some apples down in the cellar," said James. "It is a pretty dark there, that noone can possibly see us.

Anne replied "Oh my dear James do you then really think that no one sees us there? Do you know that the Eye of God sees everywhere through the walls, and even into our hearts?

James was struck with better

"You are right, dear sister, said he and I go to a country school in summer with bare feet and a straw hat with his hair sticking out through the crown. In his day he was about twelve years old, sorry as one by his father a dollar with their proposals to survey the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. The boy looked at the money and wondered what it meant. Next year the rails came and with them a locomotive. That was enough for Jerome. He would neglect his chores and steal off to the local station whenever he could. Sometimes he would avoid rules on the grand transit and associate with the workmen. When the road was completed and used from a water station, Jerome turned up missing. Active search was made for the boy, but he was not found, nor was he ever heard of. He was a Tuckaman on a coal train at a place south of a station. The station agent hoar his father's farm but had not seen Jerome. The old folks were furious, that was about twenty-two years ago. There is a model village in the big city of Scranton, Pa., now thriving. In it is a general superintendent of the Central and Southern Pacific field road system, and everywhere recognized and admired as one of the leaders of railroad management in the United States. He is only in his thirty-seventh year, and, perhaps, he should feel ashamed to be a little bald, and to have the company's services. Boys, the chances are not all gone by any means.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PACIFIC STEAM

CARPET BEATING

And Renovating Works.

WHITENING

In all its Branches Thoroughly and Promptly Done.

OAKLAND BRANCH: Twenty-first street and Telegraph avenue. Prompt attendance will be given to orders left at 333 Golden Gate Ave.

333 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

(TYLER STREET)

CONKLIN BROS., Proprietors.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST. SAN FRANCISCO.

Life Scholarships $70.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR '83

DR. HENLEY'S

CELERY BEEF IRON

(Vegetable Compound). Tonic for the Blood, and Tonic for the Nerves.

A FABULOUS DISCOVERY.

Worth Millions to the Afflicted Sufferer. Cures as a Charm.

The healthful duty of this vegetable is to impart to the blood the elements of a healthy and vigorous life. The blood is the life, and when it is impoverished with many men and women it is not to be wondered at that so much affected by intemperance that they become so prone to every form of disease. Hence the great demand for a blood purifier, and the fact that this medicine is strong in power as other preparations are weak in their effect upon the blood. Hundreds of testimonials in our possession from the best and most reliable citizens of California.

MANUFACTURED BY

TUTHILL, COX & CO.

537 Clay Street, below Montgomery,

SAN FRANCISCO.

ASK FOR BROOKS' SPOOL COTTON

STAINED GLASS

For Domestic and Church Uses,

Made up in the highest art by the LA FARGE DECORATIVE CO.

NEW YORK.

The leading authority in the United States on Decorative Art.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS

A Specialty.

Samples on Exhibition at our Store. Call and see them.

Glacier Decoration, or Imitation Stained Glass,

C. W. CLARK & CO.,

Sole Agents,

811 and 817 Market Street, San Francisco.

WALL PAPERS,

American, French and English.

Artistic Designs.

FURNISHING and all kinds of INTERIOR DECORATIVE done in an artistic manner by skilled artists.

☞ Manufacturers of Window Shades, all kinds and sizes, Gilt Cornice Poles and Trimmings.

G. W. CLARK & CO.,

613 and 615 Market St.

The Best in the Long Garden HOSE

BOOTS AND SHOES.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

JOHN SULLIVAN,

NORTHEAST CORNER OF PATTERY AND JACKSON Streets, opposite the Hotel Bella Union. Call Leather BOOTS, at from $6 to $9 00
California Leather boots, 3 00
French Calf Dress Boots, 4 50
California, 3 50

Boots and Children's Boots and shoes made to order. Persons in the country ordering Boots and Shoes to the amount of Twelve Dollars or more, will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the expense equal to three per cent. Boots and Shoes MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes cut FREE.

J. J. H. MEDAUW & SON

968 and 970 Folsom St.

San Francisco

WHOLESALE

WINE AND LIQUOR DEALERS

Established 1876.

☞ We are selling Cheap for Cash and guarantee our goods.

The following is our price list, commencing with the lowest:

Table Wines 50c. 60c. 75c. and $1.
Angelica Wines $1, $1.25 and $1.50
Rhine Vineyard dry 1, 1874 Wine $1
Fine Old Port or Sherry, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.
Kentucky Whiskies $0.50, $1, $1.50 and $2.
Bourbon Whiskey $1.50, $1.75 and $2.
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc., $1 per bottle and upwards.

Other Wines and Liquors in proportion.

INSURANCE.

FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE

UNION INSURANCE COMPANY

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS,

ESTABLISHED IN 1861.

Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.

CASH CAPITAL, $150,000 GOLD

FAIR RATES.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES.

ROLLO MITCHELL, Pr.

DIRECTORS:

SAN FRANCISCO.

E. Rowster, Nicholas Luning,
N. S. Prior, John Parrott,
Thomas Miller, James Mofflt,
A. Haas, J. Haas,
M. D. Chase, M. D. Sweeny,
J. Steinhart, Joseph Brandenstein,
Frutal Meyer, Gustave Tonnelle,
Adam Grant, J. G. Kittle,
Antoine Borel, Geo. C. Hicks,
Charles Kohler, J. H. Judd,
Joseph Seligman, Charles Haas,
Bartlett Doe, W. M. Hoag,
T. Lawrence Peck, William Scholle,
A. Wall, John Conly,
N. Ballestier, J. O. Eldridge.

A. P. Phelps,
GUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
Vice-President.

IAS. D. BAILEY, Secretary.
HN. T. DOWNS, Surveyor.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

FIRE AND MARINE.

Capital Fully paid $250,000 00
Assets January 1, 1884 ..... 456,272 50
Losses paid since organization, 874,217 81

PRINCIPAL OFFICE,

439 California Street, S. F.

Safe Deposit Building.

JOHN H. WISE, President.
CHAS. A. LATON, Secretary.

JEREMIAH DEASY, City Solicitor.—Offices also at 119 Third street.

SOUTH OF MARKET ST

THE

Liverpool and London AND GLOBE

Insurance Company,

OFFICE—422 California St.,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

HOWARD SPRINGS.

14 Hot and Cold Mineral Springs. 14

Temperance House 10 Year.

COMPRISING HOT AND COLD ICON, HOT AND Cold Sulphur, Cold Alum, Sulphur, Cold Soda, Cold Iron and sparkling cold soda. These waters are recommended by eminent physicians for Rheumatism, Gout, Female Diseases, Catarrh, Dropsy, Constipation, Scrofula, Affections, Liver and Kidneys, Nervous Debility, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick Headache, etc. Also, a Hot Sulphur Vapor Bath, and a Cold Sulphur Bath, in addition to the Hot Springs, where Mr. F. Talbot's stage will be waiting to convey passengers to and from the Springs, every Tuesday and Friday, and Saturdays, on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, from the Springs to San Jose, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Santa Rosa, Napa, Calistoga and Saratoga. Fare, $2 per round trip. Stage will also be in attendance at the Springs for the accommodation of visitors, free of charge. Terms: $10 per week, $2 per day. A Return Ticket good for 60 days, $15. Special rates to families. For further information address

MENEELY & COMPANY

WEST TROY, N. Y.

BELLS.

Favorably known to the public since 1826. Also manufacture Chimes and other bells, Arms, Chimes and Peals.

MANUFACTURERS' FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY OF BOSTON, MASS.

CASH CAPITAL, $500,000 00

NEW HAMPSHIRE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF MANCHESTER, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, $500,000 00

JOS. C. JENNINGS & CO.,

General Agents,

317 California St., San Francisco.

HAS REMOVED

THE HOME MUTUAL Insurance Company

NOW OCCUPIES PREMISES

216 SANSOME ST.,

East side, between California and Pine

20th Annual Exhibit, January 1, 1884.

Premium Notes Outstanding,	$4,531,867 27
Cash Premiums Outstanding,	1,215,122 13
Assets, January 1, 1884,	1,215,122 13
Assets, January 1, 1883,	1,215,122 13
Cash Dividends Paid,	1,215,122 13
Capital Paid Up, Surplus,	1,215,122 13
Net Surplus over Everything,	1,215,122 13

DIRECTORS:

J. F. HOUGHTON
J. L. N. SHEPARD
A. W. BRADLEY
R. H. WADE

BANKING HOUSES.

JOS. A. DONOHOE, San Francisco. | EUGENE KELLY, New York

DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE, KELLY & CO.

NEW YORK.

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK IRELAND (Dublin).

Payable at all the Branches

AND IN EVERY COUNTRY TOWN IN IRELAND

JAS. R. KELLY & CO

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

PAINTS, OILS and GLASS

221 and 223 Market Street.

Just Below Beale—the New Block.

BLYMYER MFG. CO. BELLS

Church, School, Factory, etc., Bells. Chimes and Peals for Churches, etc. Prices and Catalogue sent free. Address

BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO., Cincinnati, O.

JAMES LINFORTH.

Sole Agent, 23 Main Street, San Francisco.

MENEELY & COMPANY

WEST TROY, N. Y., BELLS

Favorably known to the public since 1826. Also manufacture Chimes and other bells, Arms, Chimes and Peals.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.

Bells for Churches, Schools, Farms, etc., FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

KNABE PIANOS

"For beauty of tone and lasting qualities, I have never seen their equal."

CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

A. L. BANCROFT & CO., 721 Market St., S. F., Sole Agents for Pacific Coast.

GEORGE STECK & CO.

PIANOS.

USED BY ALL LEADING ARTISTS.

B. CURTAZ, Agent,

Warerooms, 308 O'Farrell Street.

☞ Pianos to Rent and for Sale on Installments.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

YOU CAN BUY A WHOLE

HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND, which bonds are issued and secured by the Government and are redeemable in drawings

THREE TIMES ANNUALLY.

Until such, and every month in the year, we shall sell smaller premiums. Every bond must draw a Premium.

The largest Premium drawn at these drawings are:

1 Premium of	120,000
1 " "	40,000
1 " "	20,000
1 " "	10,000
2 Premiums of each	5,000
5 " "	2,000
10 " "	1,000
25 " "	500

And so on, amounting to 2,000 Premiums, Prize must draw a Premium of NOT LESS THAN 140 Florins.

The next drawing takes place on the 15TH OF AUGUST, 1884.

And every bond bought of us on or before the 15th of August, is entitled to a share in that drawing, as we must be drawn before or on that date.

Out of our orders, sent in Registered Letters, in 1883, we will secure for those bonds for the next drawing.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

180 Fulton St., cor. Nassau, New York City.

Established in 1871.

N. B.—In sending us money, please see you use Bills in The San Francisco Mint.

☞ Drawings and Prizes are not to be compared with any Lottery whatsoever, and do not conflict

Rome in America.

THE WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY THE PROPAGANDA FIDE IN THE UNITED STATES.

HOW THE FAITH SPREAD FROM YEAR TO YEAR.

A Not-Small History of the Church in America.

The action of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda Fide, in America, has been most remarkable and most pregnant in results. A century and a half after the settlement of Lord Baltimore, in Maryland, Catholics had so increased that the Sacred Congregation sitdown in from the jurisdiction of the Vicar Apostolic of London, and founded a new See in Baltimore, comprising the territory of the United States. That happened in the year 1789. A few years after, the Diocese had to be divided into several Episcopal churches; and in 1808, there arose the Sees of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, Louisville, and the first Diocese of Baltimore was erected into a Metropolitan See. Thus arose the first Ecclesiastical Province of the United States, which in the last eighty years has bloomed out into the fourteen actual provinces. During this period the energetic action of the Propaganda aided greatly the development of these churches.

The following list of the establishment of the Sees will exhibit the progress of the Church in the United States:

1789, establishment of the Bishopric of Baltimore.

1808, that of the Dioceses of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Bardstown (now Louisville), and of the erection of Baltimore into a Metropolitan See.

1820, establishment of the Dioceses of Charleston and Richmond.

1821, of Cincinnati.

1822, of the Vicariats Apostolic of Mississippi and Alabama.

1825, these latter two are united to Baltimore, and Florida to the Diocese of New Orleans.

1826, the jurisdiction of Mississippi is committed to the Episcopate of New Orleans with the title of Vicariate Apostolic, until Louisiana was divided, and its main dioceses, Florida and Alabama, was divided into Vicariates, New Orleans for Lower Louisiana and the Territory of Mississippi and San Louis for Upper Louisiana.

1829, the Vicariate Apostolic of Alabama and Florida is erected into a Bishopric, the See being fixed in the city of Mobile.

1833, erection of the Diocese of Detroit.

1834, that of the Diocese of Vincennes.

Now also the limits of each diocese in the United States were determined and that of Richmond was given in administration to the Archdiocese of Baltimore.

1836, establishment of the dioceses of Natchez (Province of Mississippi) and of the Dioceses of Dubuque and Nashville.

1841, the Vicariate Apostolic of Texas established.

1843, Western Pennsylvania was erected into a diocese distinct from Philadelphia and the See was fixed in Pittsburg; erection of the dioceses of Hartford, Chicago, Petricola and Milwaukee, and of the Vicariate Apostolic of Oregon, which also comprehended the Rocky Mountains.

1846, formation of the Archdiocese of Oregon City and of the dioceses of Nesqualy and Vancouver, suffragans of Oregon City.

1847, formation of the Diocese of Albany and Buffalo dismembered from New York; the Vicariate Apostolic of Texas is made into a Diocese with its See in Galveston, the Diocese of Cleveland from a dismemberment of Cincinnati, and the See of St. Louis is elevated to a Metropolitan See.

1850, the territory of Washington, dismembered from the Archdiocese of Oregon is made a Diocese, and the Diocese of Walla-Walla given in administration to the Archbishop of Oregon, Colville, or Fort Walla, being added to it; the Vicariate of New Mexico is established, and Santa Fe is made its See; the Diocese of New Orleans, Cincinnati and New York are elevated to the dignity of Metropolitan Dwelling, in Wheeling, is made a Diocese, as well as St Paul, Minn., and Savannah, and Vicariate Apostolic of the Rocky Mountains is established.

1853, erection of the Diocese of Portland divided from the Diocese of Boston; that of Burlington, dismembered from Boston; that of Brooklyn, dismembered from New York; and that of Natchitoches, dismembered from New Orleans; the Vicar Apostolic of Santa Fe is constituted into the suffragan Diocese of St. Louis. Erection of the Dioceses of Quincy, dismembered from Chicago, of the Dioceses of Erie Covington of Newark. Erection of the Metropolitan of San Francisco, dismembered from Monterey, which remains a suffragan of it; of the Vicar Apostolic of Michigan, dismembered in part from the Diocese of Detroit; the Diocese of Wallamalla suppressed and divided between the Archdioceses of Oregon City and the Diocese of Nesqualy.

1856, erection of the Vicariate of Nebraska, dismembered from the Rocky Mountains; of the Diocese of Fort Wayne, dismembered from Vincennes; of the Vicariate of Florida, and of the erection into a Diocese of the Vicariate of Michigan with its See in Sault Sainte Marie; the transfer of the See of Quincy Diocese to Alton, and the transfer of the Episcopal See of Los Angelos.

1860, erection of the Vicariate of Marysville, taking a part of it from San Francisco.

1863, erection of the Vicariate of British Columbia, dismembered from Vancouver.

1868, erection of the Dioceses of Wilmington, St. Joseph, in Missouri, La Crosse, Green Bay, Green Valley, the Vicariates of Montana, Colorado, Utah, Idaho and North Carolina; of the Dioceses of Scranton, Harrisburg, Rochester, Columbus and the Vicariate Apostolic of Alaska.

1870, the Vicariate Apostolic of St. Augustine, Florida, is made an Episcopal See, and the Diocese of Springfield is created.

1872, the Dioceses of Ogdensburgh and Providence are created.

1874, erection of the Dioceses of San Antonio and Sherbrook, with the Vicariate of Brownsville.

1879, the Ecclesiastical Province of Baltimore is divided into two provinces, leaving to one the title of Baltimore, and giving Philadelphia for Metropolitan to the other; the like is done for New York, one retaining the title of New York, the other being called that of Boston; the Province of St. Louis is divided into three distinct provinces, one of which is called St. Louis, the other Milwaukee and the third Santa Fe. The Vicariate of Northern Minnesota and the Diocese of Peoria are created the year.

1876, erection of the Diocese of Allegheny and the Prefecture of the Indian Territory.

1877, the Vicariate of Kansas is erected into a Diocese.

1879, erection of the Vicariate of Dakota.

1880, erection of the Diocese of Davenport, that of Trenton, divided from Newark, and that of Grand Rapids (8th of May).

1884, erection into a Diocese of the Vicariate of Montana with the same Holeas (1st of March), and of the Diocese of Manchester (6th of April).

The progress of the church and cathedral building, the establishment of schools, colleges, orphanages and religious societies has almost kept pace with the growth of the dioceses. The union of Catholics and Prelates is remarkable, and the power of their united votes was recently felt in Italy, when they moved their government to protect and save the American Colleges in Rome from spoliation and extinction.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF CHOLERA.

The Terrible Disease Distributed by Pilgrims from Hardwar and Meeca.

The only countries upon the globe to which cholera has not been carried are the islands of the South Pacific, Australasia, the Cape of Good Hope, the Islands of the North Atlantic, and the western coast of South America. These localities are all separated from India by a wide expanse of ocean, and have no commercial intercourse with that country.

Cholera has not become permanent outside of India, although it is seldom absent from some of the provinces of Hindustan. From its birthplace in the delta of the Ganges, the disease has effected a permanent lodgment in the provinces of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, while in the provinces that lie to the east and northwest, such as Happortana and Punjab, it occurs only as an epidemic, developing after great religious gatherings.

Hardwar, in the Punjab, at the foot of the Himalaya Mountains is the great nursery of cholera. It never prevails there, but has annually been developed there during the great Indian festivals. Of these festivals Hardwar is cursed with one, and they drew together a great concourse of people from every portion of the Indian empire. At some of these festivals as many as 2,000,000 devotees have assembled, but of late years the numbers have fallen off. Hardwar having lost its ancient prestige from the fact that some of the holy places on the Ganges have been diverted into a canal constructed by English authorities.

These immense numbers of human beings gather upon a bare, sandy plain on the banks of the Ganges, unsuited for the use of swine, without means of sanitary protection. The south wind, which blows in March, rarely, or not at all, reaches them. The water, are polluted, and the odor from the camps is perceptible for many miles. Day and night the devotees pour through the streets thoroughfares of the country for miles from the festival in parties of from 10 to 500, following so closely as to make an almost continuous procession. Ninety-five out of every 100 are on foot, but occasionally some great nabob swaps past with an enormous retinue, or a rajah with his caravan of elephants, camels, horses, and an ordinance passes in all the grandeur and confusion of Indian royalty. They ride over the poor wretches who line the roads, trample them down, and hurl imprecations upon them for blocking the way. Some march hundreds and some thousands of miles to engage in the festivals and to bathe in the sacred river. Many die on the way, and all arrive lame and gaunt from hunger and fatigue, with their feet bound up in rags and their sandy clothing covered with blood and dust. They plunge into the river as soon as they arrive, and drink the water as fast as they can scoop it up in the hands. They are fed from the Temple kitchen, where as many as 90,000 cooks are at work, and the food is distributed among the poor very rude way. When fresh it is not unwholesome, but too much of it produces indigestion and great sufferings. The half starved pilgrims sit in little circles, rush into the water again to bathe and drink, and the result is derangement of the digestive organs. When they have eaten their fill, whatever food is left is preserved. It is sacred and cannot be thrown away. Under the hot sun it soon becomes poisonous and offensive to smell.

In these hotbeds of disease, under conditions that would breed a plague among these pilgrims live. The heat is almost unendurable. The living, the sick, and the dying are huddled together, with only just enough room to lay down and sleep in. As fast as they die they are buried in the river quite Mecca without carrying a jar of this water away with him, and it is impossible to overestimate the potency of the Zem Zem spring in spreading cholera and other diseases.

In Mecca all the essentials for an epidemic are constantly gathered, as well as the means for distributing the germs of disease broadcast. The pilgrimage in India and Arabia have received the attention of sanitarians for several years, but no season has yet been found, so strong is the reluctance to interfere, to prevent the dissemination of disease by them.

The present epidemic in France can be traced from Hardwar to Mecca, from Mecca to Egypt, and thence along the Mediterranean to Toulon and Marseilles.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

THE DUBLIN CASTLE INFAMY.

Cornwall Placed in Prison.

A despatch from Dublin says: "Mr. Cornwall, the Secretary of the Dublin Post office, who was arrested Saturday, at Limerick, arrived here to-day in charge of detectives, and was placed in prison. Alfred McNorman, George Taylor and Malcolm Johnson witnesses for the defense in the Cornwall case, have been sent, and arrested on Saturday, have been released from prison, pending bonds to appear against Cornwall.

French Arrested.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Mr. James Ellis French, director of the detective department of the Royal Irish Constabulary, who was connected with the Cornwall case, has been arrested on a charge of felonious practices. Three military officers who were in the employ of the Cornwall offenses, have fled to Belgium.

The Cornwall Case.

DUBLIN, July 16.—James Ellis French of the Royal Irish Constabulary, who is under arrest on a charge of felonious practices in connection with the Cornwall case, has been remanded to prison. Bail was refused. James Fillar has been arrested on a charge of conspiring the same offence of which Cornwall and French are accused.

MR. O'BRIEN ON THE SCANDAL.

LONDON, July 16.—Mr. O'Brien, M. P., editor of the United Ireland, referring to the Cornwall case, said: "The Chief Secretary, Trevelyan, is the only person who can explain the conspiracy by several of the Irish Constabulary officers against Cornwall. Officers were favorably impressed with Mr. Trevelyan's appointment, and desired to help him as much as possible in the difficult work that lay before him, by giving him such information concerning the actual state of affairs in Ireland as that troublesome time-serve assures us that time of the whole business conspiracy against public morals existing among the Dublin Castle gang, headed by Cornwall. When we first learned of the horrible business, we refused to believe what we heard. The matter being pressed upon us, we had determined to credit it. The result was full proof of the statements that had been made to us. We hesitated to expose the filth for reasons of public policy, but believed that the Government would do all the country of the pests by quietly removing them from public places and withdrawing them from Ireland. We hoped that Mr. Trevelyan would be able to do this, and we gave Mr. Trevelyan and Angel time to take measures. We gave him a full list of all the names of the criminals and the entire testimony collected by the detectives. Mr. Trevelyan, at the time, seemed the whole matter, and then treated it with contempt. We thought that he had bottled up in the end that he had been withdrawn with the British troops, and that the Government to take measures for the suppression of the scandal. This is all the more necessary just now as a general election may take place at any moment. Kilkenny has stated reasons for being dissatisfied with the Parliamentary survey of Mr. Patrick Martin. At the meeting of the Grange and Kilmagal boards in the Balinakill Lodge on Sunday, a resolution was passed describing Mr. Martin as having "lately deserted the ranks of the Irish party, and appealing to the constituency to elect a better Nationalist at the earliest opportunity.

Splendid Victory of the Nationalists in North Leitrim.

A correspondent of the Nation writes: "Last night in Manorhamilton was a day of enthusiasm for the Nationalists of Leitrim. A vacancy in the representation of Leitrim has been created by the action of the Parnellite members in assembling and in the Nationalists, Mr. Sexton, and a Mr. Dillon, the Parnellite candidate, was defeated by a Nationalist, was declared elected by a majority of 1,000 votes. Great rejoicings followed the success of the Nationalists.

A Scheme of the Police Thwarted.

LONDON, July 20.—The English section of the National League has received a letter from a Liverpool correspondent, the League held at Liverpool instead of Dublin, in consequence of the arrests in Ireland. Delegates, a number of English branches will also be represented. The Irish members of the League have issued a manifesto that chief of Police Jenkinson with a regiment of detectives, and "the Queen's Own" of the Irish World. Sheis to introduce forged letters addressed prisoners in Mountjoy Jail, and have the just come from New York, having passed detected in such a method. The original letters of letters between the Irish Invincibles and American Fenians. The identity was discovered by an Irish American who knew one of the writers.

An Irish Constable Sentenced to Death.

Sitting, John Michael Middleton, an Irish constable, has been sentenced to death for assisting in the murder of Doherty, a farmer, in 1882, while the latter was guarding the residence of Thomas Henry Burke, Under Secretary for Ireland, and for having joined secret societies. Middleton's guilt was proved by James Fitzsimons, who attempting to shoot a witness from Ameriga.

IRISH AID TO AMERICA.

The celebration of the Fourth at Dublin, N. Y., was carried out in the spirit of Irish American men, who combined a party love of Ireland with the perpetuation and vitality. The celebration was a great success, and reflected much credit on the management. The literary exercises were of a kind to make a lasting impression on the reader of the Declaration of Independence, read by Hon. T. J. Quinn, Esq., and the address in section by T. W. Burke, Esq., of Ithaca. The address was a very long one, and it was the address, "from which we take the following sentences. We have been invited to fulfilling the mission the found-ers of our government assigned to us. The repetition of the Declaration of Independence "just above the hope of Ireland, but only partly fulfilled.

"The tyranny, perfidy and cruelty of England have not ceased to be felt in Ireland. The Irish industrial and Catholic classes, with Lord Ballinatoy, to celebrate Marriage, and Lord Ballinatoy, to celebrate Marriage, and Lord Ballinatoy, to celebrate Marriage, and

Poetry.

WHEN MOTHERS WATCH.

BY MAURICE F. EGAN.

When mothers watch beside their children's cradles,
And kiss the snowy brows and golden hair,
They do not see the future in the coming,
Though life is marked grief, and pain, and care.

But God is good to all the tender mothers,
He veils the future with the pain and sin,
Though sometimes tears may dim the trusting gladness,
Yet never can they quench the hope within.

Yes, God is very good to tender mothers,
They see no thorn upon the golden head
Of him who plays among life's sunny flowers,
That bloom a fleeting hour, and then are dead.

Yet she, the model of all earthly mothers,
Was never spared the pain of seeing life,
That, bewildered, the thorns played with blooming roses,
The cross must come, for all her prayerful care.

To look—Hi slept—upon His sunny spirits,
And know that they should close upon the Tree;
To press upon His smooth and stainless forehead
And know that there great drops of blood would be.

To catch His dimpled hands and softly warm them
As mothers do, between her own, was pain:
She felt the nail prints on their tender surface,
She could see in her love Lamb from being slain.

When mothers watch beside their children's beds,
And dream bright dreams for them of joy and fame,
Let them remember Mary's trust through anguish,
And ask all blessings through the Holy Name.

THE FATHER'S HAND.

BY ISABELLA F. MAYO.

I'm only an old wife now, sir, and I've time to sit
Ah on the window seat
A-watching the boats come in, and the children
Playing on the street.
Seventy years, sir—all my days—I have lived
Inside the sea,
And it has been moat and money and joy and Liberty, to me.

Father and husband and boys, sir—there was
Not a man of them all
Could have lain still in the house, sir, when the Winds and the waves call.
My father and husband slept in the graves of
Our folk by the shore,
But both of the boys who left me—they never Came back any more!

Oh I've been ready to sink, sir, but one thought would keep me afloat—
I learned it, sir, at a little lass at play in my father's boat.
(Do you know, sir, How often struck me, the lone-son of life is with Plain out in the world around us? Well but give our minds to it!)

My father hadn't a lad, sir, so he paid the man hired to me;
He wished the work done, sir, in the summer, for out on the open sea,
And he'd let me handle the oars, sir, and pull with all my might and main,
But if I'd been left to myself, sir, I'd never have seen home again!

"Pull little maid!" he would cheer me, but still
I knew I was no lad sir;
Though sometimes I'd try to turn as to seem pretty hard on the shore,
Still straight went the boat to the harbor, and as a grew stronger each day,
I found that the only wisdom was in rowing my father's way.

And I think, sir, that God, our Father, keeps Me may strive and struggle our utmost, that we may strengthen and grow Stronger and wiser and humbler, till at last we can suddenly wish a child's
The beauty and peace of His keeping the ear of all life is found!

For the Father knows what we really want is labor and rest with Him,
So He bears us straight through joy and loss over discontent and whim;
Though old, if we ask, then we ask, like a-watching life's sinking sea,
We take our place in our quiet prayer, and that is "Thy will be done."

Literary Miscellany.

The Little Chapel at Monamullin.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FOUR CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENY ROBINSON.

CHAPTER III.

The entrance of Mrs. Clancy with a smoking dish of steaming potatoes interrupted the talk of the conversation, and in a few moments the artist found himself in the Mecca of his dreams, the Royal Academy pictures of the last season, glorifying Millais, extolling Holman, raving over Leslie and Herbert, and ringing the changes over the pearly grays, changeful opals, emeralds, and primroses of Leighton. From London to the salon in easy transition, and thence to the galleries of Dresden, Munich and Florence. She had visited all, and to a purpose. He had lingered within their enchanting walls until every canvas became more or less a friend. There was a wonderful charm in their meeting. To Miss Mim Jyvecote was a listener from Mullingar, naturally enough. To her the mere critique of the high heard pat humble artist savored of a romance veritas but unreal. It is scarcely necessary to say that when people drop into a subject so charming as inexhaustible, so refreshing, the old Scythian is utterly disregarded, and the man was allowed sinking into the seat when Miss Jyvecote's phaeton came to the gate.

"Have you any of your sketches here, Mr. Brown?" she asked as she drew on her yellow dogskin driving gloves.

"Only a few I dashed off on my walk hither from Castlebar."

They were glorious little bits of weather-worn granite, brilliant with gray, green and orange lichens; luminous green moss and black rocks basking in the sunlight; fern-crowned islets and cliffs glittering with bright wild flowers. She gushed over them. What girl does not gush over the sketches of a brilliant lad? Of course she did.

"Oh! if I might dare to ask you for one of them, Mr. Brown."

"Take all," he said.

She would not have them all.

"They are your working-drawings, Mr. Brown!" selecting one, possibly the least valuable.

"Will you not require an escort, Miss Jyvecote, on your lonely drive?"

"Escort! No. In the first place, I shall probably not meet a human being and, in the next, I should only meet a friend were I to encounter any one. I fear my prolonged visit has made you miss work for to-day, Mr. Brown."

"My work! you will hardly guess what I am pledged to do and the work I am about to commence. It is nothing less than a copy of the picture of Daniel O'Connell which hangs over the mantelpiece. It is for Mrs. Clancy, who is about her kitchen wall with it."

"Surely you are not in earnest?"

"Hehe! I am always in earnest, sweet as Mrs. Clancy," he added, laughingly narrating that worthy lady's anxiety with reference to the artistic adornment of the back door.

"May we not hope to have the pleasure of seeing you at Mounalty? Father Maguire, opinion, the pony was still unit to travel.

"It's meself that's watchin' her like a magpie foreinst a marrabone but she's dawny still, the creature! an it wud be a sin for us to be afraid of her for a couple o' days more, anyhow, your riverence.

"But her knees are quite well, Molly, "But she's wake as—as wake as Mrs. Clancy's tay on the third wettin—an I'm afeard for to thrust her more betwixt your riverence' —an is, like, confidential tone—"she's getin' a ballyfey in the front oats in the turnoy, that will stand to her bravely when she's rainin' her winther oats.

Mr. Brown asked Father Maurice a considerable number of questions about his visit, and was particularly anxious about the departure of Mr. Jyvecote.

"He told me that he would leave Westport to-morrow by the night train for Dublin, in order to catch the early boat that leaves Kingstown for Holyhead."

Upon the following morning the artist, slinging his knapsack across his back, started in the direction of the Glendhamrevan valley.

"I want to make a few sketches of the coast scenery about May Tinn," he observed.

"There is better scenery in Foll Dhuy, about two miles further on; and blone my life, you'll be quite alone to Moynalty Castle, and why not go in and see their pictures, your own especially in such a grand gilt Dublin frame?"

Simple priest! Artful artist!

It was a delightful morning that was shining over Monamullin as the artist quitted our town—Mayo town of course. The sea, like a sleeping monster, lay winking at the sun, and but one solitary ship was visible to the eye, a speck on the azure, the blood of golden hues. If young men would only put the simple "why" to themselves in starting upon such expeditions, it might save them much heart-ache; but they will not. Any other query but this one. What's alanan that small word to every lad under 30?

Brown felt unaccountably joyous and brave, charmed with the present, and metaphorically snapping his fingers at the future. A morning walk by the deep and dark blue ocean summons forth this sensation. You bound upon the air; champagne flows over your lips, and the life the flesh is here to forgotten, all the phantoms of care and sorrow are laid "a full fifty fathoms by the lead." It is a glorious seed-time, when every thought bears luscious fruit.

He travels merrily onward, now lumming a barcarolle, now whistling a fragment of a Gaelic, until he reaches the gloomy dells known as the Valley of Glendhamrahaven. A turn of the opinion sended roof brings him in sight of the lordly turrets of Moynality; another turn and lo! he comes upon no less personage than Miss Jyvecote, who, with her married sister, Mrs. Travers, are driving in the direction from whence he had come. Juny was Jehu, and almost pulled their ponies upon their haunches on perceiving the artist.

"This is condescension, Mr. Brown, she said presumingly, his to her sister. "Will you take a seat?"

"Thank, no; I am about to ascend that mountain yonder," pointing vaguely in the direction of the range known as the Twelve Pins of Connemara.

"Then we shall expect you to luncheon or to-morrow."

"I am afraid not. I propose returning by the other road."

"What road? There is no other road."

"Across country."

"Then you do not intend honoring us with a visit!" Her tone was vexed if not angry.

Now, he had quitted Monamullin with no intent of visiting the Castle, he had gone straight to the castle, and yet he replies in the negative. Why? Had better crowd to the mysteries of the human heart than I am analyze his motives. I shall not endeavor to do so.

"Don't you think you are acting rather shabbily?" she said, preparing to resume her drive.

He laughed.

"Le plaisir, then!" And with a stately salutation courteous enough but nothing more he swept off.

He watched the phaeton go whirling along his little road and disappear round a huge fern-covered boulder, and his eyes wandering to the place where the sun shone with himself grew intolerable.

"What an ass, what a fool I have been! What could I have been thinking about! Why, I actually refused to be invited! I actually refused to pay a stereotyped visit. What will Miss Jyvecote think of me? How charming she looked! And that delicious blush when she met me! She seemed really pleased, too. What can she think of me? My chance is gone."

He ascended the rude stump of a felled tree in his favorite attitude, having lighted his pipe.

"Might I trouble yer honner for a trifle, a light or a bit of a match?" asked passing peasant.

"With pleasure; take a dozen."

The man lighted his pipe, he had never seen was retake till now.

"Is it long a-waitin' ye are, yer honner?"

"Do you belong to the castle?" asked our hero. Somehow or other the castle and its inmates were ever uppermost in his thoughts now.

"Yes, sir."

"Is Mr. Jyvecote at home?"

"No, yer honner. I met him this morning at Billy's bridge, makin' hard for West-port.

The cards all in his favor, and he wouldn't play his hand. What did it mean! Would she go to the castle, and, unmoving himself to the obedience, pay that visit which conventionality demanded? No, he shall swung into another current, and he would not alter his course. It was better to be a knight errant, a knight errant, and confined to go home. But I'll pack up wonderfully after I get there. I'm rite to be off. Write home, you know, so take care of me, and make here for me a home. Mother, I'm sure, I'll undress no not me to bed till I get strong enough to dress myself. I have been confined for five nights. Father I buy everything for me I want, and there will be, of my favorite horse—I'll drive her around till I am able to get on her back as I used to. And there's no use in my I spoke of—she'll be gone, I know, and I know I shall get well when I'm with her. What a man I am! If I was I don't mean to work any fig two or three months, but sit lounging about the lodge, the gate, the lawn, the place, watch the sign sat in the barnyard, rake old Nell up and down in the lane and over the fields, and fish for bass down at the pool, and go hafting on the creek, just as I used to do. And boy. And I must go to the old school house, too—the old schoolhouse where I went for ten years, except during harvest and haying. And the white church up at the corners—won't the folks be surprised to see me there next Sunday! Yes, sir! I'm going home, and it seems to me as happy I feel almost will again. I think a night's rest on one of mother's feather beds with my clothes off will make a new man of me. Blood night, sir, if you're going. Only two days more and over the Atlantic to home in the morning. At the station I'm sure my mother will be there to meet him with a carriage. The conductor had telegraphed them at Westport. They were waiting.

The carriage had black glasses. Its occupant was lifted from the carriage and borne in his mother's arms by with the family chaise, in which sat a young girl with her face between her hands. At the white church up at the corners the next Sunday they were surprised to see him.

Just you a bit, Molly, sweet, sweet, sweet, sing, sir, "Merrily Dance Jupiter with a lady fair." Sure, I'm a sinner, I'm a sinner, I'm a sinner, I'm a sinner!

"Do you know Miss Jyvecote?"

"Yes, sir, I'm going home to see my folks down in New York," said a young girl, with a head as full of curls and a face as full of spells of painful coughing. His face was thin and each of his cheeks dotted with a small pink spot, his eyes were bright but sunken, his hands long and fleshless, his voice hoarse and his breathing short. He been out West a couple of years, sir, was sent there for my health, and I am not a better, a good deal better, and want to work. Think I must have worked too hard, as I was always fond of my books, and I'm not boy a nine house for somebody from Jackson New York. Anyhow, I go back home, and nonchalant to go home. But I'll pack up wonderfully after I get there. I'm rite to be off. Write home, you know, so take care of me, and make here for me a home. Mother, I'm sure, I'll undress no not me to bed till I get strong enough to dress myself. I have been confined for five nights. Father I buy everything for me I want, and there will be, of my favorite horse—I'll drive her around till I am able to get on her back as I used to. And there's no use in my I spoke of—she'll be gone, I know, and I know I shall get well when I'm with her. What a man I am! If I was I don't mean to work any fig two or three months, but sit lounging about the lodge, the gate, the lawn, the place, watch the sign sat in the barnyard, rake old Nell up and down in the lane and over the fields, and fish for bass down at the pool, and go hafting on the creek, just as I used to do. And boy. And I must go to the old school house, too—the old schoolhouse where I went for ten years, except during harvest and haying. And the white church up at the corners—won't the folks be surprised to see me there next Sunday! Yes, sir! I'm going home, and it seems to me as happy I feel almost will again. I think a night's rest on one of mother's feather beds with my clothes off will make a new man of me. Blood night, sir, if you're going. Only two days more and over the Atlantic to home in the morning. At the station I'm sure my mother will be there to meet him with a carriage. The conductor had telegraphed them at Westport. They were waiting.

"Sir? SIR? IS THIS THE HOUSE?

In the hope that the Kellys would, when they heard the noise, come out and surrender. The house kept on and on, and still the outlaws made no sign of surrender, till at length, when it seemed as if they actually would perish in the flames, the doors were broken open and the police of the village, headed by that article, priest, rushed forward into the house. Three of the lonlangers were dead—burned to death, but the fourth, Neil Kelly, the leader of the gang, was found to be still alive, though badly wounded. He was subsequently conveyed to Melbourne, where he was tried and hanged. Such, then, is the story of the Kellys, and such is the reason why, when the train passes the little station of Glenbunnavan, all passengers bestir themselves to look upon the scene which rendered famous through the fact of its being the place where the most formidable band of bushrangers that Australia has ever known was destroyed.

THE RESCUE OF GREELY.

Fearful Sufferings of the Surviving Party.

ATTICA, N. Y., on June 22, at a point about 1 mile west of Attica village, it is latitude 78 deg. 45 min. north, and longitude 74 deg. 25 min. west, the Times and Herald received the following seven survivors of the Lady Greely expedition, namely:

Lieutenant and Brevet Major A. W. Greely, Sergeant Brainard, Sergeant Frederick, Sergeant Linney, Sergeant Rice and Biederbeck, Private Connell, Sergeant Ellis.

Sergeant Ellison had both hands and feet frozen off. Their condition when found was most desperate. They were on the verge of starvation, and had on hand only a few fragments of boiled seal skin, separated from clothing.

Seventeen of the twenty-five who composed the expedition had perished by starvation and cold, and was most dreadful. Twelve bodies were recovered and, with the exception of that of Lieutenant Frederick Christensen, which was interred at Disco, they are preserved in alcohol on board the Thetis and Bear, and will be buried in the cemetery of Sergeant Ellison, since deceased. The Thetis will leave Portland on July 1, and will bade him farewell to the Pictous to Lady Greely's residence.

A more serious was Hobson, and the final rescue of the survivors, Greely, Lockwood and three others, entered and there saw a sight which, for horrible, beggars description. Six men were in the middle of the camp, crouched in his sleeping bag, Hanson, with hands and feet frozen off, was propped against the foot of the previous men. Rederbach lay half sitting from a stump, Connell, propped at by his comrades as dying, was reclining in a recumbent position on Lively. Brainard lay down alone under the shelter of a corner of the tent and was separated from the rest by about the length of a man. Immediately Capt. Ash, Lieut. Colwell and Dr. Pavy, who accompanied the rescue began to administer small doses of food of the highest description. The men at first were restless, and loudly remonstrated on getting more and more food. Weeping with joy, they kissed their rescuers, tears flowing down the cheeks of the men, as they lifted the body out of the coffin and proceeded to adopt the measures proper for resuscitation.

Meanwhile, the brave stood at the door, the funeral cortege was assembled, the carriages stood waiting, while within all was connotation and sorrow, servants hurrying to and fro, fetching hot bricks, stimulants, restoratives, in obedience to the doctors commands, the latter plying every energy in the endeavor to keep the flickering spark of life from flying out and the startled family, half paralyzed by the sudden revelation, standing around, gathered in anxious, silent groups.

Breathlessly they watched for tokens of returning consciousness, and, in dumb amazement, remained one fleak—that we fancied could be accounted genuine it was the electric girl. So many Georgia colonels and doctors had certified over their esteemed respectable signatures to the effect that she claimed to be that there was no room for doubt. Moreover, the strong testimony of a Georgia colonel being regarded the world over as absolutely conclusive on any and every subject.

But it seems that this eminent citizen, Mr. Ely, said Gordonia, the scientific persons who passed them in certifying so freely, have been sadly deceived. So long as the phenomenon was not removed from the-gaze, distance lent enchantment to her capacity. One newspaper, published further north, was so charmed at the prospect that it published a long and glowing account of the wonderful and beautiful girl whose mystic power would enable them when married to perform their own housework by a mere effort of will. Alas! for the disappointed, complete emancipation from servant girl rule, that is published a weird and thrilling disquisition about it, in a very different strain, the closing sugg ment for trying to teach people to become insane.

In an evil hour the phenomenon turned her steps toward the north, and, having recently reached New York, she gave a public exhibition of her powers at Wallack's theatre on Thursday evening, to a small, among those upon whom she operated was a Mr. W. D. Gordonia, who, in the language of the day, in a short time he is said to have discovered that there was imposition, and then it appeared several of the girl's "marvelous" feats in proof of it. The result was that the "electric girl" was found to be a great "turned down the gas and ran away. Gordonia, who was one of the most respectable and of the day, for after such a surprise that he felt it was his duty to continue her attempts to deceive the public, the tedious public.

Nothing but a Laborer.

In passing along the road, we saw a group of people congregated around a prostrate form.

"What's the matter?" we inquired.

"A sunstroke!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" we exclaimed, and we hurried on.

"Yes, sir, nothing but a laborer." A poor wife, sick and weary, watches every passer on the street, expecting to see her husband, who is tall, and hopes each one will prove to be the husband of her dreams and a hard-working life.

"Nothing but a laborer!" but little children cluster around their mother's knee, and ask, in disappointed tones:

"Why doesn't our father come?"

"Nothing but a laborer!" but the baby lies in its cradle and clasps her hands at each footfall crowing—

"Papa! papa!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" for as the night falls dark, those with sad-sore faces, clasped hands, and stooped shoulders, arrify watch for the coming of his whose breath is forever hushed. Ah! how the heart aches at the words of love to the wife who has worn out her life in toil for him, whose cheering words have sunk into the ear of death, and the little ones—whose strong arms he still upheld—who have grown up around him, who in her sweet sleep murmurs his name.

Mark the agony of those faces, as the messenger of a non approaches the door, and the sickness of hope deferred, poor widow gives as she falls fainting to the floor—the little children, who, in their ignorance, lay a very mourn with theirs, as the wail of the mother rises and falls, in a language that falls on all, as the cotjes is sung over the dead, and the tears are so anxiously looked for—and when the children, kneeling near her, call in vain for their father's coming, they of ye can, "nothing but a laborer."

Cheerfulness.

Next to the sunlight of heaven is the cheerful face. There is no thinking of the bright eye, the unclouded brow, the pleasant smile, the ever-ready word of welcome. Who has not felt its cheerlying influence? One glance at this face from a friend, or even a stranger, will go into the beautiful realms of hope. One cheerful face in a family will make it seem like a bright and warm asylum. A host of evil spirits may be driven from the home, if they never enter and abide there the cheerful face will put them to shame and flight.

It may be a very plain face, but there is something in it that is very attractive. Plain and its cheery smile sends the blood dancing through the veins of every one. Nothing so the phenomenon was not removed from the-gaze, distance lent enchantment to her capacity. One newspaper, published further north, was so charmed at the prospect that it published a long and glowing account of the wonderful and beautiful girl whose mystic power would enable them when married to perform their own housework by a mere effort of will. Alas! for the disappointed, complete emancipation from servant girl rule, that is published a weird and thrilling disquisition about it, in a very different strain, the closing suggestion for trying to teach people to become insane.

In an evil hour the phenomenon turned her steps toward the north, and, having recently reached New York, she gave a public exhibition of her powers at Wallack's theatre on Thursday evening, to a small, among those upon whom she operated was a Mr. W. D. Gordonia, who, in the language of the day, in a short time he is said to have discovered that there was imposition, and then it appeared several of the girl's "marvelous" feats in proof of it. The result was that the "electric girl" was found to be a great "turned down the gas and ran away. Gordonia, who was one of the most respectable and of the day, for after such a surprise that he felt it was his duty to continue her attempts to deceive the public, the tedious public.

Nothing but a Laborer.

In passing along the road, we saw a group of people congregated around a prostrate form.

"What's the matter?" we inquired.

"A sunstroke!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" we exclaimed, and we hurried on.

"Yes, sir, nothing but a laborer." A poor wife, sick and weary, watches every passer on the street, expecting to see her husband, who is tall, and hopes each one will prove to be the husband of her dreams and a hard-working life.

"Nothing but a laborer!" but little children cluster around their mother's knee, and ask, in disappointed tones:

"Why doesn't our father come?"

"Nothing but a laborer!" but the baby lies in its cradle and clasps her hands at each footfall crowing—

"Papa! papa!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" for as the night falls dark, those with sad-sore faces, clasped hands, and stooped shoulders, anxiously watch for the coming of his whose breath is forever hushed. Ah! how the heart aches at the words of love to the wife who has worn out her life in toil for him, whose cheering words have sunk into the ear of death, and the little ones—whose strong arms he still upheld—who have grown up around him, who in her sweet sleep murmurs his name.

Mark the agony of those faces, as the messenger of a non approaches the door, and the sickness of hope deferred, poor widow gives as she falls fainting to the floor—the little children, who, in their ignorance, lay a very mourn with theirs, as the wail of the mother rises and falls, in a language that falls on all, as the cotjes is sung over the dead, and the tears are so anxiously looked for—and when the children, kneeling near her, call in vain for their father's coming, they of ye can, "nothing but a laborer."

Cheerfulness.

Next to the sunlight of heaven is the cheerful face. There is no thinking of the bright eye, the unclouded brow, the pleasant smile, the ever-ready word of welcome. Who has not felt its cheerlying influence? One glance at this face from a friend, or even a stranger, will go into the beautiful realms of hope. One cheerful face in a family will make it seem like a bright and warm asylum. A host of evil spirits may be driven from the home, if they never enter and abide there the cheerful face will put them to shame and flight.

It may be a very plain face, but there is something in it that is very attractive. Plain and its cheery smile sends the blood dancing through the veins of every one. Nothing so

---

Farm and Home.

"LITTLE BROWN HANDS."

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long dusty lane,
Where the quiet whistles lead in the wheat field
Are yellow with ripening grain.

They find, in the thick waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry grows,
They gather the earliest wild flowers,
In the soft tinted October noses.

They know where the apples lurk, slyly
And are sweeter than Eve's, I wiss!
They know where the fruit is the thickest
On the lone, thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate sea-weeds,
And hold tiny shells of a-ear,
They pick up the beautiful sea shells—
Fairy barks that have dotted to land.

They wave from the tall, swaying tree-tops,
Where the orioles hammock nest swings,
And at which time are folded in slumber
Up a song that a fond mother sings.

Those who hold unwearied over the cradles
The humble and poor become great!
And from those little brown hands of children
Shall grow mightly rulers of State.

The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and world-wide fame,
The sword, and chisel and palette
Shall be held in the little brown hand.

On Going Shopping.

Men, as well as women, take a good deal of pleasure in going shopping. Women go shopping for pleasure, men go shopping only for a thing bought. There are exceptions, of course, but only Money's Red Letter Days.

Women are on the humdrum every day occasions of shopping, a woman is really over happier than when she has a purchase in view. Two or three golden rules in going shopping should always be remembered by the young housewife.

Always go shopping early; then you get the best pick.

Always pay cash, then you receive the best attention.

Always be polite. A pleasant tongue wins a good bargain, where a sour one often gets "nay."

There are shops and shops, and when both sell the same article, one offers the brightest and cleanest. "A well-dressed" window is a good index to the store.

A good brain trade means skill in buying and selling, and in the selling of articles. Little trifles take home yourself. It is not fair to a tradesman to make him spend a penny in telling you a sixpenny jest.

Above all, shop early, pity the assistants and lower, if you can help it, enter a shop late at night. Have your mind made up as to what you want before you take to stand your feet and work hard, from night to the morning till perhaps sitting on to them in the evening?

A Hint to Drinkers.

Liquor dealers, it is said, pay on an average 42 per gallon for whiskey. One gallon contains an average (fanty dire drinks, and it ten cents a drink a man pays 86.40 a gallon for his whiskey; or rather he pays 86 for the whiskey and $4.50 to the man for handing it over the bar. In view of these figures a Western paper makes the following pertinent remarks to drinkers: "Make your wife your bar-keeper. Lend her $2 to buy a gallon of whiskey. Instead of spending 10 cents for your drink, ask your wife for 5 cents, and every time you want a drink go and pay her one cent."

By the time you have drank a gallon she will have 86.50, or enough to refund the money you loaned her, to pay for another gallon of whiskey and a balance of $2.50. Make your wife your bar-keeper, open accounts on her own capital, and when you feel rather and so inclined, pitch in to yourself, shouted and lisped by all respectable persons, poor wife will have enough saved from you to pay for another gallon of whiskey and a balance of $2.50.

How He Came Out.

"I understand," said Charlie to Fred, "that you went up last night to see your girl's father and was kicked out of the room in-law. How is it?"

"Yes, I went up and had my way about the time that twilight and daylight get mixed up so that you can't tell a. m. from p. m."

"Did you see the old gentleman?"

"I did, for a fact."

"And did you make the proposition previously cited?"

"I did, for a fact."

"Well, how did you come out?"

"Darned if I know. The old man caught me under the arm and I thought he was his foot, and as the windows and doors were thrown open I don't really know just how I did come out; but as I saw the carpenters putting in a section of new sash this morning, I am led to believe I came out over the window. You see, I was in somewhat of a hurry and did not stop to make a careful investigation as to the exact locality of my egress. Good morning. I'll see you later. There comes the old fellow this way now."

He Had Changed.

"Do you remember Joe Grimes?" inquired Stopbert at dinner.

"Who, that old scar-faced monkey that used to hang around you so much?" asked Mrs. Fitz.

"Yes, the same man," replied Fitz, "he has changed considerably of late."

"The hateful wretch. I wish he could have changed away from me, and take his jaw that always made me sick to look at; you see I don't like scars on a man."

"Yes, he went West, you remember and has made half a million dollars; he has brought the finest scar into Boston city, and he is—"

"Oh, Fitz," broke in the lady, "did bring him with you to tea this evening; I will be so delighted to see him again."

He Was a Unlyflist.

She was in humble circumstances, but she was a Boston girl for all that.

"Yes, papa is a unlyflist," she remarked to the railroad superintendent who had sat on an excursion train.

"Indeed!" responded the young gentleman addressed, very much concerned to know what a unlyeliist might be, but very much afraid of exposing his modern ignorance by asking.

From a Boston young man on the train it was learned that "papa" imparted the desired impetus to a wheel-horse used in connection with city improvements.

She Acted too Much.

As they were leaning over the gate he whispered to her that their married life would be happy and happy ever after, if she would do if he would ever do or say anything to cause her one moment's unhappiness.

"Will you promise me?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Will a nice lawn in front?"

"Yes, a nice lawn."

"And we'll play croquet?"

"Yes."

"And you'll let me beat you every time?"

He was silent. His breast heaved and he clothed the gate with one hand.

"Do hence, you do not love me!" she screamed at him. "I know you'd move your bed and be about going through the arches. Good night forever!"

She slammed her bed into the front door slammed, and then he turned away with the remark:

"It was a narrow escape for me. Thank Heaven that the tie is broken!"

Family Fun.

MARY AND HER LITTLE BEAU.

Mary had a little beau,
As sweet as he could be,
And every night he wouldn't go,
And that made mamsy

For Mary's ma she wouldn't
But listened, full of tears,
And when, at last, poor Mary crept
To bed, she had her ears.

Ma's eyes were sharper than Mary's
And she watchers that kiss;
And so, the next time that he came
The chap that wouldn't go.

And Mary she grew thin and pale,
Her heart was broken, too,
Her parents thought had no avail,
He would not be put out.

And spite of Mary's woeful cases
He'd shoved off the coal,
And poke the fire into a blaze,
And on the sofa fell.

At length the ma and pa, both grave,
Said things had reached a pass,
When something must be done to save
Their winter's coal and gas.

The youth's "contentious" they must know,
And Mary's heart, poor soul,
Would question Mary's little beau,
And pa said he would.

Mrs. Mary wept, but all in vain—
That very night he go
Walked in the parlor with his cane—
Behold him come her no.

And then Mary's little beau
Stopped poking at the grate,
And turning round had he most go
Before it was too late.

But ma backed up against the door,
And pa leaned on the door,
And at the frightened youth he swore
Not to come there no more.

Until he's settled for the year
And ma thinks he will behave,
But if a marriage came to pass,
He'd make a fine beau.

Alas! poor Mary's little beau
Had not shown with his pay!
And begged, if she would let him go
He'd settle up next day.

"No treat!" the angry parent cried,
And then he said, "Not one!"
Across his knee and swiftly piled
The tender little son.

Then bowed him out upon the snow
And locked the door on him
Which settled Mary's little beau,
Then went to her room.

A Surprised Mind Reader.

At a science in Dublin, a thought reader located, but he could not find a marked pin hid by one of the audience. Several of them came forward, among whom was a conducter. The boy who had hid the pin lived in an adjoining room, in the presence of the committee, among which was the conductor. The student, suspecting this man from his looks, slyly took away the pin from its hiding place. In the return to the platform the thought reader gazed in the hider's face, and, pointing to his breast, was blindfolded and led the student to the hiding place, but it seemed could find no pin. He retorted, acknowledging his defeat, and looking daggers at the conductor. "Now, gentlemen, said the student, I undertake to say that if this 'diviner of the human mind' will do as I ask, I will take the audience, without a single hint from me, will know where the pin is' and, turning to the thought reader, he said: "Sir! Do did so." He was seen to yell, and jumping up, the thought reader dragged pulled from the seat of his trousers the marked pin.

Is Hard Work.

"I understand," said Charlie to Fred, "that you went up last night to see your girl's father and was kicked out of the room in-law. How is it?"

"Yes, I went up and had my way about the time that twilight and daylight get mixed up so that you can't tell a. m. from p. m."

"Did you see the old gentleman?"

"I did, for a fact."

"And did you make the proposition previously cited?"

"I did, for a fact."

"Well, how did you come out?"

"Darned if I know. The old man caught me under the arm and I thought he was his foot, and as the windows and doors were thrown open I don't really know just how I did come out; but as I saw the carpenters putting in a section of new sash this morning, I am led to believe I came out over the window. You see, I was in somewhat of a hurry and did not stop to make a careful investigation as to the exact locality of my egress. Good morning. I'll see you later. There comes the old fellow this way now."

He Had Changed.

"Do you remember Joe Grimes?" inquired Stopbert at dinner.

"Who, that old scar-faced monkey that used to hang around you so much?" asked Mrs. Fitz.

"Yes, the same man," replied Fitz, "he has changed considerably of late."

"The hateful wretch. I wish he could have changed away from me, and take his jaw that always made me sick to look at; you see I don't like scars on a man."

"Yes, he went West, you remember and has made half a million dollars; he has brought the finest scar into Boston city, and he is—"

"Oh, Fitz," broke in the lady, "did bring him with you to tea this evening; I will be so delighted to see him again."

He Was a Unlyflist.

She was in humble circumstances, but she was a Boston girl for all that.

"Yes, papa is a unlyflist," she remarked to the railroad superintendent who had sat on an excursion train.

"Indeed!" responded the young gentleman addressed, very much concerned to know what a unlyeliist might be, but very much afraid of exposing his modern ignorance by asking.

From a Boston young man on the train it was learned that "papa" imparted the desired impetus to a wheel-horse used in connection with city improvements.

She Acted too Much.

As they were leaning over the gate he whispered to her that their married life would be happy and happy ever after, if she would do if he would ever do or say anything to cause her one moment's unhappiness.

"Will you promise me?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Will a nice lawn in front?"

"Yes, a nice lawn."

"And we'll play croquet?"

"Yes."

"And you'll let me beat you every time?"

He was silent. His breast heaved and he clothed the gate with one hand.

"Do hence, you do not love me!" she screamed at him. "I know you'd move your bed and be about going through the arches. Good night forever!"

She slammed her bed into the front door slammed, and then he turned away with the remark:

"It was a narrow escape for me. Thank Heaven that the tie is broken!"

HIRED ALIVE.

Some Remarkable Instances of Resurrectation.

"The Best is Always the Cheapest!"

This old maxim holds good in many things, but in none more than in

FAMILY GROCERIES

Which are as often

Adulterated by Unscrupulous Dealers

To the Great Detriment of

EVERY PURCHASER.

The best plan to pursue, therefore, is to purchase our

FAMILY GROCERIES

From such Firms as

SBARBORO & CO.,

Whose reputation for

Low Prices, Full Weight, And Pure Groceries,

EXTENDS OVER 25 YEARS

In San Francisco.

—Our Store is Located at—

531 Washington St., 531

(Between Montgomery and Sansome.)

READ THESE PRICES

And Call and Examine

OUR GOODS.

15 lbs. Very Light-brown Sugar, $1
11 pounds White Sugar, $1
20 pounds Tapioca, $.
25 pounds Sago, $1
25 pounds Codfish, $1
10 pounds Green Coffee, $1
Star Ground Coffee, 15c. per lb
Fine Tea, (No Humbug) 50c per lb
Fine Teas, 50c. per lb
Family Mixed Tea, 25c per lb
5 gallon can waterwhite Coal Oil, $1
30 pounds P White Beans, $1
Golden Syrup, 5 gall. kegs, - $2.50
Family Flour, per barrel, $4.75

And all other Good Equally Cheap.

WINES AND LIQUORS.

Claret, Zinfandel, 1 gallon	75c
Sherry, Port, 1 gallon	$1 00
Sherry, Old, 1 gallon	$1 50
Old Tom Gin, 1 gallon	$1 00
Old Tom Bourbon, 1 gallon	$1 00
Cognac Brandy, 1 gallon	$1 50
Jamaica Rum, 1 gallon	$1 00

The Manager of our House having had

25 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

in the

GROCERY BUSINESS

Feels confident of our ability to supply

Large Stocks of Goods,

In a guarantee that under his management we are able to sell FIRST-CLASS

GROCERIES

CHEAPER

Than any other house on this Coast

Economy is the result of trading with Us.

Wealth is the result of Economy.

All orders promptly and carefully filled and delivered to any part of the city free of charge.

Country orders solicited and made a specialty and shipped free of charge.

Country Produce Exchanged!

SEND FOR OUR PRICE LIST.

SBARBORO CO.

B. SBARBORO, Manager.

The Electric Girl.

If there was one novelty—or, in dime-museum terms—one freak—that we fancied could be accounted genuine it was the electric girl. So many Georgia colonels and doctors had certified over their esteemed respectable signatures to the effect that she claimed to be that there was no room for doubt. Moreover, the strong testimony of a Georgia colonel being regarded the world over as absolutely conclusive on any and every subject.

But it seems that this eminent citizen, Mr. Ely, said Gordonia, the scientific persons who passed them in certifying so freely, have been sadly deceived. So long as the phenomenon was not removed from the-gaze, distance lent enchantment to her capacity. One newspaper, published further north, was so charmed at the prospect that it published a long and glowing account of the wonderful and beautiful girl whose mystic power would enable them when married to perform their own housework by a mere effort of will. Alas! for the disappointed, complete emancipation from servant girl rule, that is published a weird and thrilling disquisition about it, in a very different strain, the closing suggestion for trying to teach people to become insane.

In an evil hour the phenomenon turned her steps toward the north, and, having recently reached New York, she gave a public exhibition of her powers at Wallack's theatre on Thursday evening, to a small, among those upon whom she operated was a Mr. W. D. Gordonia, who, in the language of the day, in a short time he is said to have discovered that there was imposition, and then it appeared several of the girl's "marvelous" feats in proof of it. The result was that the "electric girl" was found to be a great "turned down the gas and ran away. Gordonia, who was one of the most respectable and of the day, for after such a surprise that he felt it was his duty to continue her attempts to deceive the public, the tedious public.

Nothing but a Laborer.

In passing along the road, we saw a group of people congregated around a prostrate form.

"What's the matter?" we inquired.

"A sunstroke!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" we exclaimed, and we hurried on.

"Yes, sir, nothing but a laborer." A poor wife, sick and weary, watches every passer on the street, expecting to see her husband, who is tall, and hopes each one will prove to be the husband of her dreams and a hard-working life.

"Nothing but a laborer!" but little children cluster around their mother's knee, and ask, in disappointed tones:

"Why doesn't our father come?"

"Nothing but a laborer!" but the baby lies in its cradle and clasps her hands at each footfall crowing—

"Papa! papa!"

"Nothing but a laborer!" for as the night falls dark, those with sad-sore faces, clasped hands, and stooped shoulders, anxiously watch for the coming of his whose breath is forever hushed. Ah! how the heart aches at the words of love to the wife who has worn out her life in toil for him, whose cheering words have sunk into the ear of death, and the little ones—whose strong arms he still upheld—who have grown up around him, who in her sweet sleep murmurs his name.

Mark the agony of those faces, as the messenger of a non approaches the door, and the sickness of hope deferred, poor widow gives as she falls fainting to the floor—the little children, who, in their ignorance, lay a very mourn with theirs, as the wail of the mother rises and falls, in a language that falls on

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1886.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intercession of St. Francis de Sales, under whose patronage this paper is placed, the writers of Catholic journals who defend the cause of religion, its rights and those of its Holy Apostolic See, and adhere to its doctrines and precepts with devotion and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the chief speaking-trumpet of the age, and gives instant utterance to public opinion, and disperses it abroad in all directions. In our view, religious journalism is not only a useful and natural occupation, but only a work indispensable to the welfare of society, but a part of apostolic labor. What is and what implies the head and soul of Catholic journalism, but its assertion of the Divine Rights of Christ, and of the Divine Wrongs of Satan?"—DAVIS, TORONTO MISSION UNIVERSE.

A Special Service for California Catholics.

Prayer is its shield of the sinner and the terror of the saint. The Church, therefore, in all necessities which arise wherein the lives and happiness of her children are concerned, has recourse to prayer in order to plead to God for His mercy, to implore His paternal protection, or to render homage, adoration, and thanksgiving for all the favors Heaven bestows upon those who love and honor God.

California is subject to earthquakes, hence our venerable Archbishop, many years ago, established an annual Mass, to be celebrated throughout this Archdiocese on some day adjacent to the feast of St. Ignatius, in order to invoke the mercy of God upon the people of this State so they may not be visited by disastrous earthquakes. That Mass will be celebrated throughout this Archdiocese on next Saturday morning. Attend it and join in the prayers of the Church for the occasion.

St. Bernardine Tomelli, canonized Saint by Pope St. Marcellus in the year 309, and invoked in Rome and all through southern Italy as a special protector against earthquakes. He was sent to preach the gospel on the shores of the Adriatic, where he received large numbers into the true fold. Finally, he received the martyr's crown under the Emperor Diocletian.

The Loss of Children Sustained by the Church.

A correspondent in a neighboring city asks us, if, in our reports of the progress of the Church, we are aware of the vast numbers that are falling away from the faith? Yes, we are, and we have often asked and answered a hundred times before, both publicly and privately. Christians "fall away" from the practice of Christianity even during the time of Magdeburg the saints of God upon earth, yet that disaster to individuals did not prevent St. Paul from telling the Romans, in his epistle written to them twenty-four years after our Lord's Ascension, that their faith was spoken of in the whole world. Catholics are human, just like other people; the Church is made up of saints and sinners—Catholics who are good, bad, or indifferent, but then it must be borne in mind that our Blessed Redeemer has told us that it was to bring sinners to repentance, and such is the mission maintained by His Church ever since.

It is painful to suppose that all Catholics born into the world and baptized into the Church will persevere in aiming at Christian perfection by a constant practice of their faith. Adam and Eve fell and were expelled from Paradise, yet they had not a single temptation to sin in their position, where a hundred exist for the nineteenth century Catholic. There are a thousand temptations thrown in the path of Catholic children now-a-days—even by Catholic parents themselves—that were entirely unknown to Catholics in former centuries.

The child of Catholic parents is sent to the corner grocery for five cents worth of beer, when it is scarcely the height of the counter across which it receives the pitcher filled with stuff pernicious to perpetuity in religion—and here is where the innocent victim very often lays the corner-stone of an intemperate life that repudiates religion afterwards. The child is sent now to a public school—where "priesteraft" is spurned and "Popish" domination denounced—until the poor, helpless, and innocent victim forgets to say "Our Father" it learned in early youth from the priest of the parish. Then the child is placed at work in some factory where literature is read out of bed books and immoral illustrated papers, and where blasphemy is heard out of bad mouths morning, noon, and night. Some months before the Catholic child has only a knowledge of God through the blasphemous use of His Holy Name. He is now ripe to be "coaxed" into some society, or to become the habitué of some saloon, and then Sunday becomes a day for idle, drunkenness, and discord. A "mixed marriage" may be subsequently contracted, and when the "Fenian" has joined the couple, they live together just as long as it pleases their pleasure, and then they take up with some other "affinity," just like their neighbors who are higher in the social scale—but no less guilty in the sight of God.

It is but an epitome of the fate that befalls thousands of the children of Catholic parents who deliberately place themselves in the way of their offspring so that it is almost impossible for them to grow up Catholics. Is the Church to blame for this? Was it the blessed Redeemer of Mercy for the defection of Judas? These questions must necessarily receive negative answers.

The Catholic parent is the power next to God in directing the destiny of the Catholic child. Catholic churches, schools, Priests, Sisters or sodalities—are of no avail to prevent the faith in the hearts of those who are driven to the devil by means of bad fathers and bad mothers. The most expensive object in the sight of God—a Cardinal Manning recently said—is a bad Catholic—and the man or woman who says that they are Catholics, but not practical, are the class that compose the modern Herods—and measure the innocent children God gave them for His kingdom.

Oh! what heavenly recompense and glory awaits those pious, virtuous, temperate and prudent Catholic parents who watch constantly over their children' welfare, and who bring them up to know God, to love God, and to serve Him! High places in the kingdom of God are reserved for such sowers of the seed of Catholic faith. But who can fathom the fate of those unfortunate Catholic parents who not only fall away from the faith themselves, but who also drag down their offspring into that deep pit of perdition into which they plunge their own poor souls! God's law spurned, God's Church ignored, God's graces repudiated, God's mercy refused! Oh! what ingratitude can equal that which adds to personal injury upon insult to Almighty God? Yet the world is full of just such Catholic parents; we see them coming out of the "Black Maria" nearly every morning in the week; we see their children carried off in the police ran to the House of Correction, the Industrial School, or the Magdalen Asylum, and we can only hope that some miraculous intervention of Heaven will stay the tide of crime that is dancing so many Catholic souls into hell, and damning so many Catholic souls.

The same causes lead to the same results in every city in Christendom. The current of criminal life on the part of Catholics runs precisely in the same direction in all parts of the world. It rises in the foothills of indifference, and after gathering strength from the poisonous rivers of the Seven Deadly Sins, it loses itself in the surging sea of perdition!

The Church cannot control those who cannot or will not control themselves, hence she is, in a measure, helpless to save or succor the sinner who continuatously parades around in defiance of her warnings on the sweet yoke of the Cross." Useless is the Mass to those who are too drunk or too filthy to attend; unavailing are the Sacraments to those who are too deeply absorbed in the world's aim to receive them; ineffectual is the sermon to the sensual soul; St. Bernardine Tomelli pleasure-seeker whose church is the dance room of some picnic park, and whose prayer book is the Police Gazette. Observe on the Sunday schools to Catholic parents who prefer their children to picnic in the public beer garden rather than pray to God in communion with their classmates. No Catholic prelate or priest has any power over such so-called Catholics; the Catholic press is not patronized by them; Catholic charities are unaided by them; Catholic rites are repudiated, and Catholic Sacraments spurned by them—until the greatness of God's mercy opens a cloud of clemency over their careers lives and they call on the Church to do for them in their last hour what a lifetime of their Church rarely achieves.

Bad literature, intemperance, bad example, mixed marriages, bad company, godless education, secret societies, and the numerous crime of blaspheming the name of God upon earth, yet that disaster to individuals did not prevent St. Paul from telling the Romans, in his epistle written to them twenty-four years after our Lord's Ascension, that their faith was spoken of in the whole world. Catholics are human, just like other people; the Church is made up of saints and sinners—Catholics who are good, bad, or indifferent, but then it must be borne in mind that our Blessed Redeemer has told us that it was to bring sinners to repentance, and such is the mission maintained by His Church ever since.

It is painful to suppose that all Catholics born into the world and baptized into the Church will persevere in aiming at Christian perfection by a constant practice of their faith. Adam and Eve fell and were expelled from Paradise, yet they had not a single temptation to sin in their position, where a hundred exist for the nineteenth century Catholic. There are a thousand temptations thrown in the path of Catholic children now-a-days—even by Catholic parents themselves—that were entirely unknown to Catholics in former centuries.

The child of Catholic parents is sent to the corner grocery for five cents worth of beer, when it is scarcely the height of the counter across which it receives the pitcher filled with stuff pernicious to perpetuity in religion—and here is where the innocent victim very often lays the corner-stone of an intemperate life that repudiates religion afterwards. The child is sent now to a public school—where "priesteraft" is spurned and "Popish" domination denounced—until the poor, helpless, and innocent victim forgets to say "Our Father" it learned in early youth from the priest of the parish. Then the child is placed at work in some factory where literature is read out of bed books and immoral illustrated papers, and where blasphemy is heard out of bad mouths morning, noon, and night. Some months before the Catholic child has only a knowledge of God through the blasphemous use of His Holy Name. He is now ripe to be "coaxed" into some society, or to become the habitué of some saloon, and then Sunday becomes a day for idle, drunkenness, and discord. A "mixed marriage" may be subsequently contracted, and when the "Fenian" has joined the couple, they live together just as long as it pleases their pleasure, and then they take up with some other "affinity," just like their neighbors who are higher in the social scale—but no less guilty in the sight of God.

It is but an epitome of the fate that befalls thousands of the children of Catholic parents who deliberately place themselves in the way of their offspring so that it is almost impossible for them to grow up Catholics. Is the Church to blame for this? Was it the blessed Redeemer of Mercy for the defection of Judas? These questions must necessarily receive negative answers.

The Catholic parent is the power next to God in directing the destiny of the Catholic child. Catholic churches, schools, Priests, Sisters or sodalities—are of no avail to prevent the faith in the hearts of those who are driven to the devil by means of bad fathers and bad mothers. The most expensive object in the sight of God—a Cardinal Manning recently said—is a bad Catholic—and the man or woman who says that they are Catholics, but not practical, are the class that compose the modern Herods—and measure the innocent children God gave them for His kingdom.

Oh! what heavenly recompense and glory awaits those pious, virtuous, temperate and prudent Catholic parents who watch constantly over their children' welfare, and who bring them up to know God, to love God, and to serve Him! High places in the kingdom of God are reserved for such sowers of the seed of Catholic faith. But who can fathom the fate of those unfortunate Catholic parents who not only fall away from the faith themselves, but who also drag down their offspring into that deep pit of perdition into which they plunge their own poor souls! God's law spurned, God's Church ignored, God's graces repudiated, God's mercy refused! Oh! what ingratitude can equal that which adds to personal injury upon insult to Almighty God? Yet the world is full of just such Catholic parents; we see them coming out of the "Black Maria" nearly every morning in the week; we see their children carried off in the police ran to the House of Correction, the Industrial School, or the Magdalen Asylum, and we can only hope that some miraculous intervention of Heaven will stay the tide of crime that is dancing so many Catholic souls into hell, and damning so many Catholic souls.

The same causes lead to the same results in every city in Christendom. The current of criminal life on the part of Catholics runs precisely in the same direction in all parts of the world. It rises in the foothills of indifference, and after gathering strength from the poisonous rivers of the Seven Deadly Sins, it loses itself in the surging sea of perdition!

The Church cannot control those who cannot or will not control themselves, hence she is, in a measure, helpless to save or succor the sinner who continuatously parades around in defiance of her warnings on the sweet yoke of the Cross." Useless is the Mass to those who are too drunk or too filthy to attend; unavailing are the Sacraments to those who are too deeply absorbed in the world's aim to receive them; ineffectual is the sermon to the sensual soul

St. Bernardine Tomelli pleasure-seeker whose church is the dance room of some picnic park, and whose prayer book is the Police Gazette. Observe on the Sunday schools to Catholic parents who prefer their children to picnic in the public beer garden rather than pray to God in communion with their classmates. No Catholic prelate or priest has any power over such so-called Catholics; the Catholic press is not patronized by them; Catholic charities are unaided by them; Catholic rites are repudiated, and Catholic Sacraments spurned by them—until the greatness of God's mercy opens a cloud of clemency over their careers lives and they call on the Church to do for them in their last hour what a lifetime of their Church rarely achieves.

Bad literature, intemperance, bad example, mixed marriages, bad company, godless education, secret societies, and the numerous crime of blaspheming the name of God upon earth, yet that disaster to individuals did not prevent St. Paul from telling the Romans, in his epistle written to them twenty-four years after our Lord's Ascension, that their faith was spoken of in the whole world. Catholics are human, just like other people; the Church is made up of saints and sinners—Catholics who are good, bad, or indifferent, but then it must be borne in mind that our Blessed Redeemer has told us that it was to bring sinners to repentance, and such is the mission maintained by His Church ever since.

It is painful to suppose that all Catholics born into the world and baptized into the Church will persevere in aiming at Christian perfection by a constant practice of their faith. Adam and Eve fell and were expelled from Paradise, yet they had not a single temptation to sin in their position, where a hundred exist for the nineteenth century Catholic. There are a thousand temptations thrown in the path of Catholic children now-a-days—even by Catholic parents themselves—that were entirely unknown to Catholics in former centuries.

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. KRAUS, EDITOR

All readers of the Monitor are cordially invited to send original contributions and solutions for the department. Address all communications to

FRANCIS J. MOCKLER,
139 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-OBSOLETE—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 94.

1st.— BLIND THERE HERMITE DEFIANCE SMARKEEZE DEFIANCE HERMITE TRUSTY BLIND

2nd.— SHARKS SNARES STRAYS ORDERS RELATE SE T

3rd.— S PORYAR PARADE ORLES PARTS BAER VDS AR R U

4th.— MEDALIST ELEVATE PERILS AXILE ERIE R L

5th.— OVERCLEAN VENEREAL REELED LEND AT AL N S

6th.— NAMATIONS MASSIONS MACHINE THINE ONE NS

7th.— ESSENTIAL SEALIONS ALTERS ELITES TOES AS A

8th.— BAWLEE ALIENS WINGED LEGENS ENERVE REDEES

9th.— SABIRA ABIDES RIDERS ENERVE ESTERS ARTEN

10th.— HARDER ALLEES RIBBED DEBARE ENERVE ENERVE

11th.— R ANT PAPEL RASCALS ESCUDOS PERSING ALIONS S

12th.— T TAT DECEM DEMURES TEMPORAL EVIDULATION TERRACING MARTINS STALING

13th.— LIGHTNING MEANING SLIDE

14th.— SLEEPS LINNET ENVIES ENVIES ENERVE ENERVE

15th.— DAPPER ALIENS FILTERS PETERS ENERVE REDSEA

16th.— AS PARTS PASCALES PERIBER AT TEER

17th.— ALIENS ENERVE ENERVE ENERVE ENERVE

18th.— RETRIM PLAINS TARTS TAKES MERTEE

19th.— DOPPEE PLIES PEPPERS ENERVE REDSEA

20th.— ES GALA TRIBUNES TAKES REAWED ATEEK TOD

21st.— P BOLER ESTERS ENERVE REDSEA

22nd.— ES GALA TRIBUNES TAKES REAWED ATEEK TOD

23rd.— T TAT DECEM DEMURES TEMPORAL EVIDULATION TERRACING MARTINS STALING

24th.— CAR CARPENTERS CARPENTERS ENTRIES TIES S

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 88 were solved by 92, M., Vidi Dexter, L. Screen, Simon Pure, S. A., Mr. Lark, Ranger, Thetis, Emerald, J. de Lac Arby, James Flynn, Swansoy, N. Orth, Buzz, Sam Lee, Lady Flower, Thad Kinks, Flower B. Bell, Clara Bell, Celestine, Urbanus, Joe C., and Timothebs.

Charlyrn Lorne, Pete assisted Sis.

BOYS' INCOMPLETE LIST.—Lark, 19 solutions. LADY.—Timothebs sent correct solutions to Nos. 92 and 93 so late to have been duly credited.

NUMBER CL.

1st BOX.—NUMERICAL.

I ate composed of letters eight.
My 2, 3, 4, 5, is remainder.
My 5, 6, 7, 8, is a grandfather (O. Eng. Law.)
The child is a grandfather's grandfather. (Law.)
Carson City, Nev. CLERISTINE.

2nd BOX.—DIAMOND.

To "Clio."

1. A letter. 2. To warm or twist together. 3. A female name. 4. A female name. 5. The Pope's triple crown. 6. An equal quantity. (Med.). 7. A letter.
Sacramento, Cal. SICKMORE.

3rd BOX.—CHARADE.

His stood upon the corner, smiling on each pretty lass,
Or openly insulting every girl that chanced to pass;
Though they flushed with indignation, yet he kept his place the same
And the "oppos" standing near him smiled approval on his "game."

And why? Well, I will tell you the details here in full,
He is the son of an Alderman, and has a mighty "pull."
His father is a rose' and he who fears the street
Though not an owner, dares not enforce the law upon his beat.
New York City. CHARLEY.

4th BOX.—SHORT-BOREDOM.
(Progressive.)

Arose.—1. Pattes, (O.). 2. Pattes, (O.). 3. Pattes, (O.). 4. Pattes, (O.). 5. Pattes, (O.). 6. Pattes, (O.).
Jack.—1. A letter. 2. Father. 3. A step. 4. Be. 5. A kind of ceramic. 6. One who fastens. 7. The human leg. 8. Backwards. 9. The rear of a vessel. 10. A bird. 11. A constellation. 12. A abbreviation. 13. A letter.
Packed Rover, N. J. LANCELOT.

5th BOX.—REBUS.

G A
B
Twange never rest—but, walkers true
They love to visit places new;
Like women they are complete, delight
In town to travel day and night
To visit, delight to spread the news,
Ahead of others we pursue,
Are remarkable their neighbors, who
Are at rest, each their callings to pursue.
Dubuque, Ia. ASTERO.

6th BOX.—SQUARE.

1. A small ecclesiastical bird. 2. A P. O. Marshall Co., W. Va. 3. This, brown, scale like process upon the leaves of some plants. 4. Components of a certain acid with a base. 5. A post-office of Oxford Co., Ontario. 6. A better. 7. Vessels.
Milwaukee, Wis. PAUPER.

7th BOX.—DOUBLE LETTER ENIGMA.

In "destitute;"
In "parachute;"
In "dusk" in other word "rabout:"
In "little shoes;"
In "preserved fruits,"
Which always seems the taste to suit.

Have you proved ever once?
Tip the day the sly
With his pawing orbs of green,
Fled on wheels on where?

Down upon some weaker creature;
Up! seize the sort,
Of the coming meal a feature
To impart a zest.

Lightning too, I know surpasses
All the other four combined,
But I'm sure not many classes
Chase the off behind.
Newark, N. J. BARNABAS.

8th BOX.—RIGHT-ROMBOIDS.

To "Eisenhak."

Across.—1. Amphibious rodent quadruped. (Zool.). 2. The name of several small towns in France. 3. A kind of fine grass. 4. Of the Ostrich family. (Ornith.). 5. Right. 6. To perform. 7. Ancient. 8. Bluff.

Down.—1. A letter. 2. Well. 3. Something great. (T. S.). 4. Bats, especially those made of the fur of the beaver. (Hatters.). 5. At the hinder part of a ship. (Naut.). 6. Tranquil, as linear from a cask. (Naut.). 7. A head-dress. 8. Alone. 9. A musical syllable. 10. A letter.
San Francisco. LARK.

9th BOX.—MARAIS.

Of plants that grow in wood and field,
Some, fine perfumes, some poisons yield,
Some prove a blessing, some an ill,
Or prove, which likely is to kill!
While root is a harmless weed,
Of which in science there is need,
The lotus has a deadly power,
Which no one can withstand an hour.
The thing with men, as I can see,
Some blessing cause, some misery.
He who at happiest is himself,
Whose only pill he has is pill,
Is like the whole, a power that brings,
Not healing, but death on his whim!
Instruction follows in his path,
As when the rylose is to wrath
Reason like a fury cry the land,
Obedient to the Satan king's vision command.
Dubuque, Ill. ASTERO.

10th BOX.—DIAMONDS.

1. A letter. 2. A blood-hound. 3. A monetary league between the governments of France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, and Greece, which provides for an identity in the weight and fineness of the silver and gold coins of those countries, and by an annual conference regulates the amounts and proportions of the coinage of these two metals for the succeeding year. (S. L.). 4. A genus of ornamental trees and shrubs. (Bot.). 5. A wench. 6. A letter. 7. A Nymph.
Carson City, Nev. URBANUS.

11th BOX.—NUMERICAL.

When work is slack,
And wage attack,
And creditors are on our track
Then we, although
We wish not so,
To L, S, A, C, go.

A model nook,
With useful whole,
Who over you gains full control
Not smiles, nor worries,
But grimly serves
To tackle up our unstrung nerves.

But, shortly, when
Fate calls again,
We have a 1, 2, 3, 9, 10,
From work affairs
Such weighty cares—
And turn about like mill-stairs.
Rutherford, N. J. BOSIA.

12th BOX.—SQUARE.

1. A machine for catching trespassers. 2. Cadaly. 3. Walking stand of Portia in the "Merchant of Venice." 4. Ghoulnier. 5. Lister's officer. 6. Shakespeare, 1600-1645. 7. English historian, b. 1800.
Storm Lake, Ia. C. U. ROCK.

☞ Answers and Solvers in few weeks.

Tetes-a-Tete.

LAKETON.—See notice to "Pepper."
LAKE.—"It is better late than never."
L. SCOTT.—Are very sorry. Will send it regularly.
PEPPER.—But few of yours remain on hand. More are earnestly desired.
C. T. Hunt.—Batch received and thankfully accepted. Will send some soon, and hope to receive plenty from you in time.
CHARLEY.—The third hour exhausts your batch. The cargo can be sent in a different way, and its arrival will be daily expected.
BOSIA.—Yours received; and was well pleased with the contents. A reserve fund is just what is wanting, and I hope you will induce others to follow in the same course.

Mystic Minutes.

—"Chipotle" has surrendered command of Mystic Beaties.

—For the time being, "I. Seyole" address will be Dunyville P. O., Dauphin Parish, La.

—"Pepper" and "Star the Knave" have formed a "mutual amusement" name thus: "Pepper Bill" will issue The Knave's Knock.

—The July number of The Lakeshore Pioneer has entered our sanctum. Its appearance is very neat, and the reading matter very interesting. The Monitor Clerk contains a large installment of first-class puzzles.

—The K. C. R. S. C. was re-organized with the election of the following officers: Francis J. Mockler, Jr., President; Edward D. Mockler, Vice-President; Master Joseph Mockler, Secretary; Master Frank Mockler, Assistant Secretary; Master Leo Mockler, Treasurer; Master Charles Mockler, Librarian; Master Joseph Mockler, Assistant Librarian. Meetings, K. P., James T. Donlan, W. F. P., Edward P. Donlan, R. S., Joseph Mockler, K. C., Silas Kittle, McGuire, T. James J. Mockler, Master Joseph Mockler, Master Charles Mockler, and M. J. Barry, R. C. Donlan, John Donlan, and M. J. Barry, R. C.

—Owing to a pressure of business and lack of time, "Lifeguide" has been compelled to suspend the Pioneer's Banner, which will be dearly regretted by the fraternity. The Puzzle Department was rapidly gaining popular favor, and possessed was showing our Tom every corner of the dom, which clearly proves that it was the pioneer's paper.

TO SHOW MY OWN CONCERN.—For the benefit of the misinformed and the curious, I wish to state that on the sixth day of June, 1884, I had in my possession as Treasurer of the Golden State Pioneer's League, the amount of twenty-one (21) dollars and twenty (20) cents. I append duplicates of receipts—without any corrections and a certification from "Live Oak."

(Duplicate.)

Received of Mr. F. Mockler, Seventeen Dollars and Seventy cents, ($17.70) funds of Golden State Pioneer's League. Edward D. Oakley, Treas. G. S. P. L., Treasurer.

(Duplicate.)

San Francisco, July 12, 1884.
Capt. N. Frank and Lark.
To Golden State Pioneer's League, Dr., the sum of Three Dollars and Fifty cents ($3.50) for the above league which was appropriated from the treasury, and in full of all demands. Received Payment, Edw. D. O. Connor, "Eclipse," Rec. Sec.

July 30, 1884.

I hereby certify that the above are true and correct copies of the originals now before me, which are known to be genuine.
EDWARD D. OAKLEY, "Live Oak."
[SEAL.] Pres. Golden State Pioneer's League.

For more particulars in regard to the so-called "entertainment," see Our Puzzler, Aug. 2, 1884.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM.

Following is the answer to the perplexing problem published a few weeks ago:

Circle 40 cts.
A's rate 5 miles per min.; B's rate 3 miles per min.

A completes circuit in 8 min.; B, complete circuit in 13⅓ min.
Both travel 5 min. previous to meeting.

TRIGONOMETRICAL.

X = min. in circle.
Y = A's rate per minute.
Z = B's rate per minute.
X − 5 = number of minutes A required for circuit.
X − 8 = number of minutes B required for circuit.
5Y = time A traveled previous to meeting.
5Z = time B traveled previous to meeting.
5Y + 5Z = 40 (1).
5Y = space traversed by A; 5Z = space traversed by B, previous to meeting.
5Y − 5Z = 25.
Y − Z = ratio of A's velocity to B's; Y − Z = 5.
5Y + 5Z = 40; Y − Z = 5; Y = 5; Z = 0.
Equations (1), (2), (3), simplified and eliminated give X = 40 × 5 = circle, (4).
Y = 5 = A's rate, (5).
Z = 0 = B's rate, (6).
Hence, circle indeterminate may be satisfied by any value.
Y = 5 = A's rate.
Indeterminate in (5).
Y = 5 mile, A's rate.
Indeterminate in (4).
X = 40 rods, circumference of circle.
Answer, 40 rods.
A requires 8 minutes to complete circuit.
B requires 13⅓ minutes to complete circuit.
They travel five minutes before meeting.
Colleges of Notre Dame, San Jose. B. S.

—For the first time since the "Reformation" a chapter of canons met in Glasgow on the 30th inst., in the pro-cathedral. Each of the twelve canons made his profession of faith, took obedience and was installed in the presence of Archbishop Eyre. Very Rev. Dr. Monro was elected provost, Father Cavin, theologian, and Father Maguire, penitentiary.

—Brock's Bisol Cotton, soft finish as well as glace finish, is manufactured especially for sewing machine work. Try it on any machine and you will try no other. For sale by all dry goods stores.

—THE—
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!

A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.

SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.

The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
OF
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.

SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.

My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
☞ No need ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight to a great extent saved, and lost quantities to be bought, as year orders may be filled as wanted.

MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys,
Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General

PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.

Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censors, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are, as Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."

General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL.
Latest Edition. With all addenda to date.

Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!

THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)

INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.

HOME OFFICE,
MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.

ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.

Send for Circulars and Papers.

RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.

THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
648 MARKET STREET.
BRANCH,
1152 MARKET ST.
LAUNDRY.
13th St., bet. Folsom and Howard S. F. Cal

McCORMICK BROS.,
Book and Job Printers,
636 Clay Street, 636
(Same Building as Monitor Office.) San Francisco

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA,..... CALIFORNIA

This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1852 was chartered with the privileges of a University. It occupies large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, covered gymnasiums, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. At the new, splendid Observatory, Astronomy, Telegraphy, Photography and Chemistry are taught. The Museum building 100x40 feet long, filled, but leaves nothing to be desired.

Diplomas are given in the departments—the Classical and Scientific—and certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once. $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, use of bath-house and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session $50 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Mr. Ignatius Cole, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.

☞ Session will be Resumed Tuesday August 5th, 1884.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.
Jy5 President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE,..... CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING PECULIAR advantages to young ladies who wish to receive a solid and refined education, was founded in 1851. In 1855, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the Trustees were empowered to confer the degree of Graduate of the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions.

It occupies spacious buildings, with extensive playgrounds, and possesses every thing to make a home attractive to the pupils of this Institute.

The scholastic year begins on the first Monday in August, and ends about the first week in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, (payable in advance.)
Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and if desired, Latin, German, and Latin, per session $75 00
Bed and Bedding $75 00
Washing 37 50
Physician's Fee 5 00
Music, Vocal and Instrumental 10 00
Drawing, Painting 10 00
Use of Piano 10 00
Use of Bath 5 00
Use of Bed and Bedding 5

One of California's Sanctified Shrines.

THE MISSION CHURCH OF SAN JUAN.

SIGHTS SEEN BY A RAMBLING REPORTER.

The Work of Padre Esteban Tapia.

People get tired and worn out, being busied at one thing too long, and deeming it necessary to take a little recreation before the bounding of the campaign begun, I, together with a companion, started 12 or 15 days ago to visit the scenes of my boyhood, a place in the mountains thirty miles below Monterey, at the head waters of the Carmel river. We traveled in a one horse vehicle, and the first day of our journey took us to the quaint old town of San Juan. After our horse had been cared for and our supper served, we walked out to the old Catholic Mission and wondered at its ancient tumble-down adobe walls, and from its peculiar surroundings became anxious to know something of its history. At the entrance way was a large gate, which was locked, and on it hung a notice saying in substance that any one desiring to visit the Mission could do so for the consideration of one dollar, which would be used in repairing

THE CHURCH

Which is at present really in need of funds. We then knocked at the door of the Father's study, and upon his answering the bell, made him acquainted with the object of our visit. He is a gentlemanly, modest, unassuming, mild mannered man, and without inquiring we saw upon the door, "Hav. Y. Cinn." He took us to the entrance and unlocked the swinging gates; and we all three, with uncovered heads, walked into the ancient cathedral that has stood there for nearly one hundred years. There was something supernatural about this place of worship; everything was still as death, nothing being heard but our footfall on the bare brick floor. We stood struck with awe for a moment in this tomb-like place as we gazed at the further end of the building at the snow white altars, and the ancient statuary, made grim and death-like by the dimly lighted wax candle, which cast sepulchral shadows on the wall, while the noiseless bat flew

WITH SUDDEN

Fright from behind the blood stained image of Christ at the sound of our voices. On either side of the walls hung numerous beautiful oil paintings, the Father says that they were painted many years ago, in Mexico. At the entrance way was the baptismal font, which was a relic most surprising to look at. It is made of a large stone, chiseled out after the fashion of the mortar trowels made by the ancient aborigines. At this font, many thousands of people were baptized. As we passed on we approached the "gospel side," and standing there for a moment, the Father reverently pointed to a slab near the altar, saying that literally under it, Father Esteven Tapia was buried 70 years ago, he being the founder of the Mission. Going to a drawer near by he took from it some clothing, which he said he had just lately taken from the dead Father's dress. It was made of heavy woolen goods, and although it had been in the tomb for 70 years, seemed as strong as ever. The Father also said that the

SKIN AND BONES

Of the priest looked as natural as ever and the bones though well preserved were disjointed with the exception of the skull. Out of this drawer the Father took some ancient vestments which must excite the admiration of all who have ever seen it. It is thought to have been made in Mexico many years ago, but still retains its luster as though it was made but yesterday. The workmanship is peculiarly beautiful being done by hand entirely with silk and gold thread. The Father then showed us some music books written and made by Father Tapia; the books were made of sheepskin and covered with rawhide, clasped with iron clasps. The music was written by hand and so arranged by dots and colors that each vocalist in the choir was enabled to carry the tune in their respective tones. Other ancient things were then shown us, such as old chairs which had crumbled to decay, and organs that were a century old. By this time it had alarmed and the Father led us from the old church to the graveyard. It is situated on the eastern side of the Mission and overlooks the San Jose valley; it is merely a knoll of ground around which is a stone wall, the space comprising one-fourth of an acre, and upon this spot, for nearly four thousand people have been buried, and at the present time the Father has a record of the names of those who are buried there. It had, by this time, grown quite dark, and we bid Father Close good-night, at the same time offering to pay him his trouble, but he declined to take anything saying, "I will ask you nothing for what I have shown you, but if you have any Catholic friends who would like to visit the old Mission, tell them I am always hard to make some needed repairs, and anything they may offer will be most thankfully received."—San Jose Herald.

GROVE DADS,

EARLY DAYS IN CALIFORNIA.

How John W. Mackay and His Cabin Mates Roughed it in 1850.

In the first months of 1860 times were touch on the Comstock. The winter of 1859-60 was terribly severe, as all old settlers well remember. Supplies could not be brought over the mountains from California, and before spring many on the Comstock went hungry to bed about three nights in the week. That winter a jolly party made their head quarters in a cabin that stood on the hill-side above the Ophir office, near the California shaft. The cabin was a sort of mess, in entering it one went down two steps. The roof was composed of a layer of brush, a stratum of dirt, and over this a canvas cover to hold it all in place. The cabin contained four bunks—two on the south and two on the north side. John Mackay had the lower bunk on the north side and Alexander Kennedy slept in the upper one. Pat S. Corbett—at present United States Marshal Corbett—and Jack O'Brien occupied the south bunks.

At that time Mackay, Kennedy, and others were running the old Union Tunnel, and were working every day. As times grew rough and grub scarce the number of lodgers in the cabin increased. Jack McCafferty was then in the understanding, that he was to furnish wood for the household, and Johnnie Walker in consideration of his doing all the cooking. The newcomers brought in their blankets and slept down on the floor. Virginia City was then a town of brush shanties and canvas tents, and it was good to find shelter anywhere. Lumber being $500 per 1,000 feet, palaces were not to be sneezed at.

As the winter wore away provisions of all kinds became scarce, and famine prices ruled for a time early in the spring. For a few days a square meal "down town" cost $2. Those of the boys in the cabin who started in with a little money had either got to the end of their string in keeping up their part of the expenses or had gambled all their note.

John McCafferty, who was to furnish wood, began to make night raids on the wood-piles of the neighbors in order to keep up his part of the cabin supplies, and, the weather being cold, he was sometimes proving about half the night, though the Ophir wood pile was his chief dependence. Into stormy night Jack was gone so long that his cabin mates grew uneasy about him. Johnny Walker, the cook, and Jack had whispered in his ear as he left that he was going to the Ophir wood-pile. A search party was sent out, and to their inquiring whistles they finally got a faint reply. Following up the sound, they presently came upon poor Jack. Blinded by the driving snow, he and a big stick had wood from the Ophir had tumbled together into a prospect shaft. With the aid of wood on end and standing on top of it, Jack's unfeeled hands still failed to reach the top of the shaft by about two feet. He was hauled out, cut, bruised, and nearly frozen. Next morning there was no wood with which to cook breakfast, but as there was not much to cook a board or two from the bunks furnished sufficient fuel.

Finally, hunger got into the affair, and not a man except Mackay had a cent of money. An attempt to starve the more shiftless into "resting for grub" had proved a failure; they could do nothing, and lying back on their blankets gave up, like some of those of whom we read among the pioneers in arctic regions. The sick had an easy time of it, and, as Sandy Panns says, the stomachs of all began to think their throats were cut. By this time a sore pressure were beginning to be packed in, but prices were fearfully high. Mackay had just left—it was all the money he had in the world. "Here, Pat," said he to Corbett, handing him a twenty and a ten in gold, "go out and see if you can find a sack of flour."

A man had parked it in from Placerville that day, and Pat found him sitting in a chair in the Bank of California now stands. It was all plain then—all open country and the brush along the present line of C street. The packer had just unloaded a sack of flour left. The price was $250. Pat handed the Placerville man the gold, got back $8 in silver, and shouldering his flour, climbed the hill to the cabin. Mackay took the $8, and giving it to the cook, sent him in search of bacon, tea, and sugar. When the flapjacks began to brown, and the savor of the bacon pervaded the cabin, the spirits of both regular inmates and transient boarders went up to the ha'n't-whistle point, for it seemed that there was nothing more in the world to be desired.—Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise.

A REMARKABLE LIFE.

An Irishman One Hundred and Nineteen Years Old.

The Wanford Pupil of a recent date says:—"A few days ago Patrick Carney, of New Ross Infirmary a truly remarkable man, died at the ripe old age of 119 years. He was born in the year 1765 (that is 23 years before the Rebellion of '98), at Hollyfort, barony of Templeudigan. He was the eldest of a family of twenty brothers and sisters, two of whom are still living. The parish priest of Templeudigan, at that time, was the Rev. Thomas Murphy, P.P., and he was accounted by Ireland's poor, the Redemptorist of days he worked as servant with the father of the great Dr. Doyle, was, in fact, reared at Dr. Doyle's house and was well acquainted with the illustrious 'J. K. L.' from his infancy. In the year 1798, Rathfriland barony raised his thirteen year, left Ireland for Newfoundland, and there spent 7 years in farming, fishing. At the end of the third season—or rather the Autumn of '98 he returned to Ireland. He was shipwrecked on the West coast of Ireland, but managed to get ashore, and set out for his native county, Wexford. One day as he was traveling homewards he saw a man digging in a field, went to help him, but just as he was about to speak to him the man ran away, leaving behind him a thunder-stroke at this strange proceeding. Soon, however, he discovered the cause of the man's terror, for two soldiers came running across the field; one of them pursued the stranger and the other came to Red-mond and commanded him to kneel down and be shot. Redmond begged hard for the soldier to be allowed a few seconds to say a prayer, and ask for God's mercy. Redmond fell on his knees and cried, "Oh God, direct me what to do." an in an instant he sprang to his legs, seized a spade, and the one terrible blow smashed in the head of the soldier, who begged at the time he was have his back turned to him watching his companion pursuing the fugitive. Having killed the soldier, he ran off from the spot, and made straight for Wexford county, where he finally arrived. The Rebellion had been crushed, and the brutal soldiery were venting the people in a manner not unworthy the arch fiend. Redmond saw with his own eyes the gallows, the pitch cap, and all the rest of the fearful scenes in full swing. A faint idea of how completely the people were in the hands of the brutal soldiery may be gained from the story Redmond used to tell of how a poor straggler from Hallyhawn was treated by these fiends. They seized him, and tied his wrists together, and threw him into a pond or bog hole in order to amuse themselves watching the poor fellow's struggles for life. He was a good swimmer, and by using his legs, which were not bound, succeeded in getting to the bank, but the soldiery beat him back again. This was repeated several times. A gentleman who happened to be passing by went to the officer in command, and begged of him to save the poor wretch. The officer at length consented to do so, and came to the spot just in time to see the fiend manages to catch a rufian who had thrown him back in the water, and drag him in with him. The rest of the soldiery started themselves to the utmost to save their comrade, whose shrieks could have been heard for miles around. The officer had the poor fellow bound, when himself and his comrade were pulled ashore. It was extremely hard to get much information from the old man, as he was not only deaf, but also very much disinclined to speak of the days gone by. The poor fellow was terribly wasted, his bones almost protruding through his skin, and his face like that of a sickly infant. He entered the Workhouse Infirmary, New Ross, some few weeks ago, complaining of a hurt he received on the back, caused by a fall from a hay loft, in Coolshin. Redmond had attained the extraordinary age of 119 years.

QUEER IDEAS ABOUT THE DEAD.

Here are two instances both strictly true which occurred in a town only a few miles from Boston, and were given as a peculiar phase of life to which we are not and hope never to be accustomed. A man who was very poorly, and in the mid-stream to lose his wife, whom he was compelled to bury without a "wake," that insensible fellow being entirely beyond his sense. After twelve years had passed, in the meantime he had materially bettered, he had his wife dug up and gave her a wake commensurate with his means, his affection and her worth. In the same town the mother of a family who had been only long enough to breathe the breath of mortal life received so deeply the loss of her child that, as soon as health permitted she had the little bodies taken up and herself carried them to a photographer, stood the cadaver up and had them photographed. What in a mother was a delightful memento was to others but a hideous spectacle.—Boston Transcript.

Lessons in music, organ and drawing are imparted in Blue Lake Cloister, a graduate of the Boston School of Elocution and Expression, Miss Isabel Shaw, San Francisco. Call from 1 to 5 o'clock.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND

No Crime in Carlow.

Chief Justice Morris was presented by the High Sheriff at Carlow Assizes with white gloves in commemoration of the fact that there were no prisoners to be put on trial—a fact upon which the judge congratulated the County of Carlow.

Another of Cornwall's Claims Arrested.

Mr. James Pilkes, tea and wine merchant, Kathleinas, was arrested on Wednesday, on similar charges to those preferred against Messrs. Cornwall and French; and Messrs. French and Pilkes were all taken through before the same magistrate at the Police Court, and, after formal evidence, remanded for a week, without bail.

The Member for Waterford Retires.

Mr. Blake, M. P., for Waterford County, who has rendered valuable service in the interests of the Irish fisheries, has issued an address informing his constituents that it is his intention to retire from Parliamentary life at the close of the present session. Inability to cooperate generally with Mr. Parnell's party is given as reason for this course.

To be Tried by English Law Officers.

LONDON, July 24.—The Dublin Castle officials are furious over the action of the English Government in withdrawing the prosecution of Cornwall, French, Pilkes, and the rest of the prisoners accused of foreign crimes in Dublin, from the Irish law officers and entrusting the Attorney General Sir Henry James and Solicitor General Sir Hardinge Giffard. The action of the Government was based upon a well-grounded fear that the Irish law officers, being friends of the Irish Parliamentary party, would manage the case either lazily or inefficiently. Indeed, it is said that the Government could have done otherwise, in view of the fact that the Dublin Public Prosecutor, Gregory Bellew, was one of the men accused of shameless view by Mr. Parnell in his speech at Wicklow.

Mr. Bellew has already strained the machinery of law in his interests in the case of the Irish prisoners in Paris, and it is not to be imagined that he would not, if he thought it necessary to convict the present prisoners, who, even if they are not guilty of the crime, are at least sympathizers of O'Brien. The recent discussion of the disorganized condition of the Dublin officials has developed a very general feeling among the Government that a change must be made, for the moment is critical, and most certainly be refused if not absolutely necessary.

Discovery of an Ancient Irish Canoe.

A Irish paper says that a most interesting relic of the past come of the ancient and curious kind, which deserved the only discovery of early farming is proposed. The treasure was unearthed while cutting turf in a bog, and is twenty feet long, and is of the very best description of workmanship, and is made of a single oak, a long, elderly lie keel remained three till his death he had lived and lawfully wed final death in bed. For a still more great one to the birth of the daughter he left his property to charitable societies, and directed that his body should be buried in a Franciscan habit.

To prove his sincerity, evidence for the daughter showed that the testator stored his house with bale of old iron, sheaves of wood, and odds and ends. He had in his house quantities of flour, and baked more every three weeks, six hundred loaves at a time, and gave them away. Among the poor he was a great benefactor. His house was filled with 1,111 sacks of potatoes, and he gave to his people, not in pence and shillings, and other sums for trespass, and if a man was found guilty of the trespass he judged on the owner paying a few pence for the trespass. He was generous to the poor, and if a poor man died in his neighborhood, the first person he carried out of his house, and gave him a coffin, and gave him a shroud, and he made a coffin of paper five or six feet long containing complaints of trespass against his neighbors.

ASSOCIATION FOR MEN AND LADIES.

QUEEN'S ENDEAVOR, 1111 SECOND STREET, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA. All men and ladies of the Pacific Coast, San Francisco, California. All men and ladies of Sacramento, California, are invited to attend the Queen's Endeavor, Sacramento, in the Association Hall, Second and Fourth Streets, on Sunday, August 3rd, at 3 o'clock, P. M. Sacramento, July 24, 1884.

Wanted—Agents for the Sacred Heart Review.

Dress Opening.

Miss Dunne, Dunne Sisters have opened the old stand, 1 Montgomery Avenue, and will be pleased to see their friends. They will also continue the business of Miss Dunne (late Miss Cassidy), and will add to it a full line of ready made clothing, hats, and furnishing goods. Miss Dunne is the only practical cutter and fitter in the city.

NOTES FROM ROME.

The Health of the Pope.—The Jesuits Win at Last—Strikes to the North of Italy.

ROME, July 7.—The health of the Pope has not been very good lately, yet he has been able to go through the accustomed work and give public audiences. The last one took place on Saturday, the 5th inst., at 8 o'clock. Many American prelates were present, viz., Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, Bishop Loughlin, of Brooklyn, New York, and Mr. Tobin of New York, also Archbishop Gibbons and Archbishop Elder from Chicago, and the Rev. M. Schopfer, O. M. I., Father Pilla, the new Father General of Jesuits, Alsanzos, Ia., and Judge Beck and Mr. Beck of Louisville, Ky.

If His Holiness could go and breathe the pure air of Castle Gandolfo, on the lovely terrace in front of the old ruins of Albalonga, reflected by the blue waves of the lake of Albano, the Holy Father might look better and feel a great deal stronger; but such a journey, attended to every human from the Ministers down to the poorest waiter, instead of Tranquillity, is decidedly to the great injury of Rome, the successor of St. Peter, the last Pontifical constitution, as we set forth below.

Father H. Carlassare, a Franciscan, Vicar Apostolic and Bishop of Ho-pe, Oriental Africa, has been Destinated a Bishop, Titular Tadmor and Vicar Apostolic and Bishop of Chang-Tong.

Mr. J. Brown, Rector at Paris, Ireland, Bishop of Ferns.

Mr. Joseph J. Fernandez, honorary chaplain to the Pope.

The Eminence Cardinal Randi, Protector of the Armenians, and the Holy Martyrs Trophon and Nemesio.

The Jesuits have won a suit against the Italian Government. When the order was suppressed on the 19th of July, 1866, in Naples, Sicilys were the Jesuits Jesuits Jesuits

Poetry.

THE SUN ON THE BATTLE FIELD.

An Incident of the Franco-Prussian War.

BY T. D. SULLIVAN.

Dead on the corpse strewed battle plain
Where war's dread scythe had done
She lies, amid the heaps of slaine,
The young and lovely sun,
She saw the stricken soldier fall,
And, ere the shells was over,
She rushed, unheeding blade or ball,
To succour his flowing gore,
To gently raise his drooping head,
To cool his parched lips,
To whisper, ere his spirit fled,
The Name of Holy Name.
And, as from one to one to pass,
Let those who, living yet,
Lay groaning on the crimson grass
Their stunning blood had wet;
With melody love and tenderness
Their suffering hearts to aid,
Wak'ne the color of the dress
Through which their wounds were made,
And—in whatever form of speech
They prayed to God above
Unto their dying lips to reach
The emblem of His love.
Pen, ah! the battle's thunderlike swell
Had rolled not far away
And still the moaning of the wounded fell
Where dead and dying lay
Broken, disjointed, and shrilling by,
Huge shells, as they ploughed the ground,
And, near the mission from on high,
Had made fresh multitudes wound.
Stunned not while they buried past,
Nor turned her head aside,
But when her death wound came at last
She blessed her God and died.

THE SAILOR'S NEW BABY.

Three cases to port, last Sunday night,
The coseiest little crafts,
Without an hand of rigging on
I looked, and looked, to windward.

It seemed so curious that the
Should cross the unknown water
And near herself right into my room,
My baby, my! my daughter!

She has no mastheat but this,
No flag floats o' the breeze—
She's one new for the British Lloyds—
My daughter, O my daughter!

Ring out, wild bells, and let your voice
Crown the joy of the sailor's mom;
Ring in the little wonder, ye
Ring in the left and spoon!

Ring out the noise! ring in the noise!
Ring in the bells and swaper!
Away with paper, pen and ink—
My daughter, O my daughter!

GEORGE W. CABLE.

Literary Miscellany.

The Little Chapel at Monamullin.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FOUR CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENY ROBINSON.

CHAPTER IV.

The three days Mr. Brown had spent at Monamullin had passed like the fairies which might have been easily burst are the iron had grown cold. He endeavored to persuade himself that this visit was a mere romantic episode in the career of an artist—a thing to be talked of in the sweet by-and-by, and to be remembered as a delightful halting place in the onward journey. He tried to fling dust in his mind's eye, and but succeeded in rousing the eye to everything save the glorious terrible present. He floated on from day to day in a sort of temporary elysium—why call it a fool paradise—because that word was impossible to him, and yet it was impossible to be anyone. At first he thought of pain or sorrow could be in outcome. An intensely strong or weak man, he was isolated from the ordinary goods of London society. Pain he knew, but it was a pain, and the shadow of sorrow had never touched him. Pain was a thing to be fought against, and sorrow was a thing to be conquered. Pain and sorrow could never have brought to Mr. Brown, and he felt the enormous power of the relation dwelling as though it was his old home. Therefore he walked, boated, drove and sang with Julia Jyvecote. She, too, would seem to live in the present, in the subtle, delicious enjoyment of being appreciated—and, and liked. The small chasms of ever-enjoying a repetition of his visit lent a peculiar charm to every circumstance, and for both parties, vanishing in the to-when the with which the favored core of fortune probe the antecedents of the wanderers at the stories which enclose the upper ten thousand.

From the accident of the photograph he was playfully asked Sir Everard and it became a matter of amused astonishment how the cabinet photograph of an artist could so vaguely be responded to a call upon the name.

He quitted Moynalty in a strange whirl of conflicting thought.

"May we not hope to see you in London, Mr. Brown?" said Mrs. Jyvecote, gracious for coming upon the terrace to bid him adieu. "We go over in April, and our address is 91 Brettanmore, Mayfair. I have so many Mr. Jyvecote's friends to be missed you, especially as he arrive here to-morrow; and I am confident he would be anxious to see you—although," she added, with some little coquetry, "a gentleman of Mr. Brown's gifts requires no poor service such as we could render him."

"How long do you remain in Monamullin, Mr. Brown?" asked Mr. Jyvecote.

"Until I finish a sketch of the lake here which Miss Jyvecote intends to honor me by sitting."

"Oh! then we shall see much more of you."

"Yes, I shall."

"Then if Mademoiselle will not come to the mountain, the mountain must come to Mohammed. I'll drive my sister over to the painter and the pictures are getting on." Mohammed, Sunday, and see how the priest, the painter and the pictures are getting on." It was a great wrench to the artist to tear himself away, and the same colour that mottled after him as the evening breeze seemed and and mournful. Was the barrier between Mr. Jyvecote and himself utterly impassable? Could it not be bridged over? He could not assume to be intimate with Mr. Jyvecote and his whole room be would see Jyvecote first; and yet what would he do to gain the love of the young daughter of the house? Anything, everything. Pshaw! any chance of wooing and winning such a girl should be through the medium of his title, his position, and his passing beneath the yoke of society. What sheer folly to think of her from the standpoint upon which he had been admitted into her father's house! As the artist he was patronized, as the lancer he could be his equal, and yet to win her as the artist placed in the position of the chance occasion ally contributed by the rosy archer. She had been silent, reserved, and had seemed shy of him. She spoke much of a man in the Guards, a chum of her brother Jasper; perhaps this Guardsman was the man.

In musings such as these the days in his work, and the pictures in his portfolio such as his glowing hands. The canvas, with all the necessary of outlines, had arrived from Dublin, the good priest meriting considerably at the pecuniary resources of his guest. "He little all," he thought, "and going to make it a present to my sweet parishioner."

But a great surprise was in store for Father Maurice.

Mr. Brown had issued instructions to his London friend to forward the Stations of Cross, free of all carriage, to Rev. Maurice O'Donnell, P. P., Monamullin, Baile Mawagon, County Mayo.

This order was promptly complied with, and a lovely autumnal evening behold the whole village, cars and all, turn out to describe the fortnight before the nature of the contents of four gigantic wooden cases deposited in the little garden attached to the parish cottage. It were utterly useless to endeavor to describe the fervent occasioned by the opening of the boxes; the excitement rose to a pitch never realized in Monamullin since the consecration of the church. Bishop of Tuam—the Lion of the Field of Juda. Father Maurice fairly wept for joy. Mrs Clancy insisted upon doing the Stations there and then; and as each picture was brought to light, from the folds of wrappers and numerous those surrounding blackbird of an Egyptian Mummy, a hum of admiration was raised by the assembled and reverential multitude. The good priest, never gleaming the source from whence the splendid gifts had emanated, endeavored to trace it to Miss Jyvecote—a belief which Mr. Brown sedulously sustained—and Father Maurice, full of the idea, chanted whole litanies in his praise, scarcely ever ceasing mention of her name.

"I'll drive over to-morrow and tender her my most desired gratitude. I'll offer up Masses for her. I'll—

"She will be here to-morrow, Father, Mrs. Trevors is to drive her over. Don't you think we ought to see about hanging the Stations? It will please her immensely to see them in their places in the church."

A hanging committee was appointed and the work of suspending the pictures carried into instant execution. The mouldy little chapel was soon ablaze with gilding and delicate colouring, which alas! but seemed to display its present dinginess more glaringly.

"My poor little altar may hide its diminished head," said Fath. Maurice mournfully, "but, poor, however, as he is, it is—it is, sure, I'll soon have Miss Jyvecote's beautiful altar-cloth."

The "round" was resumed upon the following morning and were escorted by the artist to the church.

"You have come over upon an interesting occasion, Mr. Jyvecote," said the Father Maurice has just received an anonymous gift of a set of Stations of the Cross, and he thinks you can tell him something about them."

Never was the astonishment of the simple priest when Miss Jyvecote denied all knowledge of the presentation.

"Why, Father, you must think me as rich as Miss Burdett Coutts," she cried. "These beautiful works of art have cost hundreds of pounds, Mr. Brown here will tell you how much they cost," turning to that gentleman. "How often a stray shot hits home!" Mr. Brown had the receipted bill in his pocket at that particular moment.

"They are French," he said, sending the question.

"Consequently more expensive, n'est ce pas?"

"They are not badly done."

"They are on the borderland of high art, Mr. Brown. Why do you pooh-pooh them?"

"Poor Father Maurice was fairly nonplussed. All his grosses anent the donor fell short, while his surmises died from sheer inanition. It could not be his Carlo-nal. Might it be Micky O'Brien that ran away to sea and was now coming home a rich man? or Pandheen Rafferty, who was a thriving grocer in Dublin. For the first time in his life the parish priest felt uneasy, if not unhappy. What did it portend? Who could possibly take an interest in the affairs of his little parish? Mr. Hatch Hakim might have done so in the olden time, but the fusiness of 46 left him barely able to—to—to—Conyngham's Marmaduke Blake was a scamp who racked his tenants and spent his money in debauchery.

"I suppose I shall learn some day, sighed the priest. "I must be patient, but I wish it was to-day."

After breakfast—Father Maurice's breakfast—the artist and Miss Jyvecote strolled along the shore. The sun was in a blaze with a certain sadness, and the gray ocean was as still in pain, and the shadow of "we shall not meet again" to hang over Julia and her companion. Sitting upon a secluded nook surrounded by huge rocks—a spot in which the world seemed to cease to exist—

"And so you think of leaving?" she said, after a long silence, during which she had eccentric circles in the sand with the tip of her parasol.

"Why I must says 'yes,' Miss Jyvecote."

"Does your tissest say whither?"

"It points to that little village on the Thames called London."

"We go to London next month, en route to Egypt. My sister Susan—you never met her—who has been in Italy with my uncle, is recommended Egypt to her chest. Papa received letters yesterday.

"How long do you think you will remain in London?"

"Only a day or two."

"Might I hope to see you?"

"Who and? Our address is 91, Bratton street, Mayfair.

"Mr. Delmege, of the Guards, going to Egypt?"

She looked gravely at him, full into his eyes, as she replied somewhat coldly

"Not that I am aware of."

His heart gave a great bound as though a dull, dead weight had been suddenly removed.

"I hope to see your handicraft on the walls of the Academy when we return.

"Academy! I'm afraid, clasping his knees with his hands, and gazing out across the ocean.

"If you try you will succeed."

"I have a very poor opinion of my own powers of success in anything. I am colorless, purposeless.

"Neither one or the other. You are a noble profession, a glorious talent, and Father Maurice says you have a good heart. With three such friends as companions life is a garden of flowers

"Ah! yet still within the last few days I have found it but a desert.

Then silence fell upon both.

"Father Maurice will miss you dreadfully," she murmured. She was very pale, and her dark eyes turned upon him with unconscious tenderness. He has become so mournful attached to you; and the poor little altar will miss your artistic grouping of the flowers. Do you know, I am jealous? I shall say an "Ave Maria" when I visit the little church, and for your conversion."

"Will you also?"—he stopped suddenly short and dug his heel into the sand.

"The sharp is water for ye, Miss Jewel, and Minnie Travers is roarin mortheer, and Mary Midigan, threatens his whole head between a cleft in the rocks.

Brown sprang to its feet and offered Miss Jyvecote his arm. Neither spoke during the walk to the cottage.

"Mr. Brown, I'm sorry I bother do not think ill of me," he whispered as he handed her into the phaeton.

"What do you mean," she asked, in a low tone.

"Promise me that you will not forget Brown, the poor artist."

"It is scarcely necessary, she murmured, as she gave him her hand.

"Here was a fit subject for the pencil, when the artist left it. Father Maurice mused him sadly, indeed his fat at lackgammon, his gay gossip and his cheery company.

"It was a rale gentleman," said Mrs. Clancy. "he wanted to give me a golden sovereign, maabie th' poorhouse he bein' I took a shillaud his money for luck, an it's luck I wish more gentlemen like him."

"He was the most man on the premises mannerel sinn I ever seen, chimed in Marty, as 'I'm in dhreak that I spoke to him rough when he offered me mennerstion.

"He promised to come here next same hour, and he will keep his promise, said the priest.

Mr. Jocelyn Jyvecote was seated in the study at 91 Brettanmore street, engaged in the perusal of the morning Times. He had slept well, breakfasted well, and was thoroughly refreshed after his journey, as he had arrived in town from the East upon the previous day.

A servant entered with a card upon a silver salver.

Mr. Jyvecote adjusted his eyeglass and leisurely lifted the tiny bit of pasteboard. "Who is this man?" he cried, letting it fall again. "Is the gentleman waiting?"

"In the hall sir."

"Show him in."

A tall, high-bred looking young man entered. His face was pale and he somewhat nervously stroked a Henri Quatre beard.

"Sir! I ask you what I am indebted for the visit from Sir Everard Noel?" demanded Mr. Jyvecote haughtily.

"I shall explain the purport of my visit in a few words."

"Pray be seated."

"Thanks! Mr. Jyvecote, there was bad blood and bitter feud between you and my poor father about Ottley Farm.

"You need scarcely remind me of that, Sir Everard."

"There is bad blood between us, Mr. Jyvecote. You claimed in the right of an old lease that could not be discovered when the case came before the court, and I retain possession of it by law. The bad feeling was on my side, I admit, and—and I used some expressions for which I am very seriously sorry. So long as that farm in possession of either of us it will lead to bad feeling, and I come here to-day to tell you what I mean to do about it."

A somewhat less stern frown appeared upon Mr. Jyvecote's features as he listened.

"Last autumn accident threw me into one of the wildest portions of Ireland, a place called the Little Monamullin—Mr. Jyvecote, I'd ask you to come with me. It is within seven miles of Moynalty Castle.

"I am aware of that. I was the guest of Mr. Brown there when that God Almighty ever made—Father Maurice O'Donnell."

"Father Maurice! Do you know him?

"His soul is in his work, and his simple heart is fragrance—a lily divided among his little flock. I found his church dingy, dilapidated, falling. He is worthy of a better habitation, I, he is worthy of anything. Mr. Jyvecote bowed assent.

"Well, sir, I propose selling Ottley Farm, and devoting the proceeds towards building a new church for Father Maurice O'Donnell. I have an offer of three thousand pounds for the farm, and here are the plans, prepared by Mr. Pugin—pure Gothic, exacting a will of pastoral from his pocket and spreading thereon the plans.

Mr. Jyvecote leisurely surveyed them, while the young man regarded him with a nervous anxiety. Suddenly dashing them upon the table, Mr. Jyvecote rose, and, taking Sir Everard Noel's hand, shook it warmly.

"Sir, I know you are a true hearted fellow, and a chivalrous one. There are not ten—perhaps three men in London who would patch up a feud as you are doing to-day. I am better pleased to see you in this room than the acquisition of ten farms. Give the dear old priest his church, and my daughter's sake—I am as staunch a Protestant as yourself—I'll put up an altar. Come upstairs now, and I'll present you.

At this particular moment Miss Jyvecote was seated before the study. Upon perceiving our hero she grew deadly pale and then flushed up to the roots of her hair.

"Mr. Brown," she said, holding out her hand.

"You are mistaken, Joey; this is an old enemy and not your friend—Sir Everard Noel."

This church was erected at Monamullin and is a perfect gem in its way, the talented of all the Pugins; being dedicated to St. Maurice Sir Everard received his First Communion, and at its altar he was married to Miss Jyvecote by the paternal and affectionate Father Maurice O'Donnell.

"An! only for to think o' me sain' a rale gentleman! Sure I'm in a dhrame!" said the Widow Clancy.

[THE END.]

Killed by Parsimony.

M. de Vandelin was a remarkable man in Paris on account of his extreme wealth and avarice. He had been a magistrate under the Restoration. He literally adopted the old maxim that the "seeds of wealth, the best manure are economy and industry." Economy, in his opinion, may be compared to seconds of time, which generate years, centuries, and even eternity itself." In 1723 M. de Vandelin possessed upwards of seven hundred thousand pounds, which he had got or multiplied upon the body of a single shilling, from the age of sixteen to the age of seventy-three. Having never bought a sell one ounmore day in carrying home a load of fuel, a flavor ensued, and he, for the first time in his life, sent for a surgeon to bleed him; but thinking his terms exorbitant he proposed a bargain to a common barber surgeon, who undertook to perform the operation if opening a vein for three pence a time. "But," said Vandelle, "how often will it be necessary to bleed?" Three times," said he. "And what quantity of blood do you propose to take?" "Eight ounces each time," replied the operator. "That will be some pence! Too much! Too much! exclaimed old Vandelle. "I have determined to go a cheaper way to work, take the whole quantity at once that you propose to take at three times, and that will save me sixpence." This being counted on, he lost twenty-four ounces of blood, and also, by this unprecedented stretch of parsimony, his life. His vast treasures were left to the king, whom he appointed his sole heir.

In Debt.

A man who is out of debt is out of danger; no sins can drop that self-evident fact. He who avoids debt avoids sorrow and dangers. All the neighbors speak well of him. He is a favorite with the shopkeepers. The tradesmen bow to him as a good master. He knows the state of his own money matters. He is honorable and just in his own deal ings. You can depend on his word; fortunes, like certain birds, go in flocks, and never move alone. If misfortune overtakes him, he breaks the edge of it by not being in debt. "At all events," he says, "I have no bills to pay." He is not afraid of every ring of the bell, nor the first man whom he meets being a creditor whom he is putting off. If a wind rattle arrives he can enjoy it. It is not all beggars long before and swallowed up by the months of reckoning; he can look at it you should be with cash most, and often lay by something at the end of the year. He can help a poor relation, or give a needy friend a helping hand. He spares his money every month, perhaps every week, and always has money on hand. His "credit is good," but he will not take advantage of that fact. He declines to make a show at the expense of others. Whatever he has, eats, drinks, wears, drives, rides, uses, is paid for. If it were not, he would hardly think it his, or that he had any right to it.

A Man who is out of debt is out of danger; no sins can drop that self-evident fact. He who avoids debt avoids sorrow and dangers. All the neighbors speak well of him. He is a favorite with the shopkeepers. The tradesmen bow to him as a good master. He knows the state of his own money matters. He is honorable and just in his own deal ings. You can depend on his word; fortunes, like certain birds, go in flocks, and never move alone. If misfortune overtakes him, he breaks the edge of it by not being in debt. "At all events," he says, "I have no bills to pay." He is not afraid of every ring of the bell, nor the first man whom he meets being a creditor whom he is putting off. If a wind rattle arrives he can enjoy it. It is not all beggars long before and swallowed up by the months of reckoning; he can look at it you should be with cash most, and often lay by something at the end of the year. He can help a poor relation, or give a needy friend a helping hand. He spares his money every month, perhaps every week, and always has money on hand. His "credit is good," but he will not take advantage of that fact. He declines to make a show at the expense of others. Whatever he has, eats, drinks, wears, drives, rides, uses, is paid for. If it were not, he would hardly think it his, or that he had any right to it.

An Ex-Vote to Our Lady of Victories.

On Sunday, February the 15th, of this year, a variety officer, returning to the quest the Cross of the Legion of Honor, and accompanied by his wife, presented himself at the Church of the Lady of Victories, Paris.

"Father," said the officer, "we desire to offer a present to the Blessed Virgin. Will you take charge of it?

"Most cheerfully," answered the priest.

"What is it?

"Wait a moments, now." In saying these words, the officer removed his cloak and placed it in the hands of the priest. He was about to retire, when the priest stopped him, asking him whether or not he had any objection to tell the reason of this testimony of gratitude.

"Quite the contrary," answered the officer, promptly. "I and my wife are anxious to proclaim it. The Blessed Virgin has just saved our child from almost certain death. The poor little fellow is six years old. About the end of last month he was taken ill with an affection of the throat which soon proved to be croup. We took him at once to the hospital, in order that the best medical care might be bestowed on him. The physician found that, besides the trouble in the throat, he had pneumonia, one entire lung being effected. An operation, which of itself is very dangerous, was the last only chance of a cure—hardly one or two patients are saved out of every thousand. Still, despite the danger, the operation was attempted. It was then that I made a vow to present my Cross of the Legion to a pilgrimage to Our Lady of Victories.

"I have kept my promise, Father officer, with emotion. "For nine days I have attended your church; I have prayed there, and I have had a candle burning at the altar of the Blessed Virgin. I kept my promise wearing my medal, not in vanity, because, according to the precept of the Scriptures, we must not hide our light before men, and more in our days than at other times. The Blessed Virgin has heard me. Thanks to her, a miracle has been wrought; contrary to human prevision, the operation has succeeded, and to-day my child is out of danger. Put your Cross on the altar, Father officer, and let us kneel down and pray."

The officer complied with the request of the priest, and, after a short prayer, the priest said to him:

"Now, sir, I propose selling Ottley Farm, and devoting the proceeds towards building a new church for Father Maurice O'Donnell. I have an offer of three thousand pounds for the farm, and here are the plans, prepared by Mr. Pugin—pure Gothic," exacting a will of pastoral from his pocket and spreading thereon the plans.

Mr. Jyvecote leisurely surveyed them, while the young man regarded him with a nervous anxiety. Suddenly dashing them upon the table, Mr. Jyvecote rose, and, taking Sir Everard Noel's hand, shook it warmly.

"Sir, I know you are a true hearted fellow, and a chivalrous one. There are not ten—perhaps three men in London who would patch up a feud as you are doing to-day. I am better pleased to see you in this room than the acquisition of ten farms. Give the dear old priest his church, and my daughter's sake—I am as staunch a Protestant as yourself—I'll put up an altar. Come upstairs now, and I'll present you.

At this particular moment Miss Jyvecote was seated before the study. Upon perceiving our hero she grew deadly pale and then flushed up to the roots of her hair.

"Mr. Brown," she said, holding out her hand.

"You are mistaken, Joey; this is an old enemy and not your friend—Sir Everard Noel."

Anniversaries.

Our English and Scotch ancestors lifted the year with holy days, each of which had its peculiar method of observance. With the exception of Christmas, New Year's Eve, and Good Friday, most of them have been dropped by Americans; and some of them have fallen into disuse even in England.

Nothing could give a better idea of the manners, habits of thought, and domestic life of the nation than these holy days. Most of them were out of religious feeling, and although a good deal of superstition mingled with them, they showed that the independence of the people in their least action on a supreme power.

On February 31st, for example, before the glow was set in the ground for the first plow, and before the sheep had been housed on high points among the hills and buried in night. This was to invoke the blessing of the twelve Apostles on the coming crops. A thirteenth fire was kindled and speedily trampled out by the farmers, who danced over the embers till morning, to show their triumph over Judas.

Many singular customs belonged to Shrove Tuesday, the day before Lent. Innumerable pancakes were eaten. In some of the great schools it was the practice to tar out the master for three days, the boys maintaining a siege inside with stores of provisions and with blockades for weapons of defence.

Many of the grammar school provision was made by the charter that the master should "tarred and feathered" on Shrove Tuesday, if the boys should be dissatisfied with their master. This was a custom in Shrove Tuesday. The great creature was hunted out of his lair, and, if he could not be tarred and feathered, was tossed in a blanket or drowned in a pond. Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master." Hence the proverbial expression, "Tar out the master."

The Weeping Willow.

The weeping willow tree—the Salix Babylonica upon which the captive Hebrews hung their harps when they sat down "by the river of Babylon, and" wept when they remembered Zion." It is a native of the garden Eden, and not of America, and we will tell you how it emigrated to this country.

More than a hundred years ago, a London merchant lost his fortune. He went to Smyrna, a sea-side city in Asia Minor, to recover it. Alexander Pope, one of the great poets of England, was the merchant's near friend, by sympathetic affinity, him in his misfortune.

Shortly after the merchant arrived in Smyrna, he sent to Pope, as a present, a box of dried figs. At that time the poet had built a beautiful villa at Twickenham, on the bank of the river Thames, and was adorning it with trees, shrubbery, and flowering plants.

On opening the box of figs Pope discovered in it a small twig of a tree. It was a stranger to him. Anticipating from the Mine, or rather, the Smyrna, the tree grew on the edge of the river, close by his villa. The tree accidentally died. The spot seemed was favorable to its growth, for the twig in a few years became a large tree—mostly from the bank of one of "the rivers of Babylon" which flourishes best along the borders of water courses.

This little twig grew vigorously, and in a few years it bowed as a willow, spreading wide its branches and drooping gracefully over the water, to the admiration of the poet's friends as well as of strangers. It became the superlative lion of all the neighborhood in England.

There was a rebellion in the English American colonies—the British troops were sent to Boston to put down the insurrection. The British troops were encamped in a few weeks after their arrival. Some young officers by night cut down the willow, thinks, to enable them to enjoy spirit after the hard work, and to make room for the celebrated lands of the "rebels."

Among the latter was a young officer on staff of Washington, Mr. Hyde. He brought with him, wrapped in cloth sing, a twig from Pope's willow tree, which he planted in his native soil, where it has become a strong willow. He commanded an army before Boston, which kept the British ingenious and brave Lord Howe, who was obliged to shut his staff was his strategy son, John Parke Custis, who frequently went to the British lines, under the protection of a flag, with dispatches from his father. He was acquainted with the young officer who had the willow twig, and they often met.

Instead of "crushing the rebellion in six weeks," the British army in Boston, at the end of an imprisonment of nine months, were glad to get out of the country, and to Halifax. Long before that flight, the British authorities had offered to transport, free of charge, all the American loyalists, gave his carefully preserved willow twig to Parke Custis, who planted it in his mansion at Virginia, where it grew and flourished, and became a favorite resort for the natives of Australia, and the North American Indians, and a favorite lion in Sweden and Norway. The flesh is tender, and is used in preserves. The bark is a common remedy for the lower classes in England and the United States, and is used in medicine in Paris. The leaves are of the heaviest in much pained by the Indians and Canadian boatmen, commonly when they have roasted in the skins after the hair has been singed off.

A willow has been discovered in South America, which is only marble when the wind is blowing. The stick belongs to the genus Lancy, and is about three feet high, and is a stick at the top, giving it the appearance of a black lacquey cane. When the wind blows, the leaves turn up, and are portrait in a little bumps in the stick.

"The Best is Always the Cheapest!"

This old maxim holds good in many things, but in none more than in

FAMILY GROCERIES

Which are so often

Adulterated by Unscrupulous Dealers

To the Great Detriment of

EVERY PURCHASER.

The best plan to purchase, therefore, is to purchase your

FAMILY GROCERIES

From such Firms as

S. BARBORO & CO.,

Whose reputation for

Low Prices,
Full Weight,
And Pure Groceries,

EXTENDS OVER 25 YEARS

In San Francisco.

—Our Store is Located at—

531 Washington St., 531

(Between Montgomery and Sansome.)

READ THESE PRICES

And Call and Examine

OUR GOODS.

15 lbs. Very Light-brown Sugar, $1
20 pounds White Rice, $1
25 pounds Tapioca, $1
25 pounds Sago, $1
25 pounds Codfish, $1
12 pounds Prunes, $1
10 pounds Green Coffee, $1
Star Ground Coffee, 15c. per lb
Fine Tea, (No Humbug) 50c per lb
Fine Jar Tea, 50c per lb
Family Mixed Tea, 25c per lb
5-gallon can water-white Coal Oil, $1
30 pounds P. White Beans, $1
Golden Syrup, 5 gall. kegs, $2.50
Family Flour, per barrel, $4.75

And all other Goods Equal cheap.

WINES AND LIQUORS.

Claret, Zinfandel, per gallon, 75
Claret, French, per gallon, $1.50
Sherry, Cal., per gallon, $1.50
Port, Cal., per gallon, $1.50
Old Tom Bourbon, per gallon, $1.50
Old Rye Whiskey, per gallon, $1.50
Brandy, per gallon, $1.50
Jamaica Rum, per gallon, $1.50

The Manager of our house having had 25 YEARS EXPERIENCE —IN THE— GROCERY BUSINESS

In this city, and being an Expert in buying

Large Stocks of Goods,

I a guarantee that under his management we are able to sell FIRST-CLASS

GROCERIES

CHEAPER

Than any other house on this Coast

Economy is the result of trading with Us.

Wealth is the result of Economy.

All orders promptly and carefully filled and delivered to any part of the city, Oakland or Alameda free of charge.

Country orders solicited and prompt attention given.

Goods and charges free of charge.

Country Dealers Exchanged!

SEND FOR OUR PRICE LIST.

S. BARBORO & CO.

R. SBARBORO, Manager.

CHOLERA.

Scenes and Incidents of Its Ravages in France.

The Sisters of Charity True to their Mission. Fear Risks as well as Diseases.

MARSEILLES, August 6. To day's news indicates the spreading of the disease in the north, but it is spoken of as quite accounted for. The vast number of refugees must have distributed the cholera, through over a comparatively limited area. Fright, fatigue, and bad food are exactly the elements which predispose tissue changes to attacks of cholera. I believe, as I have said before, that there is little danger of contagion, provided precautions are taken. I think that few kills many men and women. I think that many nurses and women have been stricken down by the cholera. Charity has been stricken down by the disease. I dropped over one train at Toulon during my investigation, and then went again to Arles, but had to wait for the hospital there. I found no one who could give me any information, because of all our wealthy men. Out of about 50 men, I talked, expressed himself in the measured terms so good to which called "the cowardice of the people." He said Arles was deserted and so panic-stricken that the cholera cases remained unheard; that putrid refuse still encumbered the streets.

SEEKING DIVINE AID.

A crowd of women endeavored a few days ago, at Toulon, to hold a religious procession appealing to Heaven for Divine succour, but the authorities forbade it. Thus, at the time, cholera, and the cholera, and the cholera, created a bad impression. The Sisters of Charity, in all hours, are at the cholera patients, at Toulon and at Marseilles, praying before their favorite saints, and doing their duty. There is a general antipathy on the part of the government, which, I hear, is spoken of in a German in general, but it could not be prevent a well-deserved recognition of the devotion of both priests and nuns in this crisis.

A CURIOUS CASE.

At Toulon hospital the most touching case is that of a young woman, 20 years of age, who is a Protestant, and a teacher. The disease with her has taken a very critical and dangerous form. In her delirium, at times, the activity often lasts from three to four hours.

FATHER SMITH.

Of the many pathetic sights, the most pathetic is that of Father Smith, who, where one nurse was mostly occupied, by children. A man held in her arms, and a young lady take eighteen months old. Its three sisters, the oldest being only three years, lay on a mattress, surrounded by both of which died the same day, and there was scarcely a dry eye in the room when the children died. A dozen children in all were to be seen here, some of them in a state of recovery.

AT THE CEMETERY.

Late at night I drove out with nurses and sisters of charity to the Cemetery St. Pierre, to see the burial of the three patients who had died in the morning. I came back in the afternoon. The hottest led through the open streets, and the people were blowing to purify the air. The whole population was out, and the streets were crowded with people, enjoying the coolness of church porches, enjoying the breeze, and the currents of air created by them. The streets were made beyond the barriers brought up to the gates of the cemetery. It was a very impressive sight. Nearly all the dead were poor people, and the bodies were brought in on the shoulders of men, who were straight ahead until he reached the cemetery, where the priest met them at their first fence, lead us walking in a procession, the priest in front, and there by lantern lying on the ground, to a place just back from the fence, where the bodies were laid side by side. Some the best of the Heavens appeared, and the priest read the brief burial service intoned by a young man, who was the only one who was not furiously frenzied into a trench eight feet deep, in which the bodies were laid, a quantity of lime was shovelled on top. It was a ghastly trench, and there was a ghastly sight when the bodies were laid in it. The priest read the service in a low tone, and the people, who were standing very lightly with a frenzied expression of fear, and with a very vague expression of hope, in the faces of many, of the future life, which we hope and pray for, and which we believe, and which we know,

Poetry.

THE SUN ON THE BATTLE FIELD.

An Incident of the Franco-Prussian War.

BY T. D. SULLIVAN.

Dead on the corpse strewed battle plain
Where war's fiend work is done,
She lies, amid the heaps of slain,
The pure and holy sun.
She saw the stricken soldier fall,
And, on the sickle wave,
She reaped, unheeding blade or ball,
To enrich his grave—
To gently lay down her dead,
Ere, in the night of fame,
Unknown, save by spirit, fled,
The Spirit's Holy Name.
And on from one to one to pass,
Midst those who, living yet,
Lay groaning on the crimson grass
Their stanching blood had wet;
With saintly love and tender balm
Their suffering hearts to aid,
Yet far the other of the dress
Through which their wounds were made,
And—in whatever form of power
They prayed to God above—
Use their dying lips to vouch
The emblem of His love.
But, ah! the battle's thunderous swell
Had rolled not far away!
And still the sickle swept fall
Where dead and dying lay;
Where, in the sickly light cast by
Flare, lurid, to throw up the ground,
Amidst the mangled forms on high,
Hymed fresh entreaties round;
She flinched not while they buried past,
But when her death wound came at last
She blessed the sickle and died.

THE SAILOR'S NEW BABY.

There came to port, last Sunday night,
The quaintest little crafty
Without an inch of rigging on
I looked, and looked, and laughed.

It seemed so curious that she
Should cross the unknown water
And never herself right into my room,
My daughter, I mean, my daughter!

She has no manifest but this,
No flag flutter at the mast;
She's too new for the British Lloyds—
My daughter! my daughter!

Ring out, wild bells, and tame once too!
Ring out the bow'r roses!
Rise in the little wretched rocks!
Ring in the lab and spouse!

Ring out the moan! rise in the groans!
Ring in the and water!
Away with paper, pen and ink—
My daughter, O my daughter!

GEORGE W. CARLE.

Literary Miscellany.

The Little Chapel at Monamullin.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FOUR CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENE ROBINSON.

CHAPTER IV.

The three days Mr. Brown had spent at Moynahy were indeed the happiest of his life, which might have been easily burst era the iron had grown cold. He endeavored to prevent himself that this visit was a mere romantic episode in the career of an artist, one thing he had failed of in the past by and-by, and to be remembered as a delightful holiday. He was a man of the outward journey. He tried to fling dust in his mind's eye, and but succeeded in closing the eye to every-thing save the glorious inviting present. He floated on from day to day in a sort of temporary elysium—why call it a fool paradise?—so tranquil that it was impossible pain or sorrow could be in existence. He was intimacy sprung up in this wild, strange, isolated place that a decade of London seasons could never have brought to ripeness, and he felt the existence of the Lady Jocelyn a delight, though it was his old home. He rode, walked, boated, drew and sang by Lady Jocelyn. She, too, would seem to live in the present; in the subtle, delicious consciousness of being appreciated, and liked. The small chance of ever enjoying a repetition of his visit lent a zest to the every-day circumstance, and forbade those questionings as to who who wish which the favored one of fortune probe the antecedents of the standers at the swine whose feet divide the upper hoofs.

From the accident of the photograph his name was known to Jocelyn, and that he was a matter of amused astonishment how readily he accepted the title and how unvariegly he responded to a mail upon the name.

He quitted Moynahy in a strange whirl of confusing thought.

"May we see him again?" he mutter-ed, "May we see him again?" and Mrs. Jocelyn, graciously coming upon the terrace to bid him adieu. "Why go so early, and leave our dress in 9? Breakfast-time, Mayfair. I know how sorry Mr. Jyrecote will be to have missed you, especially as he arrives here to-morrow; and I am sure he would be vexed to serve you—although," she added, with earnestness, "a gentleman of Mr. Brown's gifts requires no 'pour' service such as we could render him.

"I am long of you remain in Monamullin, Mr. Brown" asked Mrs. Travers.

"Until I finish a study of that lake here which May Jyrecote intends to honor me by accepting."

"Oh! then we shall see much more of you."

"I am compelled to raise the drawbridge and drop the portcullis under the hope, Mrs. Travers. My working-drawing is long, and—"

"Then if Mohammed will not come to the mountain, the mountain must come to Mohammed. I'll drive my sister over to service next Sunday, and see how the priest, the painter and the pictures are getting on."

It was a great triumph to the artist to hear himself accepted and the same adieux that hear himself accepted and the same adieux that fluttered after him on the evening broken seemed and sad musically. Was the barrier between Mr. Jyrecote and himself utterly impassable? Could it not be bridged over? He could not assume the initiative. He would see Jyrecote and his whole room in Tokaboom—Tokaboom, and yet what would he do to gain the love of the youngest daughter of the house! Anything, every thing. Paint! any chance of wooing and winning such a girl should be through the medium of his title, his position, and by passing beneath the yoke of society. What sober folly to think of her from the standpoint upon which he had been admitted to his father's house! As the artist he was patronized, as the baronet he could be placed and put to sit by her side. He would be just one of those chances occasionally vouchsafed by the rosy archer. She had been silent, reserved, and had seemed shy of him. She spoke much of a man in the Guards, a shade of her brother Jasper possibly this Guardsman was the man.

In musings such as these did Mr. Brown pursue his work, and the picture came to life beneath his glowing hands. He was with all the necessary of cottage, had arrived from Dublin, the good priest marvelling considerably at the pecuniary resources of his guest. "His little all," he thought, "and he's going to make it a present to my bachelory."

But a great surprise was in store for Father Maurice.

Mr. Brown had issued instructions to his London friend to forward the Stations of Cross, free of all carriage, to Rev. Maurice O'Donnell, P. P., Monamullin, Hallynavongin, County Mayo.

This order was promptly complied with, and a lovely autumn evening beheld the whole village, curs and all, turn out to speculate upon the nature of the contents of four gigantic wooden cases deposited in the little garden attached to the parochial cottage. It were utterly useless to endeavor to describe the frenzy occasioned by the opening of the boxes; the excitement rose to a pitch never realized in Monamullin since the consecration of the visit of the Archbishop of Tuam—the Lion of the Fold of Judah. Father Maurice fairly wept for joy; Mrs Clancy insisted upon doing the Stations there and then; and as each picture was brought to light, from the folds of wrappers saturnesque those surrounding the body of an Egyptian Mummy, a burst of admiration was raised by the assembled and reverential multitude. The face was pale and he wondered the source from whence the splendid gift had emanated, endeavored to trace it to Miss Jyrecote—a belief which Mr. Brown sedulously sustained—and Father Maurice, full of the idea, attributed whole lessons at his praise, scarcely ever ceasing mention of her name.

"I'll drive over to-morrow and tender her my most devoted gratitude. I'll offer up Masses for her."

"She will be here to-morrow, Father, Mrs. Travers. I'm to drive her over. Don't you think we ought to see about hanging the Stations? It will please her immensely to see them in their places in the church."

A hanging committee was appointed and the work of suspending the pictures carried into instant execution. The mouldy little edifice was soon adorn with gilding and glorious coloring, which alas! but seemed to display its general dinginess more glaringly.

"My poor little altar may hide its diminished head," said Father Maurice, mournfully, brightening up, however, as he added: "But, sure, I soon have Miss Jyrecote's beautiful altar-cloth."

The "cards" people arrived upon the following morning and were escorted by the artist to the church.

"You have come over upon an interesting occasion, Miss Jyrecote," he said. "Father Maurice has just received an anonymous gift of a set of Stations of the Cross, and he thinks you can tell him something about them."

Great was the astonishment of the simple priest when Miss Jyrecote denied all knowledge of the presentation.

"Why, Father, you must think me as rich as Miss Burdett Coutts," she cried. "These beautiful works of art have cost hundreds of pounds. Mr. Brown here will tell you how much they cost," turning to the man gentleman. How often a story shot hits home! Mr. Brown had the receipted bill in his pocket at that particular moment.

"They are French," he said, evading the question.

"Consequently more expensive, n'est ce pas?"

"They are not badly done."

"They are on the borderland of high art, Mr. Brown. Why do you pooh-pooh them?"

Poor Father Maurice was fairly nonplussed. All his grievance anent the dispute fell short, while his surmises died from sheer inanition. It could not be the Cardinal. Might it be Micky O'Brian that ran away to sea and was now coming home a rich man? or Pandheen Mullany, who was a thriving grocer in Dublin. For the first time in his life the parish priest felt uneasy, if not unhappy. What did it portend? Who could possibly take an interest in the affairs of the parish of Mr. Maurice? Mr. Malachi Bolkin might have done so in the olden time, but he failed of it in the event by-and-by, and to be remembered as a delightful holiday. He was a man of the outward journey. He tried to fling dust in his mind's eye, and but succeeded in closing the eye to every-thing save the glorious inviting present. He floated on from day to day in a sort of temporary elysium—why call it a fool paradise?—so tranquil that it was impossible pain or sorrow could be in existence. He was intimacy sprung up in this wild, strange, isolated place that a decade of London seasons could never have brought to ripeness, and he felt the existence of the Lady Jocelyn a delight, though it was his old home. He rode, walked, boated, drew and sang by Lady Jocelyn. She, too, would seem to live in the present; in the subtle, delicious consciousness of being appreciated, and liked. The small chance of ever enjoying a repetition of his visit lent a zest to the every-day circumstance, and forbade those questionings as to who who wish which the favored one of fortune probe the antecedents of the standers at the swine whose feet divide the upper hoofs.

From the accident of the photograph his name was known to Jocelyn, and that he was a matter of amused astonishment how readily he accepted the title and how unvariegly he responded to a mail upon the name.

He quitted Moynahy in a strange whirl of confusing thought.

"May we see him again?" he mutter-ed, "May we see him again?" and Mrs. Jocelyn, graciously coming upon the terrace to bid him adieu. "Why go so early, and leave our dress in 9? Breakfast-time, Mayfair. I know how sorry Mr. Jyrecote will be to have missed you, especially as he arrives here to-morrow; and I am sure he would be vexed to serve you—although," she added, with earnestness, "a gentleman of Mr. Brown's gifts requires no 'pour' service such as we could render him.

"I am long of you remain in Monamullin, Mr. Brown" asked Mrs. Travers.

"Until I finish a study of that lake here which May Jyrecote intends to honor me by accepting."

"Oh! then we shall see much more of you."

"I am compelled to raise the drawbridge and drop the portcullis under the hope, Mrs. Travers. My working-drawing is long, and—"

"Then if Mohammed will not come to the mountain, the mountain must come to Mohammed. I'll drive my sister over to service next Sunday, and see how the priest, the painter and the pictures are getting on."

It was a great triumph to the artist to hear himself accepted and the same adieux that hear himself accepted and the same adieux that fluttered after him on the evening broken seemed and sad musically. Was the barrier between Mr. Jyrecote and himself utterly impassable? Could it not be bridged over? He could not assume the initiative. He would see Jyrecote and his whole room in Tokaboom—Tokaboom, and yet what would he do to gain the love of the youngest daughter of the house! Anything, every thing. Paint! any chance of wooing and winning such a girl should be through the medium of his title, his position, and by passing beneath the yoke of society. What sober folly to think of her from the standpoint upon which he had been admitted to his father's house! As the artist he was patronized, as the baronet he could be placed and put to sit by her side. He would be just one of those chances occasionally vouchsafed by the rosy archer. She had been silent, reserved, and had seemed shy of him. She spoke much of a man in the Guards, a shade of her brother Jasper possibly this Guardsman was the man.

In musings such as these did Mr. Brown pursue his work, and the picture came to life beneath his glowing hands. He was with all the necessary of cottage, had arrived from Dublin, the good priest marvelling considerably at the pecuniary resources of his guest. "His little all," he thought, "and he's going to make it a present to my bachelory."

But a great surprise was in store for Father Maurice.

Mr. Brown had issued instructions to his London friend to forward the Stations of An Ex-Voto to Our Lady of Victories.

On Sunday, February the 10th, of this year, a cavalry officer, nearing on his forest the Cross of the Legion of Honor and accompanied by his wife, presented himself at the Church of Our Lady of Victories, Paris.

"Father," said the officer, "we desire to offer a present to the Blessed Virgin, as she has deigned in twain from the East upon the previous day.

A person entered with a card upon a silver salver.

Mr. Jyrecote adjusted his eyglass and leisurely lifted the tiny bit of pasteboard. "Well Does this mean?" he inquired, as it fell again. "Is the gentleman waiting?"

"In the all sir.

"Show him in."

A tall, high-bred looking young man entered. His face was pale and he seemed nervously stroked a Henri Quarto beard.

"May I ask to what I am indebted for this call from Sir Everard Noel?" demanded Mr. Jyrecote haughtily.

"I shall explain the purport of my visit in a few words.

"Pray be seated."

"Thanks! Mr. Jyrecote, there was bad blood and bitter feud between you and my poor father about Ottley Farm.

"You need scarcely remind me of that, Sir Everard.

"There is bad blood between us, Mr. Jyrecote—I claim it in the right of an old lease that could not be discovered when the case came before the courts, I claim possession of it by law. The last time a man was in that house, and—and I found some expressions for which I am very seriously sorry. So long as that farm is in the possession of my lessee I do it will lead to bad feeling, and I came here today to tell you what I mean to do about it.

A somewhat less stern frown appeared upon Mr. Jyrecote features as he listened.

"Last autumn accident threw me into one of the wildest portions of Ireland, a place not known to you—Monamullin.

"It is within seven miles of Moynahy sir.

"I am aware of that. I was the guest of one of your present men that God Almighty ever made—Father Maurice O'Donnell.

"Your estimate is just, Sir Everard.

"He sold to me a piece of land, and his simple heart is fragrantly divided among his little flock. I found his church dingy, dilapidated, falling. He is worthy of a better building; he is worthy of anything, cried the young man enthusiastically.

Mr. Jyrecote bowed assent.

"Well, sir, I propose rebuilding Ottley Farm, and devoting the proceeds towards building a new church for Father Maurice O'Donnell. I have an offer of three thousand pounds for the farm, and here are the plans, prepared by Mr. Pugin—pure Gothic," arresting a roll of papers from his pocket and spreading them into the hands of the other.

Mr. Jyrecote leisurely surveyed them, while the young man regarded him with the same eager scrutiny. Suddenly flung them upon the table. Mr. Jyrecote rose, and, taking Sir Everard Noel's hand, shook it warmly.

"Noel, you are a fine hearted fellow, and a chivalrous one. There are not too many perhaps! there are not two men in London who would pitch up a fine as you are doing to-day. I am better pleased to see you in this fine form than the impassion of my daughter's sake—I am as staunch Protestant as yourself—I'll put up an altar. Come upstairs now, and I'll present you to her.

At this particular moment Miss Jyrecote entered the study. Upon perceiving a stranger she drew steadily pale and then flushed up to the roots of her hair.

"Mr. Brown, she said, holding out her hand.

"You are mistaken, Jocy; this is an old acquaintance—Sir Everard Noel.

The church was erected at Monamullin and is a perfect gem in its way, the talented artist to the last, lavishing upon it the design. At its altar Everard received his First Communion, and it was afraid he was Julia and her companion as they seated themselves in a secluded nook amended by the Lady Jocelyn in which the world seemed to cease suddenly.

"And you think of leaving?" she said, after a long silence, during which she drew eccentric circles in the dust at the edge of her parasol.

"My Lionel says 'yes,' Miss Jyrecote.

"Does your lionel say whither?

"It points to that little village on the Thames called London.

"We go to London next month, en route to Egypt. My sister Grace—you never met her—who has been in Italy with my uncle, is recommended Egypt for her chest. Papa received letters yesterday.

"How long do you think you will remain in London?

"Only a day or two.

"Might I hope to see you?

"Why not! Our address is 91, Brutton street, Mayfair.

"Lionel is Mr. Delmege, of the Guards, going to Egypt?

She looked gravely at him, full into his eyes, as she replied somewhat coldly.

"No; that I am aware of.

His heart gave a great bound as though a dull, dead weight had been suddenly removed.

"I hope to see your handicraft on the walls of the Academy when we return.

"Sole Jove! he said, clasping his knees and his hands, and giving out across the open sea.

"If you try you will succeed.

"I have a very poor opinion of my own power of success in anything, Lionel, except, perpaps."

"Neither one or the other. You have a noble profession, a glorious talent, and Father Maurice says you have a good heart. With three such friends as companions life is a garden of flowers."

"And yet tell within the last few days I have found it like a desert.

Then silence fell upon both.

"Father Maurice will miss you dreadfully," she murmured. She was very pale, and her dark eyes turned upon him with a cheerful earnestness. He has become so much attached to you; and the poor little altar will miss your artistic grouping of the flowers. Do you know," she ended, shall say on "Ave Maria" when I visit the little church, and for your conversion.

"Will you do—do—do—" she stopped suddenly short and dug his hand into the sand.

"The ebay a watin for ye, Miss Jocy, and Mistha Travers is fearin' somthe, cried Murty Mulligan, thrusting his shock head between a cleft in the rocks.

Brown gripping to his feet and offered Miss Jyrecote his arm. Neither spoke during the walk to the cottage. "If you should hear of me through your brother do not think of me," he whispered as he handed her into the phaeton.

"What do you mean," she asked, in a low tone

"Promise me that you will not forget Brown, the poor artist.

"It is scarcely necessary, she murmured, as she gave him her hand.

There was a blank at the priest's house when the artist left it. Father Maurice missed him sadly—missed his jet at backgammon, his gay gossip and his cheery company.

"He was a rale gentleman," said Mrs. Clancy, "he wanted to give me a golden sovereign—nobbles it's only wan he had—divil a trick a crooked his pocket I'm faith, an luck I wish him wherever he goes"

"He was the nicest man an the nicest paintherr! yeah I ever seen, chimed in Murty; an I'm in thread that I spoke too rough when he offered me mesonneration."

"He promised to come here next summer, and he will keep his promise," said the priest.

Mr. Jocelyn Jyrecote was seated in the study at 91 Brutton street, engaged in perusing the column of the Times. He had slept well, breakfasted well, and was thoroughly refreshed after his journey as he had arrived in town from the East upon the previous day.

A person entered with a card upon a silver salver.

Mr. Jyrecote adjusted his eyglass and leisurely lifted the tiny bit of pasteboard. "Well Does this mean?" he inquired, as it fell again. "Is the gentleman waiting?"

"In the all sir.

"Show him in."

A tall, high-bred looking young man entered. His face was pale and he seemed nervously stroked a Henri Quarto beard.

"May I ask to what I am indebted for this call from Sir Everard Noel?" demanded Mr. Jyrecote haughtily.

"I shall explain the purport of my visit in a few words.

"Pray be seated."

"Thanks! Mr. Jyrecote, there was bad blood and bitter feud between you and my poor father about Ottley Farm.

"You need scarcely remind me of that, Sir Everard.

"There is bad blood between us, Mr. Jyrecote—I claim it in the right of an old lease that could not be discovered when the case came before the courts, I claim possession of it by law. The last time a man was in that house, and—and I found some expressions for which I am very seriously sorry. So long as that farm is in the possession of my lessee I do it will lead to bad feeling, and I came here today to tell you what I mean to do about it.

A somewhat less stern frown appeared upon Mr. Jyrecote features as he listened.

"Last autumn accident threw me into one of the wildest portions of Ireland, a place not known to you—Monamullin.

"It is within seven miles of Moynahy sir.

"I am aware of that. I was the guest of one of your present men that God Almighty ever made—Father Maurice O'Donnell.

"Your estimate is just, Sir Everard.

"He sold to me a piece of land, and his simple heart is fragrantly divided among his little flock. I found his church dingy, dilapidated, falling. He is worthy of a better building; he is worthy of anything, cried the young man enthusiastically.

Mr. Jyrecote bowed assent.

"Well, sir, I propose rebuilding Ottley Farm, and devoting the proceeds towards building a new church for Father Maurice O'Donnell. I have an offer of three thousand pounds for the farm, and here are the plans, prepared by Mr. Pugin—pure Gothic," arresting a roll of papers from his pocket and spreading them into the hands of the other.

Mr. Jyrecote leisurely surveyed them, while the young man regarded him with the same eager scrutiny. Suddenly flung them upon the table. Mr. Jyrecote rose, and, taking Sir Everard Noel's hand, shook it warmly.

"Noel, you are a fine hearted fellow, and a chivalrous one. There are not too many perhaps! there are not two men in London who would pitch up a fine as you are doing to-day. I am better pleased to see you in this fine form than the impassion of my daughter's sake—I am as staunch Protestant as yourself—I'll put up an altar. Come upstairs now, and I'll present you to her.

At this particular moment Miss Jyrecote entered the study. Upon perceiving a stranger she drew steadily pale and then flushed up to the roots of her hair.

"Mr. Brown, she said, holding out her hand.

"You are mistaken, Jocy; this is an old acquaintance—Sir Everard Noel.

The church was erected at Monamullin and is a perfect gem in its way, the talented artist to the last, lavishing upon it the design. At its altar Everard received his First Communion, and it was afraid he was Julia and her companion as they seated themselves in a secluded nook amended by the Lady Jocelyn in which the world seemed to cease suddenly.

"And you think of leaving?" she said, after a long silence, during which she drew eccentric circles in the dust at the edge of her parasol.

"My Lionel says 'yes,' Miss Jyrecote.

"Does your lionel say whither?

"It points to that little village on the Thames called London.

"We go to London next month, en route to Egypt. My sister Grace—you never met her—who has been in Italy with my uncle, is recommended Egypt for her chest. Papa received letters yesterday.

"How long do you think you will remain in London?

"Only a day or two.

"Might I hope to see you?

"Why not! Our address is 91, Brutton street, Mayfair.

"Lionel is Mr. Delmege, of the Guards, going to Egypt?

She looked gravely at him, full into his eyes, as she replied somewhat coldly.

"No; that I am aware of.

His heart gave a great bound as though a dull, dead weight had been suddenly removed.

"I hope to see your handicraft on the walls of the Academy when we return.

"Sole Jove! he said, clasping his knees and his hands, and giving out across the open sea.

"If you try you will succeed.

"I have a very poor opinion of my own power of success in anything, Lionel, except, perpaps."

"Neither one or the other. You have a noble profession, a glorious talent, and Father Maurice says you have a good heart. With three such friends as companions life is a garden of flowers."

"And yet tell within the last few days I have found it like a desert.

Then silence fell upon both.

"Father Maurice will miss you dreadfully," she murmured. She was very pale, and her dark eyes turned upon him with a cheerful earnestness. He has become so much attached to you; and the poor little altar will miss your artistic grouping of the flowers. Do you know," she ended, shall say on "Ave Maria" when I visit the little church, and for your conversion.

"Will you do—do—do—" she stopped suddenly short and dug his hand into the sand.

"The ebay a watin for ye, Miss Jocy, and Mistha Travers is fearin' somthe, cried Murty Mulligan, thrusting his shock head between a cleft in the rocks.

Brown gripping to his feet and offered Miss Jyrecote his arm. Neither spoke during the walk to the cottage. "If you should hear of me through your brother do not think of me," he whispered as he handed her into the phaeton.

"What do you mean," she asked, in a low tone

"Promise me that you will not forget Brown, the poor artist.

"It is scarcely necessary, she murmured, as she gave him her hand.

There was a blank at the priest's house when the artist left it. Father Maurice missed him sadly—missed his jet at backgammon, his gay gossip and his cheery company.

"He was a rale gentleman," said Mrs. Clancy, "he wanted to give me a golden sovereign—nobbles it's only wan he had—divil a trick a crooked his pocket I'm faith, an luck I wish him wherever he goes"

"He was the nicest man an the nicest paintherr! yeah I ever seen, chimed in

Killed by Parsimony.

M. de Vandilla was the most remarkable man in Paris on account of his extreme wealth and avarice. He had been a magistrate at Boulogne. He literally adopted the old maxim that the "seeds of wealth, the half pence and pence, may be compared to seconds of time, which generate years, centuries, and even eternity itself." In 1738 M. de Vandilla possessed upwards of seven hundred thousand pounds, which he had got or multiplied upon the body of a single living, from the age of sixteen to the age of seventy-two. Having over-heated himself one summer day in carrying home a bag of dollars, he caught a fever, and, for the first time in his life, sent for a surgeon to bleed him, but thinking he was too avaricious, set he proposed a bargain to a common barber-surgeon, who undertook to perform the operation, of opening a vein for three pence a time. "Five, said Vandilla, "how dare will he requisite to bleed? Three times," said he. "And what quantity of blood do you propose to take? "About eight ounces each time," replied the operator. "That will be same pence! Too much! Too much! exclaimed old Vandilla. "I have determined to go a cheaper way to work, take the whole quantity at once that you propose to take at three times, and that will save me sixpence. This saving proved too, he lost twenty-four ounces of blood, and also, by this unprecedented stretch of parsimony, his life. His vast treasures were left to the king, whom he appointed his sole heir.

In Debt.

A man who is out of debt is out of danger, no one can deny that self-evident fact. He who avoids debt avoids numberless dangers. All the neighbors speak well of him. He is a favorite with the shopkeepers. The workmen declare he is a good master. He knows the state of his own money matters. He is honorable and just in his own dealings. You can depend on his word; for extreme, like certain birds, go in flocks, and never move alone. If misfortune overtakes him, he knows that it is the result of his poverty in debt. "At all events, he says, "I have no bills to pay." He is not afraid of every ring of the bell, nor the first man whom he meets being a creditor whom he is putting off. If a wind fall arrives he can enjoy it. It is not all keep-keen long before he is overtaken by the mortifications of unfortunate debts. He can always make both ends meet, and often lay something by for the end of the year. He can help a poor relation, or give a needy friend a helping hand. He squares his accounts every month, perhaps every week, and knows how he stands at the end. His "credit is good, but he will not take advantage of that fact. He declines to make a show of the expense of others. Whatever he has, eats, drinks, wears, drives, rides, uses, is paid for. If it were not, he would hardly think it fair, or that he had any right to it.

Anniversaries.

Our English and Scotch ancestors filled the year with holy days, each of which had its peculiar method of observance. With the exception of Christmas, New Years, Easter, and Good Friday, most of these have been dropped by Americans. And some of them have fallen into desuetude even in England.

Nothing could give a better idea of the customs, habits of thought, and domestic life of the nation than these holy days. Most of them grew out of religious feeling, and although in the Middle Ages religion was mixed with them, they showed the depth and reach of the people in their last stirrings on a supreme power.

On February 24, for example, before the plow was set in the field, or the first sowing of the seed, twelve fires were kindled on high points among the Irish and Scotch hills. This was to invoke the blessing of the twelve Apostles on the coming crop. A thirteenth fire was kindled and speedily trampled out by the farmers, who danced over the embers till morning, to show their triumph over Judas.

Many singular customs belonged to Shrove Tuesday, the day before Lent. Immortals popular were eaten. In some of the great schools it was the practice to bar out the master for three days, the boys maintaining a siege inside with stores of provisions and with blue guns for weapons of defence.

In many of the grammar schools position was decided by the chamber that the master should furnish a hen, goose, or even a sheep, to be eaten on Ash Wednesday, which was Shrove Tuesday. The poor creature was supposed to represent the spirit of evil, and was treated with the most exquisite torture, almost incredible to us, in this age of the world.

With Sunday, held in remembrance the 5th day of Pentecost, was, and still is, in England, an excuse for unlimited beer-drinking. Bulls and bears were tormented on the streets by maskers, called the Morris dance.

The Pet Crocodile.

When Herodotus visited Egypt, about 450 years before the Christian era, the following was the way in which this formidable reptile was caught and tamed:

There are many ways of catching crocodiles in Egypt. The most common method is that which is thus described by Herodotus. The huntsman puts the chine of a pig as a bait on a hook, and lets it drift down the river. In the meantime, he takes his station on the land, and, a young pig, which he keeps for the purpose, he beats, which he does so cruelly that the crocodile, hearing the sound, has but meeting with the bait on his way, he swallows it down. The huntsman then, and all the rest of the company, drag the beast to the land, first thing the huntsman does is to put a mud plaster upon the eyes of the beast, which he can succeed in doing this there is no difficulty in managing the creature, for it is a very troublesome affair.

The difference between which this monstrous reptile and in different parts of ancient Europe is extreme, and not very easily accounted for. In the neighborhood of Thebes the cataracts, the crocodile was an object of worship, and a very pet, and in some cases, as in Dampala at the present day. In other parts, on the contrary, it was and is still a most cruel and ferocious creature, and takes that when school days are over, and life is more earnest, and consequently more mistaken, we find so many lives of great men, who have spent the best of their and remaining almost a perfect blank. Their minds become inactive and they find the impossibility of recovering lost time, or, perhaps, or rolling. There are, unfortunately, many instances of this, and, unfortunately, the reward only of steady, persistent labor, and the reward of the years. We can help a poor relation, or give a needy friend a helping hand. He squares his accounts every month, perhaps every week, and knows how he stands at the end. His "credit is good, but he will not take advantage of that fact. He declines to make a show of the expense of others. Whatever he has, eats, drinks, wears, drives, rides, uses, is paid for. If it were not, he would hardly think it fair, or that he had any right to it.

The Weeping Willow.

You have seen and admired the weeping willow—tree—the Salix babylonica—upon which the captive Hebrews hung their harps when they sat down by the river of Babylon, and "wept when they remembered Zion." It is a native of the gardens of Eden, and not of America, and we will tell you how it emigrated to this country. More than a hundred and fifty years ago a London merchant lost his fortune. He went to Smyrna, a seaport on the Asia Minor, to recover it. Alexander Pope, one of the great poets of England, was the merchant's warm friend, and sympathized with him in his misfortune.

Shortly after the merchant arrived in Smyrna, he sent to Pope, as a present, a box of dried figs. At that time the poet had built a beautiful villa at Twickenham, on the bank of the river Thames, and was adorning it with trees, shrubbery, and flowering plants.

On opening the box of figs Pope discovered in it a small twig of a tree. It was a mere twig, but, with his accustomed care, he planted the twig in the ground near the edge of the river, close by his villa. The spot accidentally chosen for the planting was favorable to its growth, and the twig was from a weeping-willow tree—possibly from the bank of one of the rivers of Babylon! which branches feed along the borders of water courses.

This little twig grew vigorously, and in a few years it became a large tree, spreading its long branches, its drooping, graceful sprays, and winning the admiration of the poet's friends as well as of strangers. It became the admiration of all the weeping willows in England.

There was a revolution in the English American colonies in 1776. British troops were sent to subdue the rebellion of their fellow-subjects. The British officers expected to end it in a few weeks after their arrival. Some young officers brought tobacco seeds with them, to smoke them to enjoy—a luxury to be forced was. Tobacco seeds were sown in the confiscated lands of the "rebels."

Among the latter was a young officer on the staff of General Howe. He brought with him, wrapped in a piece of a letter from Pope's weeping-willow at Twickenham, which he intended to plant on some paternal estate in Virginia.

Washington commanded an army before Boston, and kept the British shut up in that city all a year against their will. The British had to evacuate Boston, and sail from it to Halifax. Long before that flight, the British authorities learned that he should never have an estate in America to inherit, and, consequently, he gave the twig to a young Quaker, who planted it at Abingdon, his estate in Virginia, "for safe keeping" instead of "carrying on the parade of the weeping willows in the United States.

A "Generous Fellow".

If there is anything a liquor drinker or seller prides himself upon, it is that he is a "generous fellow." The fellow who lays jingles his few silver dollars in his pocket, and, with a "I'm a man, I am," and defiance the loafers usually congregated in a saloon, with "Set up the drinks, Jim, I'm a man." All drink, and he slaps down the money with the almost freedom and swagger of a king. The fellow who lounges in a saloon, and, with a lavish air, orders a half-a-dozen fellows to drink, and, after a brief social service induced by a young priest who had called, "Set up the drinks," and furtively lowered into a trench eight feet deep by twenty feet long, and, with a groan of a man who was shoveled on top. It was a ghastly trench, and there was plenty of room for more. The fellow who lounges and saddening sight. There stood the Master Mason, and, with a wave of his cane, summoned by a gang of swarthy, lazy, ragged men, who, with a sullen air, and a sullen look, and a sullen gait, shouldered their picks and shovels, and, with a sullen look, and a sullen gait, shouldered their picks and shovels, and, with a sullen look, and a sullen gait, shouldered their picks and shovels, and, with

THE MONITOR.

THIRTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

Mar God Gave and Christ through the Intercession of St. Francis de Sales Ordained that Men Should Be Taught, Guided, Sustained and Consoled through the Agency of Religious, Its rights and Duties of the Divine Apostolic See, and adhere to its decisions and people with devotion and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is the greatest and most power, because it is the chief agent in popularizing ideas; and properly conducted, it is the most effective means of elevating the mind, of rectifying prejudices, of inspiring with a lawful and serious enthusiasm, not only a work indeed praiseworthy in itself, but also worthy of admiration. What is and what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism but to combat error and defend the truth, whatever it may be—always all, the Divine truth."—Leo XIII., THURSDAY, 20th JANUARY, 1881.

Growth of the Church on the Pacific Slope.

In our local columns this week we have the happiness of placing on record the dedication of another Catholic church in this archdiocese, and such events have become of such frequent occurrence as to suggest the utility of devoting a brief portion of our space to the progress which the Church is making on the Pacific slope, and, in this connection, we are happy to say that in every Diocese—from Monterey and Los Angeles on the south, to British Columbia on the north—the visible signs of progress may be seen in the erection of new churches, the increase of priests, the opening of parochial schools, or the establishing of asylums of charity and mercy.

In this Archdiocese, as our readers are aware, the dedication of a new church, and the opening of additional Catholic schools, are incidents of almost monthly occurrence. In the Diocese of Grass Valley and Los Angeles the Faith is spreading as rapidly as priests can be procured wherewith to sow the good seed in the Catholic soil of California. In the widespread Archdiocese of Oregon the Very Rev. Administrator is completing a magnificent cathedral in the centre of Portland, while a new church has just been completed for the southern portion of the city, and a church is projected for the accommodation of the numerous Catholics who live in the northern hamlet. In other portions of Oregon the same progress marks the Catholic element of every community.

In the neighboring Diocese of Nesqually—which comprises all of Washington Territory—Bishop Rigdius Junger is erecting a cathedral in Vancouver that will cost about $60,000. The building is 128x52 feet, and at transepts 74 feet wide. It will have a central spire 213 feet high, and seats 112 feet high at each end of the front of the building. In addition to this great project, there has already been erected in Vancouver—by the thousand Catholics that comprise the congregation—a magnificent brick building wherein 125 orphans are educated from the world and and from Satan; a hospital, an academy, a boys' college, day and boarding schools, a home for the aged and infirm, and a spacious residence for the Rev. Clergy.

For its numbers, therefore, the Catholic congregation of Vancouver, Washington Territory, stands without a peer in America in the perfection of its good works! The Bishop still lives who erected the small shanty which served the double purpose of religious rites and residence in the city of Seattle; he still lives who erected the small shanty which served the double purpose of religious rites and residence in the city of Vancouver; he still lives to witness the results of his zeal, and to see the fruitfulness of his labors springing into existence, and, as the holy and venerable A. M. A. Blanchet reflects on the past, and calls to mind Vancouver as he first saw it in 1847, with its present Catholic aspect and its wonderful works of Catholic zeal—from his very soul must spring forth the exultant prayer: Gloria in excelsis Deo!

Since 1879, when Bishop Junger was consecrated as the second Prelate to preside over Nesqually, that Diocese has more than doubled its Catholic population. New churches, schools, hospitals, and asylums have been built, and in the performance of such work in a scarcely settled country covering an area of seventy-five thousand square miles, the Bishop requires a great deal of the grace of God to enable him to travel in all sorts of conveyances, at all hours of the day and night, and in all sorts of weather—in order to carry the Gospel to distant regions and to break the Bread of Life to Christians who are situated in new sections of the great Northwest. By road and river, by train and through snow, by steamship, sailboat, and Indian canoe, in a vehicle, or on foot—Bishop Junger has managed to penetrate into many portions of his vast Diocese, where he was the first Prelate of the Catholic Church ever seen by the settlers. But, if the work is arduous, Almighty God has sent Nesqually a Bishop in whose vocabulary there is no such word as fail. Young, robust, resolute, and deeply religious, we sincerely hope that the Prelate who presides over Nesqually will yet see his 20,000 Catholic population multiplied into 200,000 before our Father in Heaven places the crown of a Confessor of the Faith upon his consecrated brow and calls upon him to enter into the joy of the Lord.

In the Diocese of Victoria, Vancouver Island—for which Archbishop Seghers was originally consecrated, and to which he has recently been transferred from Oregon—the Catholics at the capital city of the Sou are preparing to erect a magnificent cathedral upon a splendid site selected by Archbishop Seghers long before his translation to Oregon. His Grace is at present soliciting help for this building in England, and is meeting with great munificence on the part of the Catholic people wherever he pleads for his poor Diocese.

In the Vicariate-Apostolic of British Columbia, the white Catholic population is not numerous, the labors of the Prelates and priests being mostly required to attend to the 20,000 Indians, whom the Oblate Fathers have charge of, and for whose instruction additional priests, chapels, convents, and schools are required every year.

In Alaska—a portion of the Diocese of Vancouver Island—Catholic matters are at present at a stand still in consequence of its distance from Victoria, and the want of missionaries to occupy the field, but when Archbishop Seghers returns from Europe next November, we expect that he will be accompanied by many missionaries, who will take up the work of converting the Indians which his Grace commenced so auspiciously when he visited the Indians in that region ten years ago.

Hence our readers at a distance, who evince laudable pride at the progress which the Church is making in their immediate localities, can discern the onward march of progress even in the region as remote as the Pacific slope—a portion of the world originally consecrated to God by Catholic missionaries, whose prayers for the growth of the Faith seem destined to be realized at no distant day.

The Outrageous Proceedings of a Public School Pedagogue.

The faith of Catholics teaches them to endure wrongs more patiently than other people, hence they put up with a vast amount of petty persecution, never complaining until patience ceases to be a virtue and silence becomes criminal. Every year there are wrongs perpetrated in this American Republic—where freedom of conscience is supposed to be guaranteed—against the civil and religious rights of Catholics that would incite less religious people to open rebellion. Yet Catholics bear with such insults and injustice with patience, preferring to trust in Providence for a remedy than to rush into print in order to right their wrongs.

There comes a time, however, when even the worm will turn upon its enemy, and yet worms have no religion to be faithful to, no conscientious religious convictions which must be followed—even though their defence and with death.

It is for this reason that the Monitor desires to call the attention of the Board of Education of this city to the conduct of one of its teachers in the Girls' High School, where the constitutional freedom of Catholics is openly violated in consequence of the virulent bigotry of a biassed pedagogue whose prejudices entirely unfit him for his position.

Every person knows the power wielded by a pedagogue—that Samson of the school room where every scholar fears. And when such an autocrat arrogates to himself the right to violate the civil law, to insult the religious convictions of Catholic girls, and to declaim against the Catholic Church and Catholic doctrines publicly in the class room—the illegal and iniquitous proceedings should be brought before the officials whose duty it is to stand between the people and their servants, so that every Catholic child whom circumstances may compel to attend the public schools, may have its conscientious religious convictions respected, as the Constitution and School law of this State demand.

Catholics ask nothing from their fellow citizens in favor of their religion, nor are we willing to accept a smaller share of justice and rights than is accorded to every denomination differing from us in religious teaching. But we demand that the faith of Catholic children shall be respected and not left at the mercy of every ruffian who wields the rod; we demand that no pedagogue shall have it in his power to insult innocent children by calumniating the church to which their mothers clung, and which they are called to the present case that the voice of the Catholic people of San Francisco shall be respected, and that the prejudiced pedagogue be placed in that retirement which his rancorous tongue has justly earned for him.

Catholic citizens pay their proportion of taxes to support public schools and to pay teachers. Is it right, therefore, that we should pay for the privilege of having Catholic young ladies who attend the High School grossly insulted by the teacher's remarks concerning the Catholic Church, its Popes, and its religious principles? There are plenty of passages injected into the class books which Catholic children are compelled to use, and which circulate vile slanders against the Catholic Church and creed, either openly or by implication, without having teachers being their trust, violate the law, and infringe on the rights of conscience with impunity.

The particular case to which we desire to call the attention of the Board of Education in the present instance is one wherein a certain male teacher of the Girls' High School, recently made a rancorous attack upon the Catholic Church, and when called to account therefor, by some courageous Catholic scholars (God bless them)—instead of obeying the strict letter of the law, the infuriated and ill-mannered pedagogue flew into a towering passion, denouncing the Church as everything that was degrading, dangerous, and damnable.

The Monitor has been to some trouble in order to secure sufficient evidence to justify us in calling upon the Board of Education to reprimand and remove this ill-bred, ignorant bigot for his slanderous expressions regarding the Church, and we demand an investigation of the case, as it is a clear violation of the California Constitutional provision, as well as the unmanly action of the State Code, which read as follows.

[FROM THE CONSTITUTION.]

ART. 9. No public money shall ever be appropriated for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the officers of the public school system; and shall never be used for any sectarian doctrine be taught, or instruction therein be permitted, directly or indirectly, in any of the common schools of this State.

[FROM THE CALIFORNIA CODE.]

§ 1672. No publication of a sectarian, partisan, or denominational character shall be used or distributed in any school, or be made a part of any school library nor must any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught therein. Any school officer, teacher, or other person, by which knowingly allows any schools to be taught in violation of these provisions, forfeits all right to any State or county apportionment of school money, and, upon satisfactory evidence of such violation, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and School Superintendent must withhold both State and county apportionments.

These sections have been clearly violated by the teacher in question, inasmuch as he explicitly instructed the pupils who study Swinton's Outlines of History, in the Girls' High School, in the following fallacies concerning the Catholic Church. Here are the charges in our indictment

First.—The teacher instructed the pupils that in early times the Catholic Church compelled all her children to be Catholics, and he believed that she had the presumption to do so yet, if not in America, at least in Europe.

Second.—In order to impart to his pupils a horror for Catholicity, that teacher in question illustrated his infuriated assault upon the Religious Orders by telling them that many years ago a Nun ran away from a convent, but she was pursued, brought back and kept a prisoner for twenty-one years, until she was subsequently discovered and rescued by a policeman.

Third.—In order to prove the truth of certain calumnies regarding Indulgences, that teacher inserted his class that Indulgences were sold in early times, when Leo X. became Pope. Leo X., said this prejudiced pedagogue, sold them to the highest bidder, and such indulgences were licenses to commit sin, and were considered as actual pardons of sin. In order to show the force of such teaching, the pedagogue clinched his calumny by the following story, specially introduced for the occasion:

"Tetzel, a monk, was met on a certain morning by a man who said to him 'Monk, I am going to commit a sin, can I get an Indulgence for it?' The monk replied 'Well, it is somewhat a heinous thought to do, but if you will pay a certain price, you can have an Indulgence.' That night Tetzel was met by the same man on a high road, who demanded Tetzel's money which he had made during the day by selling Indulgences. The man held up, at the same time, the Indulgence which he had bought that morning, saying that this was the sin which he intended to commit. The Indulgence," added the teacher, of his own volition, "forgave him the sin."

Fourth.—In order to instruct his pupils how much the Catholic Church hated the High Schools, that teacher told his pupils that "Luther was the first to translate the Bible from Latin into German." Furthermore, the instructed class in the extraordinary information that it was held to be a crime to translate the Bible in those times, and any one who owned a translated Bible was considered a heretic.

Fifth.—The teacher in question gave his pupils some lessons on the lessness of Papal infallibility by telling them that the infallibility of the Pope was introduced into the Catholic Church only about eight years ago. Hence, any Catholic girl could say what a changeling her Church was, and appreciate the ridiculous attitude such a girl presented to this wise one of the world in being a member of a Church that was constantly introducing new doctrines and dogmas.

Sixth.—The truth-butchering teacher in question volunteered the valuable information to his public school pupils that people who refused to be Catholics were either burned or put to death by some equally cruel and inhuman process! A brave Catholic girl (whom may God bless!) was astonished and insulted at this lying assertion, and she asked if the Catholic clergy did this thing! The unreliable teacher replied that "Pope Leo X. commissioned the Emperor to have all the persons punished, and when a person employs another to do a wrong he is considered as bad as the actual agent."

It requires only ordinary common sense to discover in such instruction to public school children a clear violation of the clauses of the State Constitution and the Code which we have cited. In the name of Justice, therefore, in the name of that liberty of conscience which is the birthright of our Catholic boys and girl in this land, and in the name of the Constitution and Code under which Catholics and all other American citizens are guaranteed the right to worship God free from the traditions of public school teachers or other bigots—we demand, in the name of the Catholic citizens of this City and State, immediate and decisive action on the part of the Board of Education relative to this case, and if the teacher is found guilty as charged by us on the evidence of living witnesses, we demand its immediate discharge.

Relative to the false and malicious charges trumped up by this truth-torturing teacher we have no room this week for any relation, but "in the sweat of eye-and-hope" we will take them up and make mince-meat of them. This violator of the School Law and of historical truth may equitably imagine that "he knows more than the ordinary run of Catholic priests," but we will put him on the Monitor's pillory and pelt him with historical facts until every lion in his bigoted body is reduced to a pulp as soft as the cranium wherein was concocted the many amazing nonsense charges which we have brought against him, and for which we demand his dismissal from the position he has prostituted in order to gratify his insane prejudices.

What a California Tourist Saw in Ireland.

Mr. James Moss, the well-known Irish-American lawyer of this city, recently paid a visit to his native land, and in a very interesting interview which we had with him last week, we learned many particulars concerning the condition of Ireland at present that will astonish, as well as interest, the great majority of our readers.

Mr. Moss travelled from Queenstown to Dublin, as well as through several other counties in Ireland, and everywhere he journeyed he was astonished to see how little land was under cultivation. In portions of Ireland familiar to him thirty years ago as profile in crops of cereals or sustenance not a vestige of wheat or potatoes could be seen. The great bulk of the land has been put into pasture; whole villages have been blotted out from the maps of Ireland, and the people scattered to the four corners of the globe, all signs of agricultural industry obliterated, and the verdant carpet of nature, and clover covered the land over the busy hive of human habitation!

It will be remembered by our readers that fifteen or twenty years ago the great efforts of Irish landlords seemed to be directed towards turning out their tenantry and converting their lands into cattle ranges. They succeeded beyond their most sanguine expectations, but—like all grasping victims of avarice, they overreached themselves in their unnatural desire to rid themselves of the best representatives of their race, and the plan then concocted to drive out the Celts was only the prologue to the drama which will end with the total destruction of agriculture throughout Great Britain and Ireland.

The Irish tenant-farmers evicted and exiled from their native land came to this country, where they resumed their agricultural industry in tens of thousands, reclaiming the wilds and rattlesnake infestations of acres of American land which well rewarded their industry. A market had to be found for these products, and by one of those singular systems of retributive justice which sometimes prevail, the vast majority of the people in Ireland today eat bread made out of California flour, their salmon is from the Columbia or the Sacramento, their canned fruits all bear American labels, and the very timber which forms their coffins when dead—had its growth among the majestic groves of Maine!

Mr. Moss informed us that in all portions of Ireland he visited he found Californian flour extensively used, for the reason that it can be purchased cheaper than it can be made in Ireland, and, besides, the bread made from it is better liked by the people. In inland towns if a traveller calls for fish, he is provided with canned salmon from Pacific waters. American fruits, oatmeal, eggs, lard, butter, and meats of every kind from fresh beef to pickled pork, can be had in all the cities, towns, and villages throughout the so-called United Kingdom.

While in Dublin Mr. Moss visited the extensive brewery of the Messrs. Guinness, where three thousand men are employed in the manufacture and sale of the celebrated Dublin stout, and, in the spacious sheds and warehouses connected with the establishment he saw fully twenty-five thousand tons of barley—every grain of which grew on American soil!

The very peculiar manner in which multitudes of American coffins are introduced into Great Britain by utilizing them for packing boxes for canned fruits, fish, vegetables, butter, lard, eggs, and other ingredients that will stand sea-voyage transportation across the Atlantic. When they arrive at their destination they are emptied of their freight and sold to dealers at much less cost than they can be made for in the English or Irish seaports.

When we reflect upon the inroads which American industry has thus made upon the agricultural and other products of Ireland and the adjacent lands under the British crown, it requires no spirit of prophecy to foretell the time soon as the proposed canal across the Isthmus of Panama is completed, and the voyage from Puget Sound, the Columbia river and San Francisco can be made by sailing vessels to any port in Europe in less than thirty days—that the agricultural industries of Great Britain will be completely paralyzed—and the British market entirely monopolized by the importation of the products of the prolific soil of the Pacific coast.

In this manner it is that the last precedent of England in persecuting the Irish people so as to force them into compulsory exile, will return upon her own head in a way which has resulted with fatal effect upon commerce both in England and Ireland, and, as a natural consequence, large tracts of land in Ireland have been thrown upon quietude which for many long years has resulted upon her other industries which England paralyzed by acts of Parliament forced closed English ports against Irish manufactures.

The Milesian Nemesis never sleeps; the Celtic heart is inflamed with hope, and it may be that what the sword of the chivalrous Celts failed to accomplish in breaking down British power, may be accomplished through the peaceable plowshare and the reaping hook, when England's land's agricultural industries are doomed to destruction. The day is not far distant when Irish grain will be ground in the flour mills of Liverpool or Cork, and then the grazing lands of Great Britain will prove an expensive luxury to Irish and English landlords, whose revenues will be decreased by increased taxation whereby to support the rural and pastoral population, whose occupation will be totally crippled by American competition. In this way the declaration of England will be hastened, and every lover of justice and liberty will thank Heaven for such retribution.

—The Monitor desires to call the attention of the Board of Managers of the Mechanics' Fair to the presence of an indecent and insulting picture which hangs in the art Gallery. It is catalogued as "A Scene in the Louvre," but is more suitable for a disreputable "dive" than it is to be domiciled where the eyes of decent people will fall on it. Many visitors will call to complainly, as their Hibuts collected by Repandist, Assumsin, and others, very emphatically set forth.

It was a piece of forenscic fancy, no doubt, which impelled the legal fellow of the Catholic Church to declare that "the Church has lost much of its former greatness, because such an impossibility ran never be accomplished so long as God lives, reigns, and rules the universe." The Truth Teller in the Alpha and Omega of the greatness of the Catholic Church, and she was just as great when she was represented by a few obscure men, and "the Handmaid of the Lord," in an upper chamber in Jerusalem as she could be even if she was offered all the kingdoms of the earth in exchange for her bleeding to God a holy law.

Fame, money, territory and power may constitute "greatness" in the civil life, but in the eye of Omnipotence that man is greatest who possesses the spirit of God in its greatest abundance. And although our advocate absolutely states that "most people in this country, if they will be fair to contract," there is still left the 250,000,000 members of the Catholic Church who cry out against the wholesale misrepresentation of God's law, and who having trod on their sole—will ultimately triumph over the hosts of heresiarchs who are forced by their inordinate ambition to persecute themselves that there is no hell, no Sacraments, no moral obligation—save such as Satan supplies to those who accept his bribe by worshiping him in its very worst aspects just like the chief actors in the sensational case which caused this article.

—Upwards of $750,000 is due the citizens of Paris for the destruction of their property in the late Paris Commune.

The Sacramental Nature of Matrimony.

When a lawyer is pleading the cause of his client in court, he is generally allowed a very large range of latitude in all that he says, but such liberty should not be construed by any counsellor-at-law as a license to that the Catholic Church regarding a Sacrament which she has guarded so zealously as to prefer to see Protestantism prevail in England rather than to stultify her self by submitting to the illicit request of an adulterous king.

One of the counsel for the defendant in a certain case notorious for its vanimous, which was recently tried in one of the courts, in his zeal for the civil rights of his client, went out of his way to drag the Catholic Church into a contest where she in could have no connection whatever But to his zeal for his client, the gentleman added a sneer at the Church, which cannot be falsified the attitude of the Church toward what she has always called "a great Sacrament," and thus, by one falsehood, he wantonly every religious heart, he succeeded in favor of his client's cause. The Bulletin reports the gentleman in question as asserting that "The Catholic Church was the first creed to recognize marriage as a sacrament, and even in that Church it was not considered a sacrament in the early times. It was not until about the time of, as the Church assumed power, it became a sacrament. Marriage was not in those times which, in all Catholic countries, were at the time of the Reformation, considered as now that the Church has lost much of its former greatness, marriage is coming to be looked upon as a Sacrament, and most people now-days look upon it as a sacrament, and it is not under certain circumstances, can be annulled—and so on."

Legal advocates and lose-tongued preachers are generally very loose in their statements when they undertake to invent anything against the Church and in their own favor. The lawyer whose words we have just quoted, for instance, must be considered a sacrament until the days of Pope Innocent.' But this is a blind trail, as well as bad history, because there were popes before the Pope of Pope Innocent, and whether the legal gentleman nearly the time Pope Innocent of the year 402, or the latest Pope Innocent of 1721, is one of those questions which only Philadelphia lawyers are supposed to have sufficient acumen to settle.

Let us suppose, however, for argument sake, that the disciple of Blackstone meant the earliest Pope who lived the name of Innocent, yet we think he will hold to be entirely ignorant of the very questionable honor a San Francisco lawyer would thrust upon him. Marriage, in the Catholic Church, was a Sacrament for a period extending nearly over 4000 years before Pope Innocent I. succeeded to St. Peter. It was the Blessed Virgin Mary who was "the greatest power" to lend to Matrimony a sacrilegious aspect, and as His own religion teaches, the Saviour of mankind never alter from her first Pentecostal birth down through all ages and vicissitudes. Has her embalmed upon her Sacramental shrine "the spirit of God" in its greatest abundance?

God made matrimony a divine ordinance, ordained it to be the nursery of the population of adultery was found. How the census of American crime would eclipse that of the Sodom and Gomorrah if the Church had never the New Law, which certainly contains no mistakes, which declares that God joined together in matrimony, but has even extended it to Jews and others, and that Divorce never sanctions questions concerning divorce, the Sin of God, in His answers, established the Sacramental character of Matrimony clearly and expressly.

Christian marriage, therefore, typifies the mystical union which has always existed between Christ and His Church, and, as such, it is designated a Sacrament by St. Paul and nearly all the earliest writers. Hence, Christian marriage is sacred in the Catholic Church—such as St. Ignatius the martyr, St. Clement of Alexandria, St. Basil, St. Tertullian, St. Ambrose, St. Augustine, St. John Chrysostom—all of whom explain the nature of the Sacramental character of Matrimony. Hence, our local legal light is a regular sans-façon when evidently is for better peaked on divorce law than he is on the history or the dogmas of the Catholic Church.

It will also, we doubt, astonish the bench of the law in question to learn that marriage was held as a Sacrament not only by the Catholic Church but by almost all Christian sects, but also by nearly all the heresies who separated from her sanctuary from the first to the fifth century. Thus, for instance, the Novatians, the Cathari, the Donatists, the Jacobites, and the Armenians, all held to the doctrine of the Catholic Church that Marriage was a Sacrament, and all are now in the Church's bosom, and have not yet left the Church, and she was just as great when she was represented by a few obscure men, and "the Handmaid of the Lord," in an upper chamber in Jerusalem as she could be even if she was offered all the kingdoms of the earth in exchange for her bleeding to God a holy law.

Fame, money, territory and power may constitute "greatness" in the civil life, but in the eye of Omnipotence that man is greatest who possesses the spirit of God in its greatest abundance. And although our advocate absolutely states that "most people in this country, if they will be fair to contract," there is still left the 250,000,000 members of the Catholic Church who cry out against the wholesale misrepresentation of God's law, and who having trod on their sole—will ultimately triumph over the hosts of heresiarchs who are forced by their inordinate ambition to persecute themselves that there is no hell, no Sacraments, no moral obligation—save such as Satan supplies to those who accept his bribe by worshiping him in its very worst aspects just like the chief actors in the sensational case which caused this article.

A Protestant Tribute to Catholic Missionaries.

There is no avenue of intelligence in which more real progress has been made by the non-Catholic portion of every community throughout the world than in respect to the changed aspect of public opinion regarding the Catholic Church and her clergy.

When we compare the sentiments of the sectarians of to-day with the opinions of their predecessors, every Catholic who has lived in the world for half a century can attest that the improvement in intelligence on the part of the non-Catholic community has been in the strictest sense of the term astonishing. Hitherto, the Catholic churches had to be built in alleys and by-ways. To build them in public streets was against the law in some countries, and the sight of a "black robe" in the long days would so anger the preachers and the wallawags under the control of sectarianism, that the poor priest not only break every pane of glass in the "Mass House," but they would cover the walls of it with mud, and paint thereon all the filthy expressions their evil minds were stored with.

A third of a century ago we saw the walls of the city of New York plastered with bills containing the most lacerating insults to Catholics, the least offensive among which was one which sent the Pope to where the chief toast of every loyal Orangeman consisted of the devil's health. Such placards were under discussion, and the ignorant and vicious bigots of those days took that disreputable means of exciting public opinion against giving justice to Catholic citizens.

Every reader of the history of the Church in New York is familiar with the foul charges which were brought against the great and good Archbishop Hughes by Hundreds of the Hecks and other bigots of those days—Archbishop Hughes by Hundreds of the Hecks and other bigots of those days—Archbishop Hughes himself in the midst of the Nativist Riots, which were blood-stained by the persons which then existed against the Catholic Church. Yet Bennett died a Catholic, and many of the persecutors of those days died in the Church, and the Church is now thinking and that day are now thinking God that they are children of the Church which their progenitors prosecuted. Archbishop Hughes, however, had the courage to stand up almost single handed and fight against the poisoned darts of the hounds who barked at his heel. He was hated at the time, as one of his many appeals for fair play "Bishop Hughes places himself in the simple capacity of an honest man before the American people. He asks no favor, he cannot be firmly believes that with the American people no man can by patronism upset the Bishop of Hughes. Hughes, the son of the servant of the venerable Archbishop of Armagh, who was the friend of Pope Pius, and making it indeed a Temple of the true God, Pius IX. Hughes, the son of Patrick Hughes, were present, accompanied by a large number of the Bishops, and the Pope, having on the preceding Sunday announced the canonization of the Blessed Oliver Plunkett, and early, had invited some bishops to the Mass of St. Peter's, and requested the Bishop of Armagh to accompany him. Hughes, the son of Patrick Hughes, who was the friend of the Pope, Pius IX

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. F. FRANK — EDITOR

All enquiries of the Masters are cordially invited to send original contributions and solutions for this department. Address all communications to

FRANK J. MCGUIRE,
826 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-OBSOLETE—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 96.

1st.—A Riddle.
2nd.—
M PAR
SARS MARET
SAPOTAS PARAMIS
MESOPIDANCAPHONY
MUTIFIC REVIEW
SADIZ TEND SAC TED
SEN
8th.—Wheels.
4th.—DEVIRES 10th.—EATHAM
EMANEST APPRUE
ERIGENA VIRGINA
INSERTER TRIGONA
SERTIONS DUNONS
ESSENES ANNAS
STARGOS MESSAGE
5th.—Good-will. 11th.—Sanders.
6th.— 12th.—
CAPTNERANK DEE
ARRAGAUGE MORSES
PEISTINE MARTNET
TERTIAN PERTUPON
NATALS VERTIGINOUS
FRITS SENTINES
KANE SEINERS
RE TONE
ER TUNE
E
Puzzle in "Leisure Hours" No. 95 were solved by Jupiter, Capsicum, S. A. M., Mike E., Sequoia, Emerald, Lark, Madcap and Myself. Hans Christian, Thistle, Troubadour, Cameo, Fleur-de-Lis, Spasmodic, Sun Ion, Dandelion, Flora, Puff, Clara Belle, Jupiter, Lady Thorne, Joe Cole, Timothea and Harry.
Bar Lists.—Aquila 11 solutions.
Faux Weeds.—Jupiter 8 bar—Aquila; 7 bar—Spasmodic; 5 bar—Hazel Kirke; 3 bar—Serene; 2 bar—Lark; 1 bar—Cameo; Sequoia; 1 bar—Untitled; 8th bar—Madcap; Aquila; 7th bar—Spasmodic; 2nd bar—Aquila; 1st bar—Hazel Kirke; 4th bar—Myself.

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 96.

1.—OVERCHANGED STEPPED S
VENERATION SAINT RELIGIOUS PAT
SLICKER BASTA
SLICKER BISTORT
ETHER BAKER
ROD PASTORALE
TOD SATURNALIA
D NICKARTRES
3.—R., Ho., pod, mill, Cossack, cancer, consuming, pandemic, reiterate, goodlessness.
4.—P., pa, pen, hare, rasta, Kansas, payment, harmony, generic, pertinents, tormentive.
5.—C., ca, car, cart, digra, curmin, descend, circular, carmelite, magicians, contentious.
6.—PERPETUALITY P
E PERPETUALITY PE
PERPETUALITY PER PERPETUALITY PERP
PERPETUALITY PERPE
PERPETUALITY PERPET
PERPETUALITY PERPETU
PERPETUALITY PERPETUA
PERPETUALITY PERPETUAL
PERPETUALITY PERPETUALI
PERPETUALITY PERPETUALIT
PERPETUALITY PERPETUALITY
7.—T., try, mar, more, pole, Tudor, collins, mandolin, mandarine, intemperate, transmen.
8.—S, es, been, term, Conte, danger, catsail, lemaire, Sunbeam, Commander.
9.—H., so, ser, pen, Cloete, hectic, lectos, pendent, cranium, Cymbeline, homemade.
10.—S, es, sel, fend, Ursta, Carter, Unstrive, Spartan, sentinel, masterly, gaderer—
12.—BOMBILATION M
OVERWHELMING S
MEDIATING MIX
CHEDING ENTRE
INSALINE CELIC
ANTIMONIAL MELT
AMINE CENTIME
ATRIUM BETATE
ING MOLLINTES
ING MIMETIC
S SEXTONESES
14.—B, fa, mild, well, Jones, dove, profane, Mahomet, Marinette, Sermaster, bedpresser.
15.—Ma, ma, ma, ma, ma, ma, mable, combust, Jupiter, Barbarian, continence, porterlies.
16.—Ca, Mg, ta, ara, ma, ma, ma, degate, carriage, mania, Bavarian, divergence, repentance.
17.—Ma, ma, Mer, ous, Such, Julius, Pamela, alienate, monilitous, mercantate, harshness.
18.—PARAGRAPHIC 19.— D
ABERRATION GOD
REGRANTED LAC
REGRESSED VERT
GRANGER PONGO
RANGER TARTAR
ATTER PASTIME
ROD VERTIGES
BAD LAMELLE
SAD DOCTORESSES
C
20.— GO
CAGE
COTE
TORTE
MENDER
CASSENE
CONSERVES
LASTERTOWN
MASTLESTOWN
GEZEMERESSES
21.— S
SAM
HAGM
HAGM
MELTEE
PETERPAT
PATTERER
PATTENELLE
PATTENELLE
SEXTONESSES
22.— M
SON
WAST
PASTE
HAGM
CANDENT
VERDERER
BANDEROLE
ENTICULTE
BUTTONTREES
23.—OVERCHANGES 24.—
CONSTRUCTION CK
ENGLISHED ERD
CRUSHED POND
DRESSED DIRE
HATHES MINTER
ATTER MITIE
RED DISTARTE
ED PASTAMAS
EN CONTERIONS
S CONTEMPLANTS
S TENDERNESSES

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 96 were solved by "I. M. Anglo-Saxon, Ellie, Will Dexter, S. A. M., Jupiter, Sequoia, Lark, Thistle Emerald, Lady Thorne, N. Orth, James Flynn, F. Q. Hand Kirke, Mayflower, Sun, Kanopy, Bird, Sylvie Lee Arty, Morning Star, Eugene, Buist, Sylvie Lee Arty, Mazeppa.
Correct Lists.—First four named above.
Best Favorite List.—S. A. M., 21 solutions.

NUMBER CII.

A DIAMONDS.

L—To Adsola—1. A letter. 2. German scholar, 1779-1841, (Ill.). 3. A Turkish note. 4. Dishonesty. 5. Pronounce with a breathing. 6. A kind of turtle. 7. To hoot over again. 8. A cave. 9. A letter.

II.—To French.—1. A letter. 2. French writer, 1705-1767, (Ill.). 3. Imperial eparch. 4. A kind of silk. 5. French professor, 1780-1864, (Ill.). 6. Those who belong to Rome. 7. A house. 8. Danish historical painter, 1725-1775, (Ill.). 9. A letter.

III.—To Cole. 1. A letter. 2. Frank. 3. Latin. 4. Wholly. 5. [illegible] painter, 1808-1869, (Ill.). 6. Distributed. 7. [illegible] King of Spartia, died B.C. 491, (Ill.). 8. State of being secreted. 9. Pertaining to Wilhelm. 10. A letter.

IV.—To Diamond.—1. A letter. 2. Array. 3. German theologian, 1771-1826, (Ill.). 4. Hips. 5. Alkaloid. 6. Drawn. 7. To repeat. 8. Fathers. 9. A letter.

V.—To Emerald.—1. A letter. 2. A conjunction. 3. Moravian missionary, 1746-1811, (Ill.). 4. The feeler of an insect, (Pluton.). 5. To assent. 6. Tooth-shaped. 7. A chapter. 8. Help. 9. A letter.

VI.—To Ruby.—1. A letter. 2. River of Spain. 3. Island of Asia. 4. Extreme pain. 5. Fatified by internal motion, (Cleon.). 6. To penetrate again. 7. Moravian missionary, 1720-1811, (Ill.). 8. River of Spain. 9. A letter.

VII.—To O. V. X.—1. A letter. 2. Pertaining to colonel, 1646-1711, (Ill.). 3. French savant, 1809—, (Ill.). 4. Exclusive rights to a thing. 5. French painter, 1800-1872, (Ill.). 6. Pertaining to writer, died 1804, (Ill.). 7. Pertaining to author, 1757-1831, (Ill.). 8. A letter. 9. A letter.

VIII.—To Hercules.—1. A letter. 2. To winnow. 3. French author, 1576-1646, (Ill.). 4. Tillers of the ground. 5. Greek patriot raised B.C. 514, (Ill.). 6. Pointed instruments for sewing. 7. Embossed. 8. River of Africa. 9. A letter.

IX.—To Lapis Lazuli.—1. A letter. 2. Superfluent. 3. Ancient [illegible] (Ill.). 4. The layer of an insect. 5. An overlay. 6. Pertaining to Saturn. 7. A letter.

X.—To Jet.—1. A letter. 2. Silliest. 3. Panniel. 4. Pieces of ordnance for throwing stones, (Mill.). 5. Emperor of the East, 867-886. (Ill.). 6. Disease. 7. Liquor. 8. To incite. 9. A letter.

XI.—To King Philip.—1. A letter. 2. Middle. 3. French scholar, 1707-1788, (Ill.). 4. English poet, born 1820, (Ill.). 5. A female relative. 6. Turns. 7. French publicist, 1787-1854, (Ill.). 8. Has not, (3.). 9. A letter.

XII.—To Lark.—1. A letter. 2. To loiter. 3. Whipped. 4. French painter, 1600-1743, (Ill.). 5. Explosion, 1606-1775, (Ill.). 6. Hungarian novelist, born 1807, (Ill.). 7. To blinder. 8. River of Spain. 9. A letter.

XIII.—To Marmion.—1. A letter. 2. Amiss. (Ill.). 3. French reformer, 1600-1682, (Ill.). 4. A town of California. 5. Salt or pickle tubs. 6. Pertaining to Ceres. 7. A catch for a door. 8. A disease. 9. A letter.

XIV.—To Nelson.—1. A letter. 2. Numbers. 3. Ancient volcanoes. 4. Not rent. 5. Purpose. 6. Instructors. 7. Satisfies. 8. French article. 9. A letter.

XV.—To Outlet.—1. A letter. 2. Town of the Netherlands, province of North Holland. 3. River of Russia. 4. One of a group of isles north of Scotland. 5. Russian statesman, 1696-1747, (Ill.). 6. Discourses on Scripture. 7. Houses of a dark color with gray spots. 8. Half-mete. 9. A letter.

XVI.—To P. Q. Lee Arity.—1. A letter. 2. A basket. 3. French engraver, 1610-1663, (Ill.). 4. A variable. 5. Mexican. 6. Pertaining to dramatist, born 1842, (Ill.). 7. A diadem. 8. To work at closely. 9. A letter.

XVII.—To Quiet.—1. A letter. 2. To incorrupt, (Ill.). 3. A sect of Jews. 4. Bishop of Athens, died 125, (Ill.). 5. Affirm. 6. To delay. 7. Hive-bee. 8. A letter.

XVIII.—To Sponge Cake.—1. A letter. 2. Imitation spinet, 1440-1518, (Ill.). 3. Pertaining to Italian poet, 1806-1849, (Ill.). 4. Tracasseries for an equitation. 5. To coat. 6. A Mohammedan. 7. A letter.

XIX.—To Sponge Cake.—1. A letter. 2. Top. 3. Title of successors to Mohammed. 4. A scourge. 5. Inclinations of pulses. 6. Those who rob on the high seas. 7. Festivals. 8. A kind of Spain, province of Jaen. 9. A letter.

XX.—To Thetis.—1. A letter. 2. Expression of contrast. 3. Murmuring sounds made by cats. 4. A water wheel. 5. Ridiculous. 6. Quarrel. 7. A second lieut. 8. Close. 9. A letter.

XXI.—To Urbanus.—1. A letter. 2. An insect. 3. A mountain range of South America. 4. The feeler of an insect. 5. A low tone. 6. Frames with hooks for stretching cloth. 7. To resuscitate in sleep with a hoarse noise. 8. A town in Upper Egypt. 9. A letter.

XXII.—To Vitellius.—1. A letter. 2. Lower. 3. Lying waste. 4. Indicates. 5. Wilkes. 6. Alight low. 9. A letter.

XXIII.—To Water Lily.—1. A letter. 2. A small mass of paper, to stop the charge of a gun. 3. Pertaining to Irrigation. 4. Cotton, cambric, paper wrought during the process of manufacture. 5. Irish poet, 1771-1852, (Ill.). 6. English novelist, born 1814, (Ill.). 8. A letter.

XXIV.—To Ant.—1. A letter. 2. Fruit basket. 3. French bishop, 1497-1577, (Ill.). 4. Magnificent beauty. 5. Greek historian. 6. B. C. 170. 6. Density. 7. The thin part of the blood. 8. A male sick nurse. 9. A letter.

XXV.—To Yours Truly.—1. A letter. 2. A [illegible]. 3. French writer, 1596-1666, (Ill.). 4. English painter, 1810-1850, (Ill.). 5. English traveler, born 1656, (Ill.). 6. To assen again. 7. Stringed instruments of music. 8. An option. 9. A letter.

XXVI.—To Zachariah.—1. A letter. 2. Ancient. 3. Pertaining to Dionysius. 4. A female name. 5. Pertaining to Dionysius. 6. A [illegible]. 7. Hungarian novelist, born 1767, (Ill.). 8. To hinder. 9. A mountain range of Asia. 10. A letter.

HAZEL KIRKE.

San Francisco.

☞ Answers and Solvers in this weeks.

Mystic Minstrel.

—All mail matter for Will Dexter must be addressed to "Will Dexter, Care Monitor Office, San Francisco." Letters Solvers. In Will Dexter's Puzzle Letters Solvers, Nunnie appears the 1 letter.

—A score of Jubilee division, Central Provinces British India; 2, Bagpipes worn at the kilts by civilians until about the end of the 15th century; 3, Dialled (Obs.); 4, An unpleasant stormy substance; 5, Dwellers in Ireland; 6, Animals of the class of primates; 7, To covenant again; 8, Contracted form of Ann.

WILL DEXTER. U. U. HIRS.
Philo, Pa. Storm Lake, Iowa.

Solution—GADAWARA
DETASTE
DETASTE
WASTINGS
WASTINGS
REENGAGE
REENGAGE
ASESSEE
ASESSEE

—In the same number of Our Puzzle Column appears a Letter Inverted Pyramid—the latest yet made, and the first one published—over six seas of "Orient," of Brooklyn, N. Y. C. N. F.

MONITOR MENTION.

—Emma Hoyt, Edging Teacher, moved to 540 Turk Street.

—661 Market street. Formerly comes reasonable. Country orders attended. Sign of the Lion.

—E. Donnelly, M. D., Physician and surgeon, eye, ear, throat and lungs. Surgical operations and consultations a specialty.

—Best Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724½ Market street.

—Crown Dental Association, 878 Market street.—Artificial teeth, $7 per set. Filling from $1 upwards. Set, and extract, gas, of which we make a specialty. $1.

—Ladies: Call on Mrs. L. E. Jackson, milliner, 1841 Park street, formerly of Virginia City, warm winter hats and fancy goods in the latest styles.

—Lessons in shorthand, typewriting and commercial branches by Miss Lizzie Little, at Packard's Business College, 24 Post street, corner Kearny, Nevada and California School and Business College, 24 Post street.

—New Parlorboiler, new Howard street. Money saved for any height of time, on Clothing, Boots, Jewelry, Bedding and all Household Articles. Business private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. Cor. Kearny and Geary streets.

—Fly-ape for teeth—warranted as good as the best. Tooth-filling, $1. Dr. Simms, Dentist, 925 Market street.

—The Phoenix House, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under new proprietorship, is now open for business, and continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. The rates for board by the week are reduced to $5 per day, or less if by the week. The accommodations are not for clerks, country readers will find the rooms clean, central and comfortable.

—The National Sanitarium Institute, 319 Bush street, is the Western Institute of the kind in the United States, between Chicago and Philadelphia, which is entirely devoted to the cure of all deformities and is so celebrated for the cure of the spine, hip, knee, and all joint affections. Club feet, paralysis, and all chronic diseases. Call and see patients, and our facilities for curing them. Information given and circulars sent if desired.

—Mr. Jules Lamble, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of Rice & Co., in the General Employment Office, 104 Sutter street. This firm was established in 1856 and the extensive business they have built up will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lamble who has at his command the best facilities for supplying families in the city or country with the most competent and reliable domestic, agricultural, mechanical or laboring help of any nationality desired by employers. Just drop a note or postal to Jules Lamble, 104 Geary street, stating the kind of help required and your wants will be faithfully attended to satisfactorily.

☞ The Wonder Flower and Feather Store, No. 1004 Market street, is now in the 7th year of its existence and is still continuing custom at prices that may be laid at very cheap rates all kinds of artistic feathers and flowers, ostrich feathers, tips, plumes of the finest quality, fancy feathers, etc., are still sold at much less prices. The continuance and increase of this business shows satisfactory results to customers.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.

The Order C. K. of A., has branched over the Union, and many thousand members allover the United States are joined in one family under a national. We invite every good Catholic man to join. Most financial Fraternal Society in the United States. Organized in America, for America, and governed by the laws of America. Its benefits are for home members, and are a blessed comfort and a sacred duty. Address Sir K. P. Schmitz, 1032 Market St., San Francisco.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little church arises as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It will relieve the child, soften the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty five cents a bottle.

Leiser's Photograph Gallery.

☞ Tintypes, Large Photographs, $1.50 per dozen. Cabinets, $2 per dozen. Photographs of children taken in any weather. Gallery, 1 Montgomery street, opp. Lick House.

—THE—
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO.
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.
SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock OF
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.
SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.
My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
☞ No need ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight to a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.
Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.
NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are so Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,
Latest Edition, with all addenda to date.
Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
648 MARKET STREET.
BRANCH,
1152 MARKET ST.
LAUNDRY,
12th St., bet. Folsom and Howard S. F. Cal

McCORMICK BROS.,
Book and Job Printers,
636 Clay Street, 636
(Near Sansome, up Jackson st.) San Fr.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA ..... CALIFORNIA

This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. Unexcelled large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, covered gymnasium, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a more complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Natural History, also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Chemistry. Course. For the latter a new building 165x40 has been finished, and furnished with the latest.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $15 00
Boarding, Lodging, Tuition in all branches taught in the College, per Session, 250 00
Schools, Laundry, medical attendance and Medicine, Bedding, Bath, per session, 50 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 131 Hayes street, San Francisco.

☞ The Studies will be Resumed Tuesday August, 5th, 1884.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.,
President.

1a8

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE ..... CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING PECULIAR advantages to young ladies wishing to receive a mild and refined education, was founded in 1851. In 1855, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and enlarged by the same body so extended the original Charter as to confer all the rights and privileges of College institutions.

The building large buildings, with extensive playgrounds and shady walks, are pleasant and healthy, and attractive. The course of instruction is mild and refined education, and every facility will be afforded to students who may and it desirable to devote their whole time to music or the study of the language.

The next session will commence on Monday in August and close about the first week in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, (payable in advance.)

Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and if desired Spanish, German, and Latin, washing and use of bed and bedding, $75 00
Drawing (per quarter), 5 00
Use of Piano, per quarter, 5 00
Painting in Oil, per lesson, 1 50
Painting in Water Colors, per lesson, 1 00

For further particulars, address

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
San Jose

☞ Studies will be Resumed on September 1st.

ST. CERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
1310 SUTTER STREET, OAKLAND, CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the patronage of the Archbishop of San Francisco, offers on attractive to the pleasant and accessible locality, the advantages of a healthy climate, the building are, and will be furnished with all that comfort and convenience can suggest, the grounds are extensive and well adapted for exercise and recreation, the course of instruction will be all that can be desired, and all the useful branches of a solid education.

Pupils received at any time, and charged from the date of entrance.

☞ Next Session, Payable in Advance.

Board and Tuition, per session, $175 00
Instrumental Music, 50 00
Drawing, 50 00
Vocal Music (private lessons), 50 00
Use of Piano, one hour per day, 10 00
Drawing and Painting in Oil and Water Colors, 50 00

DAY ACADEMY

Terms per month, in advance

Junior Class, $6 00
Intermediate Class, 8 00
Primary Class, 4 00
Music Class, with use of instrument, 8 00
Music Class, without use of instrument, 5 00

☞ No charge for vocal music or drawing lessons under 50 cents.

M. M. CAMILLUS, Superior.

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND, ... CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY

The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED between Market street and Lake Merritt, combining an extensive frontage on the lake. The building are large and well adapted to the purpose, and expense having been spared to provide for the comfort and convenience of the pupils.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly, in advance.)

Board and Tuition, $225 00
Bed and Bedding, 10 00
Washing, 50 00

Pupils commencing at the Academy during the year will be charged $20.

Extra Expenses on packages sent to pupils or to the parents.

☞ Regular supply must be laid in and will be charged.

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers, offers every facility for securing a thorough Education, either Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL course receive the degree of A. M.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch pupils in the College, not the beginners receive special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Washing, ... $250 00
Lower Class, ... 100 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines, ... 10 00
Vacation at College, ... 50 00
Day Students, ... 60 00
Music and Drawing, form extra charges.
For further particulars address

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

1a31

ACADEMY OF OUR LADY OF MERCY,
RED BLUFF, ... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF the Sisters of Mercy, offers to parents and guardians the most fond for the Sacramento Valley, a home where their children can receive a thorough and refined education.

The Academy is situated in the most healthy and picturesque portion of Red Bluff, and has been furnished and fitted up at great expense, with every convenience for the comfort of the pupils.

The course of instruction is that followed in the best Academies of the United States, and includes the English branches, Latin, French, Spanish, Drawing, Painting, Music, Vocal and Instrumental, Needle work, Embroidery, Lace work, etc.

TERMS:

Board and Tuition, ... $250 00
Washing, ... 50 00
Bed and Bedding, ... 10 00
Drawing (per quarter), ... 5 00
Use of Piano, per quarter, ... 5 00
Painting in Oil, per lesson, ... 1 50
Painting in Water Colors, per lesson, ... 1 00
Music, Vocal and Instrumental, ... $250 00
Use of Harp, ... 10 00
Use of Guitar, ... 10 00
Use of Violin, ... 10 00
Use of Cornet, ... 10 00
Use of Flute, ... 10 00
Use of Clarionet, ... 10 00
Use of Bass Viol, ... 10 00
Use of Drum, ... 10 00
Use of Trombone, ... 10 00
Use of Bugle, ... 10 00
Use of Cymbals, ... 10 00
Use of Tambourine, ... 10 00
Use of Triangle, ... 10 00
Use of Bass Drum, ... 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum, ... 10 00
Use of Snare Drum

THE SHRINE OF SAINT ANNE.

Pilgrimage of Irish-Canadian Catholics and the Miracles Performed There.

The Irish Catholics of Ottawa have just held a most successful and a singularly favored pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beaupré. It was their first annual visit to the famous shrine of the good saint, which at that beaming an object of continental interest, both to believers and unbelievers. The former go to pray, the latter go to see. The one comes away consoled and loaded with divine favors; the other departs confused and dumfounded, unable to explain how suffering humanity, by the aid of a simple prayer, can leave behind it such monumental proof of its miraculous restoration to health and to the ordinary conditions of life. The Ottawa pilgrims have in their turn gone to pray, and the pilgrimage was visited in the favors which must have proceeded from a higher than a natural source. It will be hard for our philosophers and freethinkers to admit that "such things as miracles" take place in this enlightened age, but solid facts are not to be contradicted or explained away. What the multitude witnesses in its ordinary senses, and what it testifies to with unanimity, is not to be rejected or pronounced a fraud on the strength of deductions easily made by those who will not admit even the possibility of miracles, or by those who do not admit the truth of a fact unless they behold it in conspicuous print. Over eight hundred men, women and children were in attendance at the daily pilgrimage. According to the Daily Witness they belonged to a most respectable class. They are the witnesses of the following events which are related by an authority that is a determined and bitter opponent of the Catholic belief, doctrine and practices, we mean the Montreal Daily Witness. If there was a weak or fraudulent side of the story to give, our contemporary would not lose the opportunity of giving it in a full and emphatic manner. What it says, therefore, on the subject may be accepted as the pure truth and in no way exaggerated in favor of the Catholic side of the question. This the Witness says:—

Father Sloan (who had charge of the pilgrimage) does not lay great stress upon the performance of miracles, the pilgrimage being rather undertaken for spiritual refreshment and for the power of increased resistance to sin. Nevertheless, at least four miracles, according to the solemn testimony of the pilgrims, have been wrought on that occasion. A man named James Murphy, known to many of the pilgrims, has been cured of a chronic lameness, which necessitated the use of two crutches for many years. Having paid great and constant devotion to the Sacred Shrine, he flung away his crutches, clapped his hands for joy, and told everybody of the great deliverance which had been wrought for him. He now returns completely cured. Murphy is a man about 50 years of age, and lives in Lake Ontario.

"Miss McGovern is a young lady of about 23, residing in the village of Almonte. She came to Quebec in great suffering from weakness and general debility for many years, but that same pilgrimage she laid herself a new creature. Her strength seems to be restored to her, and, instead of the hundreds to which she was subjected for many years, she feels a glad return of hope, confidence and energy.

"A little girl named Evans, who was quite blind, has been restored to sight. We could see nothing when she went upon the pilgrimage, but immediately after her devotions at the shrine, being asked who was present, she exclaimed, 'Oh, I see the Her Father Sheas.'

"A little boy, whose name could not be ascertained, suffering from a severe lameness, has now thrown away his crutches, alleging that he feels as been quite restored.

"A very respectable woman named Mrs. Clancy, stated to our reporter, that last year her sister, eight years old, who had never previously been able to put her foot to the ground, was quite restored to the use of her limbs by a visit to this shrine."

These facts will speak for themselves, and which cannot but result in an increase of devotion to the sacred shrine of the saint under whose auspices they are accomplished. These facts laugh at the finite wisdom and science of man, while they proclaim the unlimited power of a Supreme Being.—Montreal True Witness.

Death of Bishop Miege.

The Western Watchman (of St. Louis) of last week reported the death of the venerable Father Miege, which took place on the 26th of July, at Woodstock, the house of the Jesuits in Maryland. Father Miege was a remarkable man. He volunteered for the American mission soon after his ordination, came to this country in 1831, and was before he had been six years a priest was appointed by the Holy Father as Vicar Apostolic of a territory large as several of the European kingdoms. It is told that he was lecturing to his college class when the Father Rector of the house to which he was then attached brought in the letters appointing him to the episcopacy, and left them on his desk. Without looking to see what the document was and not knowing, he left the seal unbroken for several days, when the Father Rector at last impressed him and desired him to open the envelope. The discovery filled him with fear that he might be torn from his Jesuit brethren, and he at once returned the figure to the Archbishop of St. Louis. He was A Jesuit's vow of obedience to the Pope required him to accept. His episcopal consecration was established at Leavenworth, and for more than twenty years he ruled as a missionary bishop throughout the wild west.

In 1874 he petitioned the Holy Father to relieve him of the burden of the episcopacy and to permit him to return to his brethren. After much entreaty, his prayer was granted, and with a joyful heart he laid aside the insignia of his episcopal office and put on those of a simple Jesuit priest. Not long after this event he was sent to Detroit with a body of his Jesuit brethren, in charge of the church of St. Peter and St. Paul in that city, and to found the Detroit College there. There he worked for a few years where his superiors called him to other fields. He had been for several years before his death afflicted with painful malady, but he was a true Jesuit till the day of his death.

May his soul rest in peace.

—All Catholics who had the good fortune to visit the Seminary of St. Sulpice, in Paris, know Father Michael Hogan, who, for the latter part of a century, has participated in the distribution of that renowned institution of learning. At the time of the Commune Father Hogan proved himself a hero as well as a saintly scholar, and he presented, by his energy, the destruction, perhaps, of the seminary, and, in any case, of important documents. From his pious cell, quite close to that of Queen Marie Antoinette, at the Conciergerie, he defied and brewest the miserable imitators of her persecutors and murderers, and narrowly escaped the fate of the venerable Archbishop Paris. Father Hogan is now in Boston, by direction of his superiors, where it is the intention of the Sulpician Order to establish a seminary for the training of priests, which has achieved world-wide fame as being the Alma Mater of some of the most distinguished divines in Europe.

—The Duke of Norfolk recently entertained at dinner, at Arundel Castle, about one hundred Lord Lieutenants of the Little Duchy, Brooklyn.

Home Missions.

Many wonderful cures have been effected in the Sacred Heart Tent, and we are glad to learn that there is a certain cure for that distressing malady, dropsy.

CATHOLIC NEWS IN BRIEF.

—A Convent of the Sisters of Mercy is to be opened at Mobile, Ala., next Fall.

—Two new parochial schools will be opened in Chicago next month.

—The Sisters of Mercy, it is said, will open a convent in Mobile this fall.

—The Christian Brothers have recently opened a school at Norfolk, Va.

—Archbishop Taschereau of Quebec has issued a pastoral against dime museums.

—Of the Catholic peers in the House of Lords, thirteen voted for the franchise bill and nine against it.

—Bishop Cosgrove of Davenport is the first prelate chosen by the suffrage of his priests over whom he is to preside.

—Rev. Father Dominic, O. F., has been sent out from Rome to make a visitation of all houses of his order in this country.

—Since his arrival in Ireland, Archbishop Feehan has added twenty to the number of its parishes.

—Rev. E. Kinsella, S. J., of SS. Peter and Paul's, Detroit, is seriously ill at Green Point, Mich.

—Archbishop Williams dedicated the new church of the Sacred Heart, Lowell, last Sunday.

—Turin now makes the first church organs in Europe, and Brescia claims to be an organist equalling Bach in power.

—The proposed world's fair at Rome has been postponed until 1888, as Francis could not act heart on having one in 1889, the centennial of the revolution.

—Mgr. Jacobini, Papal Nuncio of New York, took the relic of the Sisters of Mercy at Mercy Hospital, Big Rapids, Mich., last month.

—Rev. Henry Moeller, S. J., of Detroit College, Detroit, has been appointed to fill his superiors in St. Francis Xavier's College, Cincinnati.

—The old church of St. Bernard, Rochelle, Ch., is to be disposed of by raffle, and the pastor, Rev. J. J. Furlong, has issued tickets for that purpose.

—On his arrival in Philadelphia, Archbishop Ryan will be given a grand reception; sixty-foot sessions, representing 7000 persons, will take part in the procession.

—An abbey of the Benedictines is to be established in the Newark, N. J.) diocese and in all probability Very Rev. Gerald Pitt will be made its abbot.

—Sister Mary Felicitas of the Order of Charity died at All Saints' Academy, Cincinnati, aged thirteen years, New York, Hundred and thirteenth street, New York, on the 25th ult.

—The foundation of the new Fetch church at Three Rivers, Mass., has been laid, and the building is being pushed forward.

—The Mother Superior of the establishment of the Order of St. Paul de Chartres in Colfax Chino, Hong Kong and Yeddo is dead.

—Bishop Ireland consecrated the Immaculate Conception Church of Stillwater, Minn., on the 20th ult., and also preached the sermon. The church, which was built by Right Rev. Abbot Seidlich.

—Thirteen thousand three hundred and fifty pilgrims visited the shrine of St. Anne of Beaupre, Canada, from the 13th to the 20th ult., and many miraculous cures are reported.

—Very Rev. Canon Lacy, P. P., V. F., Gowry, mission Wyandotte, died on the 14th ult., aged 80 years, fifty of which he spent in the ministry. The funeral took place from the parish church on the 17th ult.

—Archbishop Wood's will leaves $12,000 to be transferred, together with his library, to Archbishop Ryan. No real or personal property was left to dissolve him or next of kin.

—The Rev. Henry O'Loughlin, Rector of the Church of St. Mary's Star of the Sea, Brooklyn, New York, reduced the debt on this church during the Thirteen months ending June 1, 1884, $11,385.

—The 25th anniversary of the consecration of Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, will occur on the 25th of November, and the friends of the diocese are devising the proper means of celebrating it.

—A fair for the benefit of the St. Louis Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., is to be held in St. Louis shortly. The hospital is one of the largest in the West and is under charge of the Sisters of Charity.

—The memorial stone for the grave of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the poet, is in the form of an ancient Irish cross. The cross is the same as that which Lord Lorne has set up in his family seat, Inveraray Castle, in Scotland, and which was lately carved in Irish Ireland. The stone is highly appreciated by the intellectual services as highly as our fellow-countrymen in the Scottish Isles. It is inscribed, "Lest you are willing to pay for them." Contributions have come from Irish Ireland, the upper appreciation of intellectual things. The Commission has set up a hundred guineas for a lecture upon the structure of the earth's crust. We set as light a value upon a lecture upon Dante as upon the structure of the earth's crust. Dante's poetry is a thing of the past. "Ungodly politics for a day is more." Dante's poetry is a thing of the past. "Ungodly politics for a day is more." Dante's poetry is a thing of the past. "Ungodly politics for a day is more."

Poetry.

THE VISION IN THE CHALICE.

BY HARRIET WEWER SIMBALL.

The Priest before the Altar
Stood with uplifted eyes,
His heart deep stirred within him,
To offer the sacrifice.

The morning's golden splendor
Through the chancel window streamed,
Till like a mosaic of jewels
The radiant colors seemed.

But around the central picture
Of the Christ upon the Rood,
It shone like a wondrous halo—
As the Priest upspoke stood.

The prayer of consecration
Began he low and clear,
And at the mystic sentence
Bowed down in holy fear.

Bowed lowly over the Paten,
As he took in his hands the Bread;
And likewise the mystic sentence
Over the Cup he said.

When he: In the golden chalice,
Distinct in his purple wine,
He saw reflected the image
Of his crucified Divine Divine.

Filled with a sudden tremor,
His eyes dropped on the sight,
Scarcely the prayer he followed,
Or knew it he said it right.

Trembling with adoration,
He lifted the Chalice high,
As seeking the secret Garden
Between the earth and the sky.

And still when the Chalice he lowered,
Distinct in the purple wine,
From the chancel window reflected,
He saw the image Divine.

Did he hear in the hush that followed
The voice of the Lord near,
Brought down by the Church through the ages,
The mystical charge, "This do?"

Did he hear from the Holy of Holies,
The secret, eternal shrine,
The Priest who is Priest forever
Renew the assurance divine?

"Lo! I am with you always,
Unto the end of the world,"
Did the Bread you have broken
My Presence invisible, unfurled?

"Lo! I am with you always,
Alike on a mountain or hillside,
Or in the sacrifice offered,
The Priest and the Victim still.

"Lo! I am with you always,
Feeding the flock that you feed,
My Flesh the Manna unfailing,
My Blood the drink indeed.

O blessed, O wondrous consolation!
Vouchsafed to the lowly Priest
Like a precious new revelation
As he shared with his flock that Feast.

And ever enchanted in his bosom,
He treasured with joy divine
The memory of the vision
That, veiled in the Chalice, he saw.

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacredy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY RUDOLF ROSHMON.

From a collection of Stories published by the Catholic Publication Society Co.]

CHAPTER I.

"Whisht!" exclaimed the blind hostler attached to the Dermaboory Arms. "There's now rowlin' along the Bray Road, an' from the speerit that's in the beast, it's Luke Finnigan that's thereat home. Ay, faix, Finnigan that's thereat home. Ay, faix, he added with a self-satisfied chuckle, "an' faix Luke Finnigan's note. I'd know it from thim! Aisthey!"

A wild whoop and a sound of wheels in the direction indicated announced the approaching vehicle, and ere the sightless hostler could group his way from the yard corner in which he had been ensconced by the roaring kitchen fire—it was in the middle of July—an outside car dashed up to the principal door of the hotel, stopped with a jerk as of on the edge of a precipice, and the driver, throwing the reins upon the neck of the panting horse, cried out as he gaily entered the hostler's ear:

"Now, thin, Mother Murphy, be nimble wud the liquor. There's a man gettin' far to stand, an' I'm as dry as a cuckoo."

Upon the settle sat a young man whose exquisitely fitting frock coat, faultless linen, diamond studs, soft hat and square-toed boots bespoke the American. He was fair with auburn and expressive eyes, and were a Henri Quatre beard which admirably became itself, and secure from fashion.

"Yer welcome to the County Wicklow, sir," cried the hostler, who had approached the car and was engaged in giving a drink to the jaded animal. "Its an illigant place from Dublin to—"

"Boys, let us make up a subscription for him," interrupted a little fellow whose tags depended for support upon a straw rope—technically termed a "suggawn"—fastened around his waist.

"Th' hostler I'll bed wud five shillins," observed a bystander with a droll, malicious grin.

"Begorra, we'll tell the landlord for to put it in the bill."

"Are ye goin' for to give us anything?" demanded the third. "This party was backed up by a unanimous murmur of approval.

"I am."

"Wall, that's rapsonible, anthow."

"I'm going to give you some sound, wholesome advice," said the stranger.

A yell of scorn, disappointment, and derision followed this announcement. Crutches were brandished, sticks flourished, fists shaken, and general denunciations upon the "nagoyl" conductor were indulged in, terms as pungent as they were personal.

"You won't hear me!" he resumed, during a lull in the storm.

"Sorra a hear."

"Well, good afternoon." And making them a low bow, he turned into the house, whither successions loud, prolonged and deep rapidly followed him.

The accommodations at the "Derraloory Arms"—for so the hostelry was named—were somewhat pretentious. Opening the door with the word "coffee-room" inscribed thereon in brazen letters, the newcomer found himself in a long, low-ceilinged apartment. A smoked mirror, the surface of which was scratched from frame to frame, like an ice rink, by anonymous owners of diamond rings, stood over the mantel-piece, and above it a smoke-dried cards containing the announcement of the meetings of the Wicklow Harriers of the preceding season. Upon a mahogany sideboard stood a brave array of glassware interspersed with pickle jars and some mysterious specimens of the ceramic art. Facing the sideboard was a heavy antiquated sofa whose springs revealed themselves, like the ribs of a half-starved horse, and opposite the sofa an ancient but unceremoniously upright pianoforte. But not upon the master, sideboard, sofa or piano did the eyes of the stranger continue to rest. The window had been lowered, and a young girl was leaning her arms upon the sash, gazing out upon the butterfloweron crowd beneath. Her figure was petite, but of that faultless outline which no amount of drapery can conceal. A long pair of lustrous brown eyes looked out from a face which was almost in black, and huge Puritan cambric collar and ruffs adorned her wrists and neck.

"If her face is as her figure she must be—something," thought the newcomer.

"He should have given them something," she murmured, half aloud. "Poor souls! keeping and fearing is weary, weary work." And she slowly faced him.

He gazed at features as regular as the classic model, and whose paleness almost imparted to the face the calm impassive beauty of marble. She blushed, and was about to withdraw, when he blurted forth

"I—I beg your pardon, but I overheard what you said. I am not so mean as you think." And striding to the window and attracting the attention of the mob, who received him with a salvo of derisive cheers, he flung a handful of silver among them.

A scarlet flush mantled over her face and throat. "I was but speaking to myself, thinking aloud—and—but nevertheless, on the part of those poor miserables, I beg to thank you sir. I am sorely to blame, and your generosity only rivets the fetters that bind them to beggary." And with a low courtesy, old-fashioned but with witching grace itself, she swept from the apartment, leaving the stranger lost in astonishment.

"What is that young lady's name who was here just now?" he asked.

"Her name is Miss O'Byrne—an' th' ould anshint O'Byrne that fought hard again the Danes an Cruttoned—bad cess to them, body an' bones," replied the hostler.

"Does she live near this place?"

"Expan four mile, over the shb-side o' Lake Dan. Its an illigant place, wid no end an' ruins, and a darkin ghost that walks wheiever yer a-mind to be, an' if ye an' he no singe, they've supped lashins an' lavins."

"Is Mr. O'Byrne wealthy?"

"Well, now, the hostler scratched a very shrein head—"he's not rowlin' in pockit, but he's warm and"—brightening up—"as bright as a peproch. But thinks I'm fregettin' me message to ye."

"To me?" exclaimed the stranger, with a start, half hoping it might be from Miss O'Byrne.

"Yes, sir. There's two gintlemin runs here in regard o the fishin, though sorra a happorth they kitch in sich like, an' sure, an all scarts of combustions. Was ye there in an attorney, a pop man, an th' other humble a situation in the Four Courts beyant in Dublin, an' he's an also a mavbyant in Dublin, an' he's an also a mavbyant an there's in the four walls o' Wicklow the blessed most.

"But the message?" interrupted the stranger.

"That's it. Yer to dine wid thim—no less. Mother Mitchin told me to present her respects an' to hope ye'd give her wud yer company; an don' be hesitatin', mind ye"—here the waiter winked an indescribable wink, such as an angler might have indulged in consequent upon a successful cast—"there's lovely chickens, an the elegantest bacon, wud a bliy an cabbage, an' a dancing leg o' lamb."

"But I don't know these gentlemen, and"

"Hermit me to introduce myself, sir," exclaimed a small elderly man with a merry eye, a bubbleon nose, a very stiff, old-fash'oned stock, and a stiffer rim of shirt collar, which kept his head as erect as though he was hung up by the chin, entering and bowing very courteously. "Minchin—Dominick Minchin. Hearing from this shabby hooded retainer that you were a stranger, and having experienced on more occasions than one, especially during pisctorial excursions, the three-accursed loneliness of an inn, I beg, sir, that you will favor us by coming where glory waits you and—a bit of dinner.

This was uttered in a quaint cheerfulness that here everything before it.

"Sir!" said, "I am very much impressed by your consideration, and accept your invitation most gratefully. My name is Philip Redmond." And he handed the other his card.

"Redmond is not an American name, sir!"

"No, sir; my father was Irish."

"Anything to the Redmonds of Ballymacredy?"

"I am a Redmond of Ballymacredy," he said, with a bow and a smile, and a bow and a smile then repeatedly. "My father, sir, I hope your father well; my father, sir, he thought fit to part with his property."

"His property parted from him, Mr. Minchin. It is gone, and I am now here to say and represent it at any cost. However, we'll talk of that by-and-by. I feel that dinner is not very far off, and that you are half a mile hungry."

Mr. O'Hara, Mr. Minchin's companion, was a tall, handsome, florid-faced man of about five and thirty, with a profusion of sandy hair, which stood out from his head like quills upon a fretful porcupine, and a smile like sunlight. In his younger Redmond was as much at home with the two anglers as if he had known them all his life, and had planned two excursions with them.

"Do you think you'll have some trouble about getting back this property," observed O'Hara. "It is now in the possession of a man who does not seem mean, and who would call you out if you proposed it.

"Every man has his price but he not, Mr. O'Hara!" asked Redmond.

"True; but there are exceptional circumstances connected with this case which hedge it round with an impenetrable chevaux de frise."

"Of what nature?"

"Family pride, which will never resate to confiscate the old scene."

"But the lands of Kilnagold and Derraloory belonged to our family."

"That MAY be, Mr. Redmond, but they were part and parcel of other territory before the Redmonds came north of Visnagar Hill. I know all about them, as I rented a fishing lodge from one of the tenants, and being anxious to purchase it, inquired into the title.

"I made my living father a solemn promise that I would not sell the old place. Money is no object, Mr. O'Hara. My Father left me a fortune, I, real estate, and he died wealthy, so that a few thousands will not much me."

"You can try it," was the rejoinder accompanied by a shake of the head.

It was late when they separated. Minchin warbling, "The Young May Moon," and Redmond making bands with the "young boa," as he designated him, over and over again.

[TO BE CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.]

A Practical Sermon to Young Men.

You are the architects of your own fortunes; rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your star industry, perseverance, truth, and honesty, and inscribe on your banner, Luck is a fool, Pluck is a hero. Earnest effort in one direction is the surest road to wealth and high position; diligence and stick-to-it-ness is the great secret of success. Don't take too much advice, keep at the helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Don't practice too much politeness, think well of yourself—strike out—assume your position. It is the jostlings and jolts that make the rough corners smooth. Don't be afraid to push your way; don't be afraid to push your fellows; put potatoes in a cart over a rough road, and the smaller ones will go to the bottom; turn a raft of logs down a mill-race, and the large logs come on top. Rise above the common herd, and patience. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that move the world. Don't drink. Don't chew. Don't smoke. Don't swear. Don't gamble. Don't read novels. Don't cheat. Be self-reliant. Be courteous. There are two sides to every balance, and two sides to every coin, and two sides of the scales are equally heavy. Be honest in your dealings. Be honest with yourself. Be honest with your fellow-men. Be honest with your creditors. Be honest with your employers. Be honest with your employees. Be honest with your wife. Be honest with your children. Be honest with your neighbors

THE MONITOR.

PREST-GRIBITE YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intercession of Mary, the Seat, under whose protection they work in the plenitude of Faith, the Catholic Journals, that they be cause of religion, its rights and laws in all and particular ties, and advocate in its doctrines and precepts who do—order and fidelity.—Pius IX.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the chief agent in popularizing ideas and in propagating social opinions, and opinion governs the world. Journalism is a sacerdotal function, it is a useful and serious occupation, one only a work, both possible to the welfare of society, for's sort of upon Gods. What is and what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism? but to conduct error and defend its rights, and to be the Catholic Journalist."—Bishop Dupanloup, 19th Century.

MICHAEL, TOM AND MARGARET DUFFY.

Editorial Notes.

— Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, has addressed a letter to the clergy and laity giving his reasons for not inaugurating active measures for liquidating the indebtedness of the late Archbishop Purcell. He says it would be an act of injustice and oppression on his part to declare the debt a Diocesan one. He will, however, do all in his power towards collecting subscriptions for the discharge of the obligations.

—The Right Rev. J. B. Lamy, Archbishop of Santa Fé, New Mexico, recently made a Pontifical Synod with his suffragan Bishops, the Rt. Rev. J. P. Machebeuf, Vicar-Apostolic of Colorado, and the Rt. Rev. J. B. Salpointe, Vicar-Apostolic of Arizona. The principal object of the Conference was to frame answers to the questions addressed by Rome to the Episcopate of the United States in reference to the Plenary Council of the American Church to be held in Baltimore next November.

— M. J. Courtenay has just published a volume of religious statistics which contains very instructive hints. According to him the Protestant Christian Mission "for the Conversion of Jews and Turks" in Palestine has been working thirty years, spending more than two and a half million francs of money, without being able to convert one single Mahometan. And another body, the London Missionary Society, has been offering five years and spending more than 150,000 francs, without converting one single Jew!

— The annual festivities in honor of St. James were on the point of terminating on Sunday, July 27, at Santiago, in Spain, when a telegram was received from Rome by the Archbishop, announcing that the Sacred Congregation had declared the bones found about four years ago under the high altar of Santiago to be truly those of the Apostle, Spain's patron saint, ineffectually sought for hitherto since they were concealed, from fear of Moorish raids, in the foundations of the cathedral in the year 1100 by Gelmires, the first Archbishop. New and magnificent festivities are being prepared at Santiago to commemorate the event.

— On the 10th inst. there quietly and happily departed in the village of Weston Underwood, in Buckinghamshire, the holy priest, the Very Rev. Seth Eccles, D. D., who, by reason of his great age and the associations of his younger days, was a link which bound the present to a generation and state of things now passed away. Born at Longridge, Lancashire, in the year 1800, he often, in his early childhood, heard his parents speak of the difficulties and dangers they themselves encountered for conscience sake by reason of their fidelity to the old faith, and the existence of the penal laws against all who practiced it. Even in the free decade of this century he had himself to suffer for his faith, inasmuch as a private school to which he and his brothers were sent had to be closed for no other reason than it was conducted by a Catholic.

—It is announced that a Cardinalitial Commission, presided over by His Eminence Cardinal Parrochi, has charged Mgr. Pio Delicati, Sub-Archivist of the Holy See, and the distinguished archeologist, Professor Mariano Armellini, with the publication of a most important chronicle, in which are triumphantly refuted all the calumnies invented against Pope Alexander VI. by the famous monk Burkhard, of the Abbey of Other Hadioch, Papal Master of Ceremonies, and later Bishop of Civita Castellana. Mgr. Pio Delicati and his able coadjutor, Professor Armellini, have already given to the press the diary of Leo X., by Paride de Grassis, Master of Pontifical Ceremonies, from the MSS. volumes of the Vatican Archives of the Holy See, with notes by Mariano Armellini, Rome, 1884. This interesting publication epitomizes the Pontificate of the Medicean Pope, not only in the great acts of his ministry, but likewise in his private conduct, proving him in all a wise, magnanimous, and pious ruler; it renders no small service to the history of the Papacy in the fourteenth century.

—Dr. Angelo Arroyo, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from Guatemala to the Papal See, arrived in this city from Europe last week, and was interviewed by a reporter of the Chronicle in relation to his mission. In answer to inquiries Dr. Arroyo stated that he left Guatemala about six months ago upon a mission to the Vatican, accompanied by his brother, Rev. D. A. Arroyo, as Secretary to the Legation. His mission had nothing whatever of a secret nature. Under previous administrations in Guatemala there had been difficulties between the civil and ecclesiastical authorities, but both the present President of the Republic, J. Rufino Barrios, and the head of the Church in Guatemala are men of large and liberal views, and it was desired to assure the thorough re-establishment of amicable relations between the Government and Rome by securing the appointment of an Archbishop at Guatemala. In this mission Dr. Arroyo has been entirely successful, and returns to his own country armed with the credentials of appointment of Don Juan Battista Raul y Bertran as Archbishop, which he secured from the Pope at an interview on July 5th last.

An Investigation Ordered in the Case of a Public School Teacher.

A Catholic community also at the hands of the Board of Education is that the plain letter of the law be strictly adhered to both in regard to teachers and text books, so that the legal rights of Catholic people in the public schools will not be outraged—and Catholic conscience insulted—by actions on the part of teachers akin to the following as described by the Call:

"Finally, one of the Directors, who had not given a single word to suppose all mention of the proceedings of the Conference for the reason that it might injure Hastings's chances for the office of Congress, and that several days ago Professor Sanger of the Lick High School was asked to accuse a case in history, and the subject happened to be the Inquisition, and the Spanish Inquisition, which is a sharp, cruel, and bitter institution, and a rabid anti-Catholic, went into all the details of the Reformation, and the Protestant standpoint, and finally arraigned the Catholic Church for the cruelties practiced on Protestants and ordered them to debate certain questions pertaining to the Reformation. The debate wasted warm and the professor took a most vigorous part in it himself, espousing the Protestant side of the question and making assertions and charges against the Catholic Church and its faith that were of such a character that the Catholic young ladies blushed and left the room of his conduct. The facts reached the ears of Archbishop Alemany and Father Maurice Gallagher, and they immediately demanded the trial and expulsion of the teacher who had violated the Constitution of the United States and the State of California. The result of the Directors: "Sanger knew better, but he is a crusade against Catholicism, and what he has done shall never happen just before an election. He will have to see him out.

"Let no guilty man escape," is a good maxim for the guidance of all Boards having cognizance of the actions of public officials, and we hope that in the present case no undue influence will be used by public officials in order to wriggle out of the responsibility that rests upon them, but that they will administer stern justice in this case, and thus prove themselves worthy of the responsibilities which rest upon them as public servants.

It will not do to raise the popular cry that this demand for rigid justice to Catholic children is an attack on the public school system, because such an assertion has falsehood stamped upon its very face. Catholics are the youers of all other citizens under the law, and if the infraction of the plain letter of the State Constitution and the Code of California had been committed against the conscience of the children of Law or Gentile outside the Catholic Church, the Mistress would demand an impartial investigation for them that it demanded for the sake of Catholic children.

One of the provisions of the Constitution of this State declares that > § 8. No public money shall ever be appropriated for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the officers of the public schools; nor shall any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught, or instructed, to be permitted, directly or indirectly, in any of the common schools of this State.

And this provision must and shall be rigidly enforced so that the religious convictions of every child attending the public schools shall not be tampered with by any teacher.

From the many letters received in this office during the past week, alluding to this important matter, we know that there is a deep feeling among Catholics that their rights of conscience are entirely disregarded by many Public School Directors. Still, we prefer to keep silent regarding that point until next week, when the present case will be settled, and the result of which will tend to show whether Catholic children attending the public schools have, or have not, any rights which Boards of Education are bound to respect.

Prof. Sanger Suspended.

We stop the press in order to inform our readers that at a meeting of the Board of Education last night, Superintendent Moulder stated that he had suspended Professor Sanger for a month, pending the investigation of the charges brought against him. Subsequent action was taken by the Board, in the appointment of Directors Conklin, Hastings, Bowie and Melcher to assist Superintendent Moulder in making a thorough examination of the matter and to report as soon as possible.

— The Passionist Order held their chapter for the election of superiors in several countries last Monday week, at St. Paul's Retreat, Mount Argus, near Dublin. This was the first occasion of any such assemblage of the Order in Ireland. High Mass De Spiritu Sancto was solemnly celebrated, after which the laity retired, and the deliberations proceeded, the result of which will be duly announced by authority. The holding of this chapter in Ireland was a marked compliment to that country which holds the Passionists in great veneration, not forgetting that its holy and zealous ministrations have done great spiritual good in many parts of the "Island of Saints."

— The Berlin Germania, organ of the Catholic party, writes: "His Majesty the Emperor has been pleased to grant a full pardon to our former editor, Paul Kosiolek, of the secular clergy, who was condemned in 1875 for sundry offences against the May laws, to nearly four years' imprisonment. The relatives of the Germania, like ourselves, will receive with joyful gratitude this decision of the Sovereign, which greatly removes one of the effects which the Kulturkampf had at a time when the storm raged furiously, and allows our colleague to return to his native land after nine years of exile."

Retributive Justice Overtakes the Robber Government of Italy.

The cheering news comes across the Continent that Pope is in a fair way to recover about half a million of francs from the hands of the renegades who have been robbing the Church in Italy of its lands, its rights, and its revenues, since the month the Supreme Court of Ancona rendered a judgment by which the rights of the Holy See to certain Abbey lands was restored, and the history of which is briefly as follows:

It appears that many years ago three abbeys—San Lorenzo in Campo, San Ursemio in Barbara, and Castellion in the Marches, were supposed by Pope Gregory XVI., the spiritual jurisdiction of the several Abbots was concentrated in the Bishop of Pergola, and the three titles merged into one—that of San Lorenzo in Campo. Subsequently, by a special Bull, dated July 13, 1837, the Pope issued all the real estate appertaining to the three abbeys in perpetuity to the Cistercian Order, on condition of an annual rental of $4,500 to be paid to the Propaganda.

When, in after years, the villainous Valerio, the Commissary of Victor Emmanuel, got into power, he at once took forcible and fraudulent possession of all the property belonging to the Church that he could appropriate under the false but plausible plea of "public good." The thieving Commissary also ruled that the Cisterciens monks should thereafter pay the annual rent of $4,500 into the treasury of the Robber King instead of into the hands of the Pope's representative in the Bishopric of Pergola.

In vain did the Pontifical Cardinal Administrator protest against the perpetration of this gigantic land robbery. Might is Right with robbers of Rome, as well as with all other ruffians, so the confiscation of the property has been going on ever since up to the present year, when an action at law was instituted by the legal representatives of the Sovereign Pontiff, in order to test the merits of the case, and it resulted in a glorious victory for the Vicar of Christ. Sig. Magliani, the present Minister of Italian Finance, has been ordered by the highest Italian tribunal to refund to the Roman Pontiff all the rents he has been defrauded of, and also the legal interest thereon from the first payment down to the present decision.

The Italian Government, therefore, finds itself a rather expensive victim of the fraud of its felonious officials, but the right-minded people of the world will hope that this retributive justice is only the opening of a new era in Italy, and that the representatives of the Robber King and his unscrupulous accomplices, may be forced to disgorge all their ill-gotten gains even through judgments secured by means of the sterling justice of the rights of the Papacy to the possession of lands, moneys and property appropriated by the civil power in opposition to all law, human and divine.

English Converts to the Church.

A work entitled "Rome's Recruits" was published about six years ago in England, in which was compiled a list of the people in Great Britain who seceded from some of the many systems of secularism, and entered the true fold of Christ. A recent edition of the work has been published, containing the names of all converts who have recently seceded from Protestantism up to the present year. In accordance with peculiar Exclusiveness, and in the face of what appears to be a strong impression, and it is fair to credit them with having helped, directly or indirectly, to make the Church in Italy, and the more favorable attitude in reference to the Nationalist party which is beginning to grow up in Italy, and which has been the fruitful source in furnishing converts to the Catholic Church, there being nearly 150 officers who left the barren flatbeds of the sects in order to become true disciples of our Divine Lord. The Navy furnished but 29 converts, so far, to the fold of Christ. Among the English Universities, Oxford was the most fruitful field in which converts accumulated, there being no less than 200 of them among the alumni of that celebrated seat of learning. Cambridge University comes next, with 148; Christchurch, 29; Exeter, 30; Oriel, 25; Balliol, 29; and Brasenose, 20.

Among the list of converts, it is interesting to notice the wonderful changes effected in the lives of those lucky enough to see God's light in the true Church. Thus, for instance, the Superior of a Protestant Sisterhood at Folkestone gave up family, station, and friends to become a simple Dominican Nun; the sons and daughters of titled Lord Thus and Lady That, become simple priests and nuns. A nephew of Bishop Heber, receives Holy Orders in the Catholic Church; a Quaker layman becomes a Catholic priest; a lady convert becomes a Sister of Charity, and her brother a Jesuit; the Superior and six Sisters of the Protestant Priory at Hackney all accede in a body, and all become daughters of St. Vincent de Paul.

And thus daily, and almost hourly, the grace of God is upstanding itself into the hearts of the refulgent people among the intelligent classes of England, who are rapidly turning away from the gaudiest systems of their heretofore have held them, and are finding true faith in the one true fold represented by the Holy Roman Catholic Church.

— The death is announced of the learned Abbe Moigno, of St. Denis. He was the founder of the Cosmos, a scientific journal, and the author of a number of works on physics. He traveled through all Europe, and was at home in each country, as he spoke twelve languages. He was a great friend of Louis Veuillot. The obsequies took place at the Basilica of St. Denis, Paris, recently, in the presence of an immense congregation, which included representatives of all the Religious Orders and many eminent scientists. His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, and the Society of Jesus, of which the deceased was at one time a member, sent special representatives. Military honors were tendered to the deceased by a detachment of the 131st regiment, on behalf of the Government. In accordance with the wishes of the deceased, the rites were of the most simple character, and at the conclusion of the service the remains were placed in one of the Cathedral vaults.

The Pope and Irish Politics.

"A remarkable change in Irish politics appears to have lately taken place," says the Liverpool Catholic Times in its recent issue, and it might have added that the change was for the better so far as Ireland is concerned, both in fidelity to the faith and perseverance in her struggle for political freedom.

Those who have followed closely the course of events during the past few months can hardly fail to have been struck by the coincidence of three reports which have lately appeared in the Monitor. First, the interview and conversation between the Holy Father and the Rt. Rev. Dr. O'Farrell, the newly-created Bishop of Trenton; secondly, the remarkable strong language of Archbishop Croke at Sarsfield Hall (the English papers call it a violent speech); and thirdly, the reply of his Eminence Cardinal McCabe to the address presented to him by the people of Rathmines, on Sunday, the 6th ult. The Bishop of Trenton seems to have spoken with much plainness to his Holiness as to the great danger of allowing English influence to interfere between the Holy See and the ever-faithful Irish in their struggle for political and land reform. In the reply of the Holy Father was all that the most ardent Nationalist could desire. He said: "Tell the Irish people that the Pope loves Ireland because she has no oblem for repeals." And again: "I love Ireland dearly, and though that affection I lately appointed Dr. Moran Archbishop of Sydney, as a favor to the Irish Catholics."

As to the Archbishop of Cashel, it is to be observed that he was presiding over the Propaganda Circular in reference to the Parnell Testimonial Fund, his three last speeches have been, every one of them, a trip on political questions. It is then the more remarkable to hear him give unflinching utterances to such expressions as these, speaking of the Parnell Testimonial, Archbishop O'Hanly in 1884, he says: "I refer to it in order to prove that the struggle in which we are engaged, and which has been going on in our country and the recovery of our national rights is a hereditary one. . . . and then we must be steadfast and fearless in the fight, prepared for every, even the most hazardous contingency, as our ancestors before us, in this faith were prepared to suffer before us. I tell you, my dear people, "Had we held our tongues and tamely submitted to oppression, our faith would be banned to-day, as it was in the days of the martyred Archbishop." Clearly something must have occurred to account for this new departure.

The effects of the publication of the Circular were manifold. Among others, it unquestionably gave an impetus to the collection of the Parnell tribute, which succeeded in a manner so orderly as completely to falsify the charges of the anti-Nationalists party. But not the least perceptible of the effects of the Circular was, that it was the occasion of a remarkable series of letters which originally appeared in the Dublin Nation, which have doubtless been brought under the notice of his Holiness, for whose eyes they were specially intended. How far the Pope contributed to nullify the misrepresentations which for some years past have formed the staple of the English Governmental counsels, and how far the Nationalists themselves, as these have been by the officious information of Catholics hostile to the National cause, we have no means of knowing. But the fact is hardly less false if we take a strong impression, and it is fair to credit them with having helped, directly or indirectly, to make the Church in Italy, and the more favorable attitude in reference to the Nationalist party which is beginning to grow up in Italy, and which has been the fruitful source in furnishing converts to the Catholic Church, there being nearly 150 officers who left the barren flatbeds of the sects in order to become true disciples of our Divine Lord. The Navy furnished but 29 converts, so far, to the fold of Christ. Among the English Universities, Oxford was the most fruitful field in which converts accumulated, there being no less than 200 of them among the alumni of that celebrated seat of learning. Cambridge University comes next, with 148; Christchurch, 29; Exeter, 30; Oriel, 25; Balliol, 29; and Brasenose, 20.

Among the list of converts, it is interesting to notice the wonderful changes effected in the lives of those lucky enough to see God's light in the true Church. Thus, for instance, the Superior of a Protestant Sisterhood at Folkestone gave up family, station, and friends to become a simple Dominican Nun; the sons and daughters of titled Lord Thus and Lady That, become simple priests and nuns. A nephew of Bishop Heber, receives Holy Orders in the Catholic Church; a Quaker layman becomes a Catholic priest; a lady convert becomes a Sister of Charity, and her brother a Jesuit; the Superior and six Sisters of the Protestant Priory at Hackney all accede in a body, and all become daughters of St. Vincent de Paul.

And thus daily, and almost hourly, the grace of God is upstanding itself into the hearts of the refulgent people among the intelligent classes of England, who are rapidly turning away from the gaudiest systems their heretofore have held them, and are finding true faith in the one true fold represented by the Holy Roman Catholic Church.

— The newly-consecrated Bishop of the Diocese of Manchester, N. H., the Rt. Rev. Denis M. Bradley, has received a beautiful church service valued at $1,000, and willed by the late Very Rev. John A. O'Donnell, formerly of Nashua, N. H., to the first Bishop of the new Diocese. During this month the Alumni of St. Joseph's Theological Seminary, Province of New York, at Troy, propose to present Bishop Bradley with a substantial testimonial, he being the first Bishop among the students of that well-known institution. The gathering and presentation will most likely take place at the Seminary. Bishop Bradley dedicated the Church of St. John Evangelist, in Concord, N. H., the Very Rev. E. Harty, pastor, recently. This was his first official act.

A nephew of the Emperor of Germany was recently received into the Catholic Church.

Protestant Preachers Work for Pay.

The great majority of Protestant ministers take up preaching as a "profession," just the same as other men devote themselves to law and medicine—for the sake of the financial recompense they receive therefrom. Preaching, in the majority of Sabbath-workers, is mainly looked upon as a means of money getting much easier followed than other mental occupations, hence it is not to be wondered at that a sham is shamefully styled—engages the attention of a class of clerical charlatans who cry out frequently about the necessity of sending Bibles to barbarians, while there are thousands of men and girls—children of Protestant parents—who are going to the wood and ruin, yet not a Protestant preacher in the city thinks them worth the loss of an hour's time during the week! There's no money in it. And where there is no pay, there the brilliant preacher is always conspicuous by his absence!

The indifference with which Protestant preachers treat those who have the misfortune to belong to their so-called "flocks" is well illustrated by the following extract from a correspondent's letter in the Alta of last week, wherein the writer contrasts the difference between the conduct of Catholic Priests and Sisters towards the unfortunate wayward youth of Sacramento, and the disregard demonstrated preachers evince for any duties where at least ten dollars a day cannot be realized for their services in the shape of a fee in their Catholic.

As to the Archbishop of Cashel, it is to be observed that he was presiding over the Propaganda Circular in reference to the Parnell Testimonial Fund, his three last, his three last speeches have been, every one of them, a trip on political questions. It is then the more remarkable to hear him give unflinching utterances to such expressions as these, speaking of the Parnell Testimonial, Archbishop O'Hanly in 1884, he says: "I refer to it in order to prove that the struggle in which we are engaged, and which has been going on in our country and the recovery of our national rights is a hereditary one. . . . and then we must be steadfast and fearless in the fight, prepared for every, even the most hazardous contingency, as our ancestors before us, in this faith were prepared to suffer before us. I tell you, my dear people, "Had we held our tongues and tamely submitted to oppression, our faith would be banned to-day, as it was in the days of the martyred Archbishop." Clearly something must have occurred to account for this new departure.

The effects of the publication of the Circular were manifold. Among others, it unquestionably gave an impetus to the collection of the Parnell tribute, which succeeded in a manner so orderly as completely to falsify the charges of the anti-Nationalists party. But not the least perceptible of the effects of the Circular was, that it was the occasion of a remarkable series of letters which originally appeared in the Dublin Nation, which have doubtless been brought under the notice of his Holiness, for whose eyes they were specially intended. How far the Pope contributed to nullify the misrepresentations which for some years past have formed the staple of the English Governmental counsels, and how far the Nationalists themselves, as these have been by the officious information of Catholics hostile to the National cause, we have no means of knowing. But the fact is hardly less false if we take a strong impression, and it is fair to credit them with having helped, directly or indirectly, to make the Church in Italy, and the more favorable attitude in reference to the Nationalist party which is beginning to grow up in Italy, and which has been the fruitful source in furnishing converts to the Catholic Church, there being nearly 150 officers who left the barren flatbeds of the sects in order to become true disciples of our Divine Lord. The Navy furnished but 29 converts, so far, to the fold of Christ. Among the English Universities, Oxford was the most fruitful field in which converts accumulated, there being no less than 200 of them among the alumni of that celebrated seat of learning. Cambridge University comes next, with 148; Christchurch, 29; Exeter, 30; Oriel, 25; Balliol, 29; and Brasenose, 20.

Among the list of converts, it is interesting to notice the wonderful changes effected in the lives of those lucky enough to see God's light in the true Church. Thus, for instance, the Superior of a Protestant Sisterhood at Folkestone gave up family, station, and friends to become a simple Dominican Nun; the sons and daughters of titled Lord Thus and Lady That, become simple priests and nuns. A nephew of Bishop Heber, receives Holy Orders in the Catholic Church; a Quaker layman becomes a Catholic priest; a lady convert becomes a Sister of Charity, and her brother a Jesuit; the Superior and six Sisters of the Protestant Priory at Hackney all accede in a body, and all become daughters of St. Vincent de Paul.

And thus daily, and almost hourly, the grace of God is upstanding itself into the hearts of the refulgent people among the intelligent classes of England, who are rapidly turning away from the gaudiest systems their heretofore have held them, and are finding true faith in the one true fold represented by the Holy Roman Catholic Church.

— Monsignor Domenico Ferrata has left Rome for Baln, Switzerland, ostensibly having to recuperate the Diocese, as well as that of the Trois. The Holy See has been negotiating with the Swiss Government, and there is every hope that almost all the difficulties will be removed. The failure of the Old Catholic sect has been so great that it now generally recognized that the prosecution of Swiss Catholics was unjust. The Bishops of Switzerland have never interfered in politics beyond the extent of guarding their rights and privileges as Swiss citizens. Their conciliatory attitude, and that of the Holy See, will now, it is hoped, obtain its reward.

— Among the names of those upon whom the French Government conferred the Order of the Legion of Honor on the occasion of the anniversary of the foundation of the Republic, is that of Sister Mary Ambrosse, of the Hospital at Tours. "For more than fifty years this heroic Nun has devoted her life to the care of incurables in the hospitals of her Order.

— Writing to the Liverpool Echo, Miss Charlotte Grace O'Brien, daughter of the late Mr. Smith O'Brien, bears testimony to the high moral character of the Irish peasantry, especially the Catholics, among whom she chiefly visited. She observes: "Protestants have told me, with a sigh, that the Catholic Church is an element of moral salvation in the States." Mr. James Anthony Froude says it is an element of disorganization, and in the face of that statement of what value can Miss O'Brien's evidence be! Miss O'Brien, it is true, was born and reared amid the traditions of Catholicism, and she mixed with the Catholics of America and saw them in their homes, but how could her knowledge of the subject be for one moment comparable to that of Mr. Froude, which is a composite nature, spanning, in the first place, from his inner consciousness, and, in the next place, grounded on assurances from sound American Protestants. Then, Miss O'Brien's capacity for arriving at the truth of the matter cannot be not been sharpened, like Mr. Froude's, by an intellectual encounter with such persons as John Mitchell and Father Tom Burke.

—Catholics are mostly in the majority in the population in Bavaria. In every hundred souls seventy are are Catholics, twenty-eight are Protestants, and two are Jews. Munich, a thoroughly Catholic city, has two burgomasters, one a Lutheran, the other an old Catholic. In the Ministry of the department of education as well as in the local administration, despite the proportionment in favor of Catholics, it seems the Protestants actually has control of everything. This, too, despite the fact that there is no Kulturkampf in Bavaria; the Catholic Church is not persecuted as it is in Prussia, and yet, in many respects, there is as much injustice shown to Catholics as the reaches of King Ludwig as there is in the land of Bismarck.

THE CROSS IN CALIFORNIA.

Father Junipero Serra—His Life and Labors. First Arrival of the Franciscan Fathers in Alta California. Foundation of the First Mission—Discovery of the Bay of San Francisco. Establishment of a Presidio, and the Erection of a Mission Church Where the City Now Stands.

FOURTH ARTICLE.

When the Jesuit missionaries were unjustly expelled from Lower California, they were succeeded by Franciscan monks from the Apostolic College of Zacatecas, and under the protection of the Blessed Virgin assumed titular saint, the great and immortal founder of the Friar Minors—St. Francis of Assisium—had no missionary yet dedicated to God's glory under his glorious title. This apparent oversight toward the founder of their Order was noticed by Junipero Serra, who opened his mind on the subject to his superior, receiving this rather curt reply: "If St. Francis wishes to have a saint, let him show you a good port, and then let it bear his name." Little did the Visitador General dream that the Friar Junipero Serra would be far more prominent on the Pacific coast than that of many of the other saints whose names are connected with missions which had been established years prior to the discovery of the bay that bears the name of San Francisco.

At the solicitation of Reverendo Palou, the founding of the Mission of St. Francis of Assisium—October 9th, 1776—his Grace Archbishop Lamy, O. F. M., delivered an address, in the course of which he thus graphically described the foundation of the Presidio and Mission Church:

"The Friars, who were in the ever saw our magnificent bay were those who composed the missionary expedition which came overland from Sonora, and arrived in the middle of July, 1769, to examine the already famous port of Monterey, during which it happened that after the exploring party had returned the ship was lost to sight. Instead of turning west to their left, in the direction of Monterey, they continued their journey northward, until they found themselves in full view of the bay of San Francisco.

"But the Mission of San Francisco was not founded until the 9th day of October, 1776. Three weeks before—namely, the 17th of the preceding September—the Presidio of this place had been founded with the usual formalities, and, according to the wishes and instructions of the Viceroy of Mexico, the Missionary Fathers, accompanied by the civil authorities of the Presidio, performed the memorable work of the foundation of the Mission with all possible solemnity and formality. The account of which is given us by the faithful historian and eye-witness of the ceremony, the Rev. Father Palou, in his quaint style:

"Having arrived with three young men, the Lieutenant Commandant of the Presidio, to begin the construction of the chapel and quarters for the Fathers, the work of the mission was already had authorized, and, with the help of the Fathers, Fathers Junipero Serra, in a short time a house was built of sticks and tules, and a chapel of the same, with its roof of tule, and, amongst all the Fathers, there should be no lack of the first thing, with a roof to the sacrosanct behind the altar, which was made of a piece of canvas, with various kinds of drapery, and with the tabernacle, the altar, and the cross, and all the usual models, the Lieutenant having arrived at the Presidio, with all the soldiers and people, and the Fathers, with the ceremonies of the Holy Mass, with members, which, being the first, it was decided that it should be the mission, in honor of our Father, the Patriarch, St. Francis, of Assisium, and to extend these sketches far beyond their contemplated limits, we will dwell more particularly upon a historical point which possesses greater interest to the ordinary reader than any other topic connected with the introduction of Christianity into California, and that is the discovery of the beautiful bay of San Francisco, which important event in the science of geography is to be placed to the credit of Catholic missionaries, and not to Sir Francis Drake, as so many persons erroneously imagine.

Although many missions had already been founded in California and placed under the protection of the Blessed Virgin or some titular saint, the great and immortal founder of the Friar Minors—St. Francis of Assisium—had no mission

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. R. FRANK

All readers of this department are cordially invited to send original stories and solutions for the department. Address all communications to

FRANCIS J. MELLONY,
120 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-OBSOLETE—

Answers to Leisure Hours No. 97.

1st.—UBERTYILES
BENEFITS
ENDEARED EYES TRAYES
TORES
ILES
LID
ER
S
2nd.—Baritone.
3rd.—C A R E S
AMADORE
ARANTO
ADAMITE
HOTIFER
STINTS
ETTONE
ERS
4th.—Myrtil.
5th.—A L A B A S T R I A N
A L I E N T I A T E
L O R E T T A
B E G A L I N T S
A N D I N E
S T I N T S
T I N T S
R A E S
T I T E
A E
T I N E
6th.—Hamlet
11th.—
S
P A C A S
A R A N T O
A R A U S I U
C O N S E N T
A T T I N O E
S H O T E R
7th.—Forever.
8th.—T A P E S T R I E S
D E G
D E N N
T A S T E D
D E S T I N
T E N S E L E
B A S R I N E T
D E F E N S E S
O R E N T I L E R
S H O T E R
11th.—Backdoor.
12th.—
A R A
S
S P A R E D
E N D E A R E D
B E A R B E R S H O P
S H O R E S
S P A R E
A R O
CAP
ROLLA BRIGHTON BANQUET LIBERTY
CONTRADISTINGUISHED
WALNUTGROVE TRACTION ARENDONE BOOT
BITTERSWEET
SUN
S CALAF PARAMUTA PLANGENTS PATRONESS STARS
ORE
ORE

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 97 were solved by Simon Kaer, Will Dexter, Aspirin, "G. M.", Lech Bunger, S. A. M., Emerald, Morning Star, Hazel Kirke, L. Bowers, Beau, Thetis, Jessie Pyle, Rose Lee, F. G. Lee Arity, Fleur de Bell, Clare, Bell, Spanaway, Joe C., Nellie Mackie Irt—E. and Harry.

Complete List.—Simon Kaer.

Best Incomplete Lists.—Will Dexter, Aspirin and "J. M.," each 11 solutions.

NUMBER CIII.

The number of Leisure Hours is respectfully dedicated to I. BURKE.

1st move.—CENTRED PEARIO.

To "Romeo."

Arcus—1. Certain species of grass. 2. A species of lizard. 3. Coverings of cloth. 4. Professes meaning over. 5. An abbreviation. 6. In Leisure Hours.

Down.—1. In Leisure Hours. 2. A verb. 3. A kind of cake. 4. Not wrong. 5. A prefix. 6. Borrowed. 7. A cavalier, (O.). 8. Not. 9. Not. 10. A verb. 11. A pronoun. 12. A river of Mexico. 13. A soldier's chamber. 14. In Leisure Hours. 15. A river in Russia. 16. In Leisure Hours.

LANCELOT.

2ND ROCK.—SQUARE.

Oh, being one forth my over-loved tote,
And let me chant a lay!
Too long my muse has lingered mute,
Oh, being one forth my vexed-loved tote
And let the total stanzas recite!
My fancies' vivid play
Oh, being one forth my vexed-loved tote
And let me chant a lay!

Now, in the days of old long syne,
Let me my feelings voice;
The stars above so brightly shine
Now, in the days of old long syne,
Why should my personal muse decline
The pursuit of her voice?
Now, in days of old long syne,
Let me my feelings voice.

The years may bring their changes new
But memory's pow'rs remain
Let clouds may hide the shine of blue,
And years may bring their changes new,
Still may we hold the past years dear
Tho' years then, are again—
The years may bring their changes new
But memory's pow'r remains.

Rutland, N. Y. BOZO.

3RD ROCK.—SQUARE.

1. Pribbles prattling, the back or skin. 2. Resembling. 3. Ts. display. 4. Sky, (Scot.) 5. To enforce, (R.) 6. At rest.

Texas, Colo. SIN A.

4TH ROCK.—DOUBLE LETTER ENIGMA.

In the "Great Charter Oak"
Which stood the tempest severe
In the "Irish diamond crack"
That at twilight we hear;
In the "city of stack,"
That's London, to clear;
In the "starfish, calcyx"
In its every detail;
In the "steel-hard stick,"
Makes us think of a rule;
In the "lively perfumer"
Of orchids so fair.

Good friends, I am so cyzy
But still I like good fare
And cider I can't smoke
Nor eat it if aware.
I'll on my broad shoulders
The elf—and if home made
I let pride in the house slide
To have it lately
Oh John's pride I'll leave
And permit's, too liberties
To publish it to the king
At least within my eyes

Newark, N. Y. BARNIAN.

5TH ROCK.—OCTAGON.

To "P. Q. Lee Arity."

1. A sack. 2. Having gone. 3. A helmet. 4. Imperfect. 5. Pertaining to Cleaves. 6. To-day. (O.) 7. A member.

New Orleans, La. MAJOR IRT.

6TH ROCK.—CHARADE.

The foaming wave impel high,—and fall—
Fall with fury on the shore;
And the roaring waves I hound a cry
"Help! or we sink—to rise no more.

A vessel struggling through the waves
Had struck; I heard her
And during this they I seek watery graves,
The terror-stricken cry had from the sailor's lips.

Along the coast a boatman sailed,
In quest of well-known fire-tree
He, too, had heard the cry—had seen by his lantern's light.
The stricken sailors clinging to the mast.

Battling with the angry billows, then to brief
Tyrrach,
But he was striving in vain;
For, at last, by the current strong,
His frail boat was snapped in twain.

At last the storm was quelled,
The crew of the ship are saved;
But the boatman in his life's grave
In the angry billows, to bid so fearlessly braved.

Ah! never will I forget that terrible night,
Though years may roll by;
Never will I cease to think of the boatman,
Our of the lost and bravest of men.

San Francisco. HAZEL KIRKE.

3RD ROCK.—NUMERICAL.

To "Little Fairy."

The 1, 2, 3, 4—a ladder, (Gk.)
The 5, 6, 7, 8—a sport, (R.)
The 9, 10, 11, 12—a fish.
The 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, management, (E.)
The 9, 10, 11, 12—a fish and a fowl.
Ye "Lady's Sphere," dear will hereafter appear weekly. "Lark" would like to receive ye's from all pozzlers. Address, Joseph H. Medina, 539 Bryant street, San Francisco, Cal.

(Written for O. P. C.)
PROSPECTUS.

Dear pozzledom, how much I love thee,
Pastime full of life and joy;
Pleasure none can be above thee
While thy charms you wile employ.
May I never
Cease that bind thee to my heart.
But for with thee,
Read or merry,
Live and labor for the art.

Grieve may come my mind to harass,
Friends and fortune treat me bad,
To first a pelagoian, and thus one sought
For to subdue and train the human force,
That, as a scholar, filled with self-conceit,
Industry's base seeds, and mean intent,
There daily with the others he must meet,
And check, if possible, the evil bent.
By use of switches, when kind remains fail,
Well-laid on licks, a chosen thorn a day,
To fail at last that there do not avail,
To bring his feet to walk the better way.

11

Could one but rear the pupil as the fair,
That in the ancien people used to raise,
Cause him to grow, plant like, erect and true,
And never fear of censure than of praise;
The teacher's lot would be a happy one,
And the true mill of human kindness would
In him abound—and joyful he would run
Along his way, delighted with his work
Life's path would be to him as smooth and fair
As cool, when the bold waters play
And stalls abound, and pleasure seekers share
A round of jollity, the livelong summer day.

ANTHO.
Dubuque, Ill.

10TH ROCK.—SQUARE.

1 Italian archbishop, 1720-1803. 2. Varieties of cereals. 3. Dust pile. 4. P. O. Thomas Co., Virginia. 5. A tree who makes right. 6. Reason. 7. A powerful Syrian deity.

Storm Lake, Ia. C. U. ROUTE.

11TH ROCK.—CHARADE.

To "Capt. N. Frank."

When evening's shades have fallen o'er,
The land and all is still,
And noise and din is heard for more,
While birds raise trill
The sun is more, wakes them to song;
When nature seems at rest,
How blissful 'tis to linger long,
With dear ones we love best.

Earth's concerns are but few I ween,
And for apart I leave
Our greatest joys are yet unseen,
In Heaven where we live.
In Heaven there is no thing
With happiness on me blest,
Then lingering long hand in hand,
With dear ones we love best.

Let scoffers laugh, and rail at love,
Tis and they never know
For we are nearer Heaven above,
Our hearts are kinder, I ween
Our aims tend higher, mind's free
Where we live with our best,
With which to rear the society
With dear ones we love best.

Buffalo, N. Y. MARMION.

12TH ROCK.—HALF SQUARE.

1. A harbor on the east coast of Australia. 2. Territory of poetry, physical, mechanical, and moral. 3. Become less intense. 4. Usual. 5. A liquid measure in Spain. 6. Complete. 7. A town of Upper Austria. 8. A bride, (R.) 9. A person in debt. 10. In Leisure Hours.

Milwaukee, Wis. TYRREL.

☞ Answers and Solvers in five weeks.

Tries-to-Tries.

SIR A.— See notice to "Tom A. Hawk."
LANCELOT.—Thank you. How high is going to fast?
MARMION.—Your favors come just in time for this issue. Thanks.
N. CRIE.—Can you not send something for this department? Also Send Word!
SIGNET.—I would like to hear from you, by the way of cost, with a line.
MAGIC IRT.—Your number of solutions are quite welcome. Very glad to hear, send them always.
TOM A. HAWK.—At the last of years appears above, can I expect an assortment of puzzles also?
THE PROOF.—Your promise has not been fulfilled. If it is not "to be,"—say so.
K. J. C.—It is necessary that all communications must contain the right name and address of the sender, to insure publication. Also, you must send answer to your problem.

Hyde Blanche.

"N. Orik" now numbers the parts of all telegrams by the number of words.

"Than Rock" will turn two numbers of Pin Rickpen Puzzler each month until caught up to time. The last number issued is for May. The delay has been caused by the change of printers.

"Lark's Sphere's Ahoy will hereafter appear weekly. "Lark" would like to receive ye's from all pozzlers. Address, Joseph H. Medina, 539 Bryant street, San Francisco, Cal.

(Written for O. P. C.)
PROSPECTUS.

Dear pozzledom, how much I love thee,
Pastime full of life and joy;
Pleasure none can be above thee
While thy charms you wile employ.
May I never
Cease that bind thee to my heart.
But for with thee,
Read or merry,
Live and labor for the art.

Grieve may come my mind to harass,
Friends and fortune treat me bad,
Poverty may embarrass,
But thro ye shall make me glad.
Then, ye's,
Ah, ye's! ye's,
Heart-thrill, thrill of Auld Lang Syne,
Thou will brighten
Ill, and lighten
Letting happiness be mine.

Fortune, too, may smile so brightly,
Wealth, position, fame may come,
But yet, heaven so lightly,
Shall e'er tempt me from this "dom."
Time may come when,
As with all men,
Business calls me to my brain.
Active I may
Not be, but stay
Near my love in the wane.

Free Press (Columbus, O.) N. F.

MONITOR MENTION.

—Mrs. Mabel's street, 27 Jewelled Prince remarkable. Country merchants should call on Mr. J. A. Delaney.

—Dr. Dodge's Office, 11 Montgomery, San Francisco, are equally as well known for the surgical operations and for sensitive teeth.

—Fort Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724 Market street.

—Chrome Dental Association, 835 Market street—artificial teeth, $7 per set; filling from $1 upwards; also, and with pay, of which, we make a specialty, $1.

—Lactic Tablets are for sale by Druggists. Dr. Felix street, formerly of Virginia City, where a kept on hand for profits in the trade.

—Lessons in elocution, oratory and dramatic representations. Miss Lulu Lewis, graduate of the Boston School of Elocution and Expression, 1883. Call or address 1017 Leavenworth st., San Francisco.

—Fine Photographs, 25 Stewart street. Money saved for best length of time, on clothing, furniture, jewelry, pianos, organs, and all other articles. Purchase private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and diamonds. Watches and clocks repaired. Corner Kearny and Geary streets.

—If's not for teeth—warranted as good as can be made. Twelfth Street, 22. Dr. Osman, Dentist, 838 Market street.

—The Prescott House, corner of Kearny street and Montgomery avenue, under the proprietorship of Mr. J. W. Hooker, continues to be one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. The rate for board and room ranges from $1 to $2 per day, or low by the week. The accommodations are first-class, and country readers will find the Prescott clean, convenient and commodious.

—The National Foreign Exchange, 313 Bush street, is the Western agent of the N. S. Ins. Stitute of Industry, Paris, the Rothschilds, which is an celebrated for the cure of all deformities and lameness, deaf and blind, limbs, club feet, paralysis, all joints and muscles. Call and see patients, and certificates, and of Dodrel.

—Mr. Jules Lambla, favorably known to many of our readers, has succeeded the firm of Lion & Co., and has the General Employment Office, 106 Geary st. Mr. Lion was established in 1850 and has extensive business they have built up will be carried on successfully by Mr. Lambla. It is his aim to be numbered the best facilities to employ families in the city or country, and to furnish the most competent and reliable household, agricultural, mechanical or laboring help of any kind generally desired by employers. Just drop a note or call on Jules Lambla, 106 Geary street, C. F., describing the kind of help required and your wants will be faithfully attended to satisfactorily.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.

The Order C. K. of A., has already over 10,000 members, and is rapidly increasing. Initiation fee, $5; dues per month, $1; sick benefit, $5 per week; death benefit, $2,000. Not Reserved Fund. Address P. F. Dolan, Supreme Secretary, Chicago, Illinois, for a general and accompanying the Order. Mention this paper. Subordinate Council in the Recording Secretary of the San Francisco Branch No. 2, P. Sullivan, 1008 Howard st.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces quiet, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to the taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best of all remedies for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

—THE—
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!
A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.
SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.
The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
—OF—
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.
SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.
My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
No need ordering East, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight to a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.
MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Cruciffixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.
Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are, as Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."
General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL.
Latest Edition, with all addendae to date.
Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!
THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
648 MARKET STREET.
BRANCH
1152 MARKET ST.
LAUNDRY.
12th St., bet. Folsom and Howard S. F. Cal

McCORMICK BROS.,
Book and Job Printers,
636 Clay Street, 636
(Since Fire Office, as Monthly Office, San Francisco.)

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA, - - - CALIFORNIA
This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies its large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasium, refreshing fresh air. It possesses valuable complete Philosophical Apparatus, and Cabinets of Mineralogy and Natural History. It has also, practical schools of Mechanics, Surveying, Navigation, Telegraphy, and Commercial Business. For the latter a new building is erected, full from Sabbath, this leaves nothing to be desired.
Diplomas are given in two departments, the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $ 10.00
Board, including Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of linen, Bedsteads, Bedding, medical attendance and medicines, Doctor's fees, per session of ten months..... $50.00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.
☞ Studies will be Resumed Tuesday August 4th, 1884.
REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.,
President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE..... CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING EVERY advantage to young ladies within the reach of a well-bred education, was founded in 1851. In 1858, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the same budget extended the original Charter to a course of five years, and conferred the Degree of Mistress of Literature.
Its commodious large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, are furnished with every thing to make them comfortable and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the branches taught. Every facility will be afforded to students who wish to pursue Music, or any other whole education to master or the study of the languages.
The Academic year will begin on August 15th. In Accord and closes about the first week in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.
TERMS:
Per quarter, (payable in advance.)
Boarding, Washing, Mending, French, and if desired Spanish, German, and Latte, each.
Instrumental Music..... $ 10
Drawing (per quarter)..... 5.00
Use of Piano (per hour)..... 0.50
Painting in Oil, per lesson..... 1.00
Vocal and Instrumental Music Free extra charges.
For further particulars, address
COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
San Jose

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Charity, is beautifully situated on an eminence in the pleasant and accessible town of Rio Vista, in Solano County. The building new, and well furnished with all that contributes to the comfort of the pupils. Every care is taken to form young ladies to habits of neatness, order and propriety of deportment. The health of the pupils is specially attended to, and the moral training of all permeated with the spirit of Christian Charity, combined with all the social freedom of a mild education.
Terms, moderate, and payable by the term, and will be charged from day of entrance.
The scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five months each. The next session will commence on the 1st June.
Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, with use of bedding..... $150 00
Instrumental Music..... 30 00
Use of Piano..... 10 00
Vocal Music (private lessons)..... 30 00
Painting in Oil..... 20 00
Painting in Water Colors, per session..... 20 00
Drawing and Crayon..... 20 00
Vocation sport at the College..... 10 00
Graduating Fee..... 10 00
Physician's Fees (in case of sickness)
Fees are to be paid one half in advance at the opening of each half session, in advance.
DAY SCHOOL.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes $ 10
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes..... 15 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes..... 20 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes..... 25 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes..... 30 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes..... 50
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes..... 50
Tuition and Private Elocution lessons form extra charges.
French and Spanish are given gratuitously.
Instrumental music is taught by the Professors.
N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, at moderate rates, for the convenience of pupils who reside in Vallejo, and Benicia.
Refreshments, Washing, Mending, Doctoring and Medicine are charged extra.
For further particulars apply to
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
BENICIA..... CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and facilitates in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia, the cultivation, from a mild climate, of the opens on the 1st of August, and ends about the 1st of June.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly).
Board and Tuition..... $225 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00
Washing..... 45 00
Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $20.
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be paid.
Letters of Inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers,
Offers every facility for acquiring a Thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR,
(Payable half yearly in advance.)
Board, Tuition and Washing..... $250 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines..... 10 00
Vacation at College..... 50 00
Use of Bedding..... 10 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
For further particulars address
BRO. BETELLIN, President.

ACADEMY OF OUR LADY OF MERCY,
RED BLUFF, - - - CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF the Sisters of Mercy, is delightfully situated on a rise of ground on the west bank of the Sacramento River, commanding a view of the surrounding country for miles in every direction. The buildings are well adapted to the purpose for which they are intended, being well ventilated, and having all the modern improvements. The Academy is conveniently located on the Second street, San Diego. Together with this, the Sisters have a Boarding School, in which the students are allowed the full benefit of the best teachers, and every care is taken to form the young ladies to habits of neatness, order and propriety of deportment.
The next session will begin on August 15th. For further particulars, address
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ACADEMY OF THE HOLY NAMES!
Jackson Street, between Sixth and Tenth Streets,
SEATTLE, Washington Territory.
THE SISTERS OF THE HOLY NAMES WILL OPEN an Academy for Young Ladies, on the 8th of SEPTEMBER, 1884.
In the Spacious New Building, the course of instruction will be thorough and complete, and the moral and social training in the school. The strictest attention to health and comfort will be bestowed. Besides the regular course of instruction, the following will be taught: Music, the accept of beautiful ornaments for the home, painting, drawing, fancy work, and the ornamental branches of education. Classes will be formed in September. For Prospectus and further particulars address
SISTER SUPERIOR,
Seattle, Washington Territory.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME
THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1851, and chartered by the Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on the Lone Mount, opposite the 104 Mission Church.
The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary, to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.
TERMS:
Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per session..... $150
Instrumental Music..... 30 00
Use of Piano..... 10 00
Vocal Music, Private Lessons..... 30 00
Drawing..... 20 00
Painting in Water Colors, per session..... 20 00
Painting in Oil, per session..... 20 00
Vocation sport at the College..... 10 00
Graduating Fee..... 10 00
Physician's Fees (in case of sickness)
Fees are to be paid one half in advance at the opening of each half session, in advance.
DAY SCHOOL.
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes $ 10
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes..... 15 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes..... 20 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes..... 25 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes..... 30 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes..... 50
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes..... 50
Tuition and Private Elocution lessons form extra charges.
French and Spanish are given gratuitously.
Instrumental music is taught by the Professors.
N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, at moderate rates, for the convenience of pupils who reside in Vallejo, and Benicia.
Refreshments, Washing, Mending, Doctoring and Medicine are charged extra.
For further particulars apply to
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION, CHARTERED, AFFORDING the same of the state of California, is now prepared to confer degrees, in advance of the Univ. of Los Angeles, and the Commercial Department, and the beauty of its climate. The Faculty is composed of the PRINCIPAL OF THE COLLEGE IS ON THE WORK, which, combined with the Commercial Department, we will be the best school in the Pacific Coast.
The College has been established and has been in operation for the accommodation of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible. The course of the classical department, and the Commercial Department, and the Scientific Department, are more than sufficient for the completion of the necessary course of study, and the students are required to attend the classes, and the Scientific Department, and the Commercial Department, and the Classical Department, and the Scientific Department, and the Commercial Department, and the Classical Department, and the Scientific Department, and the Commercial Department, and the Classical Department

PROGRESS OF THE CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

Texas, but the Catholic provinces of New Mexico, Arizona and California. Texas and California soon lost their Spanish character, but to this day New Mexico has retained her Spanish population with very slight additions from any other part of the United States government has, however, persistently placed over this Catholic people as governors, secretaries, and judges Protestants, some of whom have been selected apparently from their zeal and bitter hostility to everything Catholic. It has, too, placed the Catholic Indians under Protestant control, and, degrading itself to the work of petty proselytising, has used every means of coercion and bribery to alienate from the Catholic faith, in which they had been brought up for three hundred years, the simple minded Pueblo Indians.

There had been a dioceese established in California before its acquisition by the United States; and in 1847 a see was established at Monterey, with Upper California as the diocese, the bishop being subject directly to the Holy See. New Mexico was made a Vicariate Apostolic in Texas a see had been established at Galveston in 1847.

After the building of the seventh council of Baltimore, in 1849, which was attended by twenty-five bishops, the Holy See, at the instance of the Propaganda, having already raised St. Louis to the rank of an archdiocese, did the same for New York, Cincinnati, and New Orleans. New sees were erected at Wheeling, Savannah, and St. Paul.

The ancient province of Baltimore, after an existence of forty years, was thus divided: New York and Connecticut made a province; Louisiana, as anciently understood, was also divided into three provinces St. Louis, New Orleans, and Oregon; and the Spanish territory on the Pacific gave the province of San Francisco.

THE WHOLE UNITED STATES IN 1850.

was estimated to contain 1,523,350 Catholics, governed by three archbishops, twenty-four bishops, 1081 priests, with 1073 churches, and twenty-one theological seminaries. The work of the Congregation de Propaganda Fide had kept pace with the growth and the wants of the Church in this country.

Up to this time the legislation of the Provincial Council of Baltimore extended to all parts of the republic, such dioceses having its own statutes and regulations adopted in the synods held by the Right Rev. Bishops after brief intervals. Henceforward such provinces would have its own wants of decrees, and those of Baltimore would have force only within its greatly restricted province.

A series of councils has been held in the newly created provinces; but their decrees, though approved by the Holy See, and fully as binding as any previously passed, seemed to lack the moral force of those adopted for the whole extent of the United States, and there seemed an instinctive tendency for councils that would, as before, pass decrees for the United States. That first the first Plenary Council of Baltimore, which opened on the 9th of May, 1851, the Most Rev. Francis Patrick Kenrick, Archbishop of Baltimore, presiding as Apostolic Delegate, invited the metropolitan five other archbishops, and twenty-three of their suffragan bishops, and titular bishops, to assist in administrative or vicare apostolic. The Bishop of Monterey was also present, combining the whole episcopate of the United States. The Abbot of La Trappe, Superior of the Lazarists, of Sulpicians, Redemptorists, Fraticelli, Jesuits, Redemptorists, Lazarists, with theologians, canonists and representatives of religious orders and the work their members were accomplishing.

After this council the Propaganda obtained the erection of the metropolitan see of San Francisco, and of the suffragan sees of Portland, Burlington, Brooklyn, Newark, Erie, Covington, Quincy, Peoria, Green Bay, Natchez, and of a vicariate apostolic, embracing the upper peninsula of Michigan.

THE INCREASE OF THE CATHOLIC BODY IN THE UNITED STATES,

from the time of the Revolution, was due to the natural increase of those then in the country and the natives of the Catholic provinces subsequently acquired, but in a still greater degree to the Catholic portion of the immense immigration into this country from European countries, and to an increase by births. The Catholic element in the early immigration was mainly in the Irish population, and at first the emigrants from Ireland were rather Protestant than Catholic. In 1850 one, in fifty Irish-born persons in the United States was 2,544,602. Of these about 1,000,000 may be regarded as Catholics, and their children form portions of a million more; the more ancient stock constituting another three-quarters of a million; the whole Catholic population of the country being at the time estimated by the soundest thinkers at two and a half millions.

In 1866, for the first time in the history of our immigration, the Germans arriving on our shores exceeded the natives of Ireland, but the more conservative and Catholic part of the Teutonic people were less numerously represented than that which belonged to the more radical and revolutionary class.

THE INCREASED IMMIGRATION HAD REVIVED anti-Catholic feelings. On Christmas eve the scene of bloody riots in 1844; a mob attacked the Catholic Church in Manchester, N. H.; and Father Bapst, the pastor, and fastened at Ellsworth, Maine, by a formal act of the town, on the 6th of August in the following year, a day of shame for Louisville and Kentucky, twenty Catholics were murdered, their homes given to the flames, and an attempt made to destroy the hundred. Churches suffered almost total destruction in Newark, N. J., and Williamsburg, N. Y.

The storm spent its force, and Catholics who enjoy the pre-eminence of being the only authors for the faith in this republic during the present century, resumed their labors to build up the house of God. Manchester now its church completed, and this very year has become the See of a Bishop. Provincial councils and diocesan synods were held in Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans, Baltimore, in the years 1850 to 1858. By 1860, the 1081 priests and 1073 churches of 1850 had more than doubled, having risen to 2106 clergymen ministering in 2356 temples of the living God.

BY THE TIME THE BENEDICTINES

had extended their labors as far west as Kansas, and the Trappist monastery had been founded in Iowa; the followers of St. Norbert were establishing a house in Wisconsin; the Franciscans in Texas. Now a large institution and communities at Allegany, in the dioceses of Buffalo; and other communities had been formed for the German population in the dioceses of Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Alton, and Louisville; the Convertuals in a similar manner had begun their labors in the Franciscan province of Capuchins had sprung up in Wisconsin; the Dominicans, Augustinians, Jesuits, Lazarists, and Redemptorists had multiplied their houses and ministry; the Passionists, disciples of St. Paul of the Cross, were introduced into the diocese of Pittsburgh in 1852, soon to gain in numbers, and by their austere life and zealous mission work to multiply their houses and their redeeming labors. The Oblates of Mary Immaculate from Canada were establishing churches in Washington Territory at the West, and New York on the East.

The great community of the Fathers of the Congregation of the Holy Cross, founded at Notre Dame, Indiana, by V. Rev. Mr. Sorin, in 1842, was building up a future university, and directing shiresses in several dioceses. The community of Priests of the Most Precious Blood, founded in Ohio in 1844, was extending its churches in the districts of those where the German immigration had taken root; the Priests of Mercy had already extended to various parts of York, and were laboring in the painful mission of Florida. At New York the V. Her. I. T. Hecker had established a community of missionary priests of St. Paul, mainly for giving missions. Laboring with these and the secular clergy, especially in the direction of seminaries and schools were who, introduced into New York in 1848, had already extended to various parts of that state, Missouri, Michigan, and Louisiana; the Brothers of the Society of Mary, another body of excellent teachers, beginning their labors in Ohio, were already spreading to other States; Xaverian Brothers, Brothers of Christian Instruction, and especially Brothers of the Third Order of St. Francis, were directing parochial schools in many dioceses. The Christian Instruction name had increased the number of their convents and academies; the Ladies of the Sacred Heart, extending to the East, had institutions also in the dioceses of New York, Albany, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, and Kansas; the Kentucky Benedictines, the Sisters of Loretto and Nazareth, had multiplied their communities and their schools; the Dominicans were had similarly increased. The Sisters of St. Joseph from a feeble beginning were spreading to many parts of the country. The Sisters of Providence had begun their excellent work in Indiana. The School Sisters of Notre Dame had begun their work in Wisconsin in 1847, and by their thorough system of training their members as teachers, had already made so favorable an impression by their successors that they had extended to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, and, Albany, the first example of a community founded for a German population which spread rapidly among English speaking congregations. The Sisters of the Holy Cross, from their mother house near Paris, had spread their stations in many dioceses.

THE SISTERS OF THE CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS,

THE GREAT COMMUNITY FOUNDED BY MOTHER SETON

was pursuing its labors, as planned by her, in New York, New Jersey, and Maryland, the Mother House at Emmitsburg, with the exception of the mother, had been transferred to the French sisterhood, and was adopting a new field of labor to conform to the spirit of their new rule. Besides these and some other teaching orders, like the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in Michigan, congregations of sisters had been introduced whose field was not education, but the corporal and spiritual works of mercy. Such were the Sisters of Mercy introduced from Ireland into the dioceses of Pittsburgh in 1843, and soon laboring in those of Little Rock, Portland, Hartford, New York, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Chicago, and Savannah. The first Institute of the Sisters of Mercy founded by Bishop England in Charleston; the Sisters of our Lady of Charity of the good Shepherd, whose mission was to attempt the reform of fallen women, spreading from their original house in Louisville, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Nashville; and a similar order in Buffalo; the Franciscan Sisters of the Poor had opened a hospital in Cincinnati.

Thus had colleges, academies, and schools multiplied, and increased in number, as orphanages, hospitals, refuges; and the religious women, with heroic patience, constancy, and religious orders and the work their members were accomplishing.

After this council the Propaganda obtained the erection of the metropolitan see of San Francisco, and of the suffragan sees of Portland, Burlington, Brooklyn, Newark, Erie, Covington, Quincy, Peoria, Green Bay, Natchez, and of a vicariate apostolic, embracing the upper peninsula of Michigan.

THE INCREASE OF THE CATHOLIC BODY IN THE UNITED STATES,

from the time of the Revolution, was due to the natural increase of those then in the country and the natives of the Catholic provinces subsequently acquired, but in a still greater degree to the Catholic portion of the immense immigration into this country from European countries, and to an increase by births. The Catholic element in the early immigration was mainly in the Irish population, and at first the emigrants from Ireland were rather Protestant than Catholic. In 1850 one, in fifty Irish-born persons in the United States was 2,544,602. Of these about 1,000,000 may be regarded as Catholics, and their children form portions of a million more; the more ancient stock constituting another three-quarters of a million; the whole Catholic population of the country being at the time estimated by the soundest thinkers at two and a half millions.

In 1866, for the first time in the history of our immigration, the Germans arriving on our shores exceeded the natives of Ireland, but the more conservative and Catholic part of the Teutonic people were less numerously represented than that which belonged to the more radical and revolutionary class.

THE INCREASED IMMIGRATION HAD REVIVED anti-Catholic feelings. On Christmas eve the scene of bloody riots in 1844; a mob attacked the Catholic Church in Manchester, N. H.; and Father Bapst, the pastor, and fastened at Ellsworth, Maine, by a formal act of the town; on the 6th of August in the following year, a day of shame for Louisville and Kentucky, twenty Catholics were murdered, their homes given to the flames, and an attempt made to destroy the hundred. Churches suffered almost total destruction in Newark, N. J., and Williamsburg, N. Y.

The storm spent its force, and Catholics, who enjoy the pre-eminence of being the only authors for the faith in this republic during the present century, resumed their labors to build up the house of God. Manchester now its church completed, and this very year has become the See of a Bishop. Provincial councils and diocesan synods were held in Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans, Baltimore, in the years 1850 to 1858. By 1860, the 1081 priests and 1073 churches of 1850 had more than doubled, having risen to 2106 clergymen ministering in 2356 temples of the living God.

BY THE TIME THE BENEDICTINES

had extended their labors as far west as Kansas, and the Trappist monastery had been founded in Iowa; the followers of St. Norbert were establishing a house in Wisconsin; the Franciscans in Texas. Now a large institution and communities at Allegany, in the dioceses of Buffalo; and other communities had been formed for the German population in the dioceses of Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Alton, and Louisville; the Conventuals in a similar manner had begun their labors in the Franciscan province of Capuchins had sprung up in Wisconsin; the Dominicans, Augustinians, Jesuits, Lazarists, and Redemptorists had multiplied their houses and ministry; the Passionists, disciples of St. Paul of the Cross, were introduced into the diocese of Pittsburgh in 1852, soon to gain in numbers, and by their austere life and zealous mission work to multiply their houses and their redeeming labors. The Oblates of Mary Immaculate from Canada were establishing churches in Washington Territory at the West, and New York on the East.

* In 1854 the Germans arriving were 220,000, while the Irish left 200,000. In the years 1845 to 1854 being, Irish, 1,232,199; Germans, 1,226,202.

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM—IRELAND.

Rebel Cork Rewards O'Brien.

CORK, August—The authorities of Cork have offered a reward of £500 for the capture of O'Brien, editor of the Dublin United Ireland, who has been in hiding since his sentencing the Dublin scandals.

Free Speech to be Protested.

LONDON, August 12th.—Lord Rosmore has written to the Irish Times that he is receiving audience thereof in the Nationalists. Their speeches are quite unexceptionable, he assures, the results of the Government's support. Lord Rosmore adds that the Government is prepared to take place at Monaghan on Sunday to prevent a disturbance, and probable bloodshed.

An Informer's Confession.

DUBLIN, Aug. 11.—The Archbishop of Tuam, who is now in Dublin, has sent a long letter to Lord Spencer, the Lord Lieutenant, if he requests the authorities to make enquiry into Carey's statements. He says Carey declares that the reason why he had not spoken before was because he waited for the initiation of the Archbishop, whom he found to receive the Church a pardon. He was willing to suffer in the interest of justice any pain, even death, for covering away an innocent life. A magistrate and an inspector are now making enquiries. It is reported that Carey and his bride, Miss Tighe, have been in receipt of a liberal allowance, which was enjoyed shortly before the conspiracy.

Refusal to Investigate Perjury Cases.

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—The Evening Mail states that the Lord Lieutenant has decided against an inquiry into Mr. Casey's Dublin statement that Crown solicitor Dublin indeed them investigation perjury in the Maamtrasna murder case.

French Declared a Fraud.

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—A medical consultation report published in the sanity of James French, the Maamtrasna murder, has been published. Mr. Parnell, in a letter, says he considers the report to be a shamming madness and is quite capable of pleading.

The Irish Members and the Home of Lords.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Some pretty rude language has been slung beyond all precedent, and unless the Irish Nationalists are prepared to see the Government repeal to the length of the Sus. Coercion Act, they must be more moderate. The Parnellites at the inadequacy of concessions to Ireland, and have resolved to oppose the growth of the Irish party against the House of Lords, and to the Government, during the autumn at which the Peers will be dissolved, and the Government will lend everything to have a hard time in great waves into the Liberal seats by rejecting the Bill of Franchise Bill.

Unfair Discrimination in Ireland.

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Mr. Gladstone, of Pugsdall, Ably, has, on the recommendation of the Lord Lieutenant, been placed on the Commission of the Peace. Mr. Redmond's Clerk, The population of the Queen's county is also south Catholic, yet of eighty one magistrates, only three are Catholic; and there is not a single Catholic D. L.

Bishop O'Callaghan at Home.

Bishop O'Callaghan is expected to arrive in Cork this week. The brilliant and Edwardian function in Ireland will be the consecration of the Bishop of the Catholic community of Ennis, on the 26th inst., when Archbishop Croke preach.

Nationalist Gathering at Monaghan.

DUBLIN, Aug. 11.—At least 20,000 persons took part in the Nationalist procession at Monaghan yesterday. In the evening a bonfire was given, at which many notables were entertained. The Government Gladstone's Land Act was condemnation. Parnell will attend the County Cavan Sunday. It is the opinion that Irish O'Connor will stand as the Nationalists' candidate for Cavan Parliamentary Waterford.

Disastrous Fire Near Limerick.

On Sunday morning last, at 2 o'clock, a fire was discovered in the extensive milling concern of Mr. Gabriel Ryan, situated in the suburbs of Limerick. The flames spread rapid and the whole premises, with the exception of the building was completely gutted before the fire was extinguished. The loss is very heavy, the premises being valued at £12,000, were uninsured. The total damage from the fire is estimated at £1,000. The premises were partly insured.

Irish Bishops.

This Cork Examiner of last week states that if Right Rev. Dr. Delaney, Bishop of St. James Prior, Dr. Forstrom, has been finally appointed Bishop of Kerry, the Bishop of Ossory, in the place Dr. Warren. It is also announced that Monsignor Kirby, the Rector of the Irish College, has been selected by the Holy See for the Bishopric of Ossory. Dr. Kirby, on the transfer of Dr. Gross the Most Rev. Dr. Moran to the Metropolitan See of Sydney.

Ireland's Physical Decay.

The lately published vital statistics for Ireland for 1883 gives the population as 5,015,720, showing a falling off from 1882 of 82,525. The marriages, which were 15,3 per 1,000 in England and 14 in Scotland, was but 8.8 in Ireland, and the birth rate was 29 per 1,000 in England. The birth rate was 2.9 below the mean rate, and was but 28.1 in Scotland, 28.4 in England and Wales, and 28.8 in Ireland. The death rate, which was 18 in 1882, rose to 19.2 in 1883, while England and Scotland it was 19.5 and 20.1. It is remarkable that while in England and Scotland the death rate was 1.4 and 1.3 per cent. of the deaths in Ireland last year were 2 per cent. of the population. The proportion in England was 2½ per cent.

"I owe my Restoration to Health and Beauty to the CUTICURA REMEDIES." Warren Sulz.

The latest novelty in church entertainments has reached Cedar Rapids, Iowa. It is an evening of conflict magic, in which the different conflicts of nations in staging their battles, the copy will be held in song and illustrated in pantomime. Each representative nation and Gift Book was the centerpiece of the entire, and the lullaby will be sung in the native tongue.

— As a result of this idea, we continue to the Zulu Scene, the Catholics have a majority of the members of the Church.

— The firm of Hoadley & Co. the popular grocers of 321 Washington street, whose price lists appear on the second page, are selling a fine school of all competitors, and the reason is—that they keep goods in vast quantities and the market price is low, and are thereby enabled to offer customers the full benefit of their large experience, the largest and large capital. The best of the firm supplying many of our public institutions is a guarantee of the advantages to be obtained by dealing with such a old and reliable house. We can speak personally on the subject, having dealt with them for many years.

Galvo Mineral Water Palace.

This new establishment, has just been fitted up in 1211 Market street, opposite Fifth, is a most pleasant and healthy resort for invalids and pleasure seekers. The Galvo Mineral Water is one of the most celebrated mineral springs in the world, and is sold at 50c and 50c. Partners at the same price per gallon and 5 cents from silver lined tankards, enjoyed there a perfect exercise.

Superiority of Hallet, Davis & Co.'s Pianos.

WORCESTER, MASS., 1883.

The reputation of the American pianos is established, and the superiority of the instruments they were at the Paris Exhibition of 1867. Since that time the Hallet, Davis & Co. instruments have been improved in quality and in convenient purpose of the latter—the distinguishing advantages of the latter—in the use of the best materials and workmanship of construction—was attained in system and use in the most substantial manner, and in the most elegant form. The Hallet, Davis & Co. pianos have been for years the standard of excellence, and it is certainly desirable that the use and employment of such instruments should be substituted for inferior pianos. With distinguished regards,

I am, yours truly,

W. G. Hodges, general agent for the Pacific Coast, No. 1 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

— For fashionable tailoring at reasonable prices there is no better house in the city than Tom Brady's, No. 7, third street, opposite Lick, S. F.

Robert Brown & Co., formerly from Canada, will remain in San Francisco about one month. Office, 540 Bush street, where he will be pleased to see his friends and patrons. Successfully cured without cutting.

— Ladies, Misses and children's fine shoes at Moore & Murphy's, 638 Market street, opposite Kearny, S. F., the firm has just opened up a very fine assortment of new goods—carpets, oilcloths, etc. Intending purchasers will find it to their advantage to call upon them before purchasing elsewhere, as prices are most reasonable.

— The question is frequently asked where can I get a good cup of tea? The answer is, at Lipton's, 1 Market street, opposite Palace Hotel. Lipton's Teas are the finest in the world.

MARRIED.

BURROWS—MCNOUGHT—In this city, August 10, by Rev. J. Collins, Frank D. Burrows to Bertie F. McNought, both of San Francisco.

CONSTANTINE—BRADLEY—In this city, August 12, by the Rev. Father Grace, Thomas Constantine to Ann Bradley, both of San Francisco.

HUDSON—FITZGIBBON—August 11, at St. Patrick's Church, by Rev. Father Lynch, Frank Hudson to Annie Fitzgibbon, both of San Francisco.

KELLY—DONOVAN—August 11, at St. Patrick's Church, by Rev. Father Cottle, Charles Kelly to Ellen Donovan.

COLBORNE—FITZSIMONS—In the city, August 10, by Rev. Father Grace, Thomas Colborne to Annie Fitzsimons, both of San Francisco.

CLARK—MCCOY—In Sonoma, August 12, by Rev. Father Lynch, Thomas Clark to Mary McCoy.

OTERO—GASTOLA—In this city, August 10, at No. 203 Francisco street, Jose Otero to Angustia Gastola.

DIED.

DANAHER—In this city, August 10, P. H. Danaher, beloved father of Mary J. McKenny, a native of Ireland, aged 72 years.

BADGE—In this city, August 10, Fred, aged 3 years and 3 months, beloved son of the late Edward Edward Badge, a native of Quincy, Illinois, Eng. aged 32 years.

McELROY—In this city, August 11, Peter, beloved husband of Barbara McElroy, a native of the townland of Ballyhoe, Parish of Ballyhoe, County Tyrone, aged 70 years.

McKEY—In Pleasanton, Cal., August 10, Jacob, beloved son of Charles and Mary McKey, a native of New York.

Market Report.

Corrected Weekly by P. J. Daly 604 Battery Street.

MERCHANT OFFICE,
636 Clay St. Tuesday Evening, August 19, 1884.

Wheat—Spring	$1.32½
Wheat—Spring in sacks	1 [illegible]
Barley	1 [illegible]
Oats	1 [illegible]
Corn	[illegible]
Beans, per lb. wholesale	15 [illegible]
Potatoes, per lb.	2 [illegible]
Onions	19 [illegible]
Poultry
Hens, per doz. wholesale	6 [illegible]
Young Chickens, per doz.	5 [illegible]
Turkeys, per lb. wholesale	21 [illegible]
Ducks, per doz.	4 [illegible]
Geese, per pair	1 [illegible]
Broilers, per doz.	2 [illegible]
Eggs, per doz.	2 [illegible]
Old Roosters	3 [illegible]
Eggs
Hams
Bacon
Lard
Beef, wholesale
Mutton, wholesale
Veal, wholesale
Pork, wholesale
Eastern Sugar-cured Hams
California Hams
Bacon, per lb. wholesale
Lard, per lb. wholesale
Tallow
Beans, white, per lb. small
Beans, Lima
Potatoes, per lb.
Onions, per lb.
Eggs
Butter
Poultry
Dressed Turkeys
Geese
Ground Apples, per lb.
Green Peas, per lb.
Sicily Lemons
Mexican Limes
Cranberries, per barrel
Oats
Milling	1.[illegible]
Feed	[illegible]

From Great Britain or Ireland.
Cheaper than ever. $35 through to San Francisco. Call for tickets call on W. A. Jones, 34 Third Street, agent for owner of Baker Hotel.

New Advertisements.

BUTTERICK'S
Patterns—Fall Styles.
Send Stamps for Catalogues. Agency, 124 Post Street, San Francisco.

ESTABLISHED 1846.
WM. H. ROUSE & CO.,
306 Davis St., San Francisco.
COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
Consignments of Grain, Potatoes, Beans, Fruit, Dried Fruit, Etc., Solicited.
Also want Feathers, Eggs, Hides, Pelts, Honey and Beeswax. Prompt returns made and satisfaction guaranteed. Highest cash prices realized. Send for Circular.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.
No other compliments are so lavished in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs. Nor is it wonder, when we consider how many have perished from a trifling or unconscious exposure, to which the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption, and relieves the Sick.
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

JOHN J. CLARK,
ARCHITECT.
408 California Street.
Next to Bank of California, Rooms 12 and 13

J. ST. DENIS. T. MACAULEY
ESTABLISHED 1863.
J. ST. DENIS & CO.,
HOUSE AND SIGN PAINTING,
Paints, Oils, Glass,
Paper Hangings, Etc.,
308 SUTTER ST., NEAR DUPONT, - - - SAN FRANCISCO.
FRESCO PAINTING AND KALSOMINING.

NEW BOOKS.
Our Birthday Bouquet Culled from the Shelves of the Saints and the Gardens of the Poets. By Eleanor Donnelly. Illustrated. $1.25.
Life of Mlle. Le Gras.
(Louise de Marillac.) Foundress of the Sisters of Charity. Translated from the French by a Sister of Charity. 12mo. cloth. $1.00.
The Seraphic Guide.
A Manual for the Members of the Third Order of St. Francis. According to the Rules Approved by the Holy See. By a Franciscan Father (Cuff, O. Conv. Bath). 12mo. cloth, gilt edges. 75 cts.
The same is published in German, at the same price.
Devotions to the Sacred Heart
For the First Friday of Every Month. Cloth, Head and Foot Gilt. 50 cents.
Year of the Sacred Heart.
A Prayer-book for the Use of the Year. Cloth, Head plate Frontispiece. 50 cents.
Popular Life of St. Teresa of Jesus.
Prefaced by Rev. Mgr. Preston. With Frontispiece. Cloth. 50 cents.
Short Stories on Christian Doctrine.
Illustrating the Catechism.
Cloth. Full page illustrations. $1.00.
Life of St. Clare of Montefalco.
Translated from the Italian of the Most Rev. Bonaventure Tecchi, O. S. B. Cloth. $1.00.
Names that Live in Catholic Hearts.
By Mrs. Anna T. Sadlier. 12mo. cloth. 50 cents.
A Thought of St. Teresa's for Every Day in the Year.
Cloth. 50 cents.
Maxims and Counsels of St. Francis de Sales.
50 cents.
The Monk's Pardon.
Cloth. 50 cents.
Golden Sands. Third Series.
Fine Gilt Cloth. 50 cents.
Don Bosco: A Sketch of his Life and Works.
Illustrated. Cloth. With Portrait. 50 cents.
An Appeal and a Defiance.
By Cardinal Dechamp. Cloth. 50 cents.
Encyclical Letter of the Holy Father Pope Leo XIII. on the sects of the Freemasons.
Authorized Translation. Price 25 Mal. Paper, imperial size, 8 cents; per dozen, 25. Paper, fine edition, 10 cents; per 100 copies 50.
Luther's OwnMaintainers contowering
In Preaching against Popery. Taken exclusively from the edition and in all editions of Luther's sermons published in his lifetime. Paper, 10 cents; per 100 copies, 12 cents.
The CATHOLIC FAMILY LIBRARY
50,000 COPIES SOLD.
The Christian Father.
Paper, 25 cents; per hundred, $15.00. Manopolin, 35 cents; per hundred, $21.00. Cloth, 50 cents; per hundred, $30.00.
The Christian Mother.
Paper, 25 cents; per hundred, $15.00. Manopolin, 35 cents; per hundred, $21.00. Cloth, 50 cents; per hundred, $30.00.
Sure Way to a Happy Marriage.
Paper, 25 cents; per hundred, $15.00. Manopolin, 35 cents; per hundred, $21.00. Cloth, 50 cents; per hundred, $30.00.
BENZIGER BROS.,
Printers to the Holy Apostolic See,
ST. LOUIS.
NEW YORK: 311 Broadway.
CINCINNATI: 178 Main Street.
ETC., ETC.

DEASY BROTHERS,
118 Third Street,
Cor. Minna, San Francisco.
IMPORTERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF
BOOTS AND SHOES
A Large and Well-selected Stock of
LADIES', MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S BOOTS AND SHOES
Of the Best Quality Constantly on Hand.
BEFORE PURCHASING FOR YOURSELF OR FAMILY we will be pleased to call and examine our goods which are extended to be of superior quality, and made exclusively by white labor.

JAS. R. KELLY & CO
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
PAINTS, OILS and GLASS
221 and 223 Market Street
Just Below Sansome the New Block.

COLD, SILVER AND NICKEL PLATING.
— Every Description of —
Church and Altar Ornaments
ALSO HOUSEHOLD GOODS
Repaired and Plated
With the above metals in the most beautiful and durable manner. Lowest prices.
SAN FRANCISCO
Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating Works,
653 and 655 MISSION ST.,
Bet. New Montgomery and Third Sts., San Francisco.
E. O. DENNISTON, Proprietor.

BOOTS AND SHOES!
MOORE & MURPHY,
Importers, Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of Ladies' and Gent's
BOOTS and SHOES.
Full Line of the Best Eastern Manufacturers and Our Own Manufacture Always Kept Constantly on Hand.
638 Market Street, Opposite Kearny, S. F.

138 SIXTH STREET, 138
Bet. Natoma and Howard
DRESS REFORM CORSET
Is the Most Perfect Fitting, Most Comfortable and Most Durable Corset Made.
Its Flexibility, Elasticity and Lightness are Unsurpassed.
Its Perfect Ventilation Renders it Cool and Healthful.
Its Unbreakable Steel Springs Yield to Every Motion of the Wearer

Poetry.

THE CHRISTIAN BROTHER.

(Lines suggested by the death of Brother Dominic Bride, as reported in last week's Monitor.)

To dwell of old, when heroes
Peopled the world's dawn,
No planet bright wear the brow
To the thousand of the Cross.

And, in south, the brave Crusader,
Was as bold as a king,
But no soldier, and no braver
Than he, of whom I sing.

Your warrior bold may storm,
Like the savage or the Gallic,
The bloody breach of battle,
But he cannot conquer self!

Twas so with Alexander,
Who called with his God!
Twas so with great Attila,
Well styled, "the scourge of God!"

But here is one, whose boldness
Is surpassed, but by his power
To rescue youth from peril
When Passion rules the hour!

He comes, no mail-clad warrior,
His brow a cloud of wrath,
Bearing over blasted water
Red ruin in his path!

The Christian Brother! come not thus!
His eye beams bright with joy,
Become his beloved mission is
To

How many millions, thus preserved
From Gehenna's pyll of gloom,
The Recording Angel's book will tell
On the awful day of doom.

Heedless alike of praise or blame,
Of object, or of pelf,
He's doing for God, with soul aflame,
The son of De La Salle!

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacreedy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY ROBERT ROBINSON.

CHAPTER II.

The summer's morning was bright and balmy,—and Redmond, after a yeoman's breakfast—consisting of trout fried with bacon, eggs, tea in which cream was pre-eminent—started out in the glorious sunlight which was irradiating hill and dale, mountain and valley. The forget-me-nots told their tale to the crystal pools, the graceful ferns langidly embraced the lichen-covered stones, and occasional rar, leaping in the heat and glow, opened a lazy eye as Phil passed along the road, and compressed a bank with a prolonged yawn. The hawthorns threw their shadows across the path, and the "blossoming furze, negligently gay" sent forth that fresh, quaint and delicious perfume that tells us with speechless eloquence, that we are out in the bright green country, and away from the hum and turmoil, and loathsomeness of the overcrowded human hive.

Having promised to join his newly found friends at Lough Dan, Phil took the steep and romantic road that leads to the lake beyond the village of Roundwood. Far away to the left in the summer haze lay the picturesque village of Ballymacreedy, and the green valley, and valley of Glendalough, lost a delicious contrast to the purple heights of the lake-encircled Derryhawn on the right. He gazed, gray crags of Luggelaw, and he gazed the great of the hill, the blue waters of Lough Dan lay mirrored beneath him, reflecting the glorious sky and the green fields and hills. The exquisite loveliness of the scene fell upon the young American like a dream or a perfume. It was refreshing yet almost interesting. He thought of his home in the far west, of the tall pines, of the blue waters of Lough Dan lay mirrored beneath him, reflecting the glorious sky and the green fields and hills. The exquisite loveliness of the scene fell upon the young American like a dream or a perfume. It was refreshing yet almost interesting. He thought of his home in the far west, of the tall pines, of the blood-red and orange fallows and the white bone of the cotton fallows, and they seared his mental vision when he came to contemplate the dull, cold, cloudy green, the moist atmosphere, pure yet filmy as a bridal veil, and the delicious completeness of the only if old, so satisfying, so sombre, and so enervating.

Somehow or other he associated all this perfection with the fair young girl whose pale face and beautiful black still haunted his imagination like a sweet strain of music. These scenes were a suitable setting for her beauty. She would comprehend them, she would commune with nature in this wild secluded spot, so lonely and yet so lovely. As he idled glided into this rosy channel, his revery was suddenly disturbed by the sound of hands, and close upon him came a basket phaeton attached to a diminutive pony. His heart gave one violent bound—the object of his immediate and gushing thoughts, was the occupant of the vehicle. Would she pass without noticing him? There had been no introduction. He could expect no recognition, and yet—

Chance lifts up many a gap in life, solves many a problem, and hastens many denouements.

The pony, evidently a willful, over-petted, head-full little beast, took it into its stubborn head that at this particular spot, coming from the bushy jungle on another occasion, and so far from home, it was in the road would admirably suit his dispositions; and so he feared no whip, and, as a gentle shock upon the reins and a solemn admonishment from his fair owner, his whim could be indulged in with comparative impunity, he proceeded forthwith to carry his idea into execution, and stopped with a jerk right opposite where Phil Redmond stood.

"Do go on, Dolly!" exclaimed Miss O'Byrne, shaking the reins. "Do go on, there's a pet. You shall have a lump of sugar when we get to the stable."

Dolly shook his head and stolidly gazed at the lake beneath him.

"Do go on, I say and persuade him," said Phil, stepping forward and lifting his hat, which, by the way, decidedly up to his hand, cleanly co-ressing his face and attractively destroying the bow.

"Oh, thanks; I seemed destined to give you trouble so."

"This was a delicate recognition.

"I have to thank you for making me the most popular man at Roundwood," retorted Redmond. "I feel like a lord-lieutenant. I had quite a levee this morning.

"And your courtiers, instead of looking for place, were seeking for pence.

"A distinction without much difference."

"Except in the visenry," she laughed.

"Dolly was as good as gold—at least so thought one of the party—and manifested no intention of budging an inch.

"What a tremendous pony" exclaimed Miss O'Byrne. "I shall have to beat him."

"Let me try and get him along." And Phil, taking hold of his shaggy mane, lugged the unwilling Dolly along in the direction of the lake.

"This is really too bad, sir," remonstrated Miss O'Byrne. "I cannot tax you in this way."

"Not in the tax I assure you. I have nothing on earth to do but to revel in the equal sunshine of this moment."

This was said with ever so slight an emphasis; nevertheless it bore a scarlet blush to the rich brunette, which came whispering all over the young girl's charming pallor.

"You—you are a stranger here?

"I am, and yet I ought not to be.

"This savors of a mystery.

"Very easily solved. My forefathers hunted these hills and fished that lake. My father was reckless, extravagant, and his men came into possession of the old acres. My father emigrated, and made a great deal of money in New York, and—"I have been in New York, interrupted the young lady.

"That was a bridge for travel thought. Here was a market for mutual mental wares.

"Did you like it?" he asked.

"Like it—I was enthusiastically who could dislike it? It is the most charming city, perhaps excepting Paris, that I have ever visited. And how are Fifth Avenue and Broadway, and the ash-boxes?" she added with a ringing laugh.

Dolly made another stop, and no earthly inducement would stir him until he willed it himself. His fair mistress relinquished the idea and resumed her seat, stepping from the vehicle, clambered, with the assistance of Redmond, to a mose grass bank, from which she pointed out some objects of special interest in the scenery.

"That is Billy Doyle's cottage at Shillnagh, down far in the valley by the edge of the lake. See the smoke—hark! curling in the sunlight, and the red flag. That flag shows that poor Mr. Fenler is on the lake fishing."

"Who is poor Mr. Fenler?" asked Phil.

"He is the man who was a great merchant in Dublin, but who lost all his property, and his wife and all his children. He saved as much from the wreck as enabled him to purchase one half of the cottage—the slated half—and to support himself. He came here seven years ago having made a vow never to leave the valley again.

"And has he kept it?

"Religiously. He goes nowhere, and spends his whole time in fishing. Do you see that golden strand at the head of the lake?

"Yes."

"Well, there is a legend about that which you should hear. Any old crone in the valley will do it amply justice.

"I should prefer to hear it from a fairy on the hill," said Redmond, gallantly.

"Pay no compliments, although yours was cleverly French.

"You been me at my own weapons laughed Redmond. "But whose jubilee musicians is that, yonder in the distance, twixt these two hills?

The fire lighted up to the young girl's eye, the delicate nostril expanded, the rich, ripe lips quivered, as she proudly replied: "That is my home."

Her home—the nest in which she had been nurtured. "What a presence power in that gloomy valley! What a world of love and joy and beauty in that lone and secluded spot!

"I envy you," murmured Phil. "The tranquil loveliness of your trout fried with bacon, eggs, tea in which cream was pre-eminent—started out in the glorious sunlight which was irradiating hill and dale, mountain and valley. The forget-me-nots told their tale to the crystal pools, the graceful ferns langidly embraced the lichen-covered stones, occasional rar, leaping in the heat and glow, opened a lazy eye as Phil passed along the road, and compressed a bank with a prolonged yawn. The hawthorns threw their shadows across the path, and the "blossoming furze, negligently gay" sent forth that fresh, quaint and delicious perfume that tells us with speechless eloquence, that we are out in the bright green country, and away from the hum and turmoil, and loathsomeness of the overcrowded human hive.

Having promised to join his newly found friends at Lough Dan, Phil took the steep and romantic road that leads to the lake beyond the village of Roundwood. Far away to the left in the summer haze lay the picturesque village of Ballymacreedy, and the green valley, and valley of Glendalough, lost a delicious contrast to the purple heights of the lake-encircled Derryhawn on the right. He gazed, gray crags of Luggelaw, and he gazed the great of the hill, the blue waters of Lough Dan lay mirrored beneath him, reflecting the glorious sky and the green fields and hills. The exquisite loveliness of the scene fell upon the young American like a dream or a perfume. It was refreshing yet almost interesting. He thought of his home in the far west, of the tall pines, of

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intercession of St. Francis de Sales, under whose patronage this year is placed, the labors of the Catholic journals who defend the cause of religion, its rights and those of its Holy Apostolic See, and adhere to its doctrines and precepts with devotion and fidelity.—PIUS IX.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the chief agent in popularizing those, and propagating the constituent opinions, and opinions are ever the motive power of human conduct. Journalism is a useful and serious vocation, and, when it is made possible to the writers of society, but a sort of sport, it ought to be the aim of every Catholic journalist to conciliate serene and desired truth, to propagate it, and to defend it with intrepidity."—PATER, THEODORE WORMS' LETTERS.

CIRCULAR FROM HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP ALEMANY, O. P.

REV. AND DEAR SIR:—In accordance with the suggestion contained in the encyclical letter of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, under date of June 25, 1884, you are directed to announce a Triduum to be held in your church in honor of the Blessed Mother of God, on the 6th, 7th and 8th of September.

Our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, gratefully grants to the faithful, for every visit to the church made during the Triduum, a partial indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines, and a plenary indulgence to be gained on the last day—to be obtained by the usual conditions of Confession and Communion, and prayer for the intention of Holy Church.

Prayers are directed to be offered for the Holy Redeemer. This indulgence is applicable to the souls detained in Purgatory. Permission is hereby granted for Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament for such evening of the Triduum.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

—There is no truth whatever in the dispatch published in the papers last week relative to a reported conference between Mrs. Parnell and "a number of Catholic Bishops" with regard to turning the present Parliamentary contest to the advancement of Ireland's cause. The Bohemian who invented the story ought to know the Catholic Bishops of America better than to imagine that they could be made a party to such a scandalous scheme, and the papers that print such transparent untruths must be very badly off for "news," indeed.

—We call the attention of our readers to the report of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union Convention, which we publish on the 3d page of the present issue. The presence of a large number of Archbishops and Bishops gave this organization a power and a prominence never before achieved, and we hope that at the forthcoming Plenary Baltimore Council the Temperance cause will receive deserved recognition.

—The Rome correspondent of the Liverpool Times states that the Italian Government, not satisfied with the banishment of the Clubmen of the Dominicans and Franciscans from their convents, proposes to expel the Generals of other Religious Orders. It is announced that the Government has intimated to the Generals of the Benedictines, Theatines, Camaldoli, Vallombrosa and Cistercians, and Aequatius and Aquatinus to quit as quickly as possible the location which they occupy; and it is expected that the same intimation will soon be extended to the Generals of the other Religious Orders. It is very evident, from all this, that the Italian Government is earning for the country it represents the deserved chastisement of Almighty God.

—The excitement over the Sanger school matter has developed several other cases where the school law has been violated by virulent anti-Catholic teachers. Mr. John Lyons was informed last week, by a Catholic lady in Oakland, that her children were unsettled by a friend at Bible-reading in Mrs. Johnson's class in the Tomkins' Grammar School. We hope some courageous Catholic in that city will unearth the facts in the case so we can assist those who criminally violate the law regarding sectarian teaching. The MONITOR is determined to have justice for the Catholics of California, and as sub school children and parents to give us the facts where cases of complaint exists, and we will stop this outrage of sectarianism under the cloak of freedom of conscience.

—Just as we had chronicled the above case, we received a letter from Gilroy, in which the writer says that a similar state of affairs exists there that have been transpiring under Sanger's administration. We urge upon the Gilroy Advocate, that Father Hudson handles the guilty teacher without gloves and stopped for a while, at least—the teaching of anti-Catholic doctrine under the pretence that it is historical truth. The writer of the communication referred to is mistaken in saying that Catholics have no remedy. The Code is open to all, and an injunction restraining the payment of pro rata taxes to any school where sectarian doctrines are taught, can be drawn to by any citizen, and will be sustained by the courts. Catholics in every part of California should get the law, read it, and make those who made it live up to it.

—Very few people have any idea of the progress which the Catholic Church is making in China, where there are at present thirty-three Vicariates Apostolic scattered over thirty-three provinces of that vast Eastern Empire. These Vicariates are under the ecclesiastical control of thirty-five Bishops and one Pro Vicar; they are managed by different Orders of the Church, among whom are French missionary Fathers from Paris, Lazarists and Jesuits, Italian Franciscans, and priests from the Foreign Missions of Milan; Spanish Augustinians and Dominicans; Belgian and Dutch priests from the Foreign Missions of the Scheut. The number and different nationalities of the missionaries is the best proof that the Church is doing good work in the way of conversion among the Chinese, although, for certain reasons, there is not much said regarding the progress of Christianity in the land of Confucius.

Governor Stoneman's "No Popery" Policy.

Governor Stoneman has completely constituted us of his utter contempt for the Catholics of California by his action regarding the centenary of Father Junipero Serra, the founder of Christianity in the region now comprised within the boundaries of this State. It will be remembered by all our readers that when the Governor called the extra session of the Legislature last May, that body—impressed with the importance of the work performed by that missionary priest in California—requested Governor Stoneman to make the day of the anniversary of Father Serra's death a legal holiday, so the people of every portion of the State—and of all classes in every community therein—could have an opportunity of manifesting their veneration for the great and good soldiar of Christ who was the first to plant the emblem of Christianity in the soil of California.

This action, on the part of the representatives of the people, was all the more impressive, and influential because it was confined to no particular party, and the suggestion came voluntarily from the Legislative members. But Governor Stoneman—true to his record as a hater of everything Irish and Catholic—has spurned the suggestion of the Legislature, and then he has convinced us of the truth of all that we have hitherto said regarding the Governor's bitterly hostile attitude towards the Catholic and Irish-American citizens of this State.

The insult which Governor Stoneman has offered to all people who honor the apostles of Christianity in this land, is greatly aggravated by the fact that the Masonic sect found in Governor Stoneman a most willing servant when he commanded a legal holiday to be kept during the visit of the bogus Knights to this coast last August, so that the masses of the people might be allowed to look upon the fortunate frauds who were feted, and lie inspired with awe at the gorgeous trappings of the tin-helmeted Templars and the sword-belted shoddypretty comprising that tomfoolery turn-out. The appointment of a legal holiday for the Masonic sect was a direct insult to every Catholic in California, as the MONITOR stated at the time, but, no doubt, the Governor's heart jumped for joy at having such a golden opportunity of such a scandalous scheme, and the papers that print such transparent untruths must be very badly off for "news," indeed.

—We call the attention of our readers to the report of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union Convention, which we publish on the 3d page of the present issue. The presence of a large number of Archbishops and Bishops gave this organization a power and a prominence never before achieved, and we hope that at the forthcoming Plenary Baltimore Council the Temperance cause will receive deserved recognition.

CIRCULAR FROM HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP ALEMANY, O. P.

REV. AND DEAR SIR:—In accordance with the suggestion contained in the encyclical letter of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, under date of June 25, 1884, you are directed to announce a Triduum to be held in your church in honor of the Blessed Mother of God, on the 6th, 7th and 8th of September.

Our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, gratefully grants to the faithful, for every visit to the church made during the Triduum, a partial indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines, and a plenary indulgence to be gained on the last day—to be obtained by the usual conditions of Confession and Communion, and prayer for the intention of Holy Church.

Prayers are directed to be offered for the Holy Redeemer. This indulgence is applicable to the souls detained in Purgatory. Permission is hereby granted for Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament for such evening of the Triduum.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

J. S. ALEMANY, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

—There is no truth whatever in the dispatch published in the papers last week relative to a reported conference between Mrs. Parnell and "a number of Catholic Bishops" with regard to turning the present Parliamentary contest to the advancement of Ireland's cause. The Bohemian who invented the story ought to know the Catholic Bishops of America better than to imagine that they could be made a party to such a scandalous scheme, and the papers that print such transparent untruths must be very badly off for "news," indeed.

—We call the attention of our readers to the report of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union Convention, which we publish on the 3d page of the present issue. The presence of a large number of Archbishops and Bishops gave this organization a power and a prominence never before achieved, and we hope that at the forthcoming Plenary Baltimore Council the Temperance cause will receive deserved recognition.

—The excitement over the Sanger school matter has developed several other cases where the school law has been violated by virulent anti-Catholic teachers. Mr. John Lyons was informed last week, by a Catholic lady in Oakland, that her children were unsettled by a friend at Bible-reading in Mrs. Johnson's class in the Tomkins' Grammar School. We hope some courageous Catholic in that city will unearth the facts in the case so we can assist those who criminally violate the law regarding sectarian teaching. The MONITOR is determined to have justice for the Catholics of California, and as sub school children and parents to give us the facts where cases of complaint exists, and we will stop this outrage of sectarianism under the cloak of freedom of conscience.

—Just as we had chronicled the above case, we received a letter from Gilroy, in which the writer says that a similar state of affairs exists there that have been transpiring under Sanger's administration. We urge upon the Gilroy Advocate, that Father Hudson handles the guilty teacher without gloves and stopped for a while, at least—the teaching of anti-Catholic doctrine under the pretence that it is historical truth. The writer of the communication referred to is mistaken in saying that Catholics have no remedy. The Code is open to all, and an injunction restraining the payment of pro rata taxes to any school where sectarian doctrines are taught, can be drawn to by any citizen, and will be sustained by the courts. Catholics in every part of California should get the law, read it, and make those who made it live up to it.

—Very few people have any idea of the progress which the Catholic Church is making in China, where there are at present thirty-three Vicariates Apostolic scattered over thirty-three provinces of that vast Eastern Empire. These Vicariates are under the ecclesiastical control of thirty-five Bishops and one Pro Vicar; they are managed by different Orders of the Church, among whom are French missionary Fathers from Paris, Lazarists and Jesuits, Italian Franciscans, and priests from the Foreign Missions of Milan; Spanish Augustinians and Dominicans; Belgian and Dutch priests from the Foreign Missions of the Scheut. The number and different nationalities of the missionaries is the best proof that the Church is doing good work in the way of conversion among the Chinese, although, for certain reasons, there is not much said regarding the progress of Christianity in the land of Confucius.

God's Power Practically Illustrated.

People who put their trust in Providence are seldom disappointed, and if the world possessed more of that spiritual power which is the mainspring of success, we know how the earthly paradise it was intended by Almighty God that it should be, than the pandemonium of sin, suffering, and sorrow which now unfortunately man—as well as man's ingratitude to God—have made it.

Outside the Catholic Church there is no such factor as faith known in the world, and Catholics have a regard for religion because it is "respectable" to be on the pewback of some Biblical nest. Whenever the weather suits, and the tailor, milliner, and dressmaker have made them "presentable" in the latest style of wearing apparel, they take themselves to church in order to be the cynosure of all eyes, and to excite the envy of their society "set." They listen languidly to the lollipop language which the well-paid preacher parcelates through his pearly teeth, and they have deep sighs at the ranks which they feel during the so-called "service," but which fashion forces them to endure as one of the penalties which must be paid for being Christians!

When the service is over, it would puzzle St. Peter to discover in what way the meeting of such non-Catholics resembles in the remotest degree Christianity as he and the other Apostles learned its doctrines from the divine lips of our Blessed Redeemer. "Without faith it is impossible to please God," says the inspired writer, and by no possible stretch of the imagination can faith be discovered as a factor in the fashionable audiences which occasionally frequent the cushioned pews of non-Catholic meeting-houses.

How different the reasons which attract Catholics to church! With true followers of Christ the weather has no place in preventing them from worshiping God not only on the Lord's Day, but on every day of the week. As the first golden tinge of the sun fall upon the earth, millions of Catholics wend their way through all sorts of weather—and in all parts of the world in order to practically manifest their faith by the true worship of God. They feel the force of the Apostolic declaration that "faith without good works is dead," hence they demonstrate their firm belief in, and their reliance upon, Almighty God, by giving him the best hours of the day and implacing His aid in all their undertakings.

The people who from inconvenience themselves—as the world would call it—are not generally known as leaders of fashion, in great society parlor, or as lations and dames whom mothers with many daughters artfully angle. No, they are, generally speaking, what the world calls obscure, but those hands are enrolled upon the Book of Life, by the Recording Angel, as the "five wise and five foolish virgins" who are finally to be known as "blessed."

Many and many a non-Catholic has been converted by the sight of feeble females, aged men, and little children going regularly to Mass every morning. Thinking people begin to reflect that there must be something supernatural in a religion which called people out from their comfortable homes to attend religious services in a cold and cheerless church. Many are induced to stay to know of the law. Dr. Brownson, who was there known by his real name, the Rev. George Ransom. He was then a young man of great ability and learning, and had been deprived of all his ecclesiastical faculties, suspended, and even excommunicated for violation of his priestly vows. After a few years he went to England, apparently regretful his evil course, and a penitent, did penance, and, after some time was permitted to exercise some ecclesiastical functions. For reasons best known to himself, he petitioned Parliament and had his name changed to Brownson. A Doctor of Divinity he never was. His old passions not having been completely subdued, he has once more met of the yoke of obedience to his ecclesiastical superiors, and has thus cut himself off from the Catholic Church. He is no longer a Catholic, and he certainly will be no gain to any denomination, belonging to that class of persons (as well described by the Protestant Dean Swift), whom the Pope, when he wends his garden, casts over the garden wall. Mr. Gustav Rossner, alias Rev. Dr. Brownson, alias Rev. Hypatius Lepsom, would have no objection to Catholic doctrine if the Pope would only relax Catholic discipline to their regard, by granting them such a dispensation as they themselves wish.

JAMES J. MORIARTY,
Pastor of St. John the Evangelist's Church,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Thus, another sectarian "sensation" is ruthlessly spoiled, another story which Presbyterian preachers would spread abroad with delight has been completely destroyed, and thus

"The wonderful fab which Clarin caught
Where Clyde's soft waters murmuring fall,
Was into the public market brought
Is only a "devil fish" after all!

—The California Christian Advocate very unwisely concludes that because nearly forty-four million copies of the Protestant version of the Scriptures have been issued by the American Bible Society, hence, religion is not declining. To show how false such reasoning is, it is only necessary to reflect that Christianity was born without the Bible; martyrs suffered for the faith before the Bible was known, and if there was not a single copy of a Protestant Bible in the universe today, there would be more genuine Christianity throughout the world than there is now, in spite of the Bibles issued by Bible Societies and sent into China and other countries, are used for papering houses, wrapping purposes, and in Chinese homes, as the Protestant Scripture, they only serve to make Christianity seem ridiculous in the eyes of pagans.—If the Bible alone could do any good, it would have long ago proved it to be a pagan on God's footstool today, but every sensible person in the country knows that all the Bibles in the world could not make even a single blind Chinaman to Christianity.

We learn from the Monitor in Rome that in the approaching Consistory which is set to take place next month, the Sovereign Pontiff will create and publish as Cardinals Mgr. Jacobini, Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Propagation; Mgr. Lavigerie, Assistant of the Holy Office; Mgr. Mocenni, Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, and Mgr. Vespa, secretary of the Sacred Congregation of the Council.

The Culmination of Political Aspirants.

The final outcome of each unseemly attacks upon the private character of citizens can have no other result than to debase the American name abroad, destroy the respect strangers may have for us as a people, and prevent competent men—who value their own self respect above political promotion—from coming forward to serve the people in any public capacity. As an Eastern paper rightfully says: "No matter how pure a man's character may be, or how useful his services as a citizen and patriot, as soon as he is called to a position of honor, or is nominated for some high office, his character is assailed and the foul gates of calumny are opened upon him. This vicious practice is so general as to be our national and shame, and calls loudly for correction and reform. Its chief source is the partisan press, and a political campaign is the occasion for its most malignant demonstrations. If ever there is a time for the character of our rulers and officials from the representatives of the political press, one would come to the conclusion that nearly all of them are the greatest scoundrels in the country. A man in private life may be conspicuous for his high character and honorable life, for his abilities and virtues, but, on account of these eminent qualifications, he is nominated for some public office, his character is at once assailed, disparaged, vituperate, and calumniate him. What is called "the freedom of the press" becomes practically a license to assassinate character and destroy reputation. This is a serious evil in the land. It is confined to no particular class or party exclusively, but it is more or less common in our political press of all parties, and those who profess to be reformers in our politics are among the most conspicuous illustrations of this shameful vice.

English Catholics in Ireland's Aliens.

The English people, generally speaking, are slow in affecting changes regarding fixed opinions, hence a large proportion of English Catholics still manifest the clinging to their Irish ancestors which they inherited from their forefathers. We are glad, however, to note that a better spirit is beginning to prevail in this respect, and we hope to see the day when our English Catholics the Irish are now regarded as a people who possess some constitutional rights in this world.

It is a hopeful sign to see a son of Frederick Lucas the founder of the London Tablet, and one of the most gifted among the Catholic laymen of his day—devoting his pen towards promulgating the principles of union between co-religionists of two races who have therefore been divided by the bigotry or misrule of their fathers, but who the more easily persuaded for their faith and defended of their constitutional rights. In a letter which recently appeared in a London paper, Edward Lucas urges the imperative necessity of an entente cordiale between English Catholics and the Irish Nationalist Party. Mr. Lucas laughs at the absurdity of tracing any connection between Socialistic principles and the aims of the Irish Nationalists, and quotes Mr. Parnell's words: "We do not, however, be clincher to the fallacy that the Irish leaders never discourage crime, but rather rejoice in its perpetration. "The cause of the Catholic Church," observes Mr. Lucas, "is bound up with the cause of Home Rule, and one of the reasons he gives for this belief is, that Home Rule, by restoring prosperity to the country, would check the outflow of destitute emigrants, and save from ruin innumerable souls. The significance of this latter is, that it is one of many of the same character which have recently been addressed to the English Catholic laypeople, with the object of showing them the growth of a better feeling towards the efforts of Ireland for self-government among a class which has for the most latter Irish Nationalists ever had Mr. Lucas himself, in the course of his letter, alludes to the fact of the number of Englishmen, who have joined the Nationalists, who are open to conviction on Irish matters, being now daily on the increase.

A Vital Question for Catholic Parents.

"It is wonderful, to say the least," says our namesake and valued contemporary, the Texas Monitor, "how few Catholic young men—the immature youth between eighteen and twenty-five or thirty—are seen at Mass on Sunday. Their mothers and sisters, if they have any, or at all events, their fathers are always in attendance and are there. In fact, a man, on entering a Catholic church in Galveston, during Mass, is struck with the disproportion between the sexes. Especially if he is bashful, on realizing how decidedly he is in the minority."

"Where are the young men? Why don't they go to church? They profess to be Catholics and, under certain circumstances, will swell with pride in their profession of faith. Of course not, and perhaps he will tell you the sermon is uninteresting. The fact of the matter is, that the average Catholic young man is like all average young men, fond of pleasure, of fishing, of gunning, hunting, and concerted as well. He likes to be courted to do his duty, and, as we don't succeed in taking things as they are and tell us what they ought to be, the boy of whom is to rest him, and cast him offerings."

A Plenary Council of the Archbishops and Bishops of Australia and New Zealand has been given authority, about ten years hence, probably in Sydney, as the presidency of the council has been vested in Archbishop Moran, whose diocese, we believe will be in seniority.

THE CROSS IN CALIFORNIA.

Foundation of the First Mission in Upper California. Indian Attack upon the Mission of Mission. Attempts upon the Life of Father Junipero Serra.

FIFTH ARTICLE.

In last week's article we incidentally mentioned the foundation of the Mission at San Diego on July 16th, 1769, but to many interesting incidents clinker around that ever memorable event that we deem them worthy of the attention of our readers, hence we propose to give a full account of the foundation of the first Catholic Mission in this State, as well detailed by Father Palou in his biography of Father Junipero Serra.

The 16th of July is a day of great civic and religious importance in the annals of Spain, that being the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, to whom the Spaniards have great devotion, and in its site the anniversary of the memorable triumph of the Christian Cross over the Moorish Crescent in the year 1212. On that day a large cross was planted and blessed, a rude altar was erected in front of it, and after the customary formula of taking possession of the land had been gone through, the mission was dedicated to St. Jamus—San Jago. Subsequently a few huts were erected, one of which was used for a chapel, but the work went on slowly, as the majority of the sailors, soldiers, and others who assisted the Franciscan Fathers in establishing the mission, were really averse to erecting from the scurvy, from which so many died while on the voyage from Loretto to Upper California.

When the buildings were partly constructed, the Indians began to approach through curiosity, but as no person could communicate with them, even through signs, nothing could be done for their conversion save to gain their friendship by giving them trinkets and clothing, which they invariably used as ornaments.

The Fathers were forcibly struck with one very peculiar feature in the conduct of the California Indians, not generally to be attributed to savages, and that was the repugnance which they manifested towards eating any of the food offered them. So marked was this trait, that even small children—as if impelled by some common instinct—would refuse sugar or sweetmeats as if they were so much poison, and if force or their mouths would immediately expect it. But the Indians seemed to possess a perfect favor for stealing clothing, and it was one thing to leave any article of wear without proper guard. Sheets from off the beds, and sails from off the vessel, were often purloined, until, finally, the sailors were compelled to fire upon the marauders in sheer self-preservation.

The feast of the Assumption, 1769, was an festival day for the Spanish Pioneers. All the Fathers prepared to celebrate it in their consistances permitted, but scarcely had Father Junipero Serra finished the celebration of Mass, are a vast concourse of Indians poured in upon the scene, and, armed with arrows, clubs and wooden axes, they began an onslaught upon the whites. The Fathers, seeing that the little garrison commenced firing indiscriminately, at which Father Vizcaino raised the mat that served for a door to his hut, in order to see what was the cause of the disturbance, when an arrow pierced his hand, and one of the Mexican servants rushed in, crying "Father, shelter yourself, for we are mortally wounded." The Father did so, and ere the last words were uttered, the poor fellow fell dead at his feet. The death was concealed from the Indians, who also concealed from the Fathers the number killed and wounded by the soldiers, for when the Indians found that they could not conquer the whites, they withdrew, and did not molest the Spaniards any more.

The Indians also seemed possessed of some superstitious dread regarding the Sacrament of baptism, as they would not allow any of their children to be baptized save in extreme cases, thinking that they would die shortly after receiving the rite, the moment the priest prepared to throw water upon their heads. After a while, however, the Fathers were able to speak the Indian tongue fluently, they had the happiness of baptizing more than a thousand Indians in the vicinity of the Mission.

While Father Junipero Serra was thus struggling to plant the faith in the hearts of the Indians, a rumor was in circulation that had gone north returned January 27th, 1770, with the news that the harbor of Monterey—which they went in search of—could not be found, but that the singular good fortune they had discovered a bay, which they had sailed after St. Francis.

This news brought joy to the heart of Father Serra, and, in a letter which he wrote to his known friend, Father Palou shortly afterwards, he describes the extreme joy he felt at the hand of Divine Providence in thus enabling him to carry out his long cherished design of converting the Indians of this country. Mr. Mother and Father Montenegro both gave the garrison gag bag some idea of the progress made by them in the conversion of the Indians, but when a much fruitful instinctive are so numerous, and so well disposed, there is but little hope of any reformation, and the public should be saved from what the world calls Pulpit Polly's "charmed sermons, sighing," especially when he has no right to let loose his tirade against the Catholic Church.

Let the sermon be ever so charming in its matter, and yet, if it be delivered in a tone of voice that is pitched in a high key, and is accompanied with a sweet smile, and with an attempt at winking the lids, the effect will be lost on the Indians, who will be disgusted at the sight of such a performance.

Attempt to Whitewash Professor Senger.

The committee appointed by the Board of Education to investigate the charges against Professor Senger of the Girls' High School had a very peculiar public meeting on Monday last, at which a remarkably transparent whitewash was attempted for Professor Senger, although he has been declared by the school officials appointed to investigate his case guilty of unprofessional conduct.

At its meeting last night the Board of Education refused to receive the whitewashing report made by a portion of the Committee, and the Committee was in a transparent face on its very face. Hence Professor Senger is still under charges, and his office until full, thorough, and impartial investigation can be made.

The Monitor refrains from saying anything regarding this case that would look like prejudging the evidence, upon which it has already caused. The Catholic body of this City, and the Catholic Clergy in the law strictly adhered to both by public school teachers and others, have earnestly asked for a thorough investigation of the charges against Professor Senger, and we hope that the Board will be devoted to the restoration of San Carlos Mission.

NEXT WEEK'S MONITOR.

Next week's MONITOR will contain a full account of the Pontifical Jubilee celebration in the Jesuit churches in connection with the centenary of Father Junipero Serra. It will be ornamented with a splendid portrait of Father Serra, and an illustration of the Jesuit Church in Rome. Subscribers who want extra copies of the MONITOR containing Catholic account of Father Serra, should at once leave their orders at all the newsdealers in the city and at the office of publication.

A SPECIAL TRAIN TO MONTEREY ON THE 28TH OF SEPTEMBER.

A new advertising column will be found the commencement of a special train to Monterey on Thursday morning, the 28th of September, for those persons who desire to participate in the centenary celebration of the death of Father Serra. It costs only $3 to go by this special train, and those who desire to participate in the celebration can take advantage of the offer to a special train, and yet be able to return the same day—this paper that will be memorable in the annals of California.

Programme of the Exercises at San Carlos Mission.

Interest is increasing in the approaching centenary celebration of the burial of Junipero Serra at Monterey, to be held at the Church of San Carlos Borromeo, which Father Serra built in his lifetime, and in which he lies buried. Bishop Mora will be present, and will officiate at the celebration of Pontifical Mass on Friday, September 5th. The sermon will be delivered by the Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, Archbishop of San Francisco, and Bishops Mora, Gross, J. S. Adam, V. J. Conaty, of Los Angeles, Junipero Serra de Mon Rev. Archbishop Gross, of Portland, Oregon, Chris Celebration. At Sacramento will be Rev. Father Kelly, S. J., Rev. Father Ward, Santa Clara, Rev. Father Kelly, Santa Clara,

Leisure Hours.

CAPT. N. FRANK, EDITOR

All readers of the MONITOR are cordially invited to send logical contributions and solutions for this department. Address all communications to

Capt. Jerome J. McGinn,
520 Bryant St., San Francisco, Cal.

—PRO-OBSOLETE—

ANSWERS TO LEISURE HOURS NO. 94.

94.—FRESHNESS
BEGRUDG
YLOGRIPH
ENTITLE BRUISE STILT
ORTS
POD
S

4.—Barkee's mill. 7th.—Barge-board.
8th.—SEASAW
SUFFER AYONET
MONOX PEPANE
SEMPER
TRIPOD

4th.—Barley-bird. 9th.—ATOM.
5th.—ARTICLE. 10th.—STORM
ELEANOR CHAPITE
ALBANY RAMPIN
NAMETIE SOCIETY
TRIFLING PILGRIM
CORTORT STENTOR
ENTRANCE BETRAY
6th.—Noah Webster's Unabridged Dictionary of Dangerous Words.
11th.—Tyre, rye, bery, Troy.
12th.—ROTGANET
OPERATION
REGISTER TRIPPED
PARSON
OTTER
POND
TOR
S

Puzzles in "Leisure Hours" No. 93 were solved by Arjeto, Sidney Lanier, "Sol," Will Dexter, S. A. M., Lark, Morning Star, Fisherskid, Hazel Kirke, Hanger, Theta, I. Screen, H. U. Lee Aldiz, James Pilgrim, Spinaway, Flora S., Bell, Clara Belle, Collector, Urbanus, L. C., Nellie Grant, and Timoleon.

BEST LIVES.—Arjeto, two solutions.

NUMBER CIV.

A BC DIAMONDS.

1.—1. In "Alonzo." 2. A bay. 3. Charges. 4. A degree of honor. 5. Motion picture. 6. A genus of plants. 7. Groups. 8. A range. 9. In "Amelia."

II.—1. In "Barnyard." 2. In Mamma. 3. A weight. 4. Pertaining to a light four-wheeled vehicle. 5. Five white bread. 7. To laugh. 8. Trinkets. 9. In "Boston Boy."

III.—1. In "Cock N. Pack." 2. Spaces of fathers. 3. To approach. 4. Vessel. 5. Unclothes with mothers. 6. Agitations. 7. A grain measure of Tripoli. 8. A French article. 9. In "Co. I. Rinna."

IV.—1. In "Doc Jr." 2. To turn. 3. A male name. 4. Parts of the head. 5. A Linnæan genus of mammals. 6. Dwarf. 7. Caltiks. 8. A genus of cuttlefish. 9. In "Dick Fox."

V.—1. In "Ed Ward." 2. Exhaust. 3. A wax match. 4. Wills. 5. The second day after Good Friday. 6. A species of sturgeon. 7. Again reasons. 8. Fitted. 9. In "El Urey."

VI.—1. In "Folsom." 2. Allotrium of a tree. 3. One of the five sorts of terms. 4. Slope. 5. Fancies. 6. To beat. 7. A peculiarity. 8. To view. 9. In "Fort Sumter."

VII.—1. In "Gaylord." 2. To injure. 3. Gage in a hedge. 4. Organ of motion. 5. Well open iron. 6. Trusting. 7. A lacunonous plant. 8. Ages. 9. In "Gen. Ross."

VIII.—1. In "Hiram." 2. Series. (Abbr.) 3. Fabrics. 4. Assessed. 5. Passage of blood. 6. Dwell. 7. Tables. 8. Executed. 9. In "Hra-tchet."

IX.—1. In "Ida." 2. Scissors. 3. Pick. 4. Earth worms. 5. A species of fac. 6. Silver ores of a yellowish color. 7. A landholder in a parish. 8. A strap. 9. Series. (Abbr.) 9. In "I. Spoke."

X.—1. In "Jot Sunset." 2. To incorporate. 3. Jumpies by fastery. 4. A certain fish. 5. Killed. 6. Crop. 7. Chides. 8. Certain nominal relations. 9. In "Jesse."

XI.—1. In "K. T. Did." 2. A chart. 3. Rock. 4. Spaces across the deck. 5. Nominant Indicative. 6. Ancient. 7. Ardent in a noble way. 8. Forbear. 9. In "Kate Greenaway."

XII.—1. In "Lillie." 2. To labor. 3. Ages. 4. Lard. 5. Ardent. 6. To place anew. 7. An article. 8. Sorrow. 9. In "Lal Tabasco."

XIII.—1. In "Fo Fo Fum." 2. Ancient. 3. Gloom. 4. A dwarf. 5. Relating to the middle ages. 6. A Malay idea. 7. Lodge. 8. National. (Abbr.) 9. In "Maud Lyra."

XIV.—1. In "Mamma." 2. In not. 3. Hits. 4. To wish. 5. The act of wishing. 6. Those who state. 7. Ice. 8. Excess. 9. In "Owen Ward."

XV.—1. In "Quiet." 2. An emission. 3. Epitrochanal. 4. To exceed in duration. 5. To revel in brightness. 6. Tapers. 7. An other. (Abbr.) 8. Ice. 9. In "Quad Lyra."

XVI.—1. In "Rosalie." 2. A color. 3. Jesses. 4. The act of resting. 5. Quiets. 6. Unlimited. 7. Imperfection. 8. Vestment. 9. Gallant. 9. In "Roseabas."

XIX.—1. In "Stan Slick." 2. Exposed. 3. Plank. 4. Glooms. 5. A rock cleft rock. 6. Bursal. 7. Endeavor. 8. Doctor of divinity. (Abbr.) 9. In "Susan Jane."

XX.—1. In "Tom A. Hawk." 2. To operate. 3. A sour in vinegar. 4. Combining of tides. 5. Component of plates overlapping like tiles. 6. Distant. 7. Belief. 8. Archer. 9. In "Tradition."

XXI. 1. In "Uncle Sam." 2. Eugenic. (Abbr.) 3. Surrounded. 4. Long hard. 5. Mammary. 6. Prejudice to the favor of. 7. A subject. 7. An aspect of the planets. 8. A lobule. 9. In "Uncle Ned."

XXII.—1. In "Vesper." 2. Cubous. (Abbr.) 3. U. R. Journalist, 1796-1800. 4. A years old to mention. 5. A number. 6. A camp. 7. Concave completely. 8. Gold. (Abbr.) 9. In "Kook."

XXIII.—1. In "Wilkie." 2. A part of the earth's crust. 3. Deadly. 4. One who wests. 5. An American plant. 6. Tribes. 7. Plants whose leaves are eatable. 8. Captain of a ship. 9. In "Wilkie."

XXIV.—1. In "Xerxes." 2. A pointed instrument for fastening clothes. 3. Ages. 4. A small bird. 5. Flutters. 6. A genus of plants. 6. Small steel instruments. 7. Loose moisture. 8. A genus of salmon. 9. In "Mystic."

XXV.—1. In "Yvon Troy." 2. Particles prefixed to Anglo-Saxon words. 3. The interior bark of a tree. 4. French orientalist and astronomer, 1646-1718. 5. A species of herbaceous. 6. A marine plant. 7. Flatters. 8. U. S. scholar, 1805-1845. 9. In "Proper."

XXVI.—1. In "Zero." 2. The flat part of a grate. 3. Toys. 4. Browning best upward in the middle. 5. The doctrine of the formation of living beings. 6. Part of a bridle. 7. Worn out horses. 8. Name of ship. 9. Virgan. (Abbr.) 9. In "Zebulon."

Pabodie, Ill. AVENO.

◆ Answers and Solvers in few weeks.

NUMBER CV.

1ST BOX.—BOW-LEGS.

Avenue.—1. Apache. 2. Village of the Nubians, made desolate in 1817 from the same land and still familiar. 3. One of an order of knights, founded at Gerusalem by Gerard of Amalfi, 1048. 4. Jewish the Saviour of men. 5. Unpleasant. Lower Row.—1. Capital of Judea. 2. Uncommon. Lower Row.—1. Capable of being formed into bulbous roots. 2. Having a cellular structure and an elastic internal tissue.

Diagonals, left to right, down.—Estrayed. (1.) Diagonals, left to right, up.—Allegation. (1.) Centrals.—Hostel to answer.

Pabodie, Ill. AVENO.

2ND BOX.—SUMMERALL.

To "Camille."

I am composed of 40 words and 23 letters.

The 14, 5, 1, 6, 27, 12, 9, 21, 18, is a model in the eastern part of the United States and on the Atlantic Ocean.

The 9, 10, 11, is a large river in the United States.

The 11, 16, 13, 4, 5, 7, 9, is a mathematical instrument.

The 21, 2, 17, 10, 9, 22, 7, is a city on the island of Sicily.

The 20, 8, 19, 9, 23, 3, is a mountain in the western part of Asia.

The 12, 17, 16, 8, 10, 11, 9, is a river in North Carolina.

The whole is an event which took place during the Mexican War. JIM G.

3RD BOX.—SCALES.

1. One who relates the achievements of distinguished personages. (9.) 2. Sickness. 3. Senseless. 4. The end of the tree. 5. Adieu. 6. To remove. New Orleans, La. MAGIC FIVE.

4TH BOX.—TRIPLE-LETTER CHANGE.

In "rifle balls."
In "cascade;"
In "mountain sense."
In "rudiments;"
The first you'll find to be a plant
Of the foreign countries;
The sec'd is ever valiant
From you-ths arguments;
The third are certain elements
Produced in chemistry,
And vital to beneficence
Or sale of exactly.

Rutherford, Ill. FOUR.

5TH BOX.—CHARADE. PRINCIPAL DIAMOND.

1. A letter. 2 A male stick name. 3. One of the family (4 initials). 4 Spirits of the departed. 5. Wails, sob. 6. Certain notes. 7. A letter.

Milwaukee, Wis. CHARADE.

A friend of mine and I, one day
Were walking in the weather,
He turned to me, and this did say,
As we passed a complex,

"I say there, I'd, canst get thy head
Into a barrel? pray tell?"
Aye! "Yes," I very quickly said,
For I thot all was well.

But he was joking,—"Oh the rogue—
And yet we'll laugh!
He always was such a brogue
In getting of his chaff.

"Well, well," said he, that's first I knew
You could yet a one, tee-
Like a barl; but you must show,
How that great thing you do."

Of course I had to take the joke,
No use in getting mad;
So, he made of laughter broke
Myself and rather bad.

Newark, N. J. HARVARD.

6TH BOX.—METAGRAM.

I am "a nobleman, or one royally descended (Portugal)"; change my head and I am "a diplomat of the lowest class (Spain)."

Sacramento, Cal. SYCAMORE.

7TH BOX.—SQUARE.

To "Lark."

1. A cold sole formerly current in Egypt. 2. One who makes bred. 3. To reform one something smaller. 4. Pits in an urn. 5. An animal found in Africa. 6. A cool, refreshing liquor. (8.)

Newark, N. J. I. SUGAM.

8TH BOX.—NUMERICAL.

There's neither like a hop—well, we will say One in the 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10-11-12-13-14-15-16-17-18-19-20-21-22-23-24-25-26-27-28-29-30-31-32-33-34-35-36-37-38-39-40-41-42-43-44-45-46-47-48-49-50-51-52-53-54-55-56-57-58-59-60-61-62-63-64-65-66-67-68-69-70-71-72-73-74-75-76-77-78-79-80-81-82-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91-92-93-94-95-96-97-98-99-100-101-102-103-104-105-106-107-108-109-110-111-112-113-114-115-116-117-118-119-120-121-122-123-124-125-126-127-128-129-130-131-132-133-134-135-136-137-138-139-140-141-142-143-144-145-146-147-148-149-150-151-152-153-154-155-156-157-158-159-160-161-162-163-164-165-166-167-168-169-170-171-172-173-174-175-176-177-178-179-180-181-182-183-184-185-186-187-188-189-190-191-192-193-194-195-196-197-198-199-200-201-202-203-204-205-206-207-208-209-210-211-212-213-214-215-216-217-218-219-220-221-222-223-224-225-226-227-228-229-230-231-232-233-234-235-236-237-238-239-240-241-242-243-244-245-246-247-248-249-250-251-252-253-254-255-256-257-258-259-260-261-262-263-264-265-266-267-268-269-270-271-272-273-274-275-276-277-278-279-280-281-282-283-284-285-286-287-288-289-290-291-292-293-294-295-296-297-298-299-300-301-302-303-304-305-306-307-308-309-310-311-312-313-314-315-316-317-318-319-320-321-322-323-324-325-326-327-328-329-330-331-332-333-334-335-336-337-338-339-340-341-342-343-344-345-346-347-348-349-350-351-352-353-354-355-356-357-358-359-360-361-362-363-364-365-366-367-368-369-370-371-372-373-374-375-376-377-378-379-380-381-382-383-384-385-386-387-388-389-390-391-392-393-394-395-396-397-398-399-400-401-402-403-404-405-406-407-408-409-410-411-412-413-414-415-416-417-418-419-420-421-422-423-424-425-426-427-428-429-430-431-432-433-434-435-436-437-438-439-440-441-442-443-444-445-446-447-448-449-450-451-452-453-454-455-456-457-458-459-460-461-462-463-464-465-466-467-468-469-470-471-472-473-474-475-476-477-478-479-480-481-482-483-484-485-486-487-488-489-490-491-492-493-494-495-496-497-498-499-500-501-502-503-504-505-506-507-508-509-510-511-512-513-514-515-516-517-518-519-520-521-522-523-524-525-526-527-528-529-530-531-532-533-534-535-536-537-538-539-540-541-542-543-544-545-546-547-548-549-550-551-552-553-554-555-556-557-558-559-560-561-562-563-564-565-566-567-568-569-570-571-572-573-574-575-576-577-578-579-580-581-582-583-584-585-586-587-588-589-590-591-592-593-594-595-596-597-598-599-600-601-602-603-604-605-606-607-608-609-610-611-612-613-614-615-616-617-618-619-620-621-622-623-624-625-626-627-628-629-630-631-632-633-634-635-636-637-638-639-640-641-642-643-644-645-646-647-648-649-650-651-652-653-654-655-656-657-658-659-660-661-662-663-664-665-666-667-668-669-670-671-672-673-674-675-676-677-678-679-680-681-682-683-684-685-686-687-688-689-690-691-692-693-694-695-696-697-698-699-700-701-702-703-704-705-706-707-708-709-710-711-712-713-714-715-716-717-718-719-720-721-722-723-724-725-726-727-728-729-730-731-732-733-734-735-736-737-738-739-740-741-742-743-744-745-746-747-748-749-750-751-752-753-754-755-756-757-758-759-760-761-762-763-764-765-766-767-768-769-770-771-772-773-774-775-776-777-778-779-780-781-782-783-784-785-786-787-788-789-790-791-792-793-794-795-796-797-798-799-800-801-802-803-804-805-806-807-808-809-810-811-812-813-814-815-816-817-818-819-820-821-822-823-824-825-826-827-828-829-830-831-832-833-834-835-836-837-838-839-840-841-842-843-844-845-846-847-848-849-850-851-852-853-854-855-856-857-858-859-860-861-862-863-864-865-866-867-868-869-870-871-872-873-874-875-876-877-878-879-880-881-882-883-884-885-886-887-888-889-890-891-892-893-894-895-896-897-898-899-900-901-902-903-904-905-906-907-908-909-910-911-912-913-914-915-916-917-918-919-920-921-922-923-924-925-926-927-928-929-930-931-932-933-934-935-936-937-938-939-940-941-942-943-944-945-946-947-948-949-950-951-952-953-954-955-956-957-958-959-960-961-962-963-964-965-966-967-968-969-970-971-972-973-974-975-976-977-978-979-980-981-982-983-984-985-986-987-988-989-990-991-992-993-994-995-996-997-998-999-1000-1001-1002-1003-1004-1005-1006-1007-1008-1009-1010-1011-1012-1013-1014-1015-1016-1017-1018-1019-1020-1021-1022-1023-1024-1025-1026-1027-1028-1029-1030-1031-1032-1033-1034-1035-1036-1037-1038-1039-1040-1041-1042-1043-1044-1045-1046-1047-1048-1049-1050-1051-1052-1053-1054-1055-1056-1057-1058-1059-1060-1061-1062-1063-1064-1065-1066-1067-1068-1069-1070-1071-1072-1073-1074-1075-1076-1077-1078-1079-1080-1081-1082-1083-1084-1085-1086-1087-1088-1089-1090-1091-1092-1093-1094-1095-1096-1097-1098-1099-1100-1101-1102-1103-1104-1105-1106-1107-1108-1109-1110-1111-1112-1113-1114-1115-1116-1117-1118-1119-1120-1121-1122-1123-1124-1125-1126-1127-1128-1129-1130-1131-1132-1133-1134-1135-1136-1137-1138-1139-1140-1141-1142-1143-1144-1145-1146-1147-1148-1149-1150-1151-1152-1153-1154-1155-1156-1157-1158-1159-1160-1161-1162-1163-1164-1165-1166-1167-1168-1169-1170-1171-1172-1173-1174-1175-1176-1177-1178-1179-1180-1181-1182-1183-1184-1185-1186-1187-1188-1189-1190-1191-1192-1193-1194-1195-1196-1197-1198-1199-1200-1201-1202-1203-1204-1205-1206-1207-1208-1209-1210-1211-1212-1213-1214-1215-1216-1217-1218-1219-1220-1221-1222-1223-1224-1225-1226-1227-1228-1229-1230-1231-1232-1233-1234-1235-1236-1237-1238-1239-1240-1241-1242-1243-1244-1245-1246-1247-1248-1249-1250-1251-1252-1253-1254-1255-1256-1257-1258-1259-1260-1261-1262-1263-1264-1265-1266-1267-1268-1269-1270-1271-1272-1273-1274-1275-1276-1277-1278-1279-1280-1281-1282-1283-1284-1285-1286-1287-1288-1289-1290-1291-1292-1293-1294-1295-1296-1297-1298-1299-1300-1301-1302-1303-1304-1305-1306-1307-1308-1309-1310-1311-1312-1313-1314-1315-1316-1317-1318-1319-1320-1321-1322-1323-1324-1325-1326-1327-1328-1329-1330-1331-1332-1333-1334-1335-1336-1337-1338-1339-1340-1341-1342-1343-1344-1345-1346-1347-1348-1349-1350-1351-1352-1353-1354-1355-1356-1357-1358-1359-1360-1361-1362-1363-1364-1365-1366-1367-1368-1369-1370-1371-1372-1373-1374-1375-1376-1377-1378-1379-1380-1381-1382-1383-1384-1385-1386-1387-1388-1389-1390-1391-1392-1393-1394-1395-1396-1397-1398-1399-1400-1401-1402-1403-1404-1405-1406-1407-1408-1409-1410-1411-1412-1413-1414-1415-1416-1417-1418-1419-1420-1421-1422-1423-1424-1425-1426-1427-1428-1429-1430-1431-1432-1433-1434-1435-1436-1437-1438-1439-1440-1441-1442-1443-1444-1445-1446-1447-1448-1449-1450-1451-1452-1453-1454-1455-1456-1457-1458-1459-1460-1461-1462-1463-1464-1465-1466-1467-1468-1469-1470-1471-1472-1473-1474-1475-1476-1477-1478-1479-1480-1481-1482-1483-1484-1485-1486-1487-1488-1489-1490-1491-1492-1493-1494-1495-1496-1497-1498-1499-1500-1501-1502-1503-1504-1505-1506-1507-1508-1509-1510-1511-1512-1513-1514-1515-1516-1517-1518-1519-1520-1521-1522-1523-1524-1525-1526-1527-1528-1529-1530-1531-1532-1533-1534-1535-1536-1537-1538-1539-1540-1541-1542-1543-1544-1545-1546-1547-1548-1549-1550-1551-1552-1553-1554-1555-1556-1557-1558-1559-1560-1561-1562-1563-1564-1565-1566-1567-1568-1569-1570-1571-1572-1573-1574-1575-1576-1577-1578-1579-1580-1581-1582-1583-1584-1585-1586-1587-1588-1589-1590-1591-1592-1593-1594-1595-1596-1597-1598-1599-1600-1601-1602-1603-1604-1605-1606-1607-1608-1609-1610-1611-1612-1613-1614-1615-1616-1617-1618-1619-1620-1621-1622-1623-1624-1625-1626-1627-1628-1629-1630-1631-1632-1633-1634-1635-1636-1637-1638-1639-1640-1641-1642-1643-1644-1645-1646-1647-1648-1649-1650-1651-1652-1653-1654-1655-1656-1657-1658-1659-1660-1661-1662-1663-1664-1665-1666-1667-1668-1669-1670-1671-1672-1673-1674-1675-1676-1677-1678-1679-1680-1681-1682-1683-1684-1685-1686-1687-1688-1689-1690-1691-1692-1693-1694-1695-1696-1697-1698-1699-1700-1701-1702-1703-1704-1705-1706-1707-1708-1709-1710-1711-1712-1713-1714-1715-1716-1717-1718-1719-1720-1721-1722-1723-1724-1725-1726-1727-1728-1729-1730-1731-1732-1733-1734-1735-1736-1737-1738-1739-1740-1741-1742-1743-1744-1745-1746-1747-1748-1749-1750-1751-1752-1753-1754-1755-1756-1757-1758-1759-1760-1761-1762-1763-1764-1765-1766-1767-1768-1769-1770-1771-1772-1773-1774-1775-1776-1777-1778-1779-1780-1781-1782-1783-1784-1785-1786-1787-1788-1789-1790-1791-1792-1793-1794-1795-1796-1797-1798-1799-1800-1801-1802-1803-1804-1805-1806-1807-1808-1809-1810-1811-1812-1813-1814-1815-1816-1817-1818-1819-1820-1821-1822-1823-1824-1825-1826-1827-1828-1829-1830-1831-1832-1833-1834-1835-1836-1837-1838-1839-1840-1841-1842-1843-1844-1845-1846-1847-1848-1849-1850-1851-1852-1853-1854-1855-1856-1857-1858-1859-1860-1861-1862-1863-1864-1865-1866-1867-1868-1869-1870-1871-1872-1873-1874-1875-1876-1877-1878-1879-1880-1881-1882-1883-1884-1885-1886-1887-1888-1889-1890-1891-1892-1893-1894-1895-1896-1897-1898-1899-1900-1901-1902-1903-1904-1905-1906-1907-1908-1909-1910-1911-1912-1913-1914-1915-1916-1917-1918-1919-1920-1921-1922-1923-1924-1925-1926-1927-1928-1929-1930-1931-1932-1933-1934-1935-1936-1937-1938-1939-1940-1941-1942-1943-1944-1945-1946-1947-1948-1949-1950-1951-1952-1953-1954-1955-1956-1957-1958-1959-1960-1961-1962-1963-1964-1965-1966-1967-1968-1969-1970-1971-1972-1973-1974-1975-1976-1977-1978-1979-1980-1981-1982-1983-1984-1985-1986-1987-1988-1989-1990-1991-1992-1993-1994-1995-1996-1997-1998-1999-2000-2001-2002-2003-2004-2005-2006-2007-2008-2009-2010-2011-2012-2013-2014-2015-2016-2017-2018-2019-2020-2021-2022-2023-2024-2025-2026-2027-2028-2029-2030-2031-2032-2033-2034-2035-2036-2037-2038-2039-2040-2041-2042-2043-2044-2045-2046-2047-2048-2049-2050-2051-2052-2053-2054-2055-2056-2057-2058-2059-2060-2061-2062-2063-2064-2065-2066-2067-2068-2069-2070-2071-2072-2073-2074-2075-2076-2077-2078-2079-2080-2081-2082-2083-2084-2085-2086-2087-2088-2089-2090-2091-2092-2093-2094-2095-2096-2097-2098-2099-2100-2101-2102-2103-2104-2105-2106-2107-2108-2109-2110-2111-2112-2113-2114-2115-2116-2117-2118-2119-2120-2121-2122-2123-2124-2125-2126-2127-2128-2129-2130-2131-2132-2133-2134-2135-2136-2137-2138-2139-2140-2141-2142-2143-2144-2145-2146-2147-2148-2149-2150-2151-2152-2153-2154-2155-2156-2157-2158-2159-2160-2161-2162-2163-2164-2165-2166-2167-2168-2169-2170-2171-2172-2173-2174-2175-2176-2177-2178-2179-2180-2181-2182-2183-2184-2185-2186-2187-2188-2189-2190-2191-2192-2193-2194-2195-2196-2197-2198-2199-2200-2201-2202-2203-2204-2205-2206-2207-2208-2209-2210-2211-2212-2213-2214-2215-2216-2217-2218-2219-2220-2221-2222-2223-2224-2225-2226-2227-2228-2229-2230-2231-2232-2233-2234-2235-2236-2237-2238-2239-2240-2241-2242-2243-2244-2245-2246-2247-2248-2249-2250-2251-2252-2253-2254-2255-2256-2257-2258-2259-2260-2261-2262-2263-2264-2265-2266-2267-2268-2269-2270-2271-2272-2273-2274-2275-2276-2277-2278-2279-2280-2281-2282-2283-2284-2285-2286-2287-2288-2289-2290-2291-2292-2293-2294-2295-2296-2297-2298-2299-2300-2301-2302-2303-2304-2305-2306-2307-2308-2309-2310-2311-2312-2313-2314-2315-2316-2317-2318-2319-2320-2321-2322-2323-2324-2325-2326-2327-2328-2329-2330-2331-2332-2333-2334-2335-2336-2337-2338-2339-2340-2341-2342-2343-2344-2345-2346-2347-2348-2349-2350-2351-2352-2353-2354-2355-2356-2357-2358-2359-2360-2361-2362-2363-2364-2365-2366-2367-2368-2369-2370-2371-2372-2373-2374-2375-2376-2377-2378-2379-2380-2381-2382-2383-2384-2385-2386-2387-2388-2389-2390-2391-2392-2393-2394-2395-2396-2397-2398-2399-2400-2401-2402-2403-2404-2405-2406-2407-2408-2409-2410-2411-2412-2413-2414-2415-2416-2417-2418-2419-2420-2421-2422-2423-2424-2425-2426-2427-2428-2429-2430-2431-2432-2433-2434-2435-2436-2437-2438-2439-2440-2441-2442-2443-2444-2445-2446-2447-2448-2449-2450-2451-2452-2453-2454-2455-2456-2457-2458-2459-2460-2461-2462-2463-2464-2465-2466-2467-2468-2469-2470-2471-2472-2473-2474-2475-2476-2477-2478-2479-2480-2481-2482-2483-2484-2485-2486-2487-2488-2489-2490-2491-2492-2493-2494-2495-2496-2497-2498-2499-2500-2501-2502-2503-2504-2505-2506-2507-2508-2509-2510-2511-2512-2513-2514-2515-2516-2517-2518-2519-2520-2521-2522-2523-2524-2525-2526-2527-2528-2529-2530-2531-2532-2533-2534-2535-2536-2537-2538-2539-2540-2541-2542-2543-2544-2545-2546-2547-2548-2549-2550-2551-2552-2553-2554-2555-2556-2557-2558-2559-2560-2561-2562-2563-2564-2565-2566-2567-2568-2569-2570-2571-2572-2573-2574-2575-2576-2577-2578-2579-2580-2581-2582-2583-2584-2585-2586-2587-2588-2589-2590-2591-2592-2593-2594-2595-2596-2597-2598-2599-2600-2601-2602-2603-2604-2605-2606-2607-2608-2609-2610-2611-2612-2613-2614-2615-2616-2617-2618-2619-2620-2621-2622-2623-2624-2625-2626-2627-2628-2629-2630-2631-2632-2633-2634-2635-2636-2637-2638-2639-2640-2641-2642-2643-2644-2645-2646-2647-2648-2649-2650-2651-2652-2653-2654-2655-2656-2657-2658-2659-2660-2661-2662-2663-2664-2665-2666-2667-2668-2669-2670-2671-2672-2673-2674-2675-2676-2677-2678-2679-2680-2681-2682-2683-2684-2685-2686-2687-2688-2689-2690-2691-2692-2693-2694-2695-2696-2697-2698-2699-2700-2701-2702-2703-2704-2705-2706-2707-2708-2709-2710-2711-2712-2713-2714-2715-2716-2717-2718-2719-2720-2721-2722-2723-2724-2725-2726-2727-2728-2729-2730-2731-2732-2733-2734-2735-2736-2737-2738-2739-2740-2741-2742-2743-2744-2745-2746-2747-2748-2749-2750-2751-2752-2753-2754-2755-2756-2757-2758-2759-2760-2761-2762-2763-2764-2765-2766-2767-2768-2769-2770-2771-2772-2773-2774-2775-2776-2777-2778-2779-2780-2781-2782-2783-2784-2785-2786-2787-2788-2789-2790-2791-2792-2793-2794-2795-2796-2797-2798-2799-2800-2801-2802-2803-2804-2805-2806-2807-2808-2809-2810-2811-2812-2813-2814-2815-2816-2817-2818-2819-2820-2821-2822-2823-2824-2825-2826-2827-2828-2829-2830-2831-2832-2833-2834-2835-2836-2837-2838-2839-2840-2841-2842-2843-2844-2845-2846-2847-2848-2849-2850-2851-2852-2853-2854-2855-2856-2857-2858-2859-2860-2861-2862-2863-2864-2865-2866-2867-2868-2869-2870-2871-2872-2873-2874-2875-2876-2877-2878-2879-2880-2881-2882-2883-2884-2885-2886-2887-2888-2889-2890-2891-2892-2893-2894-2895-2896-2897-2898-2899-2900-2901-2902-2903-2904-2905-2906-2907-2908-2909-2910-2911-2912-2913-2914-2915-2916-2917-2918-2919-2920-2921-2922-2923-2924-2925-2926-2927-2928-2929-2930-2931-2932-2933-2934-2935-2936-2937-2938-2939-2940-2941-2942-2943-2944-2945-2946-2947-2948-2949-2950-2951-2952-2953-2954-2955-2956-2957-2958-2959-2960-2961-2962-2963-2964-2965-2966-2967-2968-2969-2970-2971-2972-2973-2974-2975-2976-2977-2978-2979-2980-2981-2982-2983-2984-2985-2986-2987-2988-2989-2990-2991-2992-2993-2994-2995-2996-2997-2998-2999-3000-3001-3002-3003-3004-3005-3006-3007-3008-3009-3010-3011-3012-3013-3014-3015-3016-3017-3018-3019-3020-3021-3022-3023-3024-3025-3026-3027-3028-3029-3030-3031-3032-3033-3034-3035-3036-3037-3038-3039-3040-3041-3042-3043-3044-3045-3046-3047-3048-3049-3050-3051-3052-3053-3054-3055-3056-3057-3058-3059-3060-3061-3062-3063-3064-3065-3066-3067-3068-3069-3070-3071-3072-3073-3074-3075-3076-3077-3078-3079-3080-3081-3082-3083-3084-3085-3086-3087-3088-3089-3090-3091-3092-3093-3094-3095-3096-3097-3098-3099-3100-3101-3102-3103-3104-3105-3106-3107-3108-3109-3110-3111-3112-3113-3114-3115-3116-3117-3118-3119-3120-3121-3122-3123-3124-3125-3126-3127-3128-3129-3130-3131-3132-3133-3134-3135-3136-3137-3138-3139-3140-3141-3142-3143-3144-3145-3146-3147-3148-3149-3150-3151-3152-3153-3154-3155-3156-3157-3158-3159-3160-3161-3162-3163-3164-3165-3166-3167-3168-3169-3170-3171-3172-3173-3174-3175-3176-3177-3178-3179-3180-3181-3182-3183-3184-3185-3186-3187-3188-3189-3190-3191-3192-3193-3194-3195-3196-3197-3198-3199-3200-3201-3202-3203-3204-3205-3206-3207-3208-3209-3210-3211-3212-3213-3214-3215-3216-3217-3218-3219-3220-3221-3222-3223-3224-3225-3226-3227-3228-3229-3230-3231-3232-3233-3234-3235-3236-3237-3238-3239-3240-3241-3242-3243-3244-3245-3246-3247-3248-3249-3250-3251-3252-3253-3254-3255-3256-3257-3258-3259-3260-3261-3262-3263-3264-3265-3266-3267-3268-3269-3270-3271-3272-3273-3274-3275-3276-3277-3278-3279-3280-3281-3282-3283-3284-3285-3286-3287-3288-3289-3290-3291-3292-3293-3294-3295-3296-3297-3298-3299-3300-3301-3302-3303-3304-3305-3306-3307-3308-3309-3310-3311-3312-3313-3314-3315-3316-3317-3318-3319-3320-3321-3322-3323-3324-3325-3326-3327-3328-3329-3330-3331-3332-3333-3334-3335-3336-3337-3338-3339-3340-3341-3342-3343-3344-3345-3346-3347-3348-3349-3350-3351-3352-3353-3354-3355-3356-3357-3358-3359-3360-3361-3362-3363-3364-3365-3366-3367-3368-3369-3370-3371-3372-3373-3374-3375-3376-3377-3378-3379-3380-3381-3382-3383-3384-3385-3386-3387-3388-3389-3390-3391-3392-3393-3394-3395-3396-3397-3398-3399-3400-3401-3402-3403-3404-3405-3406-3407-3408-3409-3410-3411-3412-3413-3414-3415-3416-3417-3418-3419-3420-3421-3422-3423-3424-3425-3426-3427-3428-3429-3430-3431-3432-3433-3434-3435-3436-3437-3438-3439-3440-3441-3442-3443-3444-3445-3446-3447-3448-3449-3450-3451-3452-3453-3454-3455-3456-3457-3458-3459-3460-3461-3462-3463-3464-3465-3466-3467-3468-3469-3470-3471-3472-3473-3474-3475-3476-3477-3478-3479-3480-3481-3482-3483-3484-3485-3486-3487-3488-3489-3490-3491-3492-3493-3494-3495-3496-3497-3498-3499-3500-3501-3502-3503-3504-3505-3506-3507-3508-3509-3510-3511-3512-3513-3514-3515-3516-3517-3518-3519-3520-3521-3522-3523-3524-3525-3526-3527-3528-3529-3530-3531-3532-3533-3534-3535-3536-3537-3538-3539-3540-3541-3542-3543-3544-3545-3546-3547-3548-3549-3550-3551-3552-3553-3554-3555-3556-3557-3558-3559-3560-3561-3562-3563-3564-3565-3566-3567-3568-3569-3570-3571-3572-3573-3574-3575-3576-3577-3578-3579-3580-3581-3582-3583-3584-3585-3586-3587-3588-3589-3590-3591-3592-3593-3594-3595-3596-3597-3598-3599-3600-3601-3602-3603-3604-3605-3606-3607-3608-3609-3610-3611-3612-3613-3614-3615-3616-3617-3618-3619-3620-3621-3622-3623-3624-3625-3626-3627-3628-3629-3630-3631-3632-3633-3634-3635-3636-3637-3638-3639-3640-3641-3642-3643-3644-3645-3646-3647-3648-3649-3650-3651-3652-3653-3654-3655-3656-3657-3658-3659-3660-3661-3662-3663-3664-3665-3666-3667-3668-3669-3670-3671-3672-3673-3674-3675-3676-3677-3678-3679-3680-3681-3682-3683-3684-3685-3686-3687-3688-3689-3690-3691-3692-3693-3694-3695-3696-3697-3698-3699-3700-3701-3702-3703-3704-3705-3706-3707-3708-3709-3710-3711-3712-3713-3714-3715-3716-3717-3718-3719-3720-3721-3722-3723-3724-3725-3726-3727-3728-3729-3730-3731-3732-3733-3734-3735-3736-3737-3738-3739-3740-3741-3742-3743-3744-3745-3746-3747-3748-3749-3750-3751-3752-3753-3754-3755-3756-3757-3758-3759-3760-3761-3762-3763-3764-3765-3766-3767-3768-3769-3770-3771-3772-3773-3774-3775-3776-3777-3778-3779-3780-3781-3782-3783-3784-3785-3786-3787-3788-3789-3790-3791-3792-3793-3794-3795-3796-3797-3798-3799-3800-3801-3802-3803-3804-3805-3806-3807-3808-3809-3810-3811-3812-3813-3814-3815-3816-3817-3818-3819-3820-3821-3822-3823-3824-3825-3826-3827-3828-3829-3830-3831-3832-3833-3834-3835-3836-3837-3838-3839-3840-3841-3842-3843-3844-3845-3846-3847-3848-3849-3850-3851-3852-3853-3854-3855-3856-3857-3858-3859-3860-3861-3862-3863-3864-3865-3866-3867-3868-3869-3870-3871-3872-3873-3874-3875-3876-3877-3878-3879-3880-3881-3882-3883-3884-3885-3886-3887-3888-3889-3890-3891-3892-3893-3894-3895-3896-3897-3898-3899-3900-3901-3902-3903-3904-3905-3906-3907-3908-3909-3910-3911-3912-3913-3914-3915-3916-3917-3918-3919-3920-3921-3922-3923-3924-3925-3926-3927-3928-3929-3930-3931-3932-3933-3934-3935-3936-3937-3938-3939-3940-3941-3942-3943-3944-3945-3946-3947-3948-3949-3950-3951-3952-3953-3954-3955-3956-3957-3958-3959-3960-3961-3962-3963-3964-3965-3966-3967-3968-3969-3970-3971-3972-3973-3974-3975-3976-3977-3978-3979-3980-3981-3982-3983-3984-3985-3986-3987-3988-3989-3990-3991-3992-3993-3994-3995-3996-3997-3998-3999-4000-4001-4002-4003-4004-4005-4006-4007-4008-4009-4010-4011-4012-4013-4014-4015-4016-4017-4018-4019-4020-4021-4022-4023-4024-4025-4026-4027-4028-4029-4030-4031-4032-4033-4034-4035-4036-4037-4038-4039-4040-4041-4042-4043-4044-4045-4046-4047-4048-4049-4050-4051-4052-4053-4054-4055-4056-4057-4058-4059-4060-4061-4062-4063-4064-4065-4066-4067-4068-4069-4070-4071-4072-4073-4074-4075-4076-4077-4078-4079-4080-4081-4082-4083-4084-4085-4086-4087-4088-4089-4090-4091-4092-4093-4094-4095-4096-4097-4098-4099-4100-4101-4102-4103-4104-4105-4106-4107-4108-4109-4110-4111-4112-4113-4114-4115-4116-4117-4118-4119-4120-4121-4122-4123-4124-4125-4126-4127-4128-4129-4130-4131-4132-4133-4134-4135-4136-4137-4138-4139-4140-4141-4142-4143-4144-4145-4146-4147-4148-4149-4150-4151-4152-4153-4154

Catholic Canada.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES AT THE CONVENT OF JESUS AND MARY, MOUNTELEGA.

Taking the Veil—Four Young Ladies Make their Profession and Twenty-one Their Public Vows—The Clergymen Present at the Ceremonies—The Music by the Sisters.

The Montreal True Witness gives the following interesting particulars regarding the reception of Novices and Sisters into the Order of the Most Holy Names, which has numerous schools and academies in this State, Oregon, and Washington territory.

The impressive ceremony of the taking of the Veil was performed at the Convent of Jesus and Mary, Hochelaga, recently, the Rev. Father Desjardins, S. J., officiating. There were also present the Rev. Fathers Fortier, Dorval and Caisse. The following are the names of the young ladies who took the veil:—

Miss Ellen McGovern, in religion St. Mary Benedict; Miss Malvina Dupuis, in religion Sist. Jean l'Aumonier; Malvina Dagenais, in religion St. Marie de Bon Secours; Ernestine Palardy, in religion St. Marguerite de Cortone; Adeline Duplessis in religion St. Marie Aspirante; Aglae Blanchette, in religion St. Marie Darie; Aulda Pepson, in religion St. Marie Ulpienne; Vitalie Maynard, in religion St. Marie Liboire; Elmire Routhier in religion St. Marie Zenobie.

When the impressive ceremony was over, thirty-three young ladies, coming from the different houses of the Order scattered over Canada and the United States, applied for admission, and were received into the institution by the worthy and highly esteemed Father. Father Desjardins then delivered a brilliant sermon on the virtues which should be practiced during the novitiate, and his eloquent remarks were duly appreciated by his pious listeners. The same Rev. Father also conducted a ten days' retreat to the Converts, which was participated in by three hundred Nuns from the different houses of the Order, who generally unite for a couple of weeks during the vacation. The retreat closed yesterday morning and was immediately followed by the imposing ceremony of the taking of the veil.

Again this morning the Convent of Jesus and Mary at Hochelaga, which has long and justly enjoyed a world-wide reputation for its excellence, and which is near and always spreading its usefulness over the entire continent, was the scene of another impressive ceremony, when the Right Rev. Bishop of Montreal received the first vows of four and the final vows of twenty-one young ladies. His Lordship was assisted by the Rev. Father Tassé, curé of Longueuil, and Rev. Father Jasmin, curé of Beauharnois, among other members of the clergy present being Rev. Father J. C. Colin, chaplain of the Convent; Rev. Father P. V. Hortan, chaplain of the Congregation of Notre Dame; Rev. Father Piché, superior of the Levis College; Rev. Father J. Prémont, curé of Boucherville; Rev. Father J. R. Primeau, curé d'Archaille; Rev. Father D. Caisse, curé de St. Sulpice; Rev. S. P. Lemoyne, curé of Notre Dame de Bon Conseil; Rev. Father L. Dubreuil, curé of St. Hilaire; Rev. Father C. Dupuis, Rev. Father Donnelly, of the Bishop's palace; Rev. Father Lapointe; Rev. Father E. Mireau, curé of St. Barthélemi; Rev. Father Dorval, curé of Repentigny; Rev. Father Adam, curé of Hochelaga; Rev. Father St. Louis, curé of Varennes and Rev. Father Pierre.

The following are the names of the young ladies who made their religious profession:

First Vows—Sister Marie de St. Joseph, Sister Marie Gonzague, Sister Marie Lydie, Sister Marie Gonzague.

Final Vows—Sister Marie Ernest, Sister Marie Ste. Croix, Sister Marie Louis, Sister Marie Gonzague de Sienne, Sister Marie Camille de Lellis, Sister Marie de Bonne Espérance, Sister Marie Justine, Sister Marie Francois Xavier, Sister Marie Bonaventure, Sister Marie Gonzague, Sister Marie de Bonne Espérance, Sister Marie Pierre Damien, Sister Marie Aglee, Sister Marie Joseph d'Arbi, Sister Marie Guillaume, Sister Marie Cesaire, Sister Marie Clotilde, Sister Marie Bernard, Sister Marie Lauzon, Sister Marie Agelee.

The music on these occasions was under the direction of the Sisters of the Convent, and was executed in a manner rarely equalled. His Eminence Cardinal Lavigerie was present at the ceremonies, and in about to be translated into Italian.

—An important work has just been brought to successful conclusion in Rome, by the complete removal of the lantern cupola of the dome of St. Peter's Church. It has occupied twelve years, and has cost over 200,000 lire (£8,000). The original covering was applied to the dome in an imperfect fashion, which made continuous repairs a necessity; and at last it was determined to strip off the whole envelope and substitute a new one on a better system. New lead was imported from Spain and mixed with the old lead, in the proportion of one part old to two parts new. The total weight of the new cover is given at 354,305 kilograms and if it were spread out flat it would occupy an area of 6,152 square metres, or about an acre and a half.

—Monsignor Lynch, evening at 6:20 o'clock the Rev. John Sylvester Collins, O. P., died at the Dominican convent, South Minneapolis, of heart disease, after a long and painful illness, the deceased having been affected by the malady for many years. Father Collins was born at Somerset, Perry county, Ohio, forty-two years ago. He was educated at St. Joseph's college, same place, where, in 1860, he made religious vows as a Dominican and was ordained in 1865 by the late Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati. He was chaplain of the Catholic Protectory at New York, was subsequently stationed at Newark, N. J., and came to Minneapolis in 1878, where he has remained ever since, esteemed and respected by all who knew him.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

CATHOLIC NEWS IN BRIEF.

—There are 2370 parochial schools in this country.

—Archbishop Kenrick of St. Louis will be 79 to-morrow.

—The Pope will in a few days enter a formal protest against the French divorce law.

—Archbishop Ryan was duly installed on Wednesday morning as Archbishop of the See of Philadelphia.

—Mr. Father Sherman, S. J., Tecumseh's son, was the guest of Marquette College, Milwaukee, recently.

—Bishop McEvilly will consecrate Bishop-elect Healy, and Bishop Carr will preach the sermon on the occasion.

—Within this month two Boston churches will be consecrated, St. Francis de Sales, Charlestown, on the 17th, and St Augustine's, South Boston, on the 31st.

—Twenty novices took the white veil and fourteen sisters received the black veil of the order of Sisters of Christian Charity at Wilkesberre, Pa., on the 4th.

—The Capuchin Father Massage, the archbishop of Vienna and Sevilla, and an Italian prelate will be made cardinals in September.

—Rev. William Talbot (Father Joseph) died at the Trappist Monastery, Tracadie, N. S., recently, aged 66. He was a native of Quebec.

—Rev. Father Delsage, O. M. I., for the past thirty-five years a missionary on the Ontonagon, at the Desert and in the Hudson Bay country, B. A., died at Ottawa on the 1st.

—Abbe Oliviner, one of the parish priests of Arles, has lost his life while fulfilling his parochial duties amongst the cholera stricken patients of that town. Mgr. Forcade, Archbishop of Aix, officiated at the funeral, afterwards spending several hours in the cholera wards of the hospital.

—On Sunday the 17th inst., the Monastery of Mount St. Joseph, near Dubuque, a branch from Mount Mallerey—was consecrated by Archbishop Cretin, Bishop O'Connor, Bishop Hogan, and the Abbot of Mallerey, in France, took part in the ceremony.

—The sister-in-law of Right Rev. Bishop Woodlock died in Dublin on the 8th inst. and her funeral took place on the 15th from St. Patrick's Church in that city, Bishop Woodlock officiating at the altar. Mrs. Woodlock was a sister of the late Rev. Francis Mahony, "Father Prout" of immortal literary fame.

—One of the largest and most perfectly appointed parochial schools in the United States is that connected with the parish of the Immaculate Conception in Fortieth Street, New York City, the Rev. John Edward Drumgoole, Pastor. There are over 2,500 pupils, and about forty teachers.

—Says the Milwaukee Catholic Citizen: St. Mary's Church, Brighton, Ottawa Co., was struck by lightning last week, and burned to the ground. Loss between $20,000 and $30,000; no insurance. Some carelessness on the part of any congregation to leave their churches and school houses without any insurance.

—Two striking conversions are reported in a Neapolitan journal, Il Mattino. A cavalry captain, who was also an instructor at the military school in Modena, has renounced the prospect of a brilliant career in order to enter the seminary of Palermo; and a gentleman holding a prominent social position has attached himself to the seminary in Egnazia.

—The thirty-first anniversary of the dedication of St. Johns Cathedral, Winona, was duly observed on the 31. This edifice was dedicated in the year 1853 by Archbishop Bonnet, then papal nuncio, and Bishop Hughes of New York preached the sermon and Archbishop Purcell and prelates, at which Archbishop Purcell pontificated.

—Twenty-two "Redemptorists" who have "shaken from the suburbs of Vienna to the Central Cemetery. This tomb of the dead musicians are intended to be grouped around a monument which is to be erected to the memory of Mozart. The resting-place of the remains of Mozart himself is unknown.

—His Eminence Cardinal Lavigerie has left the island of Capri for Tunis, a French Protectorate, the Bishop of which, Monsignor Lavigerie, is expected to arrive in Rome. His departure was made the occasion of an imposing demonstration. A deputation from the shore begged that the island went in crowds to bim, and, kneeling, begged his blessing, while there were showered upon his path from windows and balconies. His Eminence was much touched at this remarkable demonstration of reverence and affection.

The Author of the Imitation of Christ.

In the metropolitan basilica of Verceili on the 31st of July, a monument was inaugurated to John Gersen, Benedictine monk, born at Cavaglia in 1195, who is believed to have been the author of the "Imitation of Christ. That book would, according to the Civiltà Cattolica, suffice to solve all the problems agitated in the present day, and bring back into the world the peace, the order, and the true liberty, which is that of the sons of God. At the ceremony several of the Bishops of Italy assisted. His Eminence Cardinal Alimonda, Archbishop of Turin, pronounced a magnificent discourse on this occasion. France, Flanders, Germany, and Italy contested the honor of having been the birth-place of the author of the Imitation, which Pontificals and was the most beautiful book next to the Gospel being Divine. In favor of the authorship of John Gersen are ranged Rosmini, Bonjoux, Marrini, Palermo, Cantatari, Marillac, Dalla Chiesa, Gutrmaire, Launoy, Du Cheuge, Mabillon, Valsecchi, Zaccharia, Duplessis, Molateru, Napione, Durandi, Cancellieri, Parvvia, Rohrbacher, Daniele, Muhelat, and Fenis. On the 28th of October, 1874, a medallion representing the bust of John Gersen, was affixed to the wall of the parish church of Cavaglia, near Vercelli. It is from this medallion that the people of Vercelli have designed the statues representing the Benedictine monk, Gersen, which has just been inaugurated in the metropolitan Basilica of that city.

Divorce in France.

It is consoling to observe that the new act of divorce in France has in no way touched Catholic society. Among the many prominent Catholics who have married, there are scarcely any which are not confirmations of already existing judicial separations. Among the noted publications of the Marquise de Cuvz, better known as Adelma Patti, M. Marc Chaud, the Duchesse de Bauffremont and the Baroness de Vaulx. Has original differences of a very grave nature have already been the subject of numerous and protracted legal proceedings. The prelates have insufficient only petitioned for a divorce in order to obtain permission to no longer pay a considerable annuity to their husband. She has no intention of marrying again. Madame Olympe Audouard, another petitioner, has never professed Catholicism. The millions of French Catholics will make as little use as English Catholics do of the new Divorce Law. The only result of M. Naquet's victory will be a greater care in the contracting of marriages. And it is not likely that the bishops and clergy of France will show the weakness of Anglicanism when they have to deal practically with cases of divorce.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

Consecration of Bishop Healy.

The Very Rev. Dr. Healy, President of Maynooth, will be consecrated Coadjutor Bishop of Clonfert on Sunday the 31st inst. His Grace the Archbishop of Tuam will be the consecrating Prelate, and Bishop Carr of Galway will preach.

Parnell's Latest Land Purchase.

John Dillon, M. P., has accepted the office of Mr. Parnell, M. P., on behalf of the Irish Land Purchase and Settlement Company, Limited, for the purchase of the Kilkelmey estate, comprising 2000 acres, in the county of Galway, the property of Mr. J. J. Bodkin, for the sum of £6,000.

Dreadful Murder of a Gamekeeper.

Early on Tuesday morning, Miss Byrne, the top daughter of Mr. Mark, Royal Hotel, Galway, was shot by Thomas Drury, steward of Mrs. Newnham of Rockenham. Drury fired five shots at Miss Byrne, and she expired within a few minutes. He stated that she was his sweetheart, and that he had come 112 miles to shoot her. Immediately after shooting the lady he attempted his own life, but was at once seized, and handed over to the police.

Horrible Death of a Drunken Man.

A farmer named Owen O'Donogh, Tankardstock, was found dead in his house under the following circumstances: Deceased had attended Dundalk market and returned home at night in a state of the fullest excess of drink. He had quarrel with his wife, and got her and the children out of the house, and they took refuge in a neighbor's. The next morning, when his wife returned, she found her husband dead, and it appeared he had been literally choked to death. He had, it appeared, fallen across the fire, and, being unable to help himself, and no assistance at hand, the unfortunate man was burned to death.

More Irish Missionaries for Australia.

Four young Christian Brothers have lately gone from St. Patrick's Monastery, Mountrath, to the element land of Australia. They have been selected by the Rev. Brother Wallis, Superior General, from a large number of applicants for service among the Catholic children from the barrack schools, and from the Catholic orphanages, to minister their faith and to destroy their morals. It is a fortunate thing that the young Brothers all passed the last matriculation examination of the Royal University, and, in a similar contrast, the young monks are preparing for the next examination. It would seem that the same direction will have Two Sisters of St. Brigid left the same place for the same destination. Two Sisters left Mountrath a year ago to Connamble, Diocese of Ossory, to Miss Mary Alacoque Miller, and Sister Patrina Phelan. Sister Alacoque is a sister of the Bishop of Mountrath, and has been educated from her infancy by the good Sisters of St. Brigid. Her brother, who is an Oblate Father, at present stationed at Inverness, accompanied her to London. The good Sisters and Lior of the young Patrician Brothers sailed from London together the same day for Sydney.

Boycotting the Renegade Town Councillors.

Says the Dublin Irishman of recent date:—"We learn that the citizens of Athlone have taken a very decided method of marking their disapproval of the conduct of the Town Councillors who happen to be shopkeepers. Their action in this matter is likely to place their constituents in a position that cannot then be in quite whole-hearted sympathy with the Town Councillors who happen to be in the shop of a man who had so flagrantly outraged public feeling. The people in question have accordingly begun to get good value, in all sorts of commodities, from the shopkeepers who are not Nationalists, and have determined to support those who support them. The Town of Cork never had a penny of their money in any concern belonging to a Nationalist. Why, then, Nationalists themselves, should they deal with Tories? We say put it to a party test, by a Boycott. Let it take, stories a march upon Cork, whether they think it right to deter people in self-defence from such a moral so like."

Irish Peace at the Irish National League.

A large and important meeting was held in Manchester on Saturday, to form a branch of the Irish National League. Mr. W. T. Tynan occupied the chair, and there were present representatives of National Leagues, and concurrence. Resolutions in favor of the Irish victory, were passed. Mr. Foulon addressed the meeting at considerable length in very excellent organization for the destruction of land landlordism in the country.

Evictions near Strathbally.

Two very hard evictions took place at Rathmore, near Strathally, in the Queen's County, on Tuesday morning, when Mr. Hickey, a poor person whose land-grabbing proclivities have brought him under the ban of his fellow-men, was evicted. Although the rent was high in each case, poor people have been solved by the landlord.

Death of Mr. Parnell's Father.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Mr. Parnell has suffered considerable in health and nerve by his long and harassing labors throughout the session of Parliament, and he will be about to open. The decision of his family to have the remains of Mozart himself is unknown.

—His Eminence Cardinal Lavigerie has left the island of Capri for Tunis, a French Protectorate, the Bishop of which, Monsignor Lavigerie, is expected to arrive in Rome. His departure was made the occasion of an imposing demonstration. A deputation from the shore begged that the island went in crowds to him, and, kneeling, begged his blessing, while there were showered upon his path from windows and balconies. His Eminence was much touched at this remarkable demonstration of reverence and affection.

The Author of the Imitation of Christ.

In the metropolitan basilica of Vercelli on the 31st of July, a monument was inaugurated to John Gersen, Benedictine monk, born at Cavaglia in 1195, who is believed to have been the author of the "Imitation of Christ. That book would, according to the Civiltà Cattolica, suffice to solve all the problems agitated in the present day, and bring back into the world the peace, the order, and the true liberty, which is that of the sons of God. At the ceremony several of the Bishops of Italy assisted. His Eminence Cardinal Alimonda, Archbishop of Turin, pronounced a magnificent discourse on this occasion. France, Flanders, Germany, and Italy contested the honor of having been the birth-place of the author of the Imitation, which Pontificals and was the most beautiful book next to the Gospel being Divine. In favor of the authorship of John Gersen are ranged Rosmini, Bonjoux, Marrini, Palermo, Cantatari, Marillac, Dalla Chiesa, Gutrmaire, Launoy, Du Cheuge, Mabillon, Valsecchi, Zaccharia, Duplessis, Molateru, Napione, Durandi, Cancellieri, Parvvia, Rohrbacher, Daniele, Muhelat, and Fenis. On the 28th of October, 1874, a medallion representing the bust of John Gersen, was affixed to the wall of the parish church of Cavaglia, near Vercelli. It is from this medallion that the people of Vercelli have designed the statues representing the Benedictine monk, Gersen, which has just been inaugurated in the metropolitan Basilica of that city.

Divorce in France.

It is consoling to observe that the new act of divorce in France has in no way touched Catholic society. Among the many prominent Catholics who have married, there are scarcely any which are not confirmations of already existing judicial separations. Among the noted publications of the Marquise de Cuvz, better known as Adelma Patti, M. Marc Chaud, the Duchesse de Bauffremont and the Baroness de Vaulx. Has original differences of a very grave nature have already been the subject of numerous and protracted legal proceedings. The prelates have insufficient only petitioned for a divorce in order to obtain permission to no longer pay a considerable annuity to their husband. She has no intention of marrying again. Madame Olympe Audouard, another petitioner, has never professed Catholicism. The millions of French Catholics will make as little use as English Catholics do of the new Divorce Law. The only result of M. Naquet's victory will be a greater care in the contracting of marriages. And it is not likely that the bishops and clergy of France will show the weakness of Anglicanism when they have to deal practically with cases of divorce.

MODERN MIRACLES

Wonderful Results Achieved by the Magnetic Oil of Vital Cure.

Total Deafness Cured Twelve Years Ago and Remains Permanent to This Day. While There is Life There is Hope.

During the past quarter of a century, there has been a great revolution in the department of medicine as to the treatment of the sick. Medicine, which was formerly the best but many times, and, at the same time, the most fatal, has gradually yielded to different methods. Little by little the people of the city and country, and more where fellow they are through a glass darkly. Among the greatest discoveries of this sort, perhaps, is the magnetic lights in the lodging establishment, stand yet unsolved. Many people who have been cured by the use of the Magnetic Oil, and who are now a new life, with the hues of affected immunity, and hundreds who have remained in the grasp of the blackness of their disease—now as at their best health and strength, and, if possible, more grateful than ever. Thousands, whose sinking energies and soul and magnetic vision then from disease to health, from to any to have suffering, so much that we all think substantial cause, may disease that it is needless to recount. Such, if it be possible, is the most distinctive effect of the Magnetic Oil. Its effects are almost as sudden as those of the miracle of their magic hands. Dr. Davis has cured thousands of cases of deafness, and he has said simply I am to discover that their cures are sudden and permanent. Twelve years ago, Mr. Thomas Tinsley, of Sacramento, Cal., was deaf, and underwent the operation of the public, and for years and he enjoyed the benefit of his cure. Now, a thousand times, so. The patients this have made so based on the Magnetic Oil, and the Magnetic Oil, and the Magnetic Oil, and

Poetry.

THE HOPES OF ERIN.

The Irish monks, the Irish monks, their manner are truncated still
In mass a foreign valley, or many a foreign hill
Their preaching, prayers and fasting are still the same as of yore
Around the coast of Cornwall, and along old Flanders' stream;
Their lives austere and holy, and the wonders of their hands,
Still amazed faith and sanctity through fair Italy lands,
The cross they bore in triumph, oh; bright as ever shone
Above the dome of Amaria, among the Tuscan vine.

Sedulius, the poet, and Columbkille the days,
At Rome and Ely are honored, and remembered still with love;
At Lucca, St. Frigidian, is a church shines with lights,
Is honored with pure worship, 'mid the pomp of Erin still Even still the British mirrors exult on Erin's fame
And though they hate the Church of Rome, they venerate her priest.
The belle of sweet Tarentum, as they wake the music air,
Still sell in tones of plaudous that Catadlic faith is there.

Quaint Meehin's noblest temple to an Irish monk is raised,
In every home is Meehin St. Romold's name is praised;
Virginius, the ritual, in his glorious Salzburg's fame
Is honored by the silent prayer and by the cannon's boom;
Old Kyran are ring to Fridolin in the islands of Ad
And the relics of Donnanon's saint sleep in a silver shrine.
The rotor that received Columcare by the Tagus, Elbone and Po,
Seems ringing still o'er Malachy at the convent of Clairvaux.

The Irish monks, the Irish monks, their spirit still survive
In the stalwart Church of Ireland, and in her intended lives.
Their spirit still doth linger round holy cross and Kells—
Oh, Irish Church and Irish people, what hopes are in your spells
High Cashel's fane is standing, and though in Lis the spirit's art
Of Judah, 'tis a blessing to behold
For people, it reminds us of the pulsy days of yore.

"Has Hedonist extra dry. "Hall, sir, the best bottle that Redmond can do is to purchase Glenaslaugh. I adjudge Bullyhoogaway, and he will enjoy the right of fishing the Clobogue—as jaunting 8; for the grub. Yes, by George! 8s for the grub.

"I never thought of that are you sure its for sale?"

"A secondrelly attorney, one of those pirtial scoundrels with whom it is my bane to be officially associated, has informed me, I loved the gentle spirit, endeavored to carry over with me after my association, but I listened to the scoundrel and made inquiries elsewhere—in fact, I am I fear, a day's journ towards the Clobogue myself, but the figure was to high, sir.

"We must put Redmond on to it at once."

"There's our man coming the bridge George; I know I may then as well speak upon bobolishing this cherished spot, 'where I serve the spirit of man is divine.' And Minchin glowed again in the summer light.

Redmond instinctively passed upon the quaint old homestead, reminded by the wave attentions of which dainty little farm of emerald green, topped with the pale blue loveliness of the forget-me-not, and gazed across the shoaing waters of the tranquil lake. All was sleeping in sunlight, even the deep, sober shadows of the purple covered mountain, while the melancholy hues of growing insect-life lent its peculiar charm to the peaceful surroundings.

The boat by direction of Mr. Minchen, was turned for the bridge, and a few easy strokes from the oar of the rugged urchin who acted as waterman brought it bump against a projecting boulder which served as a landing-place.

"Take the oars the morning to you, Mr. Redmond!" cried Minchin. "You are just in the nick of time. Nature abhors a vacuum, and we were about to pass the way. Plus, sir, is a very dry country! As the cheerful old Bignell laughed until the crags of Shinnagh re-echoed his jovial hilarity. At this moment I felt attached to a destiny appeared upon the bridge, and two formidable-looking hampers jostled each other for supremacy.

"Jump in Mr. Redmond. We shall take our pick on that lovely little peak of land just under the stronghold of the O'Byrns."

"Have you room for two friends of mine?" asked Phil."

"Any friend of your is my friend, sir," exclaimed Minchin, with the pompous manerism of the old school.

"Then lend a hand," to the boat boy, "to get these hampers on board."

"What does this all mean?" asked Minchin, as the baskets were safely stowed away.

"A liberty I have taken, sir," said Phillip. "I want you and Mr. O'Hare to lunch with me to-day, as I dined with you yesterday."

"O'Hare," exclaimed Minchin, "what shall we do with this dog? Pitch him into the lake hampers and all?"

"I should say not," laughed the other.

"My foot is on my native heath," cried Redmond; and, taking the oar, a pull of twenty minutes keel-grated them upon a silvery sand-bank, where a shady foliage of gigantic horse-chestnut tree.

"A lobster-salad, George"; cried Minchin unloading the basket.

"A chicken-pie, Jupiter! A magnain of salmon! Why, hang it, man! the never was raised at the Duvrelsonry Arms."

"How was it done?" asked O'Hara.

"I sent a man to Dublin for it."

"Ah!" with a long drawn breath of admiration. "You Americans do things in the right way."

"By the nine gods! champagne," ejaculated Minchin, as he extracted the golden-necked bottle from their wicker cradle.

"Redmond can do it to perfection Bignell, as a practical connoisseur, he will enjoy the right of fishing the Clobogue—as jaunting 8; for the grub. Yes, by George! 8s for the grub.

"I never thought of that are you sure its for sale?"

"A secondrelly attorney, one of those pirtial scoundrels with whom it is my bane to be officially associated, has informed me, I loved the gentle spirit, endeavored to carry over with me after my association, but I listened to the scoundrel and made inquiries elsewhere—in fact, I am I fear, a day's journ towards the Clobogue myself, but the figure was to high, sir.

"We must put Redmond on to it at once."

"There's our man coming the bridge George; I know I may then as well speak upon bobolishing this cherished spot, 'where I serve the spirit of man is divine.' And Minchin glowed again in the summer light.

Redmond instinctively passed upon the quaint old homestead, reminded by the wave attentions of which dainty little farm of emerald green, topped with the pale blue loveliness of the forget-me-not, and gazed across the shoaing waters of the tranquil lake. All was sleeping in sunlight, even the deep, sober shadows of the purple covered mountain, while the melancholy hues of growing insect-life lent its peculiar charm to the peaceful surroundings.

The boat by direction of Mr. Minchen, was turned for the bridge, and a few easy strokes from the oar of the rugged urchin who acted as waterman brought it bump against a projecting boulder which served as a landing-place.

"Take the oars the morning to you, Mr. Redmond!" cried Minchin. "You are just in the nick of time. Nature abhors a vacuum, and we were about to pass the way. Plus, sir, is a very dry country! As the cheerful old Bignell laughed until the crags of Shinnagh re-echoed his jovial hilarity. At this moment I felt attached to a destiny appeared upon the bridge, and two formidable-looking hampers jostled each other for supremacy.

"Jump in Mr. Redmond. We shall take our pick on that lovely little peak of land just under the stronghold of the O'Byrns."

"Have you room for two friends of mine?" asked Phil."

"Any friend of your is my friend, sir," exclaimed Minchin, with the pompous manerism of the old school.

"Then lend a hand," to the boat boy, "to get these hampers on board."

"What does this all mean?" asked Minchin, as the baskets were safely stowed away.

"A liberty I have taken, sir," said Phillip. "I want you and Mr. O'Hara to lunch with me to-day, as I dined with you yesterday."

"O'Hara," exclaimed Minchen, "what shall we do with this dog? Pitch him into the lake hampers and all?"

"I should say not," laughed the other.

"My foot is on my native heath," cried Redmond; and, taking the oar, a pull of twenty minutes keel-grated them upon a silvery sand-bank, where a shady foliage of gigantic horse-chestnut tree.

"A lobster-salad, George"; cried Minchin unloading the basket.

"A chicken-pie, Jupiter! A magnain of salmon! Why, hang it, man! the never was raised at the Duvrelsonry Arms."

"How was it done?" asked O'Hara.

"I sent a man to Dublin for it."

"Ah!" with a long drawn breath of admiration. "You Americans do things in the right way."

"By the nine gods! champagne," ejaculated Minchin, as he extracted the golden-necked bottle from their wicker cradle.

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacreedy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY EUGENE ROMNON.

CHAPTER III.

While all this—shall we say romance is over, or begin on the other hole, Mr. Minchin and his Sine Aethelre, O'Hara, was busily occupied upon the lake; and although not a single rise greeted their longing vision, the live-long morning they lived in hope.

"That's a very good style of man," observed O'Hara.

"Redmond!"

"Yes."

"The son of an Irish king, sir. By Jupiter! a fine fellow. A noble fellow! continued Minchin, whacking the lake with his line in emphasis.

"He'll go back to New York without a much of his father's property as would an

"Well, sir; the next best thing that Redmond can do is to purchase Glenaslaugh.

"Redmond is a practical connoisseur, he will enjoy the right of fishing the Clobogue—as jaunting 8; for the grub. Yes, by George! 8s for the grub.

"I never thought of that are you sure its for sale?"

"A secondrelly attorney, one of those pirtial scoundrels with whom it is my bane to be officially associated, has informed me, I loved the gentle spirit, endeavored to carry over with me after my association, but I listened to the scoundrel and made inquiries elsewhere—in fact, I am I fear, a day's journ towards the Clobogue myself, but the figure was to high, sir.

"We must put Redmond on to it at once."

"There's our man coming the bridge George; I know I may then as well speak upon bobolishing this cherished spot, 'where I serve the spirit of man is divine.' And Minchin glowed again in the summer light.

Redmond instinctively passed upon the quaint old homestead, reminded by the wave attentions of which dainty little farm of emerald green, topped with the pale blue loveliness of the forget-me-not, and gazed across the shoaing waters of the tranquil lake. All was sleeping in sunlight, even the deep, sober shadows of the purple covered mountain, while the melancholy hues of growing insect-life lent its peculiar charm to the peaceful surroundings.

The boat by direction of Mr. Minchen, was turned for the bridge, and a few easy strokes from the oar of the rugged urchin who acted as waterman brought it bump against a projecting boulder which served as a landing-place.

"Take the oars the morning to you, Mr. Redmond!" cried Minchin. "You are just in the nick of time. Nature abhors a vacuum, and we were about to pass the way. Plus, sir, is a very dry country! As the cheerful old Bignell laughed until the crags of Shinnagh re-echoed his jovial hilarity. At this moment I felt attached to a destiny appeared upon the bridge, and two formidable-looking hampers jostled each other for supremacy.

"Jump in Mr. Redmond. We shall take our pick on that lovely little peak of land just under the stronghold of the O'Byrns."

"Have you room for two friends of mine?" asked Phil."

"Any friend of your is my friend, sir," exclaimed Minchin, with the pompous manerism of the old school.

"Then lend a hand," to the boat boy, "to get these hampers on board."

"What does this all mean?" asked Minchin, as the baskets were safely stowed away.

"A liberty I have taken, sir," said Phillip. "I want you and Mr. O'Hara to lunch with me to-day, as I dined with you yesterday."

"O'Hara," exclaimed Minchen, "what shall we do with this dog? Pitch him into the lake hampers and all?"

"I should say not," laughed the other.

"My foot is on my native heath," cried Redmond; and, taking the oar, a pull of twenty minutes keel-grated them upon a silvery sand-bank, where a shady foliage of gigantic horse-chestnut tree.

"A lobster-salad, George"; cried Minchin unloading the basket.

"A chicken-pie, Jupiter! A magnain of salmon! Why, hang it, man! the never was raised at the Duvrelsonry Arms."

"How was it done?" asked O'Hara.

"I sent a man to Dublin for it."

"Ah!" with a long drawn breath of admiration. "You Americans do things in the right way."

"By the nine gods! champagne," ejaculated Minchin, as he extracted the golden-necked bottle from their wicker cradle.

"Redmond can do it to perfection Bignell, as

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intermission of St. Finnan de Balin, under whose protection they were to be placed, the writers of Catholic Journals who debate the cause of religion, the rights and these of the Holy Church, and the rights of the Christian people, who devotion and fidelity to Rome and Christ.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the chief agent in impacting loud and pure, intellectual ideas constitutive opinion, and opinion governs the world. In our time, religious journalism is so simply a useful and serious occupation, not only a new Indian Ocean, but a new Ceylon, and a new Cape of Good Hope. What is sad, what is sad, is to see the Catholic journalism not to combat error and defend the truth, whatever it may be—source all, there true truth.—BISHOP, THOMAS BONAZZ UPTONS.

Editorial Notes.

—A large amount of editorial matter, news and correspondence, intended for this issue of the MONITOR, had to be laid over until next week in order to make room for the particulars relating to the centenary celebration of Father Serra.

—It is a pity to see any discord among its small but (by talent and nationality) powerful band of Irish members. We do not like to read of O'Donnell versus Parnell, or of Dwyer versus Biggar. It makes sport for the Anti-Irish press, and it does no good to Ireland.

—We have no room this week to comment upon the whitewashing action of the Board of Education at its session last night. Professor Sauer has been re-instated in his position, and the Board of Education may think its labors are ended, but their subject verdict will rise up against them whenever they appeal for the suffrages of the people at any future period.

—The Rev. W. R. Miles, S.J., of New Orleans, who took part last Lent in the great mission at Manchester, and in that given in the Dominican Church at Newmarket-on-Tyne, arrived in New York last week. He is accompanied by eleven novices for the Jesuit Mission of Louisiana, and also by the Rev. Charles Chappois, S. J., who is bringing over to the Colorado Mission two priests and seven students, besides another whose destination is Santa Clara.

—Archbishop Riordan accomplished a great work on Sunday last by dedicating the spacious and elegant brick college attached to the Church of Sacred Heart, and by obtain Christian education for their children. Father O'Connor and his flock must have felt a laudable pride as they listened to the eloquent Prelate's definition of Catholic education as contrasted with the pagan-ising system pursued in public schools. We print a synopsis of Archbishop Riordan's address, and the perusal of it should be a sacred duty on the part of all Catholic parents who value the salvation of the souls of children whom God has entrusted to their care, and for whose preservation the Church founds educational institutions in which both the head and the heart of children are trained in the knowledge of God and the branches of education most material in forming good, virtuous and useful citizens.

—Attention is called to the fact that the charge we made last week regarding sectarian teaching by Mrs. Dr. Mason of the Tompkins Grammar school in that city is amply susceptible of proof, and our information leads us to believe that the Mrs. Crawford's class in the same school are compelled to sing the Protestant version of the Lord's Prayer every morning. We hope the attention of the Commissioners of Education will be called to this evident infraction of the law, and that Catholic parents will insist upon due respect being paid to their rights in all that concerns public school education for their children. A protest presented by some Catholic citizen will bring the whole matter to public attention, and tend to make teachers observe the law better hereafter.

—There exists among non-Catholics some very wrong impressions concerning the doctrine of Indulgences as defined by the Catholic Church, hence we hope the able and instructive sermon preached on last Sunday in St. Mary's Cathedral by Very Rev. J. Prendergast, V. G., will be read by every person who desires a correct understanding of this important doctrine. Father Prendergast also publishes the false statements set forth in Sweden's Outlines of History regarding Indulgences, and this being the class book used in the public schools it is well that Catholic parents and Catholic pupils should be familiar with the historical and theological arguments set forth by such an able exponent of Catholic doctrine as Father Prendergast, so as to be able to defend the Church against the vile slanders of enemies of the truth like the author whose book caused the recent excitement in the Girls' High School in this city.

—Alluding to the magnificent sermon preached by Archbishop Croke at Rosscrea, recently—an account of which will be found on the eighth page—the Tipperary Leader says very truly that it is one of the finest specimens of pulpit oratory we have heard or hope to hear. Dr. Croke's power as a preacher is well and long known. Fervid and chiefly pagan age, when he was a young curate at Charleville, he was the foremost preacher in the South, and as we write, we have before us a sermon preached in Cork, in 1850, by Thomas W. Croke, D.D., C.C., which, for solid argument, cogent reasoning, beauty of language, and copiousness of illustration, shines together with his last at Mount St. Joseph, "a peerless pair." We recommend the perusal of the Archbishop's sermon to all our readers. Besides intellectual pleasure and sound Catholic teaching on the constitution and privilege of God's Church, they will derive much consolation by the assurance so ably and ably sustained by conclusive facts and arguments, that there need be no fear for the Church built upon the rock; that nothing can be all the Church in the future, which has so come upon her and tested her in the past—without finding her wanting.

In Honor of God's Immaculate Mother.

The Tridiuum, or three days' prayer, ordered by his Grace Archbishop Alemany, of D.D., in honor of the Blessed Mother of God, will take place in every church in this Archdiocese on next Saturday, Sunday and Monday. As some readers of the MONITOR may have mislaid last week's paper containing the Archbishop's Circular, we publish again that very important portion, of it concerning the indulgences to be granted to the faithful who have fervent contrition for their sins.

One Hundred Days, Pope Leo XIII, graciously grants to the faithful, for every visit to the church made during the Tridiuum, a partial indulgence of seven years and seven quarantenas, and a plenary indulgence to be gained once to those who shall assist every day, provided they receive worthily the Sacraments of Penance and Holy Communion and pray for the intention of His Holiness. This indulgence is applicable to the souls detained in Purgatory. Permission is hereby granted for Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament for each evening of the Tridiuum.

The Indecent and Insulting Picture at the Mechanics' Fair.

The managers of the Mechanics' Fair have concluded to cater to the anti-Catholic and low-lived class which prevails in every community, by keeping on exhibition a picture in the Art Gallery which must bring the blush of shame to the cheek of every modest maid and mother in the land.

The excuse offered by the managers is that the dirty dash was exhibited as another exhibition of pictures and no objection was made to it, and that to withdraw it now would be an admission of its immodest and insulting character. This is lame and illogic with arrogance! But even this paltry excuse is based upon falsehood, as the vile production of a prurient mind was publicly condemned by the Indian of this city, in its issue of May 24th last, in the following paragraph:

"The usual daub is said of the so-called Ex. 1st and Ballad. 'Incident in the Lonely Field.' A divine, standing thereon, and a man lying on the walls of a gallery. Without a slightest artistic merit whatever, it makes up to the lasting disgrace of the present nature that connected with and the abnormal subject of the Association that allowed it to be hung. O yes sons of the Art Association, who would defend the pure and noble stature of the calm and peaceful Greek, and weep to see where and laughter such a spectacle as that."

"Quite French, isn't it?" We trust not, no doubt, when you hang it on the wall. But let me tell you, my masters, that no Frenchman would have hooted at such a dash.

"Filthy the French may be, but they have some sense of the artistic. Any lady who should, in her innocence, chance upon this the infliction would mean that she should ever have the full chastisement of her kind."

From the above extract it will be seen that the plea made by the Mechanics' Fair managers for keeping this production of lust upon exhibition, is based upon a falsehood as foul as the filthy dash so deservedly condemned by a decent public journal fully three months before it passed into the possession of the Mechanics' Fair management.

A large number of Catholics who viewed this vile and insulting production spoke about its immoral and indecent nature, until at length the matter came under the notice of Archbishop Riordan, who sent the following polite request to the managers of the Mechanics' Fair:

To the Board of Managers of the Mechanics' Institute Mechanics' Pavilion, San Francisco:

GENTLEMEN: Many Catholic citizens have called upon me to request me to use my influence with the Board of Managers of the Mechanics' Institute, in consequence of the objection to the picture of the Immaculate Conception, which is now exhibited in your Art Gallery. Although I have no right to make any request of you in this matter, I do so, because I am sure that the request will be granted. The picture was evidently intended as a reflection upon the morality of the Blessed Catholic priesthood, and, therefore, the Art Committee showed very bad taste in admitting it to a place in the gallery. It is wise for the managers of them well-intentioned Fairs to treat all the patrons with courtesy and respect. When the Mechanics' Fair was first established I ventilated to all classes and creeds, and then a painting in which not which is intended to cast ridicule upon religious teachers and leaders, by no means the thing in question, their feelings or politeness are the good will not only of Catholics, but of Protestants.

The managers of the Fair may think they have triumphed by keeping this priceless picture in public, but we can assure them that such a victory for vice is an ill-gotten no credit upon any man among them who has any regard for morality or any respect for the religious feelings of their Catholic fellow citizens.

The MONITOR has done its distinctive duty in calling attention to this dirty dash, and every honest minded man and woman in California will coincide with us in condemning the artist for indulging his prurient and anti-priestly taste by producing such a scandalous scene on canvas, and they will also adjudge as equally guilty the managers of the Mechanics' Fair who refused to accede to the very respectable and reasonable request of Archbishop Riordan, backed by numerous newspapers and numbers of Catholics who will not even forget the insult offered to them even when upon protest was made through their prelate and their press.

We heartily thank our esteemed contemporaries the Inquirie, Pacific, Jewish Progress, and Chronicle, for their co-operation with us in the fight for the supremacy of virtue over vice, and whenever occasions arise that indecent insults are offered to any religious body, we hope to see the religious press united under the common banner of Christian morality to beat back the immodest in art or literature, even though it be exhibited in the Art Gallery of the Mechanics Institute Managers.

Judicial Murders in Ireland.

Just at this moment the people of Ireland are excited over the discovery that three innocent men were judicially murdered in Ireland during the present year. The victims in question were hanged for crimes of which they were entirely innocent, but England's Irish minions wanted to prove how powerful they were in Ireland, so they hanged Myles Joyce, Poff, Barret and four other innocent Irishmen upon the perjured testimony of perjurers who were paid blood-money for their services by Mr. Bolton, the Crown Solicitor of English injustice in Ireland.

The case upon which those testimony Myles Joyce and four other persons were hanged for what was known as the Maamtrasna outrage, was Thomas Casey, whose public confession of the perjury he committed in convicting innocent men is thus recorded by the Dublin Nation:

Before the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, and in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament upon the altar, he made a solemn confession that the evidence he had given against Myles Joyce and the other prisoners in the Maamtrasna case was false, and was sworn under pressure, to save his own life!

The Archbishop fell almost petrified with grief and horror. A shrill, a shudder, went through the crowd of people; sobs and groans burst out from the hearts of hundreds at the sight of such a scene. The Archbishop fell almost petrified with grief and horror. A shrill, a shudder, went through the crowd of people; sobs and groans burst out from the hearts of hundreds at the sight of such a scene. The Archbishop almost that filled the church. But the self-accused and repentant man repeated his terrible confession.

He declared that at the trials he had perjured his soul; he had sworn falsely against innocent men; he had helped to send one of them to his grave, and four others to the long agony of penal servitude for life. For his sin against God, he was now willing to suffer punishment for his deceitful crime, and to make any reparation that might be in his power. He had only one excuse to offer for his conduct, and that was that he was intoxicated and terrified into it by the Crown Solicitor, Mr. George Bolton.

This man's spread his exhibition throughout the whole country and created the most profound sensation. Everyone realized to mind the fact that a belief in the innocence of Myles Joyce was widespread ever since the date of the Maamtrasna trials. Not only did the unfortunate man himself protest with remarkable earnestness and fervor his entire innocence of the crime, but the two men who were convicted with him, and who were executed on the same scaffold with him, declared in the most solemn manner that he took no part in the massacre. Their own guilt they did not deny after their conviction, but the innocence of Myles Joyce they most positively asserted, and they had written declarations to that effect drawn up to be submitted to the consideration of the Lord Lieutenant. On the scaffold Myles Joyce to the very last moment continued to protest his innocence, and to lament the hard fate that was sending him to an ignominious death for a crime he never committed.

—The fortunate winners of the Prize medals annually distributed to students of the Roman Catholic Academy of Notre Dame, comprised ten students from the Irish College, five Friars from the Irish Franciscan of St. Isidore, and eleven Alumni from the North American College, amongst whom the prizes are determined by lot.

—A monumental slab in memory of the celebrated Cardinal Acquaviva is about to be placed on the Palace Valentini and the Piazza Santi Apostoli. It will bear the following inscription: Joseph Mansifanti, of Bologna—Cardinal—the grandeur, pulpit of the world, here dwelt and ended his days on the 15th of March, 1840. S.P.Q.R. For a perennial memorial (this stone) was placed (here) in 1884."

CENTENARY OF JUNIPERO SERRA.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

Light celestial seemed to shine,
As through Sacramental gloom
Thy Saviour Lord to thee,
Who, as heavenly Visitant
Bore to thee the mission sent,
To the soul so true in parting
From the world and worldly pleasures.

All the Service for the dying
"O God that breathe, from age and
Till the last and sub-stations
By the wailing priest were said.
Then the people's trembling voices
Sang the Benediction Hymn,
"Tantum ergo Sacramentum,
Veneremur cernui;" and then
Over by one their accents faltered,
By their clinking arms or chilled.
But as ever-one fear and wonder
Through the hushed assembly thrilled,
As the calm voice of the dying
In the grand old anthem rose,
And in calmness ere sunking
Thy soul, with vanish'd breath,
Thou wilt in rich returning,
And when noon brought in prayer,
Filled the transept with a golden glory
Through the mighty window's glowing,
Slowly rang the solemn bell
At the morning hour that waited
To their sagacity, for the hall,
When the first of a dying sunset,
To San Carlos wildly sped,
Longing for some pastoral
Of their family cherished dead.

Ah! the morning at the Mission
Was a hundred years ago
Filled the golden remnant noon-side
With the wailing and the sorrow,
Ah! the plaintive lamentation
Through the hushed Mission
Through the Mission of San Carlos,
Where the Fathers dwelt
Where the Fathers dwelt
Thus they made their remembrance
Of their Father's loss in sorrow
Broken-hearted, and alone?
Ah! the Indian Mission children
Thus bewail their father loss,
Thus lament that so dear father
Of the world-redeeming Cross.
Ah! the Indian Mission children
Thus bewail their father loss,
Thus lament that so dear father
Of the world-redeeming Cross.
Ah! the Indian Mission children
Thus bewail their father loss,
Thus lament that so dear father
Of the world-redeeming Cross.

In the convent's shelter, found
Tree peace and healing for such wrong
Sickness and suffering, pain and want,
Hunger and thirst and cold and sorrow
The heart whose only thought and aim
Was to do good to God and him
To the Promised Land above.

Well may we sing Hosanna!
Well may we sing Hosanna!
Of the Saints in Paradise
Who have gone before
Gave to "His Hall."
"Ye a glorious Hosanna!
"Ye an anniversary Hosanna!
For the whole Church
And he entered into rest.
And he entered into rest.
Let our gratitude above
Hail the church, eternal day
Of this pure souled pioneer,
Thus with wonder and praise
Where the cognizant our Golden Land,
Let Christ's
Let his brown-shaped, peaceful hand.
Blessings on them for the mission
Founded on our smiling shore!
Days they dwelt, unknown, unknown!
In the bigger days of yore,
Days they dwelt, unknown, unknown!
Days they dwelt, unknown, unknown!
Ah! the Indian's days of ease
To the Forest's sons they taught,
Ah! the Indian's days of ease
And for human progress wrought.
Ah! the Indian's days of ease
Ah! the Indian's days of ease
"Pain" Decay's effacing
To oblivion hastening
Shame to us! who have not striven
To the Indian's good
From these primeval memories
Ever rising from our hearts
Thanks to thee, thou radiant patriot
Thanks to thee, thou radiant patriot
That the grey walls of San Carlos
Thanks to all who well have added
To the Indian's good
And this fair shrine of Carmel
Rising from our hearts
Grieving for the Mission
Ah! the Indian's days of ease
From the bright Carmelite valley
For a hundred years and more
Brightening thus the sweet mists
Ever in the Mission
Where the meek Franciscan Fathers
Ever in the Mission
Where the meek Franciscan Fathers

When by pious, reverential hands
Thy sacred remains
When the applause which greeted the closing verses of the poem had died away, a sained Smith attempted to read the Centennial Ode prepared by Miss Marcella A. Fitzgerald, but it was a most unmerciful failure. Following is the Ode in full:

ODE

For the Centennial Anniversary of the Death of Very Rev. Padre Junipero Serra.

Why do we gather here today,
Why do we gather here today,
The great Pacific's waters sing
Of a Pioneer Apostle, valiant life,
And, with reverberating tones
Along the sounding beach, intone
That with its ceaseless echo thrill
Thy Mission's Centennial Hymn.

Why meet we here mid summer's bloom?
To lay our laurels on the tomb
Of a Pioneer Apostle, valiant life,
And to Faith's living fountain bid
Our souls, and hearts, and lips
In savage pride our golden sheaves.
Thy work, Junipero, was to prepare
Our depth of gratitude and love
For, thou, the seed, true, and brave,
Who sleeps in yonder hallowed grave.

He declared that at the trials he had perjured his soul; he had sworn falsely against innocent men; he had helped to send one of them to his grave, and four others to the long agony of penal servitude for life. For his sin against God, he was now willing to suffer punishment for his deceitful crime, and to make any reparation that might be in his power. He had only one excuse to offer for his conduct, and that was that he was intoxicated and terrified into it by the Crown Solicitor, Mr. George Bolton.

This man's spread his exhibition throughout the whole country and created the most profound sensation. Everyone realized to mind the fact that a belief in the innocence of Myles Joyce was widespread ever since the date of the Maamtrasna trials. Not only did the unfortunate man himself protest with remarkable earnestness and fervor his entire innocence of the crime, but the two men who were convicted with him, and who were executed on the same scaffold with him, declared in the most solemn manner that he took no part in the massacre. Their own guilt they did not deny after their conviction, but the innocence of Myles Joyce they most positively asserted, and they had written declarations to that effect drawn up to be submitted to the consideration of the Lord Lieutenant. On the scaffold Myles Joyce to the very last moment continued to protest his innocence, and to lament the hard fate that was sending him to an ignominious death for a crime he never committed.

—The fortunate winners of the Prize medals annually distributed to students of the Roman Catholic Academy of Notre Dame, comprised ten students from the Irish College, five Friars from the Irish Franciscan of St. Isidore, and eleven Alumni from the North American College, amongst whom the prizes are determined by lot.

—A monumental slab in memory of the celebrated Cardinal Acquaviva is about to be placed on the Palace Valentini and the Piazza Santi Apostoli. It will bear the following inscription: Joseph Mansifanti, of Bologna—Cardinal—the grandeur, pulpit of the world, here dwelt and ended his days on the 15th of March, 1840. S.P.Q.R. For a perennial memorial (this stone) was placed (here) in 1884."

FATHER PRENDERGAST'S SERMON.

WHAT IS AN INDULGENCE?

The Question Aldy and Authoritatively Answered.

Blunders Made by Bigots. Swedish Misstatements Stigmatized as Slanders. Father Prendergast's Lucid Explanation of a Doctrine of the Church regarding which many Erroneous Opinions Exist.

Very Rev. J. Prendergast, Vicar General of the Archdiocese, preached on Sunday last at St. Mary's Cathedral on the subject of Indulgences. The very Rev. celebrant, in opening his discourse, explained that he had chosen the subject matter of his sermon for the purpose of offering an opportunity of refuting a slander, and giving deliberation—but solely for the purpose of setting forth the doctrine of the Church on "Indulgences," and of vindicating her from certain misrepresentations of that doctrine, which were started ages ago by enemies of the Catholic religion, and which have been since down through centuries to the present day, to deplorable misunderstanding, which concerning the nature of Indulgences, be said, in no doubt one cause of prejudice against the Church. The word "Indulgence" as used by the Church, bringing to the Latin mind a meaning quite different from that which it conveys to the English mind. The word "Indulgence" in the Latin, in the Roman civil law, was a remission of a punishment, or a remission of a debt, or a delay, or a concession. As the Catholic has it, "Nil ad Indulgentiam." In ecclesiastical Latin, it mportant Religious Work in Buenos Ayres and Brazil.

It is cheering to know that the progress of the Church in South America is encouraging. In spite of the fettering of the Church by Spanish customs, shallow and vicious politicians, and Freemasonry, the efforts of various Catholic societies in various quarters have been blessed to the revival of religion among old Catholics, the establishment of parishes and religious houses, and a general prevalence of a most serious attention to the great concerns of religion. The finger of God is manifestly in it and a grand future is promised for the Church. The friends of Father Fiedler (Dr. Stone), Puritanist, are watching with great interest the progress of the work he is so successfully prosecuting among the composite population of that great and wicked metropolis of the Argentine Republic, Buenos Ayres. We have had the pleasure of seeing a photograph of the new Holy Cross Chapel which he has recently built in connection with the convent. Externally the chapel is plain, simple and unpretentious, but the exterior is elaborate, beautiful and evidently very religious and devotional. The Shrine of Our Lady of Sorrows is particularly beautiful and impressive, the statue especially being as rare as it is exquisite. We have never seen one like it in this country. The church and convent is becoming more and more an active centre of light and zealous religious propagandism, and is, no doubt, destined to exert a powerful influence in the religious revival now going on in that part of the country.

We have also recent advices from Brazil of an encouraging nature. It is a most pleasing fact that now all the Bishops of that country are Jesuits. The Jesuits' College in Rio de Janeiro is in a flourishing condition, having made great progress in the last three years. They have at present four hundred boarders. They still encounter very determined opposition, and the present cabinet is said to be contemplating the suppression of all religious houses in which teaching is not imparted. The moral condition of Rio de Janeiro is described as bad, and notwithstanding these encouraging signs of progress a Herculean task still lies before those who are so zealously and faithfully laboring for the restoration of Christ's faith and good morals among the people. There is here as in some other places, a serious mixture of good and evil. The Church is not, of course, the evil is flagrantly bad, but the worst of it is that the evil which the Church has so long fought with tied hands is now attributed to herself on account of those who are the same of it, and the good is sometimes passed over as though it did not exist. In fact it is the general policy of the opponents of the Church to overlook the good and dwell upon the bad in Catholic societies, with the express design of disparaging the Church and thus encouraging their own wicked acts and increasing their power of doing evil.—N. Y. Freeman's Journal.

Noble Generosity of the Duke of Norfolk.

The Right Rev. Dr. Riddell, Lord Bishop of Northampton, England, recently laid the foundation-stone of the magnificent church dedicated to St. John the Baptist, now being erected at the cost of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, on the site of the old City Gaol, in Gilder Gate, Norwich. At the conclusion of the ceremony the Bishop said that it was a great satisfaction to him to lay the foundation of a church such as this was going to be. Speaking to the midst of a gathering of the Protestantism in the antecedents of this country, they might recall the glories of the past. The ceremony of that day was the same done through by their Protestant who had helped raise up in old times. Ritual and ceremonies were the same. The Church was the same temple would come with the prayers of ancient and modern times. The Church was the same temple would come with the prayers of ancient and modern times. The Church was the same temple would come with the prayers of ancient and modern times

Archbishop Ryan in Philadelphia.

TORCHLIGHT PARADE IN HIS HONOR.

One Hundred Thousand Spectators in the Streets.

TEN THOUSAND TOTAL ABSTAINERS IN THE RANKS.

An Address of Welcome and the Archbishop's Reply.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer of the 22nd ult., we glean the following interesting particulars regarding the splendid reception tendered to Archbishop Ryan by the Catholic Total Abstinence Archdiocesan Union of Philadelphia:

The grand torchlight procession last evening of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union, in honor of the arrival of the Most Rev. J. Ryan in Philadelphia, was a brilliant and well managed affair, and a fitting tribute to a distinguished prelate. The display was one of the most imposing of its kind which has been seen in this city for many years.

The line was formed on Broad street between 9 and 10 o'clock, but long before that hour that thoroughfare and the streets in the vicinity were crowded with spectators. At the lowest estimate there must have been 100,000 persons gathered around Logan Square, and at Eighteenth and Vine streets the crowd was so great that it was almost impossible to work one's way through.

On the west side of Logan Square, opposite the Cathedral and the episcopal residence, the houses were profusely lighted in sardines and several ladies fainted. Eighteenth street was roped off from the north end of the Cathedral to the south side of Summer street. Five hundred and twenty-five police officers were on duty, including details from every police district and also the Reserves.

THE PROCESSION.

The line was formed on Broad street, south of Callowhill, facing north. The route was as follows: Up Callowhill street from Broad to Eighteenth; down Eighteenth to Vine street, up Vine to Nineteenth; around Logan Square to Race street; down Race street to Eighteenth; up Eighteenth, passing the Cathedral, to Vine street; down Vine street to Seventh, where the procession was dismissed.

The temperance portion of the parade consisted of eight divisions, under the marshalship of Mr. P. J. Hayes, with the following special aids: High Hodgson, John Kelly, Patrick Lynch, Francis Reilly, Hugh Maguire and Patrick O'Brien. The different divisions, with the number of members of each society in line was as follows:

First Division—George A. Brennan, marshal: St. Charles Borromeo, 450 men; St. Charles Cadets, 225 men; St. Thomas's, 75; St. Thomas's Cadets, 100; St. Mary's, 100; St. Mary's Cadets, 50; St. James', 100; St. James' Cadets, 50; St. Michael's (Chester), 25; St. Michael's Cadets (Chester), 25.

Second Division—John A. Smith, marshal: St. Joseph's Assumption, 100; Francis Xavier's Cadets, 120; St. Charles Kelly's villa, 75; St. Charles Cadets, Kelleyville, 75; St. Bernard's, 75; Paul's Cadets, 100; Sacred Heart, 120; Sacred Heart Cadets, 50.

Third Division—Martin Walsh, marshal: Cathedral, 500; Cathedral Cadets, 400; Assumption, 100; Assumption Cadets, 50.

Fourth Division—Daniel Wade, marshal: Immaculate Conception, 100; Immaculate Conception Cadets, 50; St. Vincent de Paul, 125; St. Vincent de Paul Cadets, 75; St. Patrick's, 250; St. Patrick's Cadets, 100; St. Agnes, West Chester, 20; St. Agnes' Cadets, West Chester, 20; St. Dominic's, Holmesburg.

Fifth Division—Harry Sullivan, marshal: St. Philip de Neri, 500; St. Philip de Neri Cadets, 100; St. John Baptist, 75; St. John Baptist Cadets, 100; St. Augustine's, 20; St. Augustine's Cadets, 20; Our Mother of Sorrows, 100; Our Mother of Sorrows Cadets, 50.

Sixth Division—Thomas F. Downey, marshal: St. Malachy's, 100; St. Malachy's Cadets, 150; St. Ann's, 400; St. Ann's Cadets, 200; St. Agatha's, 75; St. Agatha's Cadets, 50.

Seventh Division—Martin Shaeve, marshal: St. Bridget's, 100; St. Bridget's Cadets, 50; Nativity (Media, 10; Nativity Cadets (Media), 10; St. Stephen's, 50; St. Stephen's Cadets, 25; St. Cecilia's, 75; St. Cecilia's Cadets, 75; St. Elizabeth's, 150; St. Elizabeth's Cadets, 100; St. Thomas of Villa Nova Cadets, 75; St. Thomas of Villa Nova Cadets, 75; St. Mary's Doylestown, 15.

Eighth Division—Thomas M. Carlin, marshal: Assumption, 100; Assumption Cadets, 50; St. Mary's, Phœnixville, 120; St. Malachy's, 100; St. Malachy's Cadets, 75; Immaculate Heart, Chester, 125; St. Peter's, Reading, 25; St. Cecilia's, Conshohocken, 25; St. Cecilia's Cadets, 25.

Then followed the Ninth Division, under the marshalship of Henry A. Custer, and composed of the German, Polish and Italian societies of the Catholic faith, as follows:

Holy Trinity Church—St. Joseph's Benevolent Society, and Holy Trinity.

St. Peter's Church—St. Peter's Young Men's Benevolent Society, St. Peter's Benevolent Society, St. Alphonsus, Society of the Holy Family.

St. Alphonsus' Church—St. Alphonsus' Association, St. Kilians, St. Antonius.

St. Bonifacius Church—St. Alphonsus Society, St. Boniface's Society, St. Michael's, St. Francisus and St. Joseph's Benevolent Society.

All Saints' Church (Bridesburg)—St. Joseph's and St. Boniface' Benevolent Society.

St. Peter's Church (Reading)—St. Peter and Paul's Benevolent Society, Holy Cross and St. Boniface's' Benefical Societies and the Society of conscious Servants of Delaphia.

St. Augustine' Church—St. Alberto' Benefical Society.

St. Mary Magdalen De Pazzi Church—St. Clair Young Man's Society, Young St. Joseph's Confraternity.

St. Michael's Church—St. Elizabeth's Benefical Society.

The Tenth division consisted of the Emerald Beneficial Association, M. F. Hayburn, marshal, as follows:

Branches 74, St. Agnes; 78, St. Francis Xavier; 79, St. James, 80, Immaculate Conception; 82, St. Boniface, 100 Sacred Heart.

There was between 9000 and 9000 men in the temperance division, 2000 in the 9th, and 500 in the 10th division.

IN FRONT OF THE CATHEDRAL.

As the procession wound around the square it presented the appearance of a perfect ball of fire, with the numerous torches, colored lights and Roman candles. The episcopal residence was reached at 9.20 p.m. and the procession was just one hour in passing. On the steps of the episcopal residence were two candelabra, each containing twelve candles, and seated on the top step was his Grace the Archbishop.

On his right was Bishop Shanahan, of Harrisburg, and on his left Vicar-General Walsh and Father Elcock, rector of the Cathedral. In the rear were the following: Bishop O'Connor, of Omaha; Father Shannon, Father Gallagher and Father Nimotti of the Cathedral; Father Brennan, chancellor of the diocese; Rev. Dr. I. P. Horstmann, of St. Mary's, Father Dougherty of New Philadelphia; Father McManus, of St. Ann's; Father Gough, Father McNulty, Father Lane, of St. Theresa's; Father N. J. Walsh, of St. Charles'; Father Brady, of Chester; Father Daly, of the Immaculate Conception; Father Coghlin, of Reading; Father Powers, of Harrisburg; Father Mullen, of St. Ann's; Father Peter Reilly, of St. Edward's, and Father Donnelly of St. John's.

As the procession passed each of these in the line raised his hat. At the head of the line was the handsome transparency of the union, having on one side the following inscription: "The Cathedral Total Abstinence Union, 77 societies, 10,000 members," paralleled in honor of the advent of the Most Reverend Archbishop P. J. Ryan to the See of Philadelphia. We thank the Holy Father for sending us so distinguished a prelate. Cead Mile Failthe."

On the reverse side was the following: "Our union was founded to combat the evil of intemperance. We have enlisted for the war, and with the blessing of God we will continue the fight until the Catholic liquor dealer and the Catholic liquor drinker will be as scarce as snakes in Ireland."

The transparency of the Cathedral Society bore the following inscription: "Cathedral T. A. B. Society, No. 11, 1012 members. We will never support the liquor traffic, much less vote for it." Fourteenth annual convention.

St. Malachy's Society had the following: "St. Malachy's T. A. B. Society, No. 57, 77 members; welcome to Philadelphia."

St. Malachy's Cadets—"St. Malachy's Cadets, No. 66, 105 members; we pledge our love to our spiritual chief."

The members of the drum corps connected with the Cathedral were a fine-looking set of young men. They all were standing collars and straw hats and neat coats and had bottomless buntons.

St. Mary's Society carried a transparency with this inscription, "St. Mary's Society extends a Cead Mile Failtha to the Most Rev. P. J. Ryan as Archbishop of Philadelphia."

Each member of St. Michael's Cadets, of Chester, had a Chinese lantern in his hand.

On St. Paul's transparency was the following inscription: "The largest order society welcomes our new archbishop."

When St. Joseph's Confraternity of St. Mary Magdalen de Pazzi Church passed the episcopal residence Father Imbert rushed to the archbishop on behalf of the society a beautiful and unique floral cross of white and red flowers some six feet in height.

All along Callowhill street, from Broad to Eighteenth, was decorated with Chinese lanterns, at were the headquarters of the "Ulsters and Carlton Clubs," on Eighteenth street, below Callowhill.

PRESIDENT CAMPBELL'S ADDRESS.

After the parade had dissolved the pledge to the C. T. A. Union assembled in one of the parlors of the episcopal residence, when President John Campbell, of the C. T. A. Union of Philadelphia, then delivered the following address to the archbishop.

YOUR GRACE—As president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, it becomes my pleasant duty to express to you on behalf of our society the pleasure with which it has your advent to this city. Its societies and members have ever been in the front rank of torchlight procession to testify to you their devotion to our Holy mother the Church, and their appreciation of the distinguished honor which His Holiness Pope Leo XIII has conferred upon the Catholics of this archdiocese by appointing you to be their archbishop. As our union is founded upon the Church, and governed in accordance with her principles, we cannot begin during the terms of our first year by her children in America upon this occasion.

We have been struggling for more than twelve years against the evil of intemperance, the besetting sin of this great Republic. Banded together under the guidance of our reverend clergy, we are endeavoring to show how the Catholic name has a mission of furnishing so large a percentage of intoxicated to the penal and reformatory institutions of the land. Deploring the condition of society in general, and regretting the fact that our own people have their full share of the evils resulting from intemperance, we are striving, by our humble efforts, to bring about a change in social drinking customs, to the end that intemperance will no longer be fashionable, and that intoxication dread will no longer be the universal medium of festive enjoyment.

And we are doing this—not because we pretend to set ourselves up as reformers, but we think ourselves better than other people—but because the faith that is in us teaches us that where self sacrifice is necessary for our own salvation, the sacrifice of such self-sacrifice we can be the means of saving others, we are bound in conscience to do such sacrifice.

Convinced as we are that the condition of our Catholic population is largely due to strong effort to diminish the amount of wine and whiskey required from the intoxicating drink, we have resolved to make the effort, and with the blessing of God we will persevere until we succeed.

Philadelphia, like all other large cities of the country, is cursed with a large population and it is charged against Catholics that they furnish fifty per cent. of the criminal and pauper population of the country while numbering but twenty per cent. of the population. Whether we do or do not bear this charge, yet there is undoubtedly a vast amount of intemperance, poverty and crime amongst our people. Catholic salooons are counted by the hundred, if not by the thousand, in the archdiocese, and all classes of our people are sufferers from indulgence in strong drink. And I may say here, that the poor and the working classes are not amongst those who suffer the most, although current belief attributes to them the principal part of the prevalling intemperance and crime. In proportion to their numbers, they suffer less than the so-called wealthy and intelligent classes. We find among them more total abstainers—in fact the total abstainers are numerous in any dependent upon them for its vitality—and more men ready to make a sacrifice for their faith and their country. Nevertheless, God knows, they suffer enough.

Without wearying your Grace with a recital of the evils of strong drink, we have thought it proper to assign to you why our union has been organized, and to show you, that in organizing it, we have only in view, the performance of our duties as loyal children of the Church, and as good citizens of this glorious Commonwealth.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S REPLY.

The archbishop, after giving his blessing to the delegates, said:

It gave him great pleasure to receive the address, especially coming as it did after the magnificent procession he had witnessed with great gratification. It was an evidence of the strong attachment of the Catholic non-Catholic citizens of their organized efforts in the cause of temperance. To see so many young men, who might otherwise be victims of intemperance, and to see them directed by Catholic influence, is an evidence that it may are unfortunate enough to be intemperate it is in opposition to the teaching of the Catholic Church.

A serenade was then heard of the Cathedral Society and some singing by the Lyceum concluded the demonstration.

The Trappists in Ireland.

NEW CHURCH AT MT. ST. JOSEPH, ROSCREA.

Triumphant Progress of the Church

A MODEL TO THE NATIONS OF THE EARTH.

Discourse by Archbishop Croke.

On Sunday, the new church of the Trappist fathers at Mount St. Joseph, near Roscrea—a second Mount Mellleray, was solemnly consecrated—or rather the ceremonial begun on the previous day, was concluded. Thirty were the altars to be consecrated, and the function was performed separately by Bishop Ryan, of Killaloe, Coadjutor Bishop O'Callaghan of Cork, Abbot Fitzpatrick, of Mount Mellleray, Abbot Antonius, of Mount St. Bernard, Leicestershire, and Abbot Berger, of Gethsemane, Kentucky. The church, which is situated in a picturesque solitude, is in a style of architecture in harmony with the severity of the Order. It is the Early English, or pointed with a slight introduction of the Norman in the interior. The extensive farm in which the church and monastery stand was purchased for the brothers by Count Moore, J. P., for £13,000. Of this sum Count Moore paid £5,000 to the Brothers, who are to repay it by instalments. At the High Mass, the Very Rev. Father Eugenius, Vicar-General of the Congregation of La Trappe, was Celebrant; Rev. Father Sheehan, Birr, Deacon; and Rev. Father Kickham, Mullinahone, Sub-Deacon; the Mass of Ceremonies being the Rev. Father Joachim.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S ADDRESS.

Dwelling on the Gospel of the day, which contained the parable of the mustard seed, traced at length the birth, growth, development, and progress of the Church. As it was in the beginning—the times were so far away as precisely to be unknown—so it was and is now, ever since the Apostles and their immediate successors passed away to their reward. Priests and bishops have been ordained and consecrated, and through this agency, and this alone, by preaching and teaching, the Gospel of Christ the Lord has been spread over all quarters of the old nations of the earth. How marvellous must have been the success of the first Christian missionaries! "I give thanks to God, through Jesus Christ," writes St. Paul to the Romans, "because your Faith is spoken of in the whole world." We are in the city of yesterday, argues Tertullian in the third century, against the authorities of Pagan Rome, "and we have overspread your empire, and left nothing but your temples to you alone." St. Justin reaches to the same. "There is no race of men, he says, "whether Greeks or barbarians, amongst whom prayers and the Eucharist are not offered up to the Father and Maker of all things in the name of Jesus crucified." And St. Irenæus, the first and perhaps the greatest scholar of the Fathers, writes, speaking of the missionaries of his country, inter alia, "Though the faith of their preaching was shining everywhere."

THEN WAS IT ON ADVANCING

year after year and age after age, until at length like mighty conquerors, they boldly unstripped the nationalities of the world, avenged on the rabble tribes, as well as the most polished people, and triumphantly planted the Cross amongst nations over which the eagle of the empire had never floated. The proud but chivalrous Teuton of the day, just as now, sought to check their progress and trample under foot the tattered emblems which, as their standard, they so proudly bore. But it was to him, a Roman emperor was miraculously nominated, and soon afterwards the Christian religion was firmly established in the farthest provinces and amongst the most civilized nations of the Roman empire. The Cross is still, so long despised, was now lifted up triumphantly in the light of day. It was raised high in the battle mented tower and moved majestic beneath a symbol of honor instead of a gibbet, and the Christian cause, the kingdom of heaven, and kings, and emperors, and princes, and all the high and mighty of the world were now ready to bow down and be saved by without some new nation being added to the number of those who had been baptized into the Christian name.

OUR OWN ST. PATRICK, SENT BY POPE CELESTINE

in the 5th century, came hither and preached, not the mere natural morality of the gold, about the religion of the ancient Irish Druids, but the Christian religion, in its practical and practical form. The rays of the tempest was the signal for the Druids, with the spirits of the breath, and the lakes and streams, and crystal springs were but so many mirrors of reflection of the spirits, fear and dread, disembodied spirits of persons who had died well and fallen in battle were regarded famous and immortal, and supposed to join into higher orders of existence, and the coward's soul, like his body, was held in dishonour, and his life and death were accounted equally ignoble. What a bold such a system, mystic, but manly and immortal, and what a hold on a nation of imaginative people. Yet when Patrick preached to the people, the strange doctrine he brought with him from Rome, they quickly renounced the false and fancies of the druids, and the Christian religion was embraced in beauty and in truth, and in the fullness of its principles, and in the fullness of its grace, and in the fullness of its consolations, and in the fullness of its promises, and in the fullness of its hopes, and in the fullness of its joys, and in the fullness of its glory, and in the fullness of its power, and in the fullness of its success, and in the fullness of its triumphs, and in the fullness of its fruitfulness, and in the fullness of its fruitfulness, and in the fullness of its fruitfulness

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE HOSPITAL SISTER.

DEDICATED TO SISTER M. STELLA, ST DUBOIS.

Past with the suffering, year after year,
The Hospital Sister keeps vigil and watch,
Unflagging in zeal and unflinching from fear,
For she is sustained by her girt of the Lord.

Ere first she was called by the promptings of grace,
To leave home and friends for the Convent's retreat,
A boy, of mortale illumined her face,
And her station in life was among the elite.

But her home once abandoned, the world denied,
Forgotten were beauty, rank, fortune and all
That Father the senses or pamper the pride,
To practice the virtues of Vincent de Paul.

Now, Purity, Poverty, Patience and zeal
For the glory of God and salvation of souls,
Are jewels deep set in her mottle and seal—
"The love of Jesus impelos and controls."

In the wards of the world—the maimed and the blind,
By the pot of humanity spurned and trod,
The brave hearted women, discreet and refined,
Ministers naught beside the lived crucified God.

And hence where the ward lamp dim-burns a night
Of sick, pallid forms all silently there,
She tends thee' the long, weary watches of night,
Thy Maiden hell calm her from vigil to prayer.

"The soul of the Sisters of Charity."

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

MY BIG CHIGAN.

BY CHARLES GORDON.

Yes, social friend, I love thee well
In learned doctors' spite,
Thy stories all either sleeds dispel,
And lay me to rest.

What though they tell with phlegm long,
My pores are under pasage,
I would apply with manco strong,
They are better with they last.

And oft, mild friend, to me then art
A soother, though still
Thy pleasing lessons in my heart
Beyond the preacher's skill.

Thy lore the man of worth,
Who gives his evenings to thy fear,
The color of whose virtues item
When he has passed away.

When in the lonely evening hour,
Abandoned by the world,
Or history's varied page I pore,
Man's fate in false I see.

Oft as they mowy column grows,
Then breaks and falls away,
I trace how mighty realms like man
Thus tumble to decay.

From beggar's price to monarch's robe,
One common doom is power,
Seven nature's works, the swelling globe,
Must all before cast of time.

Life's best a leaf, adroitly rolled,
And Time's the waiting breath,
That late or early we behold,
Drives all to silent death.

And what is he who smoke thee now,
A little moving heap,
Ere soon thee to follow? Like must how;
With thee in dust must sleep.

But though thy stalks forwarned are,
Thy counsels rolls on high,
Thou when my body must be low,
My soul shall cleave to thy.

"PEACE! BE STILL."

BY FATHER STAY.

Sometimes the Saviour sleeps, and it is dark;
For oh! His eyes are this world's only light,
And when the storm rises with wrath on His head
And beat it through the dread hours of the night,

So He slept once upon an Eastern lake,
In Peter's little boat, while wild winds blew
A cry rose to Him, and were He did wait,
He only responded, and the storm passed.

It is a strange life Christ lives in people's souls,
A storm is sweeping all across the deep,
While Love cries, saying, Peace! Be still!

The sky is darkened and the waves lie flat,
The tempest's strength grows fiercer every hour,
Oh the howling deep then thinks no end,
Why sleeps He still? Why does He hide His face?

Fear not! a holy hand is on the helm
That guides the back thro' all this tempest!
Quail not! a holy eye
Watches over you, though you never whelm
The ship of Faith upon its homeward path.

The Master sleeps—His pilot guards the helm;
The Master sleeps—His pilot guards the helm;
The light will shine where all before was dark—
The wild waves still remember: "Peace! be still."

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacreedy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY HUBERT ROBINSON.

CHAPTER IV.

As they emerged from the chapel the hideous form of a bell man announced that dinner would be ready in a quarter of an hour, and Redmond was ordered by his boat to be prepared to prepare a boat to might for the all-important ceremony. For, after all, "the dinner" is a very serious piece of business, and it is only each foolish young fellow who thinks it can afford to spoils his appetite at luncheon—or such delicately nurtured young ladies as Miss Eileen O'Byrne, who was either to turn up their noses at the condition of the word, and wish with a sigh that the noble institution yclept eating had never been invented.

When Redmond descended to the drawing-room he was formally presented to Rev. Father O'Doherty, the parish priest "of as avail a dinner as lies between this and New York," gaily added his reverence. "I am proud to meet you sir; and let me tell you that the Redmonds of Ballymacreedy have left a name behind them, respected, loved and honored. Have you come to stop with us?"

"No—that is, I'm—I'm so enchanted with all that I have seen of Ireland, and when I have met here"—he sought the eye of his hostess (it should be mentioned that her mother had died in giving birth to Eileen)—"that if I do not return it will not be my own fault."

"The dinner is pretty well—much better than he could have hoped. It was very crowded, but Phil liked to be undetected. He was straight in everything, and perfectly prepared to step into the O'Byrne library and explain himself right away. But he was not to get the chance. Father O'Doherty took the chair—into dinner and presided at the foot of the table. The dinner was not a la fleur, and, although served with extreme elegance, the guests were allowed the privilege of seeing what they were partaking of, and to make a judicious selection, according to palate. The wine was, as Minchin subsequently remarked, "of the rarest and choicest vintage." To hear her speak, to listen to the music of her laugh, to gaze upon her when her looks were turned in another direction, was rapture to poor Philip who drank his wine, eating nothing, but wholly and solely absorbed in the rapture of her presence. It was rack and torture to him when she rose to leave the room, and, as he opened the door for her egress, the words, "Do not remain too long over your wine," rang into his senses like a peal of sweet bells."

"Push the claret, Mr. Redmond," exclaimed his host; "you may get rather, but you won't get softer wine across the Atlantic."

"Per Bacco! this is bottled velvet," said Minchin, smacking his lips—"the color of the violet, and the gentle tartness of the raspberry. By the aiba gods! a bottle of this makes a man look for his wings to fly, sir to fly like a bird.

After some considerable time, during which Minchin and the O'Byrne had indulged in a serious potation of the Chateau Lafitte, "Are you here on a pleasure trip, Mr. Redmond?" asked Father O'Doherty.

"Well, my good fortune has made it one of pleasure, but I came originally on business. I came to endeavor to procure some of my poor father's property," replied downright Phil.

"What do you mean by rescue, Mr. Redmond asked the O'Byrne, flushing darkly red.

"I mean to purchase it from the man who now holds it.

"Oh!" And the tone of Father O'Doherty's voice was cold.

"Do you refer to Ballymacreedy?"

"I do, and to the lands of Kilnagodd and Derralossary."

The bowling hre as of the Irish chieftain rose in a black scowl.

"And suppose this man who holds these lands were unwilling to sell?"

"Oh! every man has his price," said the unconscious Philip.

"The O'Byrne rose, and stretching his self to his full height haughty exclaimed, "When I said one rood of Kilnagodd and Derralossary may be shattered into fragments beneath the stone glass," coating as he spoke, the wine goblet upon the oak, where it shivered into ten thousand pieces.

Had a thunderbolt fallen upon the sprayer, and, splitting roof and rafters, passed into their midst, the luckless hero of this narrative could scarcely have been less scared and astonished. The admonitory winkings of Minchin, and the ankle-rubs of the good priest had been lost upon him. He had rushed upon his fate and had impaled himself. Fool that he was, never to have conjectured that the haughty possessor of the land of his ancestors was the fierce old chieftain who now sat scowling at the ceiling, and quaffing goblet after goblet of the rich red wine! Everything depended to the fact—the conversation on the previous evening, the reclamation of Eileen upon the hill overlooking Lough Dan, the reference of Father O'Doherty. He was a senseless idiot and had planted the thorn where he would have sown the bright seed of friendship. Could he apologize? Never! Could he explain! He must.

"The fact is—he commenced, when his host pulled him up:

"A word of advice to you, Mr. Redmond. When you enter a man's house do not turn appraiser and play the amateur auctioneer.

"Here—I mean in Paul.

"Pardon me. If you consider that because you have scraped a few pennies together—Heaven knows how; I don't want to inquire—that you can come over here and dictate insulting terms to a man with reference to his own goods and chattels, upon his own hearth, let me tell you, sir, that—

"Hear me," exclaimed Father O'Doherty. "I am certain that our young friend had no intention of giving annoyance when he made those observations."

"Upon the honor of a man," roared Redmond, who was in a white heat of mortification, "I meant no offense, and further more—

"Let so drop the subject, sir," and go to the drawing-room for coffee," said the O'Byrne imperiously.

"But I will not drop the subject until I explain myself."

Mr. Redmond, do not press my endurance to my uttermost. And the haughty lip curled in the disdain.

"Not a word," whispered Father O'Doherty. "You can make it all right by and by, and if you fail I will succeed.

Still Philip was not satisfied. He was the outraged party. He demanded satisfaction or a cruel wrong. Was he to remain in the pillory and be pelted with the bitter taunts and diatribe of the man whom of all others he was most desirous of conciliating? What would she think of him when her father came to tell her his version of the affair? Would he not suffer and stand condemned, however innocent he might be? It was maddening, and Redmond, following his host, brusquely demanded a few minutes conversation.

"Forbid it, Heaven, the hermit cried" exclaimed Minchin, playfully seizing our hero by the shoulders and twirling him toottom fashion, while the priest engaged the attention of the O'Byrne in another direction.

"Are you mad Redmond?" said Minchin, in a low tone. "On this subject he has a craze. Why, in the name of Jupiter Olympus, did you introduce it?

"Am I to be under the imputation of being a pedlar, an auctioneer, a blackguard?" asked the other, anxiously.

"The thing will be as dead as Queen Anne in five minutes, if you will let it cross the Styx.

"But I did not know that Mr. O'Byrne was the present proprietor of Ballymacreedy.

"Then why didn't you say so?

"I said not he listened to."

"It's easily explained.

When Redmond entered the drawing-room the host was speaking in a low tone, and that it was about him he had little doubt from the expression of surprise, pain and anger which flitted across her face.

Determined not to be baffled in his purpose this time, he strode across the apartment, and, confronting the O'Byrne said: "If you will kindly permit me a word of explanation—"

"To take a cup of coffee, Mr. Redmond," interrupted Miss O'Byrne, "and—and you will excuse me if—I wish you good-night."

And courtesying very low, she turned from him and swept out of the room.

A choking sensation seized our hero. "Something as his throat—anger, mortification, bitter mortification—clutched him fast.

"I'll be hanged if I'll stay here any longer" he said; and so earnest was his rage that, without waiting to bid his host farewell or to hint his intention to Minchin, he strode out into the quadrangle, through the arched entrance, across the drawbridge, and towards he knew not in what direction, reckless, hopeless, and listless.

"Why had he met her? His path had been calm and peace. Why had she treated him in this way? What had he done to her? He knew how her father would vamp on his version of the story. Was ever an innocent man so deeply wronged. He would leave Ireland next day, and place the broad Atlantic between him and Eileen, thus lovely, bewitching girl. Why was she so captivating? Where did the charm lie?

"Thoughts all-conflicting, all contradictory carped through his brain as he crashed onward. The summer dew lulled to soothe his fevered mind; the cool night breeze fanning across the Shangnamore mountain did not cool his burning brow. The gray dawn of glorious day still found him plodding onwards, and the sun was high above the horizon when he entered the picturesque little village of Enniskerry. He had left Castlegrany fifteen fresh miles behind him across the mountains.

When he had succeeded in accosting the inmates of Provencourt Arms, he demanded writing materials and a messenger.

"Is it pin an' ink at this time o' day, sir? demanded the sleepy handmaiden. "Yes; here's half-a-crown for you. Open your eyes and hurry up.

He wrote the following note to the O'Byrne, and dispatched it by a ragged gossoon, who started on his errand, up the hill that leads by the Pigeon House, mountain deer. He also forwarded an order for his luggage to the landlord of Dublin-street Arms.

"Sir—As you would pass as an esplanade, last night, I hastes upon asking, S. O. You did not know that you were the possessor of the land of my forefathers, and I was ignorant of the fact. In thanking you for your hospitality I offended, but know that I would have never enjoyed it, as it has been a source of intense pleasure and likewise of bitter pain.

"Yours, sir, "PHILIP REDMOND.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

A Model Ghost Story.

A very singular story which forms one of the sensational topics of the day is the best authenticated of the modern stories of the supernatural that have been lately told. Only a short time ago a young and well-educated gentleman, Mr. A., was invited to pay a visit to his distinguished friend, Mr. Israel. The house was filled with guests, but a large and handsome room was placed at his disposal, apparently one of the best in the house. For three days he had a delightful visit; delightful in every respect except that on the third night a horrible dream—or was really—very suddenly awakened by some one entering his room, and on looking around saw the room perfectly lighted, while at the window stood a lady elegantly attired, in the act of throwing something out. This accomplished she turned her face towards the only spectator, showing a face so distorted by evil passions and fiendish malice as to be horrible. The light and figure with the dreadful face disappeared. On returning to his city home he was shocked to find a similar occurrence which had for three consecutive nights disturbed his rest, and he was so shaken and so real that the vile expression seemed to horrify every one who saw it. Not great like after, the artist went to make an evening visit to Mr. Israel, as he wished to have him come, remarkable old family. Mr. Israel Mr. A. a surprise to see his guest looking so well, and, instead of a stately, well-dressed lady, the one who had so troubled his slumbers on the previous night, "Indeed, however, the revolting, wicked expression. Soon as he saw it he involuntarily exclaimed: "Why, I have seen that lady!" "Indeed" said Mr. I., smiling, "that is hardly possible, as she died more than a hundred years ago. She was the second wife of my great grandfather by the Tuga on the subject of so much trouble and grief to my husband's wife by a former marriage, in order to make her own child heir to the property. The unfortunate child broke his neck in a fall from the window, and there was every reason to believe that he was precipitated from the window by his stepmother. The artist then told him he had the experience of hitherto repeated experience or dream, and sent for his sketch, which so far as the features were concerned, was identical with the portrait in Mr. Israel's gallery. The sketch has since been photographed, but from its hideous expression is far from pleasant to look upon.

A Village Romance.

A little shepherd of the forests of Palinea and a young girl of Santo Pietro, the one on the mountain village where the fashionable lands of Palinea go to spend the summer. The young girl also loved the youth. At the first sight of marriage the shepherd young girl fell into a terrible passion, so terrible that for several days after the Socks of Palinea dare to venture near the hillsides of Santo Pietro. But on the day the young girl fell ill, and at last the father relented.

"Go with me about me," he said, "after he has drawn his conscript's number and has served his time. I can't give you a husband who will be compelled to leave you as soon as you are married.

He came it that the conscript was there there is no telegraph, the shepherd in an adjoining village where what had been said. The fact is that on entering the village he had only one idea uppermost in his head—escape from his term of military service.

The next day while cutting wood in the forest, he, as if by accident, gave his rival hand a smart blow with his hatchet and severed three fingers. Now in the military examination take place, the wem some and weighed his hurt as well as he was able, and when the wound was healed, and he had been rightly and duly exempted, he went to San Pietro and bravely repeated his offer.

"I am not going to serve in the army," he said, "for I am sure they will never take me. You see my hand is gone.

"But the father stopped him by a word.

"Never," he cried, "will I give my daughter to one who is maimed.

And it was apparent by his tone of voice that he meant what he had said. In spite of his daughter's illness, he remained inexorable. It was clear that the old man did not like a maimed son-in-law. He made but one reply to the prayers and tears of his young girl.

"Never, you thoroughly understand. Never; and don't let him come hanging around here any more. Cripples ought to marry cripples. Let him marry the little Nina, daughter of Palinea, or the honeybee Saint Andrea.

The young girl did not reply, and notwithstanding her illness did she speak of her shepherd. When she was convalescent she was seized with a longing for the forest and the open air, and every day took long walks in the shadows of the pines. Her cheeks and her flocks knew so well. One morning, when she was gone, a man came across the little shepherd, pale and haggard like a shepherd tired of the world.

"Show me your wounded hand," she said.

He showed it to her bashfully, and pointed by she pressed it to her lips.

"Show me, she said to him again, "the hatchet which wounded you."

He showed it to her. Then, raising it and placing her hand on the stone.

"This is how you did it, isn't it? This is how the accident happened?

And before the shepherd was able to reply the hatchet had fallen, the stone was reddened, and beside it lay the three figures of the pretty maiden of Santa Pietro.

"Now, shepherd," she said, "show me how you healed your wound."

And together they returned to Santo Pietro, he with tears in his eyes and she laughing. What could the father do? He has no improbably said that cripples ought to marry cripples." The wedding was celebrated two months ago.

Death of a Centenarian.

Mrs. Bridget Mahaney died recently at her home, 86 York street, Baltimore, in the 110th year of her age. She was born in county Clare, Ireland, but had lived in Baltimore for more than 40 years. Her husband died in Ireland. She lived alone in a couple of rooms, but was frequently visited and cared for by her daughter, who is out of service in that city.

She was remarkably vigorous, and until a year ago worked in the packing house of J. J. Brinkley & Sons, 176 South Charles street Baltimore. She was able to go about until three weeks ago, when her fatal illness began. Her mind was clear to the STONES IN THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Patriotic Inscriptions on Some Sent by the States.

The last stones in the sides of the Washington Monument having been laid and the preparations for putting the roof in position begun, a study of the stones sent by the various States and cities of the Union and a number of foreign nations, in addition to the monument is interesting. About half of the subjoined contributed have already been put in position in the walls of the monument, and the remainder lie in the shed, the "lapidarium" of the monument grounds. The one stone which was in the bogun years ago were set in the wall inside the monument. The remainder are waiting action. When the present monument force took hold of the monument it was decided to put in more stones into the wall as it was being built, but to await the completion of the monument proper and then bolt the blocks to the inside of the wall at points just above the lasding on the staircase.

This will probably be done after the roof is completed. The idea is to place the front of each block of and bolt it securely to the walls as indicated above. It is probable, however, that not all the stones will be put into the monument, as there are many from nations from out of existence, and others of such a character as to make the cost of delivery prohibitive. There is, for instance, one from some enterprising firm of undertakers in New York, handsomely dressed and ornamented with some fine work of carving the name of the city in a handsome block of marble.

There are numbers from stone cutters unions and other organizations. Of this class many have long since passed out of existence. Of fraternal societies, lodges of the various orders, secrets and others of this sort are numerous. Of the 160 stones received it is probable that more than 100 will be placed in the inside of the monument in view of the visitors. All the states and territories but two or three have sent stones, and others are expected to follow. Many of the cities of the United States and foreign nations are represented in the collection. Cities, for instance has sent a block of marble from the quarries of Carrigmore in Chinese characters, recommending the virtues and heroic qualities of Washington, and after comparing him to China's greatest men, winds up by saying that he was great and good like a saint.

Japan also sent a stone. So does Switzerland. Scores of societies have government abroad. Great Britain is, however, represented in her absence, as are she frequently and France. A block of marble sent by the Pope was the object of so much trouble and grief to my husband's wife by a former marriage, in order to make her own child heir to the property. The unfortunate child broke his neck in a fall from the window, and there was every reason to believe that he was precipitated from the window by his stepmother. The artist then told him he had the experience of hitherto repeated experience or dream, and sent for his sketch, which so far as the features were concerned, was identical with the portrait in Mr. Israel's gallery. The sketch has since been photographed, but from its hideous expression is far from pleasant to look upon.

A Village Romance.

A little shepherd of the forests of Palinea and a young girl of Santo Pietro, the one on the mountain village where the fashionable lands of Palinea go to spend the summer. The young girl also loved the youth. At the first sight of marriage the shepherd young girl fell into a terrible passion, so terrible that for several days after the Socks of Palinea dare to venture near the hillsides of Santo Pietro. But on the day the young girl fell ill, and at last the father relented.

"Go with me about me," he said, "after he has drawn his conscript's number and has served his time. I can't give you a husband who will be compelled to leave you as soon as you are married.

He came it that the conscript was there there is no telegraph, the shepherd in an adjoining village where what had been said. The fact is that on entering the village he had only one idea uppermost in his head—escape from his term of military service.

The next day while cutting wood in the forest, he, as if by accident, gave his rival hand a smart blow with his hatchet and severed three fingers. Now in the military examination take place, the wem some and weighed his hurt as well as he was able, and when the wound was healed, and he had been rightly and duly exempted, he went to San Pietro and bravely repeated his offer.

"I am not going to serve in the army," he said, "for I am sure they will never take me. You see my hand is gone.

"But the father stopped him by a word.

"Never," he cried, "will I give my daughter to one who is maimed.

And it was apparent by his tone of voice that he meant what he had said. In spite of his daughter's illness, he remained inexorable. It was clear that the old man did not like a maimed son-in-law. He made but one reply to the prayers and tears of his young girl.

"Never, you thoroughly understand. Never; and don't let him come hanging around here any more. Cripples ought to marry cripples. Let him marry the little Nina, daughter of Palinea, or the honeybee Saint Andrea.

The young girl did not reply, and notwithstanding her illness did she speak of her shepherd. When she was convalescent she was seized with a longing for the forest and the open air, and every day took long walks in the shadows of the pines. Her cheeks and her flocks knew so well. One morning, when she was gone, a man came across the little shepherd, pale and haggard like a shepherd tired of the world.

"Show me your wounded hand," she said.

He showed it to her bashfully, and pointed by she pressed it to her lips.

"Show me, she said to him again, "the hatchet which wounded you."

He showed it to her. Then, raising it and placing her hand on the stone.

"This is how you did it, isn't it? This is how the accident happened?

And before the shepherd was able to reply the hatchet had fallen, the stone was reddened, and beside it lay the three figures of the pretty maiden of Santa Pietro.

"Now, shepherd," she said, "show me how you healed your wound."

And together they returned to Santo Pietro, he with tears in his eyes and she laughing. What could the father do? He has no improbably said that cripples ought to marry cripples." The wedding was celebrated two months ago.

A CASE WITHOUT A PARALLEL.

A Girl who has Lived 163 Days Without Food and Eight Weeks Without Drink.

FORT PLAIN, N. Y., August 29.—Miss Kate Sunday, who is quite without food for 163 days, was very low to-night, but is still conscious and talks. The end may soon begin, a study of the stones sent by the various States and cities of the Union and a number of foreign nations, in addition to the monument is interesting. About half of the subjoined contributed have already been put in position in the walls of the monument, and the remainder lie in the shed, the "lapidarium" of the monument grounds. The one stone which was in the bogun years ago were set in the wall inside the monument. The remainder are waiting action. When the present monument force took hold of the monument it was decided to put in more stones into the wall as it was being built, but to await the completion of the monument proper and then bolt the blocks to the inside of the wall at points just above the lasding on the staircase.

LAUGHTER.

Many Different Varieties. Commercial Value of a Good Laugh.

A laugh may convey all manner of sentiments, from a mere titter, if it may be most unusual or the most discordant of sounds, the most delightful or the most horrible that can fall upon our ears. Perhaps the most hearty laugh of merry children with the glittering cry of the monster, or the hoarse laugh of a defiant criminal, the musical ripple of a delicious joke, with the roars of a tipsy crowd at a fight.

A healthy natural laugh is perhaps more than a really musical note. The giggle, the snigger, the half-choked laugh are commonly the most hideous, but the laugh that melodious sound, the laugh in the perfection. It should be a thrill, not too loud, nor too long. It should not bear any double meaning, any hidden sarcasm in its mirth. It should not be so boisterous as to exhaust the laughter and deafen the listeners.

Peg Woffington is said to have been celebrated for the power of her laughter on the stage—a most difficult accomplishment, for nothing (except, perhaps a sneeze) is harder to counterfeit than a laugh. There are many varieties of laughs. There is the musical, cultivated and extremely rare one, pleasant to listen to as a chime of bells. There is the jolly, if somewhat stiff, merriment of childhood, the happiness of which it does one good to hear.

There is the loud guffaw of the vulgar, and the laughter which appears likely to tear the lungers to pieces, coming, but to wipe his eyes after the explosion is over. There is the jeering laugh, sometimes when a by person at a loss which to say next, or cannot, or dare not, a retorted Ward described it. There is the silly girl's giggle and the school boy's snigger, as he reflects on the mischief he has done, and will repeat collected, piece of mischief. There is the chuckle of the miser over his gold.

All these laughs bear some family resemblance to the other; they all, in their distinct expressions, sensations of pleasure. There are darker descriptions of laughter. There are laughs which are the hideous utterance of the soul, and that be expressed in some instances, by a laugh can convey contempt which words cannot express.

Is any one proof against being annoyed by ridicule? Even a dog is sensible when he has been made a laughing stock of, imperfectly. Some animals are indeed quite as sensitive to derision as human beings. The laughter of the underbred, which binds upon the shoulders of the minor troubles of their neighbors—say their misfortunes, or their neighbors—say their misfortunes, or their neighbors—say their misfortunes, or

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the third agent in popularizing knowl, and popularizing knowledge is the mightiest work of civilization in the world. In our times, religious journalism is not only a useful and serious occupation, not only a work indispensable to the welfare of society, but a work of apostolic zeal. What it is and what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism, what the Catholic journalist should be, what are the means of success at all, the first duty to truth, whatever it may be, to convert all, the first duty to truth, whatever it may be, to convert all, the first duty to truth, whatever it may be, to convert

Farm and Home.

LOST. A BOY.

He went from the old home heartbroken
Only two years ago,
A laughing, frolicking fellow
It would do you good to know,
Since then we have not seen him
And we say, with a nameless pain,
The boy that we knew and loved so,
We shall never see again.

Once bearing the name we gave him
Come home to us
But this is not the dear fellow
We missed and went away.
Tall as the man he calls father,
With a man's body and face,
Is he who taken by the heartbeats
The lost boy's place.

We miss the laugh that made music
Wherever the lad bent his way,
This man has a smile most winsome,
His eyes have a grave look;
We know he is thinking and planning
His way in the world of men,
And we cannot help but love him,
But we long for our boy again.

We are proud of this manly fellow
Who comes to take his place,
With blade of the manhood in his heart
In his earnest, thoughtful face,
And yet comes the longing to see him
For the boy we went heartsick miss,
Who went away from the heartbeats
Forever with a kiss.

Farmers, Care for Yourselves.

I often think it strange that, as a rule, a farmer is kinder to his horses than he is to himself. If he takes out his crockdoer, how careful he is on returning to groom the animal till perfectly clean, to see that water is not given till the animal has cooled; yet often without cause or reason; and, without heeding the perspiration that streams from the pores, which are clogged by dust, he sits down to dinner, satisfied if hands and face are clean. A change of underwear would not compry the mistake, and any wife who thinks about these things will place the garments where they can be easily reached, for man is an impatient being, and must have what he wants there before his eyes. Leather slippers do not absorb moisture, and are therefore best, and nothing refreshes the feet more than a regular washing in tepid water and clean socks.

Mosquitoes Under the Microscope.

We have long held the opinion that the mosquito is an unmitigated scoundrel, who could give our own lively Sal six stones and a beating over a course, but we are convinced. A gentleman has examined Mr. Mosquito under a microscope, and his description is, to say the least, startling. It appears that in the "bill" of the little beast above there are no fewer than five distinct surgical instruments. These are described as a lancet, two most sets, a suction pump and a small Corliss steam engine. It appears that when a "skeeter" settles down to his work upon a nice tender portion of the human frame the lance is first pushed into the flesh, the two sews, placed back to back, begin to work up and down to enlarge the hole, then the pump is inserted and the victim's blood is siphoned up to the reservoir carried behind, and finally to complete the cruelty of the performance, the wretch drops a quantity of poison into the wound to keep it irritated. Then the bominitive fend takes a fly around just to digest your gore and makes tracks for a fresh victim, or if the first one has been of unusually good quality he returns to the same happy hunting ground. The mosquito's marvelous energy, combined with his peculiar mode of operating, make him at once a terror and a pest. Our English skingrazers are doves in comparison with them.

Value of Sunflowers.

If half that has been written in praise of sunflowers is true, they are worthy of attention of farmers in all parts of the country. They will grow and mature seed in every portion of our territory, from Southern Florida to Northern Dakota. In this latitude a crop of seed can be matured in about ninety days from planting. Several farmers in Michigan and Illinois stated that an average crop of seed of the Russian variety is sixty bushels per acre. The leaves of sunflowers, which are easily cut and cured, are regarded as equal to those of corn-weed for feeding to horses. The hulls and husks, from which the seed has been beaten out, make a very hot fire, and are valuable for heating and cooking purposes where wood and coal are scarce. That sunflower seed is more valuable than any kind of grain for feeding fowls is generally admitted. It is certain that all the larger varieties of wild birds prefer it. If refuse is to be placed in chemical analysis to determining the food value of different substances, sunflower seed is much more valuable than corn of any of the small grains for feeding to sheep and hogs. Still, it is doubtful if any sheep or hog raised in this country has experimented with sunflower seed sufficiently to speak concerning its results. If anyone has, the public would like to know the results. Sunflowers are cultivated the same as corn, when raised in a field, with the exception that but a single stalk is raised in a hill. The seed is very easily beaten out by knocking the heads against any hard substance. The crop is not liable to attacks of insects, and endures drought well. The cost of seed is very small. The plants may be raised by rows of twenty on the sides of roads, along the line of fences, on the side of stony hills, and in other places not convenient to cultivate with horse implements. The flowers present a fine appearance, and greatly add to the appearance of the farm. It is believed that they are of considerable value in purifying the air in places where malaria abounds. They are raised for this purpose in some Italian localities, and in Rome, Italy and Austria the manufacture of oil from sunflower-seed is a very important industry.

Time to Cook Vegetables In.

A French cook gives the following general rules for cooking all kinds of vegetables: Green vegetables should be thoroughly washed in cold water, and then dropped into water which has been salted and is beginning to boil. There should be a tablespoonful of salt for each two quarts of water. If the water boil long before the vegetables are put in it has lost all its gases, and the mineral ingredients are deposited on the bottom and sides of the kettle, so that the water is flat and tasteless, and the vegetables will not look well or have a fine flavor. The time for boiling green vegetables depends much upon their age and time they have been gathered. Below is a very good time table for cooking vegetables.

Beet greens, one hour.
Beets, one to two hours.
Onions, one to two hours.
Carrots, one to two hours.
Spinach, one to two hours.
Tomatoes, fresh, one hour.
Parsnips, one to two hours.
Cauliflower, one to two hours.
Dandelion, two to three hours.
Potatoes, boiled, thirty minutes.
Tomatoes, canned, thirty minutes.
Potatoes, new, boiled, fifty minutes.
Shelled beans, boiled, sixty minutes.
Green corn, thirty to sixty minutes.
Sweet potatoes, boiled, fifty minutes.
Squash, boiled, twenty-five minutes.
Sweet potatoes, baked, sixty minutes.
Asparagus, fifteen to thirty minutes.
String beans, boiled, one or two hours.
Turnips, yellow, one and a half hours.
Cabbage, forty-five minutes to two hours.
Green peas, boiled, twenty to forty minutes.
Turnips, white, forty-five to sixty minutes.

A Chapter on the Newly Married.

After the honeymoon is over, in which such lives in the seventh heaven of bliss, and is blind to all outward surroundings, there comes a day when the mere matter of fact duties begin, and they settle down to the realities of life. The habits, the manners, and the tempers are things that neither knows anything about in the other, and that which was concealed in an engagement for months, is quickly revealed in the closer relationship of married life. Some little habit that the bachelor or maiden had formed rasps to madness the nerves of the other, and the determination on either side to break the other of the fault only chafes and irks both without attaining the object. He thinks that home life should all be pleasure; she thinks a little society and gaiety would be preferable. He is tired when he comes home at night—tired of seeing people, tired of talking to them; he has been in a whirl all day. She has spent by herself through the same long hours in the "form of a cottage" that seemed so political to talk about, or has spent a dreary time, solitary and alone, through cheerless winter day in her room at their lodgings, longing and is only kept from downright rebellion by the thought that when Charley comes home they will go to the theater or to see "ma." Then there is disappointment on both sides. She thinks he is "real mean" because he does not indorse her plans, and he thinks she is downright silly to wish to leave such a cozy fireside and such a comfortable little home place for any other spot on earth.

She has always found her "I wills" and "I won'ts" the law and the gospel, and her chances to one Charley yields to her imperial highness, and ever after a hen-pecked husband. But that same Charley is wise, and can convince his "little wife" without scolding her, he is fairer by far, not only her heart, but her judgment; and she looks up to him and respects him for his firmness.

It is very seldom the case that the first month of married life are the happiest, and it takes a big stock of love and good sense to smooth a couple over the breakers into the smooth, open, matrimonial sea. The faults that are discovered, the weaknesses that are shown, the foibles that are betrayed, can only be met with forbearance. It is pain's hope for a blissful future or a realized, than every after year continue their oneness of heart, of sympathy and if purpose, and any couple of this kind, long married, will tell you they are happier after all these years than they were the day before they were married.

How to Overcome Moths.

This is one of the greatest vexations which careful housekeepers have to contend with, and their depredations are not to be remedied after they have once made inroads. Houses heated by furnaces are supposed predisposed to have moths, but every housekeeper must be on the watch for them, for from the time that the windows begin to be left open the trouble begins. Heavy carpets do not require taking up every year unless in constant use. Take out the tacks from these, fold the carpets back, wash the floor in strong soda with a teaspoonful of borax dissolved in them. Dash with insect powder or lay tobacco leaves along the edge, and retack. All moths can be kept away and the egg destroyed by this means. Ingrain or other carpets, after shaking, are brightened by sprinkling a pound of salt over the surface and sweeping carefully and thoroughly. It is also an excellent plan to wet the carpet with brown water, using a thick flannel dip wring tightly, taking care not to wet it but only to dampen. Open the windows and dry the carpet before replacing the furniture. Other articles, such as blankets and wearing apparel, must be beaten and brushed and folded carefully. Be careful to clean every grease spot with ammonia and water, not too strong, and a little soda cloth. The pieces of camphor into little bundles, and put one into each article. Wrap the silver in newspapers, as printer's ink is a great preventive of moths, and then lay them up in strong sheeting bags, labeled, so that it will not be necessary to open them during the summer except for constant use. This is a good way for those who do not possess cedar boxes, and the articles need have no other care if every spot is cleaned as directed, and the garments are not left hanging in the closet too long before putting away for the season.

MONITOR MENTION.

[illegible] Market street. Furnished rooms reasonable. Country customers solicited. Mrs J. A. Dunbar —Dr James F. Collins has removed from No. 1 to No. 108 van Ness ave near market.

—E. Donnelly & Co. Physicians and surgeons, for reports and Hospital etc. Surgical operations and Diseases a specialty.

—Dust Pictures taken at the Imperial, 724½ Market street.

—Williams & Morton, Photographers, 911 Market street, Mechanics Block. The New Gallery

—Universal Dental Association, 923 Market street, Auditorium block, 17 years experience, all styles of teeth, best work, lowest prices. Dr. Kelly, Manager.

—Ladies can have their Hair dyed, Moles and Warts removed, Face Powder, Rouge, Perfumery, Jewelry, Belting and all Household articles. Business private.

—J. W. Tucker & Co., fine watches and clocks. Watches and clocks repaired. 1 Market street Kearny and Geary streets.

—Ef you want a cigar easily beaten out by knocking the hands against any hard substance. The crop is not liable to attacks of insects, and endures drought well. The cost of seed is very small. The plants may be raised by rows of twenty on the sides of roads, along the line of fences, on the side of stony hills, and in other places not convenient to cultivate with horse implements. The flowers present a fine appearance, and greatly add to the appearance of the farm. It is believed that they are of considerable value in purifying the air in places where malaria abounds. They are raised for this purpose in some Italian localities, and in Rome, Italy, and Austria the manufacture of oil from sunflower-seed is a very important industry.

—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or Consumption Cure, is a positive specific for that fatal disease, when taken in its early stages, and even in the last stage it gives great relief. Sold by druggists everywhere.

—Dr. Jaxon's Antiseptic Gauze, Cotton and Bandages, Sanitary Napkins, Dr. Jaxon's Uterine Supporters, Dr. Jaxon's Uterine Wafers, Dr. Jaxon's Uterine Tablets, Dr. Jaxon's Uterine Pessaries, Dr. Jaxon's Uterine Injections

HONORS TO IRISH LEADERS.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

here read communications from Alexander Sullivan and Patrick Egan.

MR. ANTHONY'S SPEECH.

Mr. William R. Redmond, M. P., was next introduced. He spoke earnestly in favor of Ireland's cause. He said that if it had not been for Parnell, the English Government would have made short work of him and his associates. He referred to the Curfew Bill law still in force in Ireland, and closed with an eloquent appeal for unity. Mrs. Parnell followed. The cheering was immense. When order was restored, she said her audience had had such a full feast that anything she might have to say would be as distasteful as fish after soup and meat. She said she loved the poor men—the working men. She loved them even better than her own son. She wanted her audience to do their duty to their native land and their adopted country.

CATHOLIC NEWS IN BRIEF.

—The Papal Consistory has been officially fixed to meet in September. Probably twelve Cardinals will be created.

—The corner-stone of the new chapel of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, Columbus, O., was laid last Sunday.

—The consecration of the new church of St. Thomas of Aquin, Flatlands, N. Y., was laid by Bishop Loughlin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 12th inst.

—The Catholic inmates of the Penitentiary in Columbus, Ohio, are now allowed the use of a spacious apartment for the exercise of Catholic worship.

—Twenty-six young ladies renounced the world and entered upon a convent life at the Convent of Notre Dame, Baltimore, Aug. 5th.

—Twenty-six young ladies took the white veil of the Order of Notre Dame on the 5th from the hands of Rev. D. Manley, chaplain of the Charles Street Convent, of that order, Baltimore.

—Consistory begins to play havoc with the mother tongue. The latest compound announced from the laboratorie is monsieur-chevalier-archevêque-de-Toulouse. Monsieur's name is not given.

—The Pope for the new mission at Sitauei will have Quebec on the 15th inst., and will be installed on the 17th. The Consul will be opened on the 1st of September.

—The Rev. Father Mathe, of Detroit, Mich., a convert to Catholicity, celebrated his first Mass in that city recently. The young priest was ordained by Bishop Dwenn on June 29th.

—The tenacity of the Indian memory is very great. It is said that the Mic Mac Indians still chant the Gregorian Mass taught them centuries ago by the Jesuit missionaries.

—St. Mary's College, North East, Pa., is now in a most prosperous condition. The Redemptorist Fathers have made many improvements in the building that was formerly a Methodist seminary.

—Cardinal Jacobini gives Amstutch from Valley Field, Quebec, on Aug. 7, continued the and intelligence that Rev. Fr. Ethier, vicar of St. Bridget's, of Montreal, was drowned while bathing.

—The recent work of the ex-Jesuit, "Car-ta de M. Gretti," entitled "The Scandal of the Royal Unions," etc., has been placed upon the Index, July 16th, and the fact is made public by His Eminence Cardinal Martinelli, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation.

—Hon. George Couture of Levis has given $7,000 to the Sisters of Charity and other institutions in Quebec, and Mr. Narcisse Dionne of St. Giles has donated $10,000 on his decay.

—Eight thousand persons were present recently at the renewal of baptismal vows, in the open air, at the shrine of a Mission given by the Rev. Passionist Father Sebastian, near Cyprian at Kimmitty, near Bar, Ireland.

—Mgr. Kirby, Bishop of Lita and Rector of the Irish College, is seriously ill, and is affected by symptoms caused by a rapid fall in the temperature of the city, and has state given cause of anxiety to his numerous friends.

—The very Rev. William Keegan, Vicar-General of the Diocese of Brooklyn, has been rector of the Church of the Assumption, corner of Grand and Jay streets, Brooklyn, for twenty-five years. During that period he has not taken more than two months' vacation.

THE CHOLERA'S ONE GOOD RESULT.

Reconciling the Sisters of Charity to the Hospitals.

One of the results of the outbreak of the cholera in the south of Europe has been the calling back of the Sisters of Charity, who had been expelled by the municipalities, to Toulon and Marseilles, and to Rome, from before announced, more than one nun has already fallen a victim to the plague. On this subject the Univers has the following excellent remarks:

The Republic is incapable of lacking the cholera. Two companions ever accompany the scourge, charity and prayer. These things are essentially clerical. God, who has been expelled from the public institutions and the highway, comes back by the chastisement, and on His path self-devotion, intercession, and repentance spring up. Scarcely did the scourge appear, when the Bishops ordered their priests to remain at their posts and hold themselves in readiness to minister the sacraments. Not one deserted, not one fled in the midst of the general migration of the terrified people. The Sisters of Charity and the other religious are only waiting to be called, for it is the hour for their self-sacrifice. As many victims as are needed, so many good wills will be found. At Marseilles, the papers tell us, a hospital has been opened expressly for the cholera, and hence has been made to invite Sisters to it. As charity returns, the cholera is restored to its place of honor. The more the scourge extends in Toulon, the more urgently does the municipality beg for Sisters. The days of the epidemic are not like the days of politics. For the elections the religious are driven out; for the cholera they are called back. In Paris it is said instructions are ready to bring back the hospital Sisters at the best appearance of the scourge. The men who banished the hospitals know very well that they would find the priests again in the hour of danger.

The Cancers continues its observations as follows: "Charity does not harbor malice. The greatest insult that could be done to the heroic servants of the poor and the sick would be to doubt them in this moment, or not to invite them to serve when cost. To have recourse to them. As they want away without irritation, so they will come back without hesitation. They have neither to avenge themselves nor to triumph over their persecutors. Their vengeance will be to pardon, and their triumph to die. We see only at the beginning of the scourge and must fear that it will continue its forward march. Science alone has been called in to combat it. We now see that it is insufficient. To disinfectants, fumigations and quarantine, the Christian people are virtually moved to add prayer. In former times that was the great preservative. Many attempts have been made to cure evils when the measure of prayer and penance was full. A great number of the towns have preserved the remembrance of the efficacy of intercession with God and His saints. A thousand traditional testimonies of the confidence of the people and of the mercy of God have found their way into local histories. It would be curious if in Paris alone the centuries, the histories in the hospitals, the public processions would recommence of their own accord, and if once more the scourge should not be stayed but before the shrine of the holy Protectress of the city. What a lesson it would be for our lazarettes! And what a marvelous passage of God upon His enemies!"

THE IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

Resolutions Adopted Regarding the Boston Convention and other Business of the Organization.

A meeting of the Presidents of Branches in San Francisco and vicinity was held in Hibernian Hall on last Friday evening, Dr. J. F. Gibbons presiding. The President stated the principal object of the meeting was to consider the labors and results of the great Boston convention recently held there, and to take such steps as might better advance the cause of suffering Ireland in the future.

Resolutions were read and adopted, pledging anew the fealty of the membership to the Irish National League and the cause of Ireland, and meaning their determination to work with the League until Ireland has achieved her self-government, also indorsing the resolutions and proceedings of the Boston convention, commending the management of the affairs of the National League during the past fifteen months, and thanking Alexander Sullivan, as president of the organization, for his zeal and efficiency in that office.

Judge Crowley, in some eloquent remarks, moved a vote of thanks to the proceedings of the Convention resulting, as also the other labors referred specially and with commendation to the action of Mr. Egan, the president-elect of the National League, declining to revive any consideration for the year for which he is elected, notwithstanding that the convention, by resolution, voted a salary of $5,000.

The thanks of the presidents were voted to Judge Crowley for the acceptable manner in which he has served the organization in California and Nevada, as member of the Executive Committee, and also thanked the Executive Committee for so appointing him for another year. They promised him their hearty support and personal active work during the present term.

Professor Clark of Oakland offered a resolution condemning in the strongest terms the "action of the British Government in forcibly commanding political martyr, by refusing to inquire into the charges made by Parnell and other members of Parliament, and thus detaining in forcible exile from their homes in Ireland."

Judge Crowley moved that a grand concert and entertainment be given for the purpose of raising funds, a portion to be applied to the National League fund and a portion for State contingent expenses, which motion was carried unanimously, and a committee appointed to carry the same into effect. The committee consists of Messrs. Crowley, Gallagher, Cummins, Gibbons, Ryan, Cullen, Ryan, Ryan, Ryan

Poetry.

WHY IS IT SO?

BY PATRICK HEARN.

Some find work where some find rest,
And on the weary world goes on;
I sometimes wonder why it is so?
The answer comes when life is gone.

Some eyes sleep when some eyes wake
And on the dreary night drag slow;
Some hearts beat where some hearts break,
I often wonder why 'tis so.

Some hands fold where other hands
Are lifted heavily in the sky,
And so they' sees and they' lands
Move on the two extremes of life.

Some feel halt while some feel tired,
In tireless march, a theory say,
Some struggle on where some have fled,
Some sink, where others shun the fray.

Some sleep on while others weep
The night of life, the day of tears;
They tell us that all runs even
Around their paths above the years.

A ROYAL PILGRIM.

Heedless of his royal empire or his gorgeous ducal crowns,
Or the widely spread dominions where he ruled in high honour,
Shedding virtue's fairy beams round his ancient royal throne,
Who may be the royal monarch poorly clad and all unknown!

Who now lays aside his empire which had held such power of sway,
And with staff and scrip pilgrim, starts with joy on his journey?
"Good Sir, why do you so humbly travel from shrine to shrine
While his priestly train now glowing with a fervor all divine.

At Pavona there dwelt a brother, Brother Giles, of saintly fame,
Canonized, the holy Louis to his monastery came;
Unattended by his courtiers, unarrayed in pomp was he,
Begged to see the lowly brother, asked it humbly, urgently.

Now, a sudden inspiration, by the latter soon revealed,
Was it was, that there awaited him, in pilgrim's garb, the world
And he hastens on to meet him with a quick and joyful speed.
Brother Giles and King St. Louis on their bended knees embraced.

Never mend from lips of either on the solemn silence broke,
Neither Giles nor pilgrim why or whereforeseither mark his pilgrim spoke—
Neath the wood'ring eyes of angels meet there sample—heart to heart—
Each other's double diving, by the light grace doth impart.

And the monks gazed marvelled at the strange
Guest who in their cloister pilgrim, would'ring who he was, or why he came;
Our old eyes, it thought he pondered when the stranger passed away
At the door, with silent greeting—for no word did either say.

Soon transcribed the transcend secret and the pilgrim departed
Who unto that humble convent, in a guise
low-born, came
And the brethren, all unpeopled, questioned
Brother Giles—
Why no courtesies worth of greeting from his silent lips thus fell?

Then the holy man made answer, with an emotion
of divine,
"Brethren, wonder not—King Louis hath a kindred
soul to vine,
Although, brighter vision than mere language
would impart;
We had met in each other's feelings—each behaled
the other's heart."

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacreedy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY ROBERT ROBINSON.

CHAPTER I.

"Sprinling about the grounds, I believe."
"Let us go in search of him."
"You can go, O'Byrne; I want to have a chat with my fair young child," answered the clergyman, who had witnessed Eileen's stately courtesy and exit.

Minchin and O'Byrne strolled out into the summer night, making sure of finding Redmond on the terrace overlooking the moat.

"We have hail for his appearance," said Minchin, "as his hair is the cognizating the antlers of a lordly stag in the entrance hall."

The two gentlemen smoked their cigars as they leisurely made in quest of the missing one, and from the terrace they proceeded to garden, from garden to pleasaunce, and from pleasaunce to gate house but no trace of him could be found. "He is in the stables," suggested the O'Byrne; and they returned to the enormous quadrangle in which the horses were quartered, but none of the helpers had seen him, and the stables were all locked for the night.

"He is a romantic, lack-headed young dog, and is just taking a cooler. He will turn up by and by, I warrant me; or maybe he has hied him to my lady's bower." And Minchin laughed at the conceit.

"Where is Redmond?" asked Father O'Doherty, as they regained the drawing-room.

"We were going to ask you," said the O'Byrne. "Where is Eileen?"

"The poor child has a bad headache and has gone to lie down."

"Come along, Mr. Minchin, and we'll take our cruisters leave. In the meantime I shall send some of the men to scour the woods in search of this invaluable gamester. I need it ask you to join us Father?"

"No, sir; a little wine at dinner is my nonchaun."

As the night rolled on one considerable uneasiness was felt about Philip's non-appearance; but Minchin's theory, that he had in his agitation, returned to Derrycassy Arms minus his hat was gladly accepted, and the O'Byrne insisted upon driving with Minchin into Rondwood in order to set matters right.

It is unnecessarily necessary to say that the worthy proprietor of the hostelry had not seen Redmond's two small hatted cocoanut values, which he described as set in solid silver.

This increased the anxiety, and as a portion of the lands of Coolgreyy abutted upon the lake in sheer precipices of two and three hundred feet, fears began to be entertained that poor Philip in his ignorance of the country, might have taken this unfortunate path. Those are nothing for it but to wait the advent of daylight, and that to insure an early start, and, if necessary, to drag the lake at this particular place.

The morning brought no Redmond, and traces of recent footsteps were very distinct in the neighborhood of the precipice, and the bushes rudely torn away at the end of the cliff, as though by a desparing victim, the idea that he had fallen into the lake grew into a certainty. A pragnal was got ready, and the melancholy process of dragging rapidly commenced.

The relief which Redmond's latter brought produced immediate reaction. Father O'Doherty at once started with the car to Ranahorry, with a very courteous note from Miss O'Byrne and a message from Eileen, but arrived about an hour after our hero had visited the village. Later on, when the good priest had returned with this intelligence, the O'Byrne telegraphed to his Shelborne Hotel, Dublin, on chance, writing also to that address. Philip was on board the steamer when the telegraph arrived, and in London when the missive reached Ireland's capital, had he received either, he would have down back to Coolgreyy; but it was not to be.

Soon transcribed the transcend secret and the pilgrim departed
Who unto that humble convent, in a guise
low-born, came
And the brethren, all unpeopled, questioned
Brother Giles—
Why no courtesies worth of greeting from his silent lips thus fell?

Then the holy man made answer, with an emotion
of divine,
"Brethren, wonder not—King Louis hath a kindred
soul to vine,
Although, brighter vision than mere language
would impart;
We had met in each other's feelings—each behaled
the other's heart."

Literary Miscellany.

Phil Redmond of Ballymacreedy.

A BEAUTIFUL IRISH CATHOLIC STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

BY ROBERT ROBINSON.

CHAPTER II.

"I'm glad to see the boy, sir."
"Did you see any of the—family?"
"None of them, barrin' Miss Eileen's pony that did shy by her in a sudden way, yer honour."
"Happy pony! thought Redmond, as he gazed into the past and beheld Dooty coming to a stand still opposite the manual remonstrance of his mistress.
"They axed me if your honour's name was Redmond, but I said I didn't know; as I was axed if yo-ung wudent a hat, an' I said yes. "That's him," sez Lord Byrne, sho. "A low-sized man," he's he. "No, sez I, he's a cripple of yards high, sayhow; as Luke lookd me sideways to see the lake beyuat at Shinnagh for ye, an' that Miss Eileen was roamin an bewitt the whole mornin'."
A thrill went through every three in Redmond's body as this last announcement fell upon his ear; and although the idea was only expressed, that the tender girl might be sorrowing for him caused an uncontrollable sensation of joy. She could not believe him capable of insulting her father beneath the same roof that shut out the stars from her; and yet—pshaw! he would shake the whole thing off as a disgreeable yet delightful dream.
His immediate resolve was to proceed to Dublin, and from thence to Queenstown and back to his native shores; but second thoughts, always so sober, so full of judicious counsel, whispered that the long, lonely days and nights upon the Atlantic would but serve to increase his fever, and fill his cup of misery lake in the distracting influence of European travel. Seven o'clock that evening found him on board the mail steamer for Holyhead; and as he gazed at the soft outlines of the Wicklow hills receding from his wistful glance, and thought of her in that peaceful valley, he would willingly have parted with a moiety of his existence to be once again in the sunlight of her presence.

CHAPTER III.

While our hero was on the road to Ennisquarty Father O'Doherty found an opportunity for comparing notes with Minchin, and fully convinced of the truthfulness of the young gentleman's statement, proceeded at once to disabuse the diseased mind of the O'Byrne. This he ultimately succeeded in doing but not without a deal of powerful and full flavored argument. "I do believe, Father, I took too much wine. Where is Mr. Redmond, until I make the amende honorable?"
"Yes," said the O'Byrne rising, "I wanted the same party exactly, and I have been fortunate. You all heard me swear that I would never sell a rood of Ballymacreedy. Kilnagold, or Dorralcoey, but—with a smile—that oath does not prevent my giving them away, or selling them, and when you, Father O'Doherty, unite my honest young friend, Philip Redmond, to my only child he shall be restored to the lands of his fathers through his wife.

(THE END.)

—Brook's Spool Cotton, soft finish as well as glace finish, is manufactured especially for sewing machine work. Try it on any machine and you will try no other. For sale by all dry goods stores.

THE LOST ARMY CHEST.

"It all began," said Mr. Canfield Bellow, "it all began with a visit to the auditorium in which were being sold the unclaimed effects of the Adams Express Company. I watched the sale for some moments without thinking of buying anything, when an old military looking trunk was put up. Somebody bid $5, and I thought it was about to be sold, I offered a half more. It was promptly knocked down to me, and that evening I got my treasure home. This was in the winter of 1862.

My purchase did not seem a bonanza; there were a few of soiled clothing, chiefly collars and socks, and at the bottom of the trunk a little tin box, locked, which I had to force open. There were a lot of letters in it, written chiefly by a female hand, and addressed to "Dear Harry" and "Dear Sweet heart." These I looked through carefully and found that the story was the old one. "Harry" was a soldier in the Confederate army. The letters were dated in '61, '62 and '63, and time since before the war. The last log in their pile was yellow with age, and written on foolscap. I'll find the old stem chimney about two miles up the river.

"North bender sort?"

"North. I will send a boy with you."

"Never mind! I'll find it, I guess. I'll go. Not to detain you too long, I soon located the Amesh's place, by the great smoking stone chimney. And he hollow where the stable stood was the same. There was no burr oak nor any tree a night, but a rotting stump, which I took to be the point indicated. I had brought a spade with me, and a search finally developed an old rusty iron strap driven into a log in the stump hole. With this I dig at the stump long and painfully, keep uncovering the corner of a chest. In another half an hour I had it out and open before me. It was too dark to see much, but I could feel a great heap of the gold and greenbacks to the bottom of the chest, and I knew that I could not carry it another cache. On the spot I was ready to go with my treasure trove, and I stuffed the contents of the chest into the darkey, I took the last fire of the Confederacy with me, and I made a journey of some days before. In my enthusiasm had time to examine my find. The paper money was all in an advanced state of preservation, nothing more than a little mildewed and discolored. There was $622,00, the great majority of it being in $100, and the rest in hundreds and small bills and fractional currency. The gold, of which there were $15,000 instead of $4,500, was in $20 pieces, and the silver in half, quarters and dimes. There was a card in the chest with a number on it, and stating that it had been taken for present necessities by the face option. The first step on reaching New Orleans was to order the messenger which my dead brother had ordered, and Celia Manderson's grave will no longer be neglected. I said nothing of my adventure to anybody, because I wanafraid that the Government would claim the treasure as lawful prize, by lawyers that under the circumstances recovery is impossible. I knew that I was the very money was the cause of a great martial in which one of McPherson's officers was vindicated, although severely criticised. It seems that the four Confederates discovered that they had stolen the money and one, and they ambushed the party half a mile above the ferry, killed three men and drove off the ferry, then in the most gallant manner. Certainly they won the money fairly and certainly I have inherited it fairly."

Catholic Statuary.

The largest stock of Catholic statuary to be found in the city is at H. Mencarini's, 911 Mission street, (opposite the Mint.) Mr. Mencarini formerly dealt exclusively on Fourth street, but his increasing patronage called for larger show rooms, and he can now supply churches, convents or communities with statues of all sizes, at his is the only statuary manufactory on the Pacific Coast. As he has been in business for over twenty-two years he can refer to all the leading clergy of the Pacific Coast regarding the reasonableness of his charges and the excellence of his goods.

A STRANGE SECT.

Pious Freaks Indulged in by Fanatics. Some Imitations of an Illustrious Example.

The Star of Washington, D. C., thus describes a ceremony witnessed among the followers of a sect known as the Dunkards. The church was divided down the centre by a long table, and this table was divided in the centre to allow passage between. At one end of the table sat an hundred ranged along the table. The other end, or division of the table, was in the manner occupied by the women. A strip of plank with pegs in it, was over the men's table, and was kept there for the purpose of their use. There were a lot of letters in it, written chiefly by a female hand, and addressed to "Dear Harry" and "Dear Sweet heart." This I looked through carefully and found that the story was the old one. "Harry" was a soldier in the Confederate army. The letters were dated in '61, '62 and '63, and time since before the war. The last log in their pile was yellow with age, and written on foolscap. I'll find the old stem chimney about two miles up the river.

"North bender sort?"

"North. I will send a boy with you."

"Never mind! I'll go, I guess. I'll go. Not to detain you too long. I soon located the Amesh's place, by the great smoking stone chimney. And he hollow where the stable stood was the same. There was no burr oak nor any tree a night, but a rotting stump, which I took to be the point indicated. I had brought a spade with me, and a search finally developed an old rusty iron strap driven into a log in the stump hole. With this I dig at the stump long and painfully, keep uncovering the corner of a chest. In another half an hour I had it out and open before me. It was too dark to see much, but I could feel a great heap of the gold and greenbacks to the bottom of the chest, and I knew that I could not carry it another cache. On the spot I was ready to go with my treasure trove, and I stuffed the contents of the chest into the darkey. I took the last fire of the Confederacy with me, and I made a journey of some days before. In my enthusiasm had time to examine my find. The paper money was all in an advanced state of preservation, nothing more than a little mildewed and discolored. There was $622,00, the great majority of it being in $100, and the rest in hundreds and small bills and fractional currency. The gold, of which there were $15,000 instead of $4,500, was in $20 pieces, and the silver in half, quarters and dimes. There was a card in the chest with a number on it, and stating that it had been taken for present necessities by the face option. The first step on reaching New Orleans was to order the messenger which my dead brother had ordered, and Celia Manderson's grave will no longer be neglected. I said nothing of my adventure to anybody, because I wanafraid that the Government would claim the treasure as lawful prize, by lawyers that under the circumstances recovery is impossible. I knew that I was the very money was the cause of a great martial in which one of McPherson's officers was vindicated, although severely criticised. It seems that the four Confederates discovered that they had stolen the money and one, and they ambushed the party half a mile above the ferry, killed three men and drove off the ferry, then in the most gallant manner. Certainly they won the money fairly and certainly I have inherited it fairly."

A TERRIBLE OCCURENCE.

Drowned in Sight of a Multitude in One of the Bayous Near Memphis.

It is common enough to hear of children drowning in the numerous bayous and other streams in and about the city, but rare indeed that these accidents are accompanied by the saddest of all sorrows, a scene of misfortune occurring in the central part of the city a little after noon yesterday, and yet so sudden and so malefic child named Minnie Jackson, while picking her way along the slippery edge of the bayou near Linden street, slipped and fell into the stream, and was instantly swept from the bank and out into the current. Her cries for help attracted the attention of a number of people in the neighborhood, but they were powerless to help her as the current was very strong and the bank accessible. The alarm spread rapidly down the bayou, but not in time to save the child. The current swollen by the heavy rains, was as "swift as a mill race," and the stream in many places very deep. The child sank once before passing under the Beale street bridge, but rose again to the surface fifty yards further down the stream. It passed under the bridge with almost incredible rapidity in plain view of one hundred people, who stood on the bridge and on the top of the bank on either side. Floating around the bend, it neared the Gayoso bridge, and again sank, but was again swept out into the middle of the stream, and was lost to sight before it disappeared. The police station was telephoned, and while Sergeant Walsh was on the way to the Adams street bridge, Capt. O'Hare took to the mouth of Wolf river, in the hope of catching the body should efforts to detain it further up the bayou prove fruitless. Meanwhile the news of the tragedy spread like wildfire, and hundreds of

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the influence of Mary Immaculate, the undertaking to which we are pledged, in behalf of the religious interests of Catholic Truth, of religion, its rights and claims of the Holy Apostolic See, and adhere in its decisions and principle with devotion and fidelity.—PIUS IX.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the chief agent in popularizing ideas and spreading knowledge. It is the great organ of opinion throughout the world. It not only influences, but may a work indispensable to the welfare of society, but a work of supreme beauty. What is what regards us in the diffusion of Catholic principles, but to secure to the people the truth, whatever it may be, and to make it effective truth."—REV. DR. TALBOT, PRESIDENT ROMAN UNIVERSITY.

CIRCULAR LETTER FROM BISHOP MANOGUE.

TO OUR BELOVED CLERGY OF THE DIOCESE OF GRASS VALLEY.

Very Rev. and Rev. Inner Fathers—Having secured the valuable services of the learned and zealous Father Raffo, S. J., to conduct our annual retreat, which will commence in Marysville on the 14th prox., feast of St. Calixtus, Pope and Martyr; I deem it expedient, unless there be sufficient reasons personally disposed, are expected to be present. You are also expected to be prepared for a solemn Requiem Mass, on the Monday following, for the repose of the deceased priests of our Diocese. We know "it is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from their sins," and when we shall have passed from this life, the good Fathers surviving so will not be wanting in discharging a similar duty, and offer for our souls benefaction. Our own example, and the words of Our Blessed Lord, cannot fail to remind us of our duty in the work of charity. "I have given you an example, that as I have done to you, so you do also."

✠ P. R. MANOGUE,
Bishop of Grass Valley.

Grass Valley, September 13, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

—A pop-gunner thus describes a modern assembly of Protestants for religious purposes in a fashionable church edifice: "At one end of the church dignified and polished oratory; at the other, sonorous and ravishing strains of music, and in the interval between, amiable manners and rich and stylish apparel. If people want fine music, good oratory and brave millinery, why should they not go to them?"

—A Methodist publishing house in Toronto has issued an edition of Father Lambert's "Notes on Ingersoll," and a Methodist paper in this city published a chapter from Father Lambert's book last week. Let in order to prove how difficult it is for Methodists to overcome their prejudices, the Methodist paper in question calls the reverend author "Mr. Lambert." Shame upon such subterfuge in order to satisfy sectarian spleen.

—St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, built and paid for by its beloved pastor, Rev. Denis A. O'Callaghan, suspended by grand and growing parish, was solemnly consecrated on Sunday, August 24th, and Monday, 25th, Feast of St. Augustine's Day, by the Most Rev. Archbishop Williams. The ceremony lasted from 8 A. M. and lasted about two hours. The Archbishop was assisted by a large number of priests.

—People who read about the size of St. Peter's Church in Rome, have but a faint idea of its vast proportions. Thirty good-sized churches, such as are generally seen in our cities, could be put inside this great edifice. Twelve could be seen on the nave. The lofty chapels on one side, one above the other, would scarcely reach the top of the cross that surmounts the dome.

—By one of those accidents incident to every printing office, the proof-reader failed to notice the absence of Bishop Manogue's name from the number of prelates present at the centennial celebration of Father Junipero Serra. The "copy" was all right, but the "compositor" copy did not follow it, and in the hurry of going to press the omission occurred. Job had patience under more severe trials, and we have to content ourselves with regrets that come too late to remedy the blunder.

—Rev. Brother Sabinian, Director of St. Mary's College, in this city, started for France on the 14th inst., to attend a general Chapter of the Institute which has been called to elect a Superior General to succeed the late Brother Irlide. Brother Sabinian has been selected by the Christian Brothers of this State to represent them at the Chapter. He will join the delegates from the other provinces of the United States and Canada in New York, from whence they will sail on the 20th prox. The prayers and good wishes of the Catholics of California accompany Brother Sabinian, and we wish him a pleasant voyage and a safe return.

—It would look as if the Methodists were opposed to public schools, if we are to judge by the resolution relating to Christian Schools passed by the ministers of that sect at the seaboard meeting which took place at Pacific Grove, Monterey county, on last Saturday, wherein we find the following declaration which are fully as denunciatory as any ever adopted by Catholic conventions "The education of the State is almost wholly secular. The Bible, prayer or religious teaching in the State schools. When this influence is exerted upon the young men and women of the land, what will be the effects on their character in its relation to their church interests! It is the plain duty of the church to provide for the education of her own children. How are Methodist and the Bible treated in the public school? Bowed politely out. We must therefore educate them." It is only regrettable that not every Christian denomination in the land will join the Catholic Church in its battle against godless education, and re-echo the cry of the Methodists: "It is the plain duty of the church to provide for the education of her own children," and unless they do so, the Protestant sects are doomed to destruction by means of the public school system of infidel education.

Is the Catholic Church in California a Failure?

We have so often convicted the Presbyterian organ—the Occident—of wilful and deliberate falsehood in matters concerning the Catholic Church, that we are no longer astonished at any calumny it may commit in the way of bearing false witness against its neighbor. Hence, when we read an article in the current issue of the Occident, in which the time that has elapsed since the death of Father Junipero Serra is called "a century of failure," we realized how readily a rancorous mind can descend in mendacity in order to blacken the character of the Catholic Church by maligning her dead missionaries, and falsifying every fact of her century's history on this coast.

The Catholic Church—in California or elsewhere—has nothing to fear from the truth. The only means by which our enemies can gain credence for their calumnies is by belying the lives of the blessed Apostles whose labors in all lands have gained for them the love of all good men, irrespective of creed, and by constantly reiterating the same old stale slanders regarding dogma and discipline that have done service ever since they were invented in the sixteenth century.

In perjudice Presbyterianism can never succeed. Calvin was a boss bigot, compared to whom the unprincipled preachers of his unholy scheme of sectarianism are as army of pigmies. Yet Calvin's calumnies did not kill the Church of Christ, hence we have no fear that the falsehoods fabricated by the Christian sects from our into the world by means of the Occident, will damage the reputation of the Church of God in California. Yet, in order to show how unscrupulous are its falsehoods, and how unfounded its assertions, we will briefly glance at the mass of malignity which makes up the article in question. Commenting on the labors of the Spanish Franciscan missionaries the Occident says:

"That Junipero Serra and his associates were men of courage, self-denial and religious zeal, all will admit. They braved many dangers and endured many hardships in their work. But their work was a failure. The Spaniards had adopted inactive methods, and hence their lives were a sad failure."

It is easy for a ranting Calvinistic raven to sit in the corner and croak at Catholic missionaries. The "fanaticism" of the Franciscans consisted of their apostolic zeal to bring the knowledge of God to the pagan Indians of the Pacific Coast. The faith of God was founded in just such "fanaticism" as this! Their "unwise methods" were directed towards the amelioration of a whole people at the greatest personal sacrifices—even to giving up their lives in God's service. Heaven is filled with Saints whose "unwise methods" were founded on precisely the same rules as governed the Spanish missionaries in their life-time labors. The "sad failure" of such men's lives is only apparent to those "whited sepulchres" who measure every man's success in life by the amount of golden gifts which the world gives him. Greatness, in their estimation, is not the attribute of those who are poor, humble, self-sacrificing and despised, even though that Son of God whom they pretend to worship is the type of such true Christians as the early missionary Fathers of California.

No Presbyterian preacher can appreciate the labors of a Catholic Priest. The one is a true type of the Pharisee, who daily thanks God that he is not sinful like other men, and who invariably exalts the hideous and unholy system of sectarian schisms the distinctly developed doctrines of Christ. The Priest, on the other hand, lays his Maker for his model. For His sake he has forsaken home and friends, and death which sends his soul speeding to the throne of that God for whose sake the world scoffed at him, but in whose love he lived and died!

No! The word "failure" was never written by the Recording Angel in the Book of Life opposite the name of any man who was as good and faithful a servant of God as the glorious band of brave Catholic missionaries who made this land a Christian country!

Where are the martyrs O Presbyterianism? Where are thy affects at converting pagan nations? Rehoboth would have the whole world for a camping-ground if nothing save Calvinism interposed to profit the sacrifices by erecting the monument of the cross over the tomb of paganism.

We know where some monuments of Presbyterianism are to be found! In Scotland in a monument is found in the memory of the malignancy of its murderous crowd stoned in human carnage! In Servetus' blood in a monument in the memory of the burned Servetus, the victim of Calvin's cruel and remorseless hate! And in Amsterdam, what is its monument? Every spot denoted by its eleven-foot has furnished a breed of vipurous fanatics who have sown the seeds of religious dissention and respect the harvest of its unholy ambition. Thus, by the monuments, O creed of Calvin, and they will always exist to prove to the world that there is something far worse even than the "sad failures" which marked the lives of the Sons of St. Francis in California.

The Occident next proceeds to ask this question:

"Where are the Indians that these Spanish priests came here to convert, and among whom they labored for so many years? Degraded by a system of peonage, will they be established over them, driven to their tasks by white taskmasters? Is the view which we have interposed, among them, they have will skin perished from the face of the earth?"

Even if a writer is possessed of the presumption of a Presbyterian preacher, he ought not to ask a question any school-boy familiar with the history of California should be capable of answering. Where are the Indians? Let us hear what Hon. John W. Dwinelle (a non-Catholic) says in answer to this question:

"If we ask where are now the 30,000 Christianized Indians who once enjoyed the care and created the wealth of the 21 Catholic Missions of California, and then contemplate the most wretched want of all system which has succeeded them under our own government, we shall not withhold our admiration from those zeal and devoted men, who, with wisdom, sagacity and self-sacrifices reared these wonderful institutions in the wilderness of California. They, at least, would have preserved these Indians, which it has had been left to pierce unmolested their work of pious beneficence."

This answer successfully refutes the base imputation of the perverse writer in the Occident, whose allusions to "peonage," "whips and goads," and "vices" are the natural expressions of a corrupt mind that loves to revel in horrible romance when writing against the Church of God. There is not an atom of truth in any charge of cruelty brought against the dead missionaries by the Calvinistic organ, and plenty of Protestant testimony can be procured to prove it.

"Where is the civilization which these Spaniards sought to do? It, too, has perished, because it had in it none of the elements of permanence and growth. Its buildings, the fruits of effort, are nothing but some old shattered buildings remain."

Had the writer of the foregoing sentence been one of the soldiers who accompanied our Blessed Redeemer to Calvary, and who acted his part in the drama presented on the first Good Friday, we should expect him to make a sneer to his comrades in the Crucifixion of Christ somewhat after this fashion:

"Where is now that myth which the followers of the Nazarene called Christianity? Its foundar has perished while Cæsar survives! Thirty-three years on earth as the God-Man, and its end is nothing but a dead carcass on yonder cross on Calvary?"

Such would be the speech of a sceptic when the pall of death fell upon the gibbet whereon hung the Son of God! But, though the Son of God may have been forsaken, though the apostles of God may perish, though their ashes may be scattered along the Sahara of centuries, though their very graves may be hidden from human sight—still there exists the imperishable Faith which they have preached, the Hope they have left us as God's legacy to man, the seeds of Charity they have planted, nourished and watered. And in this trinity of gifts there endureth—in all lands—for ever and ever, that Christian civilization which has saved the world in the past from relapsing into barbarism, and which casts a golden ray of God's glory over the entire universe, visible and invisible.

And in this manner can we reply to our Calvinistic critic when he asks: "Where are the civilization these Spanish Friars have left?" We point to the half million of Catholics on this coast, to the hundreds of Catholic churches, schools, asylums and institutions—and as we point to the Cross surmounted spire of each, we say to the individual whose mind is a mixture of pagan superstition and prejudice, behold in that spire the imperishable evidence of the civilization of the Franciscan Fathers! They were the first to plant a single cross on the shores of the bay of Monterey, and see how it has spread and grown from a single grain of mustard seed into a grove whose branches cover the whole Pacific Coast! Such "civilization" as that can never die, even though the hosts of hell are marshalled against it!

If ever there was no cause for Christian rejoicing it is over the grand work which the Catholic Church has accomplished—and is still accomplishing—in California. This State was the cradle of Christianity on the Pacific Coast, and while Presbyterian Pharisees persevere in the Calvinistic course of calumniating their neighbor and defaming the dead—the Church of God will go on in its good work of bringing souls to the knowledge of the Omnipotent, until all nations and all peoples have learned the law of loving their neighbors as themselves. This is the Catholic creed.

Let Presbyterian Calvinists—who never practiced the precept taught by the Padres whose graves have been violated and whose memory has been maligned, and this is the gospel preached by every Prelate and Priest that has succeeded them in God's service—look down to the present day. No stain or blemish can be cast on the character of the first missionaries in California; and Moral motive is the Church of God. The boon of bigotry that hides its vision from heaven and forces its ocular optic to fix its gaze upon hell.

Dangers to Catholic Faith through Secret Societies.

We ardently hope that the coming Council of the Hierarchy of the United States, which is to meet at Baltimore next November, will take into consideration the propriety of having Rome speak upon such secret societies as exist at the present day in this country, and into which so many Catholics flock because they have not been condemned by the Church. Such societies, no matter what taking titles they may possess—are condemned by the Holy See.

Take, for instance, the organization known as the "Native Sons of the Golden West," and let us suppose a Catholic young man is induced to join that organization. He is initiated after the manner of Masonic mummery; all the blindfolding, decorupping and cross-questioning peculiar to initiation into the Masonic sect is gone through with, and he thus becomes familiar with the Masonic formula. He is thrown in contact with Masons, Odd-Fellows, Protestant preachers, atheists, infidels and non-Catholics of every type. They become his friends, and he is bound to them by an obligation which binds him to them closer far than to his own Catholic brother. He loses casually, but constantly, attends upon the Catholic Church, directly or indirectly, and by degrees he loses his right to the title of a son of the Church, and he becomes a Native Son, a nothing in religion except so far as his initial controls his conscience. A few years roll on and the name of this one Catholic young man figures upon the roll of Odd-Fellows associating with those of the Masons, and then the priest that baptized his Native Son wonders how it came to pass that he became an apostate to his faith.

The Native Sons is an organization which produces that it knows no religious difference, so the moment a Catholic young man joins it he proclaims his Protestant, his atheist and his infidel brothers just as good in the sight of heaven as he is himself. This is what the Native Sons would call "religious equality," but which the Church of God stigmatizes under a far different title when He said: "He who will deny Me before men, him will I deny before My Father in heaven." The Catholic young man, therefore, who joins any such secret society, where all men are placed on the same plane, denies God by consorting with atheists, infidels, and men of no religious principles, and the loss of his faith is just as inevitable as if Satan had a mortgage upon his soul.

Admission Day was celebrated on the 9th inst. by the Native Sons in Sacramento, and at the head of the procession on that occasion marched a camp of Odd-Fellows followed by a platoon of the Knights of Pythias—offshoots of the Masonic sect. The Catholics among the Native Sons marched along after these members of secret societies with a nonchalant air that must have made old Nick wink with his weather eye!

During the literary exercises the Grand President delivered an address in the course of which he thus established all churches, creeds and sacraments as so much useless rubbish when compared to the Ritual and principles of the Native Sons. Mr. Sterns' book said:

"Our beautiful and sensibling principles have been demonstrated in many California's heart with feelings of pride, and we will ever be grateful for the heritage granted to us. There cannot be a more enduring monument of our love for God and our country, nor a more lasting tribute to departed relatives and Friends."

The Grand President told his Catholic fellow-members that the most enduring monument of their love for God, their country, and their dead Catholic relatives was to be found in the principles of the Native Sons of the Golden West! And this, in less than a minute, the Grand President completely effaced the Holy Cross from the heart of every Native Son! For seventeen in the Catholic Church he proved the inutility of all religion, and pitchforked prayers for the dead out among the debris of what he would no doubt call—obsolete orthodox Christianity! And our Catholic young man—who belong to this society where "sectarianism" is unknown—swallowed this gilded pill presented by the Grand President, and helped in the applause which greeted such profane rot.

Our Catholic young man's "enjoyment," however, did not end here, because at the end of the proceedings they had to hear the valedictory address of Grand Brother Rev. Carroll M. Davis—a Protestant preacher attached to Sunset Parlor No. 26—gave the Benediction!

Let us ask those Catholic young men who have the misfortune to belong to the Native Sons of the Golden West—because it is a misfortune to suffer the loss of your faith—if they are prepared to say that man requires no religion save such principles as are propagated by the rationalistic Ritual of that organization? If this is precisely the predicament they have placed themselves in by silently subscribing to the sentiments set forth by their Supreme President.

Again: Are they prepared to say that the services of a sectarian minister—who never pretended to be called to the ministry nor commissioned to save souls is equal in the sight of God to the divinely-authorized office of a Catholic Priest? Yet this is what they declared when they participated in the "Benediction" of their Protestant Parlor Brother, and scandalized their Catholic fellow-citizens by assisting at such a service as this.

Keep up the Celtic Cause.

In the eighth page of the present issue of the Monitor will be found all the necessary information regarding the Irish National League which will invite officers and members of the association to renew their efforts in the cause of Erin, and also such instructions as will guide the friends of Ireland all over this coast in organizing Branches of the League in localities where no efforts have yet been made in that direction.

The future freedom of Ireland depends largely upon the practical cooperation of the Irish in America—and the friends of Ireland in this country—with their Irish people in the island of Saints. Through their parliamentary representatives, and their own perseverance in patriotism, the Irish people have wrung from England such beneficial measures during the past few years, and it is safe to predict that if the agitation is kept alive on this continent and the Irish people at home keep up a united constitutional force in Parliament—Home Rule will be granted to Ireland before the expiration of many years.

In this work, however, will be all the enthusiasm of the sons of Erin, if there is not an organized effort made in every State and territory of this Union to second the efforts of the "men in the gap." In California, Oregon, Utah, Idaho, Washington, Arizona, and all over this coast, new life must be infused into the Irish National League, new Branches should be formed, new impetus given to the agitation, and a general demonstration of sentiment manifested by every individual who desires the welfare of Ireland. To help in thus reviving the resolute spirit of the Land League, we publish in this issue the details and documents issued by the Executive Committee, and we sincerely hope that the result will be a revival of enthusiasm in the cause of the people of Ireland that the Irish-American element on this coast is ever ready to put into practical operation whenever duty calls, and gathered by the standard-bearers of the good and holy cause of Ireland's liberation from English injustice.

Persecutions Through which the Papacy has Passed.

Among the enemies of the Church there is a certain element so steeped in prejudice as to imagine that if death, exile or depositio was the fate of the Father of the faithful, the shepherdless flock of Christ would soon scatter, and the Catholic Church collapse.

Such misleading people seem to forget that there is no one ordeal through which the Church of Christ may have to pass in the present or future centuries, which she has not bitterly experienced in her past history. Persecution has no terrors to the Church of that God who suffered the agony and death of the Cross! And the Church of the Catacombs, the Church that has outlived eighteen centuries of the blackest and most bitter enmity which the fiend incarnate could suggest to the Satan possessed spirit of the unscrupulous foes of our holy faith, has no cure for the cowardly craven, who fall well that so long as God guides the Barque of Peter against the storms of earth and hell, there is no cause for fear.

Here follows a condensed summary of the sufferings endured by the Popes for the faith, we copy from the Freeman's Journal, of Sydney, Australia, the following summary furnished by a correspondent who is evidently familiar with the history of the Church. The list will also be handy for Catholics who have to encounter the taunts of Catholic neighbors of the fact that there is no power on earth or in hell that can ever prevail against the Church with all the mighty God promised to be throughout all time.

Modesty of Dress in the House of God.

To their honor be it said, there are millions of Catholic ladies who make it a duty to dress for church in modest attire, in those sacred places where Catholic ladies should forget the fact that there is a vast difference between the theatre and the sanctuary. Hold, and who attend church seemingly more for the purpose of attracting attention than for the higher motive of rendering adoration to the God of the Universe.

Fortunately, this class of the female members of the church is small in number, but as it is not confined to any particular city or any specific country, the fellowing sensible remarks copied from Hubert Vaughn's interesting work on the Mass may be read with equal profit by Catholic women of every land, and we hope the fair ladies to whom they were originally addressed.

"It is very unbecoming in women, says Hubert Vaughn, "and irreverent, to go to the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass expensively dressed in gay and attractive colors. We should go dressed to Mass just as we would have gone to Mount Calvary on the day the Crucifixion. It is the same sacrifice the same priest and victim. Its sure to blur our Blessed Lord's face, if we go to Mass in our best, and if we dress modestly and quietly for His sake your gain and glory will be greater than the world has any thought of.

The Roman Pontiffs have always insisted on becoming modesty of dress; and, therefore, no woman, be she a Princess or a Queen, is permitted to assist at Mass offered by the Pope, or in his presence, unless she be modestly veiled and attired in black. The same custom prevails throughout Spain and the old Spanish colonies. No woman would dare go to Mass in Spain if her head and shoulders were not covered by a veil as a sign of modesty.

St. Paul says that Christian women are "to adorn themselves with modesty and sobriety, not with plaited hair, and gold, or pearls, or costly attire, but as it becometh woman professing godliness with good works" (1. Tim. ii). And in that chapter to the Corinthians in which he speaks of the Mass, he gives strict injunctions that the woman ought to have a covering over head because of the angels,' and, he says, if woman be not covered, let her be shorn. But if it be a shame to a woman to be shorn or made bald, let her cover her head." (1. Cor. xi.)

A NEW SANCTUARY LAMP.

A California Invention that Fills a Long-felt Want.

Nearly every priest in America will bear witness to the fact that the style of sanctuary lamp hitherto in use is both expensive, troublesome and scanty. This is especially the case in small churches, where the revenue of the Church will not admit of the services of a sexton, and where the priest has to attend to all the minor details requisite in the house of God. In many such cases it is almost impossible to keep a light constantly burning in front of the tabernacle, and the one of the most important duties of a Catholic divine worship is violated.

To meet such a desideratum of the Domicilian Order in California have formed their attention to this important matter and invented a new sanctuary lamp that would work automatically, and would require but little attention. The lamp is cut any one of the Fathers in Honora thought that he had the difficulty by the use of kerosene but his lamp and his theory exploded simultaneously. The Fathers of Santa Barbara Fathers formulated a lamp of the desired design, but as yet the idea has not been put into practical operation.

An attempt made by these Fathers to invent a long-desired lamp for the sanctuary, impelling Rev. H. Fitzsimon of St. Dominic's Church in this city, to try his inventive genius in this direction, and he succeeded in the first attempt. Many trials, disappointments and adverse circumstances he has encountered, but he has at last furnish a light for a month—by merely winding it up once a month.

We visited the sacristy of St. Dominic's Church, on Sunday last, and saw the lamp that had been continually burning from the preceding Sunday morning, and it was still burning and any of the present city sanctuary lamps the life of a month, and it is so simple that any sacristan can understand it and can follow instructions outside of a task, capable of holding a month's supply of oil. The lamp is so simple is placed about a foot above the receptacle for the oil, and is so constructed that it is not liable to be out-up, so that a stopping or a surplus of oil is not required. The wick is a small one and is placed on a reel, to which one wheels are attached, so that the wick can be fed by simple motion by the machinery of a small clock which is placed in a small box at the side of the lamp, that is fitted with oil, the wick adjusted and lit, and the machinery set in motion, and the lamp is left to burn for a month. It is so simple and that if he is absent on sick call, or on another duty, the sacristan can do the work and there will still be burning in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament.

Father Fitzsimon has called his invention the Perpetual Light, and he expects that it will be a boon to all who have to exhibit his invention to such a degree of perfection that it will be put on our operation.

The great advantage which this new invention has over the present style lamp will be apparent to all who have to light the lamp in places where the oil freezes. The heat from the burner, which is placed in the receptacle of the oil, under the oil tank, will keep the oil in liquid form, and in this way a great difficulty is overcome. Father Fitzsimon has also been very careful in the matter of the outside appearance of the traditional sanctuary lamp, so that the new lamp will be found to be in every respect a non-expensive lamp. The oil tank is hid beneath the floor, and the lamp is the lamp. The lamp is so simple that any sacristan can handle it, and the lamp will be found to be the most economical lamp for the sanctuary, the most simple lamp, and the most automatic lamp for the sanctuary ever invented. The lamp is so simple that any sacristan can understand it, and it is so cheap that it will be placed in every Catholic church in the land

Farm and Home.

THE ANGELS OF BURMA VISTA.

A POEM TO THE SUPREME OF CHARITY, BY THE POET WHITTIER.

Hush, O sight, among the mountains! let the song of shepherds fall!
Dying brothers, fighting demons, deep thy cry, hath reached us!
Through the thickening winter twilight, wide upon the battle rolled;
In its breath the sheep rested, and the reaper's lips grew cold.
But the holy Monk remem still their help task pursued,
Through that long, dark night of sorrow, were and faint, and lacking food.
Over weak and suffering brethren with a tender care were they kind,
And the dying heard near them blessed them in a strange and Northern tongue.
Not wholly lost, O Father, in this evil world of sin,
Upward, through its blood and sphere, sprang a fresh the Lion Spring;
From its smoking hill of battle, Love and Pity sent their incense,
And still The white-robed angels hover dimly to the air.

Hints for Repaspkin.

Without being actual dyspeptics, a great many people suffer from what is termed sick headache. The symptoms of such a condition of stomach and intestines are only too well-known, the feeling of uneasiness after eating, pain, probably with a degree of distention and dizziness, and sweetness, nausea and sour taste in the mouth, alternating with another, discomforting or absolutely painful, feeling of repletion of the bowels, amounting to the hand, which is the stomach, and the bowels, which are the intestines. Then follows a period of headache, dizziness, general mental uneasiness, and body nervous sensitiveness, which is the brain and the body. Dyspepsia of which may be some or the symptoms, but this is not dyspepsia, it is simply a condition of hydrophobia. I have had patients that in consequence of eating hearty dinners, they were not sufficiently from their dinner, others who ate lightly, but yet suffered from indigestion of the bowels, some, who had no hunger, other hunger.

"I don't believe," a patient told me only the day before yesterday, "that I have an overfed stomach."

Well, such people of all grade have my sympathy, they and my advice to them is the same, or that is to make it as follows:

Eat moderately, so no amount take what may be called a full meal.

Take food at most regular hours, for instance, have breakfast after getting up, merely going out of doors for five minutes previous to breakfast, and then have a cup of cocoa-tea; time at two o'clock of a light meal, lunch, or chop, with potatoes, sparingly and greens, a little soup, or fish, or pudding. No pastry, or sweets, or cheese. Dinner, no food taken, you have nearly finished the whole.

Take the food every day. Fish only if quite digestible, which it oftentimes is not; very fat pork, but mutton, beef, game and fowl.

Fruit before breakfast, but not after dinner.—M. Family Doctor, in Cassell's Magazine.

The Family Doctor.

Try sun-bath for rheumatism.

Try clam-broth for a weak stomach.

Try camphor-ice for chapped chapped.

Try swallowing saliva when troubled with sore throat.

Try eating fresh Hillsboro and yellow turnips for gout.

Try eating onions and horseradish to relieve frontal headache.

Try buttermilk for the removal of tan and sunburn, and freckles.

Try the cold-pack when a child is likely to be troubled in that way.

Try hot potatoes, cooked for the sake of neuralgic pain and tooth-ache frequently.

Try taking cod liver oil in tomato catsup if the taste, and, after eating.

Try stuffing powdered borax up the nostrils for nasal bleeding.

Try swallowing vinegar or camphor if you are subject to relieve whooping-cough.

Try a dash of hot water in tea and water put about the neck for a sore throat.

Conjugal Tiff.

The weakest side of topsy-turvy legend say matrimony plucked into current ever the bones to an equator. The proximate power of an woman, which is naturally considerable, becomes many degrees intensified by marriage. Upon the strength of it, the jurisdiction of that mode of life realizes the thoroughly acquainted with all the weak points of her lord. The lowest equity where to hurt him most severely and where to touch a raw place hidden from the rest of the world. There is no doubt that when Xantippe pitched crockery at the noses of her husband, she knew the matter with joors at the door of man's doctrine.

Milton, it is said, suffered horribly from the tongue of his helpmate, and we can imagine her, not only hidding his ears and ink, but making fun of his verses. But there are historical cases where the battles were of extreme severities. In real life people, when married, do not altogether lord and lady. There are intervals of repose when the atmosphere is clear and the sun shines, or it may happen, the storms are exceptional and the tyrants comparatively rare. Of hand encounters frequently tend to postpone some serious consideration, and then the little domestic skirmishes common to the matrimonial state set in a salty valve of energy which might, under other circumstances, lead to a decisive explosion. There are hundreds of women who would be quite uncomfortable if they had nothing to scold about, and, general speaking, and nervous, and body nervous people is added to the trouble not the least disturbing of which may be some or the symptoms of the fine tempers. Husbands frequently have not the fine temper. They are often pounded to bear what makes the target down, and, to ask an expressive term, contemptuous. They job the cause, but they are tender of outward chaste covers or treading on their corns, and then the whole proceedings is real comedy. A body of this kind of complication is completely taxing if he can wind up with a good cry. The tear moisten discolors his tears, and, if you kiss his forehead, it tastes of brine. It is her revenge. There is nothing now for the husband, if he is a thinking man and a full author-hypocrite of his home in the wrong. A woman has lost her ground forever who fails in her object when she has reason to be called bitter-tongued and by a pity of a good, quiet and sensible. Yet, however, are stupid enough to play this game until their adversary becomes disgusted with the trick; it is generally kept back until the right time and then used with a vengeance.

Household Hints.

—MILK PORRIDGE.—Take good, sound potatoes, cut them in slices—raw—and put with salt and pepper, according to the quantity you wish to make, in a pudding dish, and put in a hot oven for twenty minutes; then take out, and, after removing, put into a saucepan over the fire and boil until done.

—TOMATO SALAD.—Peel nice, fair tomatoes, cut into slices and remove the pips; add a teaspoonful of French mustard, a tablespoonful of best oil, and a finely minced onion and a little salt.

—An appetizing salmon salad is made by filling the salad bowl with alternate layers of finely chopped fresh cabbage and of salmon picked into small pieces. Pour over it a rich dressing. Some add meters of repute say that each layer should be seasoned with pepper, and that the tablespoonfuls of the dressing over it, and others believe the better way to be to make the dressing thin enough, so that when it is all poured over the top it will drain slowly through.

—A most delicate dish is made by following the directions for making boiled custard or "floating island." Let it become perfectly cold; just before use, slice bananas very thin and heap in the custard dish. Put the whites of the eggs on the top over all. This is simply delicious.

—To keep ice from melting when the ice-box is not full wrap newspapers around it. In a locality where the supply of ice for a small refrigerator costs $2.50 per week this expedient has been tried with excellent success.

APPLE BROSE.—Put a teaspoonful of fresh, newly ground oatmeal into a jug and stir it about with nearly a tumblerful of cold water; put a tablespoonful of honey in a pretty large bowl, stirring it well, and adding by degrees a little of the water of the meal until it is about the thickness of cream. Then add a desertspoonful of whisky, stirring it well; and next add three wineglassfuls of whisky, stirring it all well together. Turn the brose into a clean bowl. Put the brose into wineglasses, and hand around with caramel cake or thin biscuit.

BOOTH'S HOTEL, 1 Market street, Sydney, Australia, corner Pitt. Rates, $2 per day. Tramways to all parts of the city. Free to and from the house. Proprietor, JAMES BOOTH.

MRS. M. A. DONOHOE, Fashionable Dressmaker, has removed to 105 Post street, opposite Union Square, San Francisco.

DR. J. BOSANKO, Physician and Surgeon, 104 Geary street, San Francisco. Special attention to diseases of the Eye and Ear.

DR. VAN DER NAILLEN, Dentist, has removed from 338 Post to 1004 Market, cor. Jones, San Francisco.

DR. STEWART, Dentist, 1020 Market, cor. Stevenson, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. W. H. TEALE, Dentist, has removed to 1017 Market, cor. Sixth, San Francisco.

DR. W. NEWCOMB, Dentist, 1018 Market, cor. Sixth, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. E. R. ROOT, Dentist, 1206 Market, cor. Fourth, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. F. POSTEL, Dentist, 1818 Market, cor. Octavia, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. G. BERGMANN, Dentist, 1818 Market, cor. Octavia, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. C. HAZEN, Dentist, 1818 Market, cor. Octavia, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. P. LUDLUM, Dentist, 1818 Market, cor. Octavia, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. P. ROBINSON, Dentist, 1818 Market, cor. Octavia, San Francisco. Gas for painless extraction.

DR. J. P. SCHMITZ

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

IMPORTANT LETTER TO OFFICERS AND MEMBERS.

Desire for Renewed Enthusiasm.

NAMES OF NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

CONSTITUTION OF THE LEAGUE.

How to Form Branches.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 1st, 1884.

To the Officers and Members of the Irish National League of America:

We feel confidently in inform you that the National Convention of the League, which met in Lincoln, Nebraska, to which place all communications for the Executive Committee should be addressed.

The officers of the National Treasurer, Rev. Charles O'Reilly, 12, D., still remain in Detroit, Michigan. Let no one be hastily counted you that all communications addressed to the Rev. Treasurer, as they should be sent to the Secretary, Mr. Sweeney, as the Treasurer is only the keeper of the money, which is all signed by the Secretary. Every branch will be known by the Secretary. Now is the time should money be sent to any officer but the Treasurer. We are then explicit in this subject to guard against the delay and confusion which follow errors in making reports or in forwarding moneys.

The work of the Boston Convention has attracted the attention and commanded the respect of the great people of whom we are a part. It is for us to see that we do our share of the work for the cause of Ireland. Its lofty, dignity and weight of character and purpose are so as to attract immediate our own appreciation.

We propose to you in compensation the great work of that convention with your earnest endeavor to give practical life and activity to the Ladies' Land League. The Ladies' Land League has been hitherto, and has spread all around, and has attracted all people.

It needs but a little exertion to make the League in reality a source of financial strength, which is but extended civil organization in the cause of behalf of liberty and justice. If you will for a few days, or even months, have your ear to the ground, and your shoulder, you will have the satisfaction of seeing a Ladies' Land League in every Catholic Church and of witnessing the restoration of the long lost Land League of our motherland. The officers you have placed in office are earnest, intelligent, your co-operation. Not for our sake, but for the sake which are at stake, we ask you to do your duty.

The Branch meetings may be made both interesting and instructive if conducted and proper attention be added to the routine business, which is necessary, and which should be established in every Branch.

There should also be a committee on Parliamentary Report appointed in every branch, and only a brief summary should be added, and only a brief summary should be added, and the Branch Secretary should be instructed that only which organs and go to work immediately. A Branch should be established in every Parish where there shall not there there be fifteen members to unite in the cause of Ireland. Let the Branch Secretary be instructed to forward the names of the members to the Secretary, and the Secretary will forward the Branch Secretary the Secretary ten months. We received the following resolution from the Branch of Detroit, Michigan, Boston and Baltimore, and Philadelphia, and Chicago, and Cincinnati, and Louisville, and Cincinnati, and Louisville, and Cincinnati, and Louisville

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE FABLE OF LOVE AND DEATH.

BY ELEANOR C. DONNELLY.

The smiles and the sneers of Le Monde jointly scorning,
Blind Self, all the while, at the mass, to his tears and his talk,
L'Amour and Le Mort, (strange companions) one morning,
Went rambling abroad for a midsummer walk.

The one was around, rosy, dimpled young fellow,
Golden-haired, his bliss eyes of jolliest twinkle;
The other, (with scythe and white glass) was a yellow
Old skeleton, bearing the cross-bones and skull.

And lo! on each back, an odd quiver disclosed
A bundle of arrows of curious kind—
The darts of young Cupid were feathered with roses,
The arrows of Death pass with cypress entwined.

Not a breath was abroad; at high noon 'twas so still—
The world lidly smoked with the terrible heat;
L'Amour and Le Mort chilled a bait at a grotto,
And took it to sleep in that dusty retreat.

The exile, on the grass and dried leaves of their shelter,
They stretched out their limbs for a slumber profound;
They pillowed their quivers, and there, hollow-cheeked, lay
They scattered their arrows on some on the ground.

Alas! and alas! the sham was charming,
The coolness of bosoms the slumberers lain!
When they woke with a start, 'tis, not really startling
The shafts had fallen, the sight was at hand!

Each sprang in his foot,—naked he quiver, half-empty,
And with the loose darts in their glittering shower
Alas! and alas! the bright arrows of Cupid
Were mixed, to their hate, with the arrows of Death!

Never more alone that dare do they wander together,
L'Amour not Le Mort, for wherever is seen
A pair of old crones that are ever together,
Their love-tale repeating—the shades of green

Le Mort shakes his head—L'Amour pouts petulant
And, half indignantly, but yet in spite
Of himself, he is forced to obey the behest of Love's dark
Shot out of Death's quiver, O lovers at leisure!
The Grave, not the Altar, shall claim your old age
Together!

But when some young darling, some fair, lovely maiden
Lies cold on her death-couch—Le Monde, with Cries: "Love! slow art cruel! O false, foolish
The arrow of Death here hath mastered this yet!"

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

SONNET—"MATERNITY."

All things change, and fade and die,
Nothing earthly grows content,
We change with every passing year,
We long for calm—but when we get,
We want a change, then lo!
Sighs to-day are glad and light,
Joys to-morrow grief replaced,
Memory is pleasure's mocking ape,
Thus is all earthly—nothing lasting
Our very smiles are but by sorrow fashioned—
For contentment, I wishfully is centered
To varying impulse. Love is but the out
Of nature's lash to hold grim out
Thus is life true year to year.

GUSSIE.

Literary Miscellany.

Helen's Temptation,

—OR—

The Triumph of Truth and Courage.

CHAPTER I.

In the town of Barford there stands a convent, known by the name of "Our Lady of Angels." The Sisters who reside there have a school in the house.

The convent was not very large, so that the sisters could not have more than twelve pupils at once, but a happier and better set it would have been difficult to find. The convent was built on the side of a hill, where green fields on the slope of a hill, and the sun lay dazzling, while it; on one side was the dark woods of Ladyvale, on the other the smiling meadows and green pastures and roads. It was a sweet spot, so quiet and bright that you never could be cold there, for the dancing sun was always there to make whether it sunrise or sunset. The ship seemed to be always in sight, and the birds made a continual concert in the large thickets that clothed the building. The lilies of the valley and the violets, with fragrant wild-flowers, and when the windows of the house were opened it was as though the air was perfumed with their rich scent.

The interior of the school was as pleasant as the exterior. On the ground floor was a large chapel, with pictures and statues, and a well-filled Book-case. The Sisters knew how to make even a school-room pleasant. There were no high ceilings and walls that kept out the sunshine, but long and lofty rooms, with a carpet on the floor, and opened into a pretty green lawn, so that when the tired eyes of the pupils, for a moment, left the books they might be rested on the gay flowers and waving trees. There was a long river table in the middle of the room, and a row of desks at the end. It was the pleasant room in which they had filled to study in, so light and bright and cheerful. It was a pleasant place to come to from a dull room. There was, too, a pretty little altar, and on it stood a beautiful statue of Our Lady with the Infant Jesus in her arms. Pretty vases filled with the choicest flowers had been placed before it, and intermixed with what our lapsers. The children considered it a great honor to have charge of the altar, and the school room, during the week had been the best behaved the week each was allowed to perform the flowers and arrange them upon it.

The school was not large, so that it looked on to the garden, with its gay flowers and pretty arbors, and a door led from that into the studio where the drawing lessons were given, and that again opened into the play-ground. On the first floor were the dormitories, and their little white beds stood along the side each with a pretty white curtain and small cruciffix hung up at the end.

The playground was a beautiful place. In the middle it was hard from ground, and all round were little garden beds, each child had one, and of course had the whole charge of it. The Sisters encouraged the children's minds were like from seeing their gardens. Some were so neat and well arranged, with borders of green box and flowers in pretty groups; perhaps a rose tree with violets all around it—but a stone or weed to be seen all fresh nice and fragrant. In others, weeds might be seen in the borders broken, the flowers growing wild in any way they could, without the help of pick-axe and spade, stones and pebbles cranking the tender buds so that they could never bloom. At the end of the playground there was a row of beautiful lime trees. Under their shade some pleasant seats had been placed where also the children were tired with their play they could sit down to rest, while the large way bought made a beautiful shady arbor for them.

Here some of their happiest hours were passed. One of the nuns, Sister Mary Agnes, was wonderfully clever in telling beautiful stories, and she used to sit on one of the seats, the children all grouped around her, enchanted with the marvellous tales she told them. She knew how to make her histories both useful and interesting. Many lessons of half life. The superiores of the school was Mother Mary Lory, I am hardly tell you how much the children loved her, and yet she knew how to keep them in awe. No child ever tried to deceive Mother Lory; her clear eyes read everything. She possessed a wonderful influence over the children, for they knew she was both just and firm. After Mother Lory had cried said "No," there was not a child among them who did not quite understand that any more would be quite useless. Her praise was their highest reward, her reproof their most dreaded punishment.

Sister Louise taught music and French; she was very clever, and same very well. She was a great favorite among the pupils as was also another Sister, Sister Isabelle. This nun had charge of the convent from the time she was a little child. Her parents wished her to come home to or if she would not like to live out in the world, and the world, according to their wise; but it was soon found that she preferred the convent, where, unexcitingly, she soon returned, and became a good and holy nun.

Then there was a sham mistress, Sister Ignatia; she had been a lady of rank in the world; she was highly accomplished, and a most clever teacher. She had a manner of making everything so plainly and easily understood, that it was hardly possible not to learn well and quickly under her tuition.

One beautiful summer's morning after the Angelus had rung, the children trooped out into the playground. Generally they ran, but this morn to the end, they walked out to their gardens; but on this particular day they all went under the lime-trees for lessons was a great event to discuss. Sister Gabrielle, who had charge of them during recreation, was the centre of a very animated group. The two oldest girls, Helen Forse and Teresa Lyons, was one such side of her. Helen was a tall, intelligent-looking girl about fifteen; she had been at school some years, but was not an "A Child of the Holy Angels," which was one of the scholarships established for the children of the convent. She was very good, truthful and industrious, but yet she had had one great fault; she was vain, and always desirous to be the first in everything. She wished to be the prettiest, the most patient to take her best and to think the most of her. She was never content to be on the same level with her friends; she liked to be one degree higher. She was very much loved, for she was good-natured and kind, and always ready to help the little ones. The Sisters considered her clever and talented, although they never told her so. They were anxious that she should try and correct this fault of vanity, and of wishing to be the first in everything than the rest. Teresa Lyons was the same age as Helen, and they were great friends. Teresa was gifted and clever, and in this respect she almost equalled Helen. Teresa was a "Child of Mary, when the office or association for the convent girls. It was a very beautiful sight to have seen her more pious or docile girl. The Sisters were very much attached to Teresa, she was so humble and ready to obey, instead always seeking to shine, even at the expense of others, she was religious and modest, and liked to be classed with the rest.

Helen and Teresa were the two first girls in the schools; then came three sisters, Rose, Fanny and Margaret Darcy; then Maria and Lily Sparrow, two little orphans, they made the first class, and on this day they were all surrounding Sister Gabrielle, each having a multitude of questions to ask.

"My dear children," said the Sister, "I cannot hear you all at once, even if I would; I am only able to answer one at a time; sit down and talk in turn—make a circle here. Now, Teresa, you begin; what do you want to ask?"

"I think, Sister," replied Teresa, "that we are all anxious to know what Mother Lory meant this morning when she spoke to us in the refectory."

"I Good," laughed Sister Gabrielle. "Now, Helen, is your turn to speak."

Helen answered promptly: "After breakfast, before we left the refectory, Mother Lory came in and said she should come into the study this evening, for she had something to tell us which she thought would be agreeable surprise."

"I am ready do that, Sister; what does Mother Lory intend to say?"

A general laugh followed this concise little speech, and then Sister Gabrielle said:

"Mother Lory told me I was to give her message, and probably she will not be in the study to-day. None of you have heard of the famous Lilford Tyres, Helen, may do so perhaps, as you have been many years at school. Well, Lucien Clifford, ten years since was one of our best pupils; she left us and was married to a rich gentleman. The name is now Lady Rawdon.

"I remember hearing the other girls speaking of her," said Helen; "I never saw her."

"I hardly thought so, Helen. Well, Lady Rawdon has been abroad some years; she has just returned to England, and came home yesterday, that she might be in the place, and opened into a pretty green lawn, or at the Hyrons. Of course we are very delighted to see her. She begged a holiday for you, and has invited you all to join her in a picnic in Ladyvale woods."

There was a chorus of delighted approval, Maria Sparrow cried out: "That's just what I shall do, Sister Gabrielle, when I am grown up and come back again to Barford to see you all."

"Very well, Maria," laughed the Sister, "we accept the invitation beforehand; but there is something more yet. Lady Rawdon has brought some very beautiful books which she has begged Rev. Mother to add to your library, some splendid vases and ornaments for the altar in the school room, and a large statue for the dormitory where the bed is stood."

"How kind she is," said Helen; "then all the nuns, Sister Gabrielle?"

"No, my dear; the examination takes place as usual this year, but there is to be an extra prize. There will be one for history, grammar, catechism, music, and Italian—the prize for the best work for a year, and the second one for which you are all to compete; besides that the examination will be public. Lady Rawdon, and we think perhaps the Bishop will be here."

"What is the prize Sister," asked Helen; "and how shall we compete for it?"

"After the usual examination is over, Rev. Mother will give six questions of the subject you are to write about, and the one who gives the best replies will win the prize; it consists of a gold medal and a splendid illuminated Bible."

"I should like to win that," said Helen; and her words were echoed by all her companions.

"What will the six questions be, Sister Gabrielle?" asked Teresa.

"I don't know; Rev. Mother will not tell you, nor even the Bishop. It is easy enough to answer questions when you have had time to prepare. This also is the test. You will not even know the subject, so that it will be a fair trial of your powers, and show better than anything else the extent of your knowledge."

"Suppose, Sister," said Marie Spencer, with a comical look on her little face, "suppose some of us can give no answers at all."

"Then such a one would stand but a poor chance of the prize, Maria."

"Ah! they'll be clever enough, Sister Isabelle!" asked Helen anxiously.

"Rev. Mother knows, my dear, how far you are advanced in your studies, so that she will not be likely to ask you things that you cannot answer; at the same time, as it is a test you general knowledge, I have no doubt that the examiners will be rather difficult."

"I would give anything to win that prize," said Helen; "I could rather have it than all the others put together."

"I have no doubt," said Sister Gabrielle, "that you will be one of the most likely to win it, you are so ambitious."

"I should like it, too," said Teresa, "if my dear cousin would be a judge; I know how her face would brighten up when I show it to her."

"There is a great difference in the two motives, my dear children," replied Sister Gabrielle, with a significant look at Helen; "but there is the first dinner bell, we must go in."

The picnic party to the woods of Ladyvale took place a few days after the above conversation, and heartily was it enjoyed into by all the children. Lady Rawdon spared no pains to make them enjoy the day. It was a treat to eat a nice dinner under the shade of the trees, and to play the whole day in the bright sunshine. Not withstanding all the fun and merriment; each little mind was pondering on the six careful questions that were to be asked. Helen and Teresa walked home from the woods with Sister Louise under whose charge they had been. They could speak of nothing but the one engrossing subject.

"Do you know, Sister Louise," said Helen, "how Rev. Mother will arrange the examination?"

"Yes," replied the Sister, "I heard it spoken of last evening. The usual prize will be given; then the first class will be summoned, for, of course, you know that is only a form; that will try for the prize. You will take your seats, and the six questions will be given to you; you have to give for you to write the replies, which will be read aloud, and the prize will be given to the one who gives the best answers."

(TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Dead Man's Gulch.

The following incident occurred during the early days of the California gold fields, and is characteristic of the class of things that existed amongst the diggers at the time. A miner had died in a mountain ravine, and as he was orphan, his acquaintances resolved to give him a "square deal," instead of putting the body in the usual way into a roughly made hole, and saying, by way of funeral service, "Bury another bully boy under." They sought the services of a miner who bore the reputation of having at the time of his career, been "a powerful preacher in the Methodist line." Accordingly, one dreary day, all knelt down while the extemporized prayer was delivered in a profoundly long prayer. The miners, tired of the long-winded oratorio, to while away the time, began, shoot-boxes, regarding the earth that had been taken from the grave. Gradually the prayer was stopped, whispering commenced and increased, until it became loud and boisterous, and continued until the prayer, He opened his eyes and stared at the surrounding miners. "What is it, boys?" Then, as they began to laugh, he joined in sputtering out of gold, he shouted, "Gold by jingo! I struck the mother lode of diggin's. The prospection is dismissed!" Instantly every shovel was thrown aside, and the prayer-meeting broke up, and the miners, in their haste, left the grave half-dug, and the dead man's body lying where it was, in their hearts a valor grand, daring and unconquerable.

A rifle cracks from the American ranks—another and another, and with a bound the Turkish arrows across the bridge—a death grapple ensues—Pitsaris is in retreat—the red banner of Britain goes down—and a new nation is born to life and light!

American history tells the rest.

The time that nerved thunderbolts of Marfall on the walls of Lucknow—and struck down the Britain at Fontenoy and repulsed the hosts of Concord to fire "the shot heard round the world" was

"THE WHITE COCKADE."

Three Memorable Events in Irish, French and American History.

It was the 29th day of August, 1690. William of Orange beleaguered Limerick. For weeks he had trained his guns upon the ancient city, and the hordes of mercenaries who thronged around his banner were impatient and savage to breach the walls and plunder the city. For the first time since the eventful day he commanded all his force to aid him in the desperate enterprise, Brandenburgher, Huguenot, Dutchman, Dane, and Britain responded to his call.

A breach was made in the walls.

Despite the valor of Sarsfield and the Irish defenders the enemy poured like a torrent into the city. The Irish were driven back. Borne down by the impetuous rush of overwhelming numbers, they recoiled to the "Black Battery" in despair.

Suddenly from the Irishtown arose a strain of music—higher and higher its proud notes swelled, and the hearts of the beleaguered and fainting hearts at the clash and din of battle. To one it had an unmeasured sound, but to another it filled of hope, of home, and of victory. The Williamite had never heard it before—with the Irish it was a household god. It had been played at their weddings, their festivals and their marches, and as it bolstered and familiar strain, it inspired them with fear, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

The scene is shifted. Half a century has passed away, and we are transported to Limerick. The men of its defenders are now the serfs of the Sassenach. They are in the service of King Louis of France. The Netherlands, not Ireland, is the battle ground, and the two great armies of the two greatest powers of Europe are ready to face. Marlborough is at Dunkirk, Dunkirk, the destiny of Europe depends on the issue of the battle. Fontenoy, on the Schelldt, is the field of meeting.

The son of the King of England is at the head of the legions of Britain, Hanover, Dutchland and England.

The French King has no auxiliaries save the "wild Irish," known in his service as the "Irish Brigade." The Brigade never exceed 5,000 men—all natives of Ireland—recruited in Munster and Connaught, nothing French about them only in their name. The uniform is green.

It is four o'clock in the afternoon; the French have been driven from the town, the Dutch and Britain; they have made a fierce resistance, the ground is covered with their dead; but Cumberland and Hay seemed to be all opposition before them, and, unbeaten, the best strategic point of the battle-field.

The French King's retreating, beaten and broken.

At this moment the air is suddenly filled with melody. It comes from the quarter where the Irish Brigade is stationed, and rolls over the bayonets of the brigade, and is heard in intervals even above the roaring of the guns.

The Irish move towards the heights where Cumberland, with 13,000 veterans, is posted. Twenty pieces of artillery and 12,000 unbroken British are drawn up in close ranks. They close up and press on without firing a trigger, for the order is "Cold steel and self-reliance!"

But, as they gain the crest of that corpse-strewn hill, the Irish air which buoyed them in the advance, now cheers them on the charge, and with Sarsfield and Lucan rush upon the bayonets of Cumberland.

"The Black Guard," a Scotch regiment numbering one thousand men is bayonetted and trampled down before their rushing onslaught. The Dutch, unable to stand the yell, break and fly down the opposite slope of the hill.

The French pause for a moment in the retreat to hearken to the wild hurrah that rings from the hosts of Saxon, regaining courage from their chief, and the rallying cry of the Sassenach, "Ha! ha! the Saxon!" Cumberland, Hay, Dutchman, Dane, and Britain responded to his call.

A breach was made in the walls.

Despite the valor of Sarsfield and the Irish defenders the enemy poured like a torrent into the city. The Irish were driven back. Borne down by the impetuous rush of overwhelming numbers, they recoiled to the "Black Battery" in despair.

Suddenly from the Irishtown arose a strain of music—higher and higher its proud notes swelled, and the hearts of the beleaguered and fainting hearts at the clash and din of battle. To one it had an unmeasured sound, but to another it filled of hope, of home, and of victory. The Williamite had never heard it before—with the Irish it was a household god. It had been played at their weddings, their festivals and their marches, and as it bolstered and familiar strain, it inspired them with fear, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

The scene is shifted. Half a century has passed away, and we are transported to Limerick. The men of its defenders are now the serfs of the Sassenach. They are in the service of King Louis of France. The Netherlands, not Ireland, is the battle ground, and the two great armies of the two greatest powers of Europe are ready to face. Marlborough is at Dunkirk, Dunkirk, the destiny of Europe depends on the issue of the battle. Fontenoy, on the Schelldt, is the field of meeting.

The son of the King of England is at the head of the legions of Britain, Hanover, Dutchland and England.

The French King has no auxiliaries save the "wild Irish," known in his service as the "Irish Brigade." The Brigade never exceed 5,000 men—all natives of Ireland—recruited in Munster and Connaught, nothing French about them only in their name. The uniform is green.

It is four o'clock in the afternoon; the French have been driven from the town, the Dutch and Britain; they have made a fierce resistance, the ground is covered with their dead; but Cumberland and Hay seemed to be all opposition before them, unbeaten, the best strategic point of the battle-field.

The French King's retreating, beaten and broken.

At this moment the air is suddenly filled with melody. It comes from the quarter where the Irish Brigade is stationed, and rolls over the bayonets of the brigade, and is heard in intervals even above the roaring of the guns.

The Irish move towards the heights where Cumberland, with 13,000 veterans, is posted. Twenty pieces of artillery and 12,000 unbroken British are drawn up in close ranks. They close up and press on without firing a trigger, for the order is "Cold steel and self-reliance!"

But, as they gain the crest of that corpse-strewn hill, the Irish air which buoyed them in the advance, now cheers them on the charge, and with Sarsfield and Lucan rush upon the bayonets of Cumberland.

"The Black Guard," a Scotch regiment numbering one thousand men is bayonetted and trampled down before their rushing onslaught. The Dutch, unable to stand the yell, break and fly down the opposite slope of the hill.

The French pause for a moment in the retreat to hearken to the wild hurrah that rings from the hosts of Saxon, regaining courage from their chief, and the rallying cry of the Sassenach, "Ha! ha! the Saxon!" Cumberland, Hay, Dutchman, Dane, and Britain responded to his call.

A breach was made in the walls.

Despite the valor of Sarsfield and the Irish defenders the enemy poured like a torrent into the city. The Irish were driven back. Borne down by the impetuous rush of overwhelming numbers, they recoiled to the "Black Battery" in despair.

Suddenly from the Irishtown arose a strain of music—higher and higher its proud notes swelled, and the hearts of the beleaguered and fainting hearts at the clash and din of battle. To one it had an unmeasured sound, but to another it filled of hope, of home, and of victory. The Williamite had never heard it before—with the Irish it was a household god. It had been played at their weddings, their festivals and their marches, and as it bolstered and familiar strain, it inspired them with fear, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

The scene is shifted. Half a century has passed away, and we are transported to Limerick. The men of its defenders are now the serfs of the Sassenach. They are in the service of King Louis of France. The Netherlands, not Ireland, is the battle ground, and the two great armies of the two greatest powers of Europe are ready to face. Marlborough is at Dunkirk, Dunkirk, the destiny of Europe depends on the issue of the battle. Fontenoy, on the Schelldt, is the field of meeting.

The son of the King of England is at the head of the legions of Britain, Hanover, Dutchland and England.

The French King has no auxiliaries save the "wild Irish," known in his service as the "Irish Brigade." The Brigade never exceed 5,000 men—all natives of Ireland—recruited in Munster and Connaught, nothing French about them only in their name. The uniform is green.

It is four o'clock in the afternoon; the French have been driven from the town, the Dutch and Britain; they have made a fierce resistance, the ground is covered with their dead; but Cumberland and Hay seemed to be all opposition before them, unbeaten, the best strategic point of the battle-field.

The French King's retreating, beaten and broken.

At this moment the air is suddenly filled with melody. It comes from the quarter where the Irish Brigade is stationed, and rolls over the bayonets of the brigade, and is heard in intervals even above the roaring of the guns.

The Irish move towards the heights where Cumberland, with 13,000 veterans, is posted. Twenty pieces of artillery and 12,000 unbroken British are drawn up in close ranks. They close up and press on without firing a trigger, for the order is "Cold steel and self-reliance!"

But, as they gain the crest of that corpse-strewn hill, the Irish air which buoyed them in the advance, now cheers them on the charge, and with Sarsfield and Lucan rush upon the bayonets of Cumberland.

"The Black Guard," a Scotch regiment numbering one thousand men is bayonetted and trampled down before their rushing onslaught. The Dutch, unable to stand the yell, break and fly down the opposite slope of the hill.

The French pause for a moment in the retreat to hearken to the wild hurrah that rings from the hosts of Saxon, regaining courage from their chief, and the rallying cry of the Sassenach, "Ha! ha! the Saxon!" Cumberland, Hay, Dutchman, Dane, and Britain responded to his call.

A breach was made in the walls.

Despite the valor of Sarsfield and the Irish defenders the enemy poured like a torrent into the city. The Irish were driven back. Borne down by the impetuous rush of overwhelming numbers, they recoiled to the "Black Battery" in despair.

Suddenly from the Irishtown arose a strain of music—higher and higher its proud notes swelled, and the hearts of the beleaguered and fainting hearts at the clash and din of battle. To one it had an unmeasured sound, but to another it filled of hope, of home, and of victory. The Williamite had never heard it before—with the Irish it was a household god. It had been played at their weddings, their festivals and their marches, and as it bolstered and familiar strain, it inspired them with fear, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

LOWE'S THRILLING STORY.

A Statement from the Man Who Found the Gresly Sufferers.

Mr. Frank Enos, of this city, returned last night from a week's stay in New York, during which time he was so fortunate as to be one of the party who visited the now famous wreck of the Arctic and who brought around his beacon amidst the wreck of the ship's boats. Capt. Lowe, were enabled to hear from that officer the story of his adventures in the rescue of the lonely party, and the thrilling scenes incidental to it. He brings back with him one of the small pieces of boat leather which the party had taken with them and used for a cut up preparatory to boiling for soup. The leather is part of the upper of a strong foot which had been somewhat ably worn, and the piece is about an inch square. Mr. Enos has seen the ship which the boots were reduced before boiling. Capt. Lowe, it will be remembered, was in command of the little steam launch which located the sufferers. The launch was steaming along the coast about dusk in the afternoon of the day of the rescue, and keeping a sharp lookout for any sign of life on the sterile shore, when an object that looked something like a man was seen on the top of a cliff that towered high above the water, the outlines being clear against the sky. Upon the closer inspection of this seminal or lookout represent him as frantically and jovially waving a leather hood, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

The scene is shifted. Half a century has passed away, and we are transported to Limerick. The men of its defenders are now the serfs of the Sassenach. They are in the service of King Louis of France. The Netherlands, not Ireland, is the battle ground, and the two great armies of the two greatest powers of Europe are ready to face. Marlborough is at Dunkirk, Dunkirk, the destiny of Europe depends on the issue of the battle. Fontenoy, on the Schelldt, is the field of meeting.

The son of the King of England is at the head of the legions of Britain, Hanover, Dutchland and England.

The French King has no auxiliaries save the "wild Irish," known in his service as the "Irish Brigade." The Brigade never exceed 5,000 men—all natives of Ireland—recruited in Munster and Connaught, nothing French about them only in their name. The uniform is green.

It is four o'clock in the afternoon; the French have been driven from the town, the Dutch and Britain; they have made a fierce resistance, the ground is covered with their dead; but Cumberland and Hay seemed to be all opposition before them, unbeaten, the best strategic point of the battle-field.

The French King's retreating, beaten and broken.

At this moment the air is suddenly filled with melody. It comes from the quarter where the Irish Brigade is stationed, and rolls over the bayonets of the brigade, and is heard in intervals even above the roaring of the guns.

The Irish move towards the heights where Cumberland, with 13,000 veterans, is posted. Twenty pieces of artillery and 12,000 unbroken British are drawn up in close ranks. They close up and press on without firing a trigger, for the order is "Cold steel and self-reliance!"

But, as they gain the crest of that corpse-strewn hill, the Irish air which buoyed them in the advance, now cheers them on the charge, and with Sarsfield and Lucan rush upon the bayonets of Cumberland.

"The Black Guard," a Scotch regiment numbering one thousand men is bayonetted and trampled down before their rushing onslaught. The Dutch, unable to stand the yell, break and fly down the opposite slope of the hill.

The French pause for a moment in the retreat to hearken to the wild hurrah that rings from the hosts of Saxon, regaining courage from their chief, and the rallying cry of the Sassenach, "Ha! ha! the Saxon!" Cumberland, Hay, Dutchman, Dane, and Britain responded to his call.

A breach was made in the walls.

Despite the valor of Sarsfield and the Irish defenders the enemy poured like a torrent into the city. The Irish were driven back. Borne down by the impetuous rush of overwhelming numbers, they recoiled to the "Black Battery" in despair.

Suddenly from the Irishtown arose a strain of music—higher and higher its proud notes swelled, and the hearts of the beleaguered and fainting hearts at the clash and din of battle. To one it had an unmeasured sound, but to another it filled of hope, of home, and of victory. The Williamite had never heard it before—with the Irish it was a household god. It had been played at their weddings, their festivals and their marches, and as it bolstered and familiar strain, it inspired them with fear, hopeful and bright as the sunlight of heaven, they beat back the enemy with irresistible valor which, scorning all odds, impelled them to turn upon the victorious foe in one fierce and terrible charge.

Even the young maidens, forgetful of their sex in the intensity of excitement with which the patriotic air inspired them, rushed to the breach to aid their struggling brothers.

The women fought before the sun, Such was the power of the tune, And back they pushed the villiers then, From Limerick to the sea.

THE ROSE OF JERICHO.

The Flower of Resurrection.

In connection with this singular plant, the following account is taken from a charming little volume entitled "Leaves from the Book of Nature":

"Long years ago I was in the Holy Land. It was the last day I was to spend in Jerusalem. I had been to the Jordan, towards the blue waters of the Mediterranean, I found myself once more sitting on the Mount of Olives, with the city before me, in calm; the tolling of a convent bell came softly upon my ear, the shadows began to elongated its wall-beat cadences with the shadows, plays of light and shade, upon the stream at my feet. By my side sat an Arab, tranquilly following with his eye the light clouds in his pipe, as they gracefully rose up in the clear, blue ether, but apparently unmoved by the beauty of the place, he was in the desert home, I had to confess, I believed that Italy never was equalled in the region. In the present mood of the quarrymen there it is said that he would be summarily dealt with.

"Words of Wisdom."

Bishop Grace, in a discourse, spoken at the laying of the corner stone of the church of the Holy Rosary Nativity, St. Louis, uttered the following:

"You see other churches split on slavery, and you see them split on temperance, in fact there are so many opinions as heads. Where is unity if not in the Roman Catholic Church, with its two hundred millions of people of every nationality, and speaking almost as many tongues? Millions, African, Tartarian, French and American, Catholics. Here we are to-day have one Faith, one law, one baptism. There is nothing so difficult as to make men alike. In politics there is the high tariff, etc.; the latter, God bless them, can not think alike on bonanza, on geology, anything, and other subjects, man can not agree. Now, gentlemen, I say that the Catholic Church embraces every degree of civilization: the solid German, the theological Italian, the hot-tempered Frenchman, the quick-witted Irishman—here we are, and though the Italian is

THE MONITOR.

FIRST-CLASS WEEKLY

THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published in the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through this Intermediary, St. Francis de Sales, under whose protection they wish to be placed, the efforts of Catholic Journalists for the glory of the Church, the Catholic Religion, the Catholic and Apostolic Roman Pontiff, and those of the Holy Archbishop of Paris, the Bishops and Clergy of France, with devotion and filial respect.

"Journalism is the greatest social power, because it is the third estate in the temple of the world, the political blood circulating everywhere, and spiritual gas of the world. In our view, religious journalism is not a useful and zealous auxiliary, but only a work indeed, but a work of the Church, and, by a sort of necessity, a work. Thus it not what ought to be the object of Catholic journalism but to be a Catholic journal, it is to be a work, whatever it may be—more or less, according to the truth."—BISHOP, TERMINIER, ROMAIN CATHEDRAL.

Father Gleeson's Reply to Ingersoll.

We intended to present our readers in this issue with a complete report of Father Gleeson's lecture in reply to Ingersoll's infidel insinuations against Christianity, which he delivered to a delighted audience on last Monday night in Metropolitan Hall to the city, but the time intervening was too short to permit of a proper revision of the proofs by Father Gleeson, hence we are compelled reluctantly to defer its publication until next week, when we hope to give a full and correct report of one of the most correct, critical and crushing refutations a representative of the truth of God ever gave to the insinuating sophistries of an infidel advocate.

Metropolitan Hall was filled to overflowing on the occasion, and hundreds of people had to leave in consequence of not being able to secure seats. Of the lecture itself it is only necessary to say that it was a blending of the grave and gay, the humorous and the historic, embellished with the green bays of eloquent reason, and fortified by the power of divine truth. A few words by way of a lecture would convey no more idea of the excellence of the entire production than would a stone from the pyramids of Egypt afford an idea of the massive side and the singular shape of the frowned among the seven wonders of the world. To appreciate the logical force of Father Gleeson's lecture it must be read in full, and then it presents a reply to the filthy infidel insinuations of Mr. Ingersoll that will chase the heart of every Christian and cover skepticism with confusion.

Father Gleeson's treatment of the different subjects which the Ingersoll lecture touched upon, and the manner in which he dealt in the second dead sea fruit of Tom Paine, Volney and other infidels of the past, is such as will commend itself to every Catholic reader and leave the Christian here master of the situation. The old adage: "Fresh is mighty and will prevail," was never better illustrated than in the present instance, and all who read Father Gleeson's lecture will agree with us that Christianity has conquered in its contest with infidelity.

Father Gleeson has completely annihilated every sophistry adduced by the representative of infidelity; he has rent the skeptic's assertions into shreds, and, with the dignity of one who knows the power of truth, he has tempered the justice of his cause with the mercy of his priestly character.

Ingersoll is now accompanied by two priests of the Church who have pulverized his rotten rhapsodies into dust and flung them back into the face of him who fancied them behind the mask of "argument" against the existence of God. In Father Lambert's Notes on Ingersoll, and Father Gleeson's Reply to Ingersoll, Christians of every creed are now furnished with facts which will fortify the faith in every Christian soul and also stand unbelieved before the world the true Catholic sentiments.

In then meeting and vanquishing Ingersoll the Catholic Church has proved herself to be the only power able to cope with—and to conquer—infidelity. The truth of God is here, and blessed are they who possess it boldly in the face of a perverse world. It is time, also, that a check was put upon the libellous blasphemies uttered against the most sacred objects of Christian worship, and, in the name of the Catholics of California, the Monitor heartily thanks Father Gleeson for coming forward to expose the fraudulent assertions of blasphemers. We hope that hereafter the men who are usurping zeal from being terrified into the untruths uttered by the infidel champion, or, in the connection we take great pleasure in informing our readers that Father Gleeson finds his educational authority overmastered by just four hundred and seventy-five dollars, the balance of the net proceeds of the lecture, and every dollar of which the good Father has donated to the support of the parochial schools which he so successfully has established in Brooklyn.

—A second Father Mathew has been heard of in every city in America, and shore and hyred all, especially in San Francisco, where intemperance is fearfully on the increase among a class of people who, if removed from the temptation, would be good Catholics. Bishop Ireland and many other prelates in the American church have long been anxious to procure the services of such patriotic men who would preach sermons against intemperance throughout every Diocese in the land, and we are delighted to learn that the services of Very Rev. Father Cocoay, C. S. C., of Notre Dame, Indiana, have been secured for this great missionary labor, and we hope that he may succeed in sweeping the demon of intemperance out of every Catholic parish in the Union.

—It is about settled between France and Germany that Alsace and Lorraine shall go back to the former, and Holland and the Netherlands shall belong to the latter, and the Belgians, the Dutch, the Danes, the Norwegians and the Swedes will all be hungry enough now to stand by what is known this country as "the great German scat."

—The British Government is about to a dynamite in Egypt. It will be employed in making way for British boots at the in outworks.

Are Catholic Young Men Compelled to Join Secret Societies?

San Francisco, September 24th, 1884.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR—

Dear Sir—I read your remarks last week concerning the Native Sons of the Golden West, and notice a similar character, with a good deal of attention, but I would suggest for your consideration the fact that all the Catholic Societies existence where Catholic young men can gather, the same advantage which Native Sons and kindred associations present. Catholics will be impelled to join societies by force, and not altogether call the views of the pastors of the Church.

I remain, yours etc.

A READER OF THE MONITOR.

The question we have placed as the caption to this article was suggested by reading the foregoing communication, and we propose to answer it by showing our correspondent in question that no Catholic young man—in San Francisco at least—has even the slightest excuse for seeking sociability, self-improvement, sick-dues or death-benefits, in any society not distinctively Catholic.

There are many Catholics ignorant of the fact that there are Catholic societies in existence in this city which offer all the advantages proposed by membership in non-Catholic societies—and association therein implies that faith which is endangered by mingling with Materialists or members of the mongrel creeds. Hence the writer of the foregoing note must either have recently arrived in the Golden Gate, or she is one of those Catholics whose home life is in a non-Catholic atmosphere has absorbed her faith and left him a wreck upon the shoals of skepticism. The Church does not establish any secular societies upon a competitive basis. Her motives for organization have a higher aim, but the "advantages" which societies "like the Native Sons present," are dondemnedpo when viewed through the telescope of Catholic teaching. Our critic—like too many of our modern-bred young men—is evidently imbued with the spirit of the age, which grows at every available advantage dared, no matter how evil the source from whence it emanates. Such young men would bow down in adoration before Satan incarnate, if he offered them the power and the glory of the kingdoms of this world, forgetting, in the forfeiture of their divine faith, that it is written: "Thou shalt adore the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

There is too much time-serving, worldtrimming, and cowardice among the Catholic young men of this generation, for the good of religion or the glory of God. The basilisk eye of Belial seems to have paralyzed the virtues which should adorn their virgin manhood, and they stand in the market-place of the world, not as the robust champions of Catholic truth, but as the abject slaves of every hidden conspiracy against the Church of Christ!

Thank God, a thousand times over, that we can point through which the Church has passed in this and other lands, even during the past century, were not reserved for the generation of go-as-you-please Catholics! Why new amongst our young men would emulate the heroism of their Christian fathers! Who no longer would undergo the trials, the persecutions, and the cruel deaths which so many millions of faithful ordeals in Europe to preserve—and in America to propagate—the Catholic faith? Who, forsooth, would be a martyr before dishonor should be engraven upon the escutcheon of the Catholic as well as upon the shield of the soldier. But the Catholic young man who—under any pretence—joins a society not in accord with the principles of Catholic morality—is as much a deserter as if Satan's "shilling" was placed in the palm of his unholy hand!

"Woe to you," says the Prophet Isaias, that call evil good: that put darkness for light: that put bitter for sweet." And is not this precisely the position maintained by the scandal-giving Catholic slaves who are in some Catholic societies? They virtually renounce their religion, mortgage their manhood, stultify their conscience, and eventually die in that despair which makes the death-bed of the apostate a scene of horror even to the hosts of heaven!

The true and vigilant pastors and priests of the Church of God, knowing these facts, and bemoaning the scandals of many Catholics, have advised Catholic citizens to form societies whereby to counteract the evil influence of societies which vitiate virtue and reduce religious belief to zero. Such societies exist in San Francisco, hence we hope that hundreds of Catholic young men will become allied to them so as to swell their numbers and—at the same time—cement Catholicism in that union which is consonant with the essence of that Church which is the common Mother of all.

Now let us see what facilities are furnished to Catholic young men in this city, whereby they may promote their mental and temporal welfare by coalition with their Catholic brethren in the different religious, beneficial, literary or social societies organized under Catholic auspices, and when we have gone through with the presentation of the advantages offered, we feel assured that every candid reader will agree with us that Catholic young men are not compelled to join non-Catholic associations in order to reap benefits which they can just as easily secure in societies in full accord with their religious convictions.

The Catholic young man who desires to meet with congenial companions among whom to spend his evenings, will find in the YOUNG MAN'S CATHOLIC MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION, four hundred gentlemen whose society will be both pleasant and profitable. A membership therein will gain him a regular stipend of ten dollars a week when sick, free medical attendance, and several hundred dollars will be paid to his legatees in case of death.

There is no ridiculous Ritual to be observed—no grips, signs nor pass-words. All the member has to do is to live up to the faith he professes, and he will be honored among men who are exalted above ordinary mortals because they have the courage to proclaim their Catholic faith in the face of an antagonistic world! This society has the approval of our beloved Archbishop.

In the Catholic young man married, and does he wish to insure his life for the benefit of his wife and children? Then let him join the CATHOLIC MUTUAL BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION, of which Rev. J. H. McNally is President, and even if he dies before 1885, his relatives will receive $2,000 as a cost to him of less than ten dollars! There is no non-Catholic society in America where insurance is so cheap and so safe as in this society, and those Catholic young men who make life-insurance an excuse for joining non-Catholic societies, stultify themselves by doing so, because they have a safer, more economical, and a far preferable society in the Church than any similar organization outside of it. This society is also approved of by Archbishop Alemany, O. P.

But perhaps the Catholic young man would like to leave $4,000 to his relatives when deceased? In that case let him join the CATHOLIC KNIGHTS OF AMERICA, and help to build up an organization that has already dispensed over a hundred thousand dollars to Catholic widows and orphans, and among whose names he will find a dozen Bishops and hundreds of Catholic priests scattered over the Union.

Is our Catholic young man religiously inclined and has he a taste for literature? If so he will find Sodalities for gentlemen in the Catholic Church—places where his faith will be increased and his literary taste gratified by membership. In such Sodalities he may also improve any musical and literary talent he may be gifted with, and still submit in the grace of God which accompanies those who connect with practical Catholicism.

Does our Catholic young man desire to gratify his literary, dramatic or musical tastes? If so, he will find in the CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN'S INSTITUTE into which he can be elected, and he will find fellowship therein a sure source of convivial enjoyment, besides receiving a literary education, but the "advantages" which societies "like the Native Sons present," are condemnedpo when viewed through the telescope of Catholic teaching. Our critic—like too many of our modern-bred young men—is evidently imbued with the spirit of the age, which grows at every available advantage dared, no matter how evil the source from whence it emanates. Such young men would bow down in adoration before Satan incarnate, if he offered them the power and the glory of the kingdoms of this world, forgetting, in the forfeiture of their divine faith, that it is written: "Thou shalt adore the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

There is too much time-serving, world-trimming, and cowardice among the Catholic young men of this generation, for the good of religion or the glory of God. The basilisk eye of Belial seems to have paralyzed the virtues which should adorn their virgin manhood, and they stand in the market-place of the world, not as the robust champions of Catholic truth, but as the abject slaves of every hidden conspiracy against the Church of Christ!

Thank God, a thousand times over, that we can point through which the Church has passed in this and other lands, even during the past century, were not reserved for the generation of go-as-you-please Catholics! Why new amongst our young men would emulate the heroism of their Christian fathers! Who no longer would undergo the trials, the persecutions, and the cruel deaths which so many millions of faithful ordeals in Europe to preserve—and in America to propagate—the Catholic faith? Who, forsooth, would be a martyr before dishonor should be engraven upon the escutcheon of the Catholic as well as upon the shield of the soldier. But the Catholic young man who—under any pretence—joins a society not in accord with the principles of Catholic morality—is as much a deserter as if Satan's "shilling" was placed in the palm of his unholy hand!

"Woe to you," says the Prophet Isaias, that call evil good: that put darkness for light: that put bitter for sweet." And is not this precisely the position maintained by the scandal-giving Catholic slaves who are in some Catholic societies? They virtually renounce their religion, mortgage their manhood, stultify their conscience, and eventually die in that despair which makes the death-bed of the apostate a scene of horror even to the hosts of heaven!

The true and vigilant pastors and priests of the Church of God, knowing these facts, and bemoaning the scandals of many Catholics, have advised Catholic citizens to form societies whereby to counteract the evil influence of societies which vitiate virtue and reduce religious belief to zero. Such societies exist in San Francisco, hence we hope that hundreds of Catholic young men will become allied to them so as to swell their numbers and—at the same time—cement Catholicism in that union which is consonant with the essence of that Church which is the common Mother of all.

Now let us see what facilities are furnished to Catholic young men in this city, whereby they may promote their mental and temporal welfare by coalition with their Catholic brethren in the different religious, beneficial, literary or social societies organized under Catholic auspices, and when we have gone through with the presentation of the advantages offered, we feel assured that every candid reader will agree with us that Catholic young men are not compelled to join non-Catholic associations in order to reap benefits which they can just as easily secure in societies in full accord with their religious convictions.

The Catholic young man who desires to meet with congenial companions among whom to spend his evenings, will find in the YOUNG MAN'S CATHOLIC MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION, four hundred gentlemen whose society will be both pleasant and profitable. A membership therein will gain him a regular stipend of ten dollars a week when sick, free medical attendance, and several hundred dollars will be paid to his legatees in case of death.

There is no ridiculous Ritual to be observed—no grips, signs nor pass-words. All the member has to do is to live up to the faith he professes, and he will be honored among men who are exalted above ordinary mortals because they have the courage to proclaim their Catholic faith in the face of an antagonistic world! This society has the approval of our beloved Archbishop.

In the Catholic young man married, and does he wish to insure his life for the benefit of his wife and children? Then let him join the CATHOLIC MUTUAL BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION, of which Rev. J. H. McNally is President, and even if he dies before

Mrs. Merriman Buys a Mitre for Her Man!

Although the schemes of Pere Hyacinthe and Mrs. Merriman in their efforts to profit another's upon the already overburdened world, have come to nought, and the whole Gallican circus has been covered with ingloorious failure, the poor, old henpecked Pere is about to be made a regular "guy" of by wearing a mitre which Mrs. Merriman has purchased for the pet of her heart. Mitres—like many other articles—can be bought ready-made in France, and in order to hide from the world the ridiculous collapse of the Gallican church, and to give the poor old Pere a little consolation, the wily widow who watches over him has purchased a mitre, so that the at-much can have something to distract his mind from the despair into which it would otherwise plunge.

Now that the gas is all out of the Gallican tag, the French papers are getting the poor old Pere and his stranded scheme with paragraphs of sarcasm mixed with truth. From these papers it appears that the so-called "Gallican Clergy" comprised merely one apostate priest and one expelled Seminarist, who is unfortunately in Sacred Orders. On a recent occasion these two worthies and Mrs. Merriman-Leyson solemnly met to confer with the shareholders, who are the shareholders, on the next best step to take. It has been unanimously decreed by this grotesque council that M. Hyacinthe Loyson shall be raised to the Episcopal dignity, and sent with roving jurisdiction through the world to collect silver coins enough for the use and benefit of the Leyson trio: Pere, Mere, and petite Paul!

When this double-sexed council concluded to make Loyson "bishop" on of the pitiful old Pere, the next difficulty was to find somebody to "lay hands" on him. Although Mrs. Merriman does bishop her often—in a lively way—"laid hands" on the poor, old, half-witted hen-sick, such laying of unholy hands does not count in the Episcopal consecration. In the Gallican circus, so they had to look around in order to find some friendly cleric who would help the poor funny family out of its Prelatic predicament.

Accordingly, M. Hassaig, of the Syrian Ant Catholic sect was asked to go through the farce of making a family bishop, but he promptly refused to lend himself to such a scandal even to oblige Mrs. Loyson. Bishop Herzog was next appealed to, but he spurned to be a party to such a sacrilege upon a solemn function. An Oriental schismatic was next invited, but he felt insulted at the insinuation that he would defile his ecclesiastical character by such a shameful parody upon the Priesthood.

Disappointed in all these, Mrs. Merriman's ingenuity is at work among the Anglican sect for some accommodating "bishop" of that British institution, who will minister Mrs. Merriman's male companion, so that when she shall next come to America on a college-leg tour, he will not have to pay the money out of the pockets of his "dear pouch." This last idea may be completely paralyzed at sight of the first "Bishop" ever manufactured by the new French process specially invented for the occasion by a Yankee Chemist!

America is the greatest country in the world for inventions. Anything from a potato peeler to a new religion can be patented in forty minutes, and the "numerous friends" of Mrs. Merriman will doubtless be delighted to learn that the sacrilegious genius of her native land has not been in the least circumscribed or curtailed by her Gallican alliance!

But though the poor, old, Pere's cranium were to be covered with a tiara—it would not make him a pope any more than Mrs. Loyson's mitre will make him a bishop! In France he will be known as a fraud, in England the Anglican fraternity will "cut him as a hashog; in Scotland they will sneer at him, and in America the people will be amused at the audacity of the antiquated at-much under the manipulations of the money-making Mrs. Merriman, who genius has at last discovered "a new lead" in the Gallican gold diggings!

The bogus "bishop" has not as yet been duly inaugurated into the mysteries of Mrs Loyson's "extinguisher," but we notice the event in advance, so that those very kind people with long purses, who "put up" for Mrs. Loyson's Parisian trip when in San Francisco last year, may get their gold together in time for her next visit, which will be duly announced from the Palace Hotel register after this fashion

Cerrotchoro to the Gallican Church
May at the Palace call.
Please ask for Mrs. Bishop Hypadathe,
She lambasted her Paul

—Michael Davitt's new book "Leaves from a Prison Diary; or, Lectures to a 'Solitary Audience,'" will appear simultaneously in this country and the British Isles, and is expected to be ready for publication shortly. The first part of the work will consist of a monologue addressed by a mate blackbird, which was the author's companion in Portland Prison, to a thrush outside. The latter, in the course of several compositions in his previous imprisonment in Dartmoor will form another feature of the book, which should afford a curious insight into criminal life, going, as they promise to do, into the various plans and schemes of professional thieves and burglars. Educational reform, chiefly with reference to the children of the criminal classes, will be dealt with in the second part of the book, on the theory that criminal disposition is not necessarily hereditary, but the result of causes which lie within the power of early industrial and moral education to remove. Chapters on the social problems of our time, the cause of crime in society, poverty as a factor in the production of crime, causes of prison relations of labor to land and capital, will follow. In a final chapter on Irish political crime the author intends to criticise the "Castle system" of government in Ireland, as he thinks it unconstitutional and constantly opposed to every popular feeling and aspiration of the Irish. At such as the book is received in San Francisco we will notify our readers.

—"The Emigrants Addresses to Erin" will appear next week.

A Venerable Servant of God in California.

During the last few weeks an ecclesiastical commission composed of Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., Very Rev. N. Congiato, Provincial Superior of the Jesuits, Rev. William Gleeson, Rev. H. Mahoney, O. P., and Rev. Jose M. Romo, O. S. F., of the Mission of Santa Barbara, has been in session in Santa Clara for the purpose of taking testimony regarding the life of Father Magin, a Franciscan Friar from Catalonia, for the purpose of promoting the cause of his present beatification and subsequent canonization in Rome. Father Magin was one of the founders of the Santa Clara Mission, and was eminent for the piety of his life. Tradition credits him with the gift of prophecy and several miracles are attested to his case. Quite a number of witnesses, descendants of the aborigines and the oldest Spanish families in the State, have given their evidence in the case, and when the documentary evidence is presented to the Congregation of Rites, another Court of Inquiry will be convened and its decision, if favorable, will rest for ten years before the case will again be opened.

We notice that one of the city papers, alluding to Father Magin, says that he prophesied the destruction of this city by earthquake. This is not a fact. Father Magin prophesied that at the time the Franciscan Missions were despoiled and the sacrilegious robbed of their lands—that those who were guilty of such outrages would never retain their illegitimate possessions. He predicted also that another race of people would possess the lands thus robbed from the Church, and that the descendants of those present at the transaction of the lands into the possession of American citizens would there in the City of Angels, Mr. Merriman does bitches had often—in a lively way—"laid hands" on the poor, old, half-witted hen-sick, such laying of unholy hands does not count in the Episcopal consecration. In the Gallican circus, so they had to look around in order to find some friendly cleric who would help the poor funny family out of its Prelatic predicament.

Accordingly, M. Hassaig, of the Syrian Ant Catholic sect was asked to go through the farce of making a family bishop, but he promptly refused to lend himself to such a scandal even to oblige Mrs. Loyson. Bishop Herzog was next appealed to, but he spurned to be a party to such a sacrilege upon a solemn function. An Oriental schismatic was next invited, but he felt insulted at the insinuation that he would defile his ecclesiastical character by such a shameful parody upon the Priesthood.

Disappointed in all these, Mrs. Merriman's ingenuity is at work among the Anglican sect for some accommodating "bishop" of that British institution, who will minister Mrs. Merriman's male companion, so that when she shall next come to America on a college-leg tour, he will not have to pay the money out of the pockets of his "dear pouch." This last idea may be completely paralyzed at sight of the first "Bishop" ever manufactured by the new French process specially invented for the occasion by a Yankee Chemist!

America is the greatest country in the world for inventions. Anything from a potato peeler to a new religion can be patented in forty minutes, and the "numerous friends" of Mrs. Merriman will doubtless be delighted to learn that the sacrilegious genius of her native land has not been in the least circumscribed or curtailed by her Gallican alliance!

Why Christ Chose the Death of the Cross.

Several reasons are assigned by the Fathers of the Church as to why our Savior chose the death of the cross: 1st. To show away all fear of death in general, yet he does not fear death in general, yet he does invariably shrink from particular kinds of death. So we read that the death of the Cross was the most painful and humiliating that could be borne; our Lord did not hesitate to adopt it as an example of such sublime heroism. 2nd. To show the peculiar love of God—Adam violated the direct command of God in eating the fruit of the forbidden tree. In atonement for disobedience, and for all the sins of the world, he behold the second Adam, the blessed Fruit of the Immaculate Virgin, a spectacle for angels and angels, hanging on the tree of shame. 3rd. To signify the entirety of Redemption. The four corners of the Cross are a type of the four quarters of the heavens. 4th. To manifest our reconciliation with Heaven; the Mediator twist God and man being suspended between Heaven and earth. 5th. To purify all creation. Creation, which was cursed, has been sprinkled by the blood of God made man; the air received His hallowed breath and His earliest sighs of prayer. 6th. To prove the truth of the words spoken by our Lord: "And if I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all things to Myself." (John xii. 32.)

The Forthcoming Episcopal Council.

At the conclusion of the reading of Archbishop Gibbons' Pastoral Letter concerning the Council of the United States, which will be held in Baltimore next November, the Archbishop arose from his throne in the Cathedral and addressed the following interesting statistics concerning the progress of the Church in America:

"Eighteen years—all to a few days—have passed since the last Plenary Council was held in this Church. During that interval very short space of time death has made serious havoc in the ranks of the Episcopacy of this country. Of the bishops and archbishops who attended that council not more than seven or eight survive. Nearly forty prelates have passed away, once judges in Israel, who have been judged by the supreme Judge. Among the number was your own venerable Archbishop Spalding, who presided over the council, and who has passed out of your memory or your prayers. As I remarked in the letter, we have reason to thank God for the success of the Church in America. At the present moment there are but forty-six forty-seven prelates, to day we have one hundred and one. Of the clergy we had 2,500 in 1866, while we now have at least 7,000. The number of churches and religious institutions has grown in like increased proportionately, and I have not the figures at hand, but the numbers more than ever before. But let us look to the numbers lost we might be tempted to boast. Although all, if not more, are due to such as our own individuality for the loss of our fellow-citizens, the sons and sons of Ham—and the made on the orphan, the poor, the ignorant, the lowly, the Christ-like and Almighty God has in mercy, in His wisdom, in His light is far more wise than our folly, and in His love far more than our hatred, and in His mercy far more than our justice, let us, as we have done, bow down in the dust, and, with the publican, say, 'God be merciful to us sinners.' The little band of men who followed the Saviour on earth were endowed by Him than the legions of the Jews. Our Lord said to them, 'It is for the greatness of the faith

Farm and Home.

BEFORE THE CHILDREN CAME.

It use to be so very trim,
So quiet and serene,
With nothing ever out of place,
(Our little home I mean).
The chairs stood ranged against the wall,
From week to week the same,
No straying down, no litered floor,
Before the children came!

It seemed so still one could have heard
The patter of a mouse,
As we with soft and slippered feet
Moved silent 'round the house;
We never stepped upon a doll,
A humming top or kite—
We never heard a bigger word,
From morning until night.

Ah! there was something wanting there
To make our life complete;
It was the touch of baby hands,
The sound of little feet;
The cry of "mother" here and there
(A concerted sense),
From girl or boy, we've guess so joy
Before the children came!

But one by one they ventured in
To blow our vanity out;
We darlings, very sweet and fair,
And happy as we lot;
The room climb upon the sill
To see our children play,
The nurseries plance and brighter dance
Than in the dullest day.

Now, looking in the little nook
That holds their precious toys,
I then had blamed my ruffled heart
For all my pins and boys;
For they have brought far more to me
Of satisfy wealth and fame
Than we so had in mind,
Before the children came.

No Home.

There are thousands who know nothing of the blessed influences of a comfortable home, merely from the want of thrift or from dissipated habits. Youth was spent in frivolous amusements and demoralizing association, leaving them at middle age, when the intellectual and the physical man should be in its greatest vigor, deteriorated and without one laudable ambition. Friends long since shut, confidence gone and nothing to look to in old age but a mere toleration in the community where they should be ornaments. No home to fly to when wearied with the struggles incident to life; no wife to cheer them in their despondency; no children to amuse them, and no virtuous household to give zest to the joys of life. All is blank, and there is no hope or succor except that which is given out by the hands of public or private charities. When the family of an industrious and sober citizen gathered around a cheerful fire of a wintry day, the homeless man is nothing sheltered in the outing house, or begging for a night's rest in the outbuilding of one who started in life at the same time, with no greater advantages but honesty and industry built up that house, while dissipation destroyed the other.

Insuring the Personal Safety of a Wife.

An Elmira, N. Y., letter to the New York Sun says: "The fact that the recent robbery of $6,000 worth of diamonds from the residence of the Hon. C. C. B. Walker, in Corning, during his absence, was committed with the greatest ease, because the safe in which the jewelry was kept was not locked, has given rise to much surprise and unfavorable comment. No one could understand how a man of the ex-Congressman's stolid business methods could be so careless and thoughtless in regard to the protection of his household treasures, especially as many of them, through association and long family possession, had a value to him much beyond their intrinsic worth. When questioned on the subject by a friend, the latter was still further surprised to be told by Mr. Walker that the fact of the safe being left open was not the result of carelessness or thoughtlessness, but it was left open by his express order and direction.

"When I am home," said the ex-Congressman, "I always lock the safe and put the key away. When I go away from home it is considered in my house that the safe must not be locked. You will remember that when the Wallsboro Bank was robbed a few years ago the cashier and members of his family were treated with great cruelty and violence by the robbers, because of their resisting the demands for the keys to the vaults and safe. That set me to thinking, and one day I said to my wife: 'We have some things in that safe which are valuable and very dear to me. Now, it is only a question of time when some ruffian or ruffians will come after them. If I am home the chances are that they will not get them; but I may be away at the time. If they come then, and find the safe locked, they will hesitate at no personal violence toward you in their efforts to effect an entrance to it. All the precious relics and treasures in the world would not be recompense for the results of such treatment. Therefore, when I am absent from home, the safe must not be locked. Then if robbers come they will secure the booty and retire without disturbing you.' Robbers came while I was away, secured the booty, and left without disturbing Mrs. Walker or any one else. They were even considerate enough to admonister other to my wife, for fear of disturbing her. Suppose that safe had been locked. I don't care to even conjecture what the consequences might have been, and I feel that in saving my family from the pains of $6000 was a trifling matter."

Mother!

There is a wealth of love, of sacrifice, and of unremitted devotion expressed in that one word, "Mother." It sounds familiar to our ears, thoughts of our happiest moments come hard in hand with the name of that "Angel of Home." In all the sorrows of life, and in all the miseries which others cannot know, one gentle word from the lips of mother will soothe to calm the troubled heart. She rules over our homes as no queen, and her subjects are her children: still unabating are her works and cares for them. Long after the little hands have sought their pillows and the childish voices are silent, the mother watts. In thought she paces to future years, when her child must, life herself, take up the burden of life unassisted. Long after a mother's willing hands, and the frail hark which she so long guided, will drift, perhaps aimlessly, on the great ocean of life, with no haven, no rest, until it is anchored on eternity's shore. These are thoughts which fill the mother's soul, and do we, the gay, happy children, understand the loving heart which prompts them? Do we know of the sacrifices which have purchased our happiness? Perhaps the same unselfish, loving mother goes to her cold, dark grave before we know her value—her only thought after God, her children, her last prayer, "O God, protect my children!"

Her sacred duties are performed, her work is nobly done, and she has sought that "peace which the world cannot give, leaving her example to guide the souls with which she was entrusted.

—Corks which have been steeped in vaseline are said to be an excellent substitute for glass stoppers. They are not in the least affected by acids, and never become fast through long disuse.

—A number of Sisters of Mercy are to take charge of the education of the girls at St. Mary's Academy, Sacred Heart Mission, Indian Territory.

BAFFLED!

One of the Most Unaccountable and Dangerous of Secret Secrets Discovered and Exposed.

There is some mysterious trouble that is attacking nearly every one in the land with more or less violence. It seems to steal into the body like a thief in the night. Doctors cannot diagnose it. Scientists are puzzled by its symptoms. It is, indeed, a modern mystery. Like those severe and vague maladies that attack homes and prostrate nearly all the animals in the land, this secret trouble seems to mock mankind. Many of its victims have pains about the chest and sides, and sometimes in the back. They feel dull and dizzy, the mouth has a bad taste, especially in the morning. A strange, sticky slime collects about the teeth. The appetite is poor. There is a feeling like a heavy load upon the stomach. Sometimes a faint, all gone sensation is felt at the pit of the stomach, which food does not satisfy. The tongue is sunken, the hands and feet clammy at one time, and burn intensely at others. After a while a cough sets in, at first dry, but after a few months it is attended with a greyish colored expectoration. The afflicted one feels tired all the while, and sleep does not seem to afford any rest. He becomes nervous, irritable and gloomy, and has evil forebodings. There is a giddiness, a peculiar whirling sensation in the head when rising up suddenly. The bowels become costive, and then, again, colitis intensely; the skin is dry and hot at times; the blood is thick, and moves sluggishly; the urine is the reverse of healthy, with yellow the prevailing color, and sometimes it deposits a sediment after standing. There is frequently a spitting up of the food, sometimes with a sour taste, and sometimes with a sweetish taste; this is often attended with palpitation of the heart. The urinary becomes impaired, with spots before the eyes; there is a feeling of prostration and great weakness. Most of these symptoms are in turn present. It is thought that nearly one-third of our population have this disorder in some of its varied forms, while medical men have almost wholly mistaken its character, and have treated it for some other disease. The brother-in-law all have failed to reach it, and it has grown under, indeed, many grievous sufferers with it themselves. The experience of Dr. A. G. Richards, residing at No. 3 Tremont Street, Boston, is thus described by himself:—

"I had all those painful and painful symptoms which I have forming so many of my patients, and which had so often baffled me. I knew all the remedies established remedies would be unavailing, for I had tried them other in the past. I therefore determined to strike out in a new path. To my intense satisfaction I found that I was improving. The dull, stupid feeling left me, and I began to feel like a man. Accordingly, I appointed Warner's safe cure, which had been a family medicine, and assumed the pink tinge of health. In the course of three weeks I felt like a new man, and know that it was wholly owing to the wonderful efficiency of Warner's Safe cure. I know the Best, which was all the medicine I took."

Doctors and scientists often exhaust their skill and their patience. They try everything that has been used by, or is known to, the profession, and then fail. Even if they save the life it is often after great and prolonged agony. When all this can be avoided by prevention and care, how foolish a thing it is for people to continue in the use of ineffectual remedies, and to allow a dangerous and intractable malady, which yield, if neglect be not so deeply incurable.

Household Hints.

Don'ts for the Table.

Don't be an invited guest, be late to dinner. This is a very too to such surprise and unfavorable comment. No one could understand how a man of the ex-Congressman's stolid business methods could be so careless and thoughtless in regard to the protection of his household treasures, especially as many of them, through association and long family possession, had a value to him much beyond their intrinsic worth. When questioned on the subject by a friend, the latter was still further surprised to be told by Mr. Walker that the fact of the safe being left open was not the result of carelessness or thoughtlessness, but it was left open by his express order and direction.

Don't sit down at the table, nor sit jammed up against it.

Don't tuck your napkin under your chin, nor spread it upon your breast; bibs and toilets are for the baby; you will spread your napkin over your lap; let it fall over your knee.

Don't eat soup from the end of the spoon, but from the side. Don't gurgle your tea in your breath, nor make other noises when eating soup. Don't ask for a second service of soup.

Don't bend over your plate, nor drop your head to get nearer the mouthful. Keep upright attitude as nearly as you can without being stiff.

Don't take your bread. Break it off. Don't break your bread into your soup. Don't cut with your knife. Never put your knife into your mouth. (In this edition unnecessary (to into any mouth and observe.) Cut with your knife; take up food with your fork. Don't load up the fork with food with your knife, and then cut it, as it were, to your mouth. Take up on the fork what is man nearly carry, and no more.

Don't use a steel knife with fish. A silver knife is now placed by the side of each plate for the fish course.

Don't handle fork or knife awkwardly. How to handle knife and fork well can be acquired only by observation and practice.

Don't stab with the fork or carry it as if it were a dagger. Always carry food to the mouth with an inward curve of the fork or spoon.

Don't eat fast or gorge. Take always plenty of time. Haste is vulgar.

Don't fill your mouth with too much food, nor mastication audibly. Eat gently and quietly and easily.

Don't spread out your elbows when you are cutting your meat. Keep your elbows close to your side.

Don't, when you drink, elevate your glass as if you were going to stand it inverted on your nose as some do. Bring the glass perpendicularly to the lips, and then lift it to a slight angle. Do this easily.

How to Handle a Gun.

The first thing to do when you go out guessing with another boy is to guard yourself against accident. The best way to do this is to shoot the other boy before he has time to load his gun. Then take both guns to the nearest creek and throw them in. Throw the powder and shot in after them. If you have any matches about your clothes, throw them in also. Then start at once and go home as fast as ever you can. And if you are under 18 years, the chances are, even with all these precautions, that you will get both legs and a section of your back filled to the brim with bird shot before you reach home.

"How?"

Goodness only knows how, my son; I don't. I have often wondered how it did happen, but I never could ascertain. I not been to advance inquiries theories, but merely to state cold facts, and I know it to be a solemn truth that a boy with a single barrel gun twice as long as himself can manage somehow to shoot himself in two places at once than a man can do with a seven shooter revolver. "And am I going to buy a gun?" Yes, I am; some time in the long vacation when time hangs heavily on my hands, and I think I would enjoy entertaining you by picking shot out of your legs with a rat pick.

"But you will be very careful with it?" So is a woman very careful with her umbrella, my son, and yet science is unable to account for the startling increase of one-eyed men every summer.

—The Latham Gerard Homestead, on the east side of Eighth street, Troy, has been purchased by Sister Dominica, Superior of St. Vincent's Asylum, for $20,000. The property is 141 by 200 feet, and one of the most available sites in the city. It will be used for an orphan asylum under the direction of the Sisters of Charity.

—THE—
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE
Of the Pacific Coast!!

A. WALDTEUFEL,
737 MARKET STREET, 737
SAN FRANCISCO,
Representing the Principal Catholic Publishers of the United States and Europe.

SPECIAL AGENT FOR
Burns & Oates, London. J. B. Piet, Baltimore.
Catholic Publication Society, N. Y.
Fr. Pustet & Co., N. Y. D. & J. Sadlier, N. Y.

The Largest, Freshest and Most Complete Stock
—OF—
CHOICE CATHOLIC BOOKS
In all the Numerous Branches of Literature, Theology, Controversy, Etc.

SCHOOL BOOKS & STATIONERY
SCHOOL SUPPLIES, ETC., ETC., A SPECIALTY.

My Assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS
Is the Most Complete on the Pacific Coast.
We send ordering Best, when Prices are Equally Low here, freight is a great extent saved, and less quantities to be bought, as your orders may be filled as wanted.

MAGNIFICENT ASSORTMENT OF
Vestments, Stoles, Chasubles, Dalmatics, Sanctuary Vails, Copes, Albs, Surplices, Soutanes for Altar Boys, Crucifixes, Statuary and Church Ornaments in General
PRAYER AND DEVOTIONAL BOOKS
In all styles and varieties, in English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Bohemian.

Ostensoriums, Chalices, Ciboriums, Candelabras, Sanctuary Lamps, Censers, Holy Water and Baptismal Fonts, Clerical Linens, Etc.

NIGHT CRUCIFIXES.
NIGHT CROSSES.
NIGHT STATUES.
VISIBLE IN THE DARKEST ROOM.
When Nothing Else Can be Seen They Shine Out with Great Brilliancy, and are an Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia said, "A Great Incentive to Devotion."

General Agency for the Pacific Coast of the Celebrated
PUSTET'S ROMAN MISSAL,
Latest Edition, with all addenda to date.
Orders from the Rev. Clergy respectfully solicited.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
CATHOLIC BOOK AND MUSIC HOUSE,
737 Market street, San Francisco.

$100,000
Paid in ENDOWMENTS to Date!!

THE UNIVERSAL
BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA
FOR UNMARRIED PERSONS.
(This is Not a Secret Society.)
INCORPORATED AUGUST 8, 1881.
HOME OFFICE,
1038 MISSION STREET, 1038
San Francisco, California.
ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ENDOWMENT OF
$1000 to $2,000,
PAYABLE AT MARRIAGE
OR AT MATURITY.
Send for Circulars and Papers.
RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.
THE UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION
1038 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.

LA GRANDE LAUNDRY,
PRINCIPAL OFFICE,
648 MARKET STREET.
1128 MARKET ST.
LAUNDRY,
19th St. bet. Folsom and Howard S. F. Cal.

M'CORMICK BROS.,
Book and Job Printers,
636 Clay Street, 636
(Sacramento Building, Sansome Office.) San Francisco.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA, - - - CALIFORNIA.
This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was made a University by the authorities of California. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, covered gymnasium, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a complete philosophical apparatus, valued at $5,000, collections of Mineralogy and Geology, Fine Arts, practical courses of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Stenography and Commercial Business. For the latter a new building, 180x60 in size, has been erected, that has nothing to be desired.
The Classes are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance.)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition, fee in all branches, Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, Bed and Bedclothes and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session 200 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Rt. Ignatius Cantin, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.
☞ Studies will be Resumed Tuesday August, 5th, 1884.
REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.,
President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE, - - - CALIFORNIA.
This Institution offering perfect facilities for a course of study, and accommodating students, etc., must be Catholic and for Young Ladies, is conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame, Mother House, Mount Courvery, Paris, Mademoiselle Lot, Superior-General.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
This Institution, chartered August 1, 1865, by the Legislature of California, is situated in the Pueblo, adjacent to the City of Los Angeles, and the beauty of its scenery. The Faculty is composed of the Sisters of Charity.
Patronage of the establishment is of such a character as to place the education of the young within the reach of the middle classes of society. The College has been enlarged and improved, and the moral instructions have been given the guidance of the Christian Brothers, who have charge of the College, and the moral instructions have been added, namely, the Sacraments of Penance, Holy Eucharist, and Confirmation, are administered to students of the Catholic faith, according to the rites of the Church. Attendance at Church is required of students of the Catholic faith, and attendance at other places is not required of students of other denominations.
The Scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five months each, the session commencing on the first Monday in August, and the session on the first Monday in February.
TERMS:
Per session, Payable in Advance.
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, including use of sheets, per session $125 00
Washing, per session 25 00
Bed and Bedding, per session 25 00
Bed and Bedding, per session 25 00
Washing, per session 25 00
Bed and Bedding, per session 25 00
Washing, per session 25 00
Bed and Bedding, per session 25 00
Washing

Grand Work of Charity at Los Angeles.

THE NEW HOSPITAL OF THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.

Imposing Services Conducted by Bishop Mora.

CONTENTS OF THE CORNER STONE.

SPLENDID SERMON BY FATHER ADAM.

—Address by Col. Godfrey.

Eloquent Tribute to the Daughters of St. Vincent de Paul.

In 1857 there was established in this city, then a village, a hospital under the auspices of the Catholic Church and attended by Sisters of Charity. It was named St. Vincent de Paul, and occupied a position nearly opposite the spot where the new depot now stands. For years and years this remained the only institution in the City where people, far from their home and friends, falling sick could find medical treatment and delicate attention. The sweet, tender Sisters of Charity received and cared for all who came in their way, regardless of their religion, regardless of their poverty and regardless of their position in society. All were succored and carefully nursed to recovery, or their last moments soothed by tender, unremitting attention. From the inception of the hospital up to the present time over 5000 people have been received and cared for. Some of them have had sufficient means to pay for the treatment, but a great number were without money, friends or abiding place.

ALL WERE TREATED ALIKE

and it seems to be that a man without family or relative had no fear of falling sick, because he knew that at the Sisters Hospital, as it is familiarly called, he would find the same delicate nursing, the same cooling hand on his brow, as if a near dear relative was standing by his bed side. Time passed, the new depot was built in the vicinity, new railroad trains, with their clatter and noise, disturbed the peace of the hospital. Still this noise and bustle was detrimental to the invalids, and the Sisters looked around for a location where they could get away from the city life, and where the afflicted would have perfect quiet, and where the morning air would become heavy laden with the perfume of the orange groves and other health-giving incense. To this end, a most beautiful place about two miles from the centre of the city was secured, and building the corner stone of a most imposing hospital was laid. It being a matter of public interest, an enterprise originated to the good in the whole community, it was made an out door alfair, as well as the military organization, the Fire Department and other civic societies joined up to witness the ceremonies and do honor to the occasion.

THE PROCESSION.

The different organizations met at the City of Angels Hotel in the afternoon and formed in the following order:

Grand Marshal, J. G. Downey.
Aide—Major Gen. Geo. H. Gard and B. A. Torrie.
Eagle Band.
Eagle Corps.
Confidence Hose Company, No. 2.
City Band.
Vigilance Company, No. 1.
Rose Lake Hose Company, Ladder Co.
Ancient Order Hibernians.
Scottish Protestant Institutions.
Members of the Common Council.
Col. Godfrey, Mayor Toma.
Gov. Stoneman and Press, in carriages.

The line of march was taken up as follows: Down Main street to Temple, Temple to Hundley street, and thence to the ground.

AT THE GROUNDS.

Arriving at the site of the hospital, where a platform for speakers had been erected, Bishop Mora, assisted by the following acolytes: Very Rev. J. Adam, V. G.; Rev. Peter Verdaguer, rector of the church of Our Lord of Vincent de Paul; Rev. Jas. Gaudon, Rev. J. P. Kelleher, Rev. P. Hartrath, Rev. Peter Bostero, Rev. L. Sansbeg, Rev. Colombo of St. Vincent de Paul; Rev. A. J. Mayer, Rev. L. P. Landry, Rev. J. V. Gomez and Rev. J. J. Cassidy, A. M., opened the ceremonies, the Litany was read, and the Rt. Rev. Bishop Mora sprinkled the stone with holy water, laid the first mortar upon it.

THE DEPOSITS.

A box containing the following articles was deposited in the corner stone:

Copies of the Los Angeles Daily and Illustrated Herald, the San Francisco Monitors of September 24, September 1 and of August 30th, the Catholic Standard of Philadelphia, the Pacific Ocean of San Francisco, the Donahoe's Journal of Montreal, last encyclical of Pope Leo XIII. on secret societies, a medal of Leo XIII., Catholic Family Annual of 1884, Ordo Divini Officii Recitandi in Ecclesia Metropolitana Sancti Francisci, dedicated without a doubt to the Church of Our Lady of Angels, Ordo Recitandi Sac. Cleri Dioecesis Angelorum, Ordo Missae Celebrandae, a copy of the Constitution of the United States, portrait of the first founder of the Society of Jesus, St. Ignatius Loyola, the Papal rescript, "Periculo dei Matrimonio" by Bishop Mora, New Testament in Latin and English, "Life of the Holy Family," Blessed Bishop Montes de Oca, Sermons by Rev. Father Adam, "Holy Week in Spanish and Latin, prayer book for the Exercises del buen ano, Spanish grammar, catalogue of St. Vincent's College; picture of Pope Leo XIII., picture of Right Rev. Diego Moreno, Bishop of California, who died at Santa Barbara in 1846; picture of Bishop Amat, Bishop Mora, Very Rev. J. Adam, Rev. Peter Verdaguer; picture of statute of St. Thomas, picture of altar of the Blessed Virgin; gold medal of harmonics in Paris, Spain, and the Tyrenees mountains; medal and picture of saints, picture of Sister Euphemia Hitzkuenger, Sacramento, U. S. United States in gold dollars; fifty cents. Confidence Engine Company No. 2 deposited a copy of the constitution and by-laws; a list of all members from its organization to the present day, both active and honorary; a file of papers furnished the Company by Wells, Fargo & Co. of 1849 and 1850; proceedings of the Standard Guards of 1860, and one of a reunion of the Irish Americans of 1867.

The East Los Angeles Hose Company deposited a handsomely mounted silver badge, gotten up for the occasion.

Father J. P. Kelleher then read the following, which was deposited in the corner stone, and which gives information as to the projectors of the enterprise:

In the year of our Lord, 1884, and in the 108th year of the Republic of the United States of America, on the 15th Sunday after Pentecost—the 14th of September—the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross and of the Octave of St. Vincent, recurring; Pope Leo XIII. felicitously occupying the Holy See of Blessed Peter, and in the seventh year of the Pontificate of the same; the Most Illustrious and Right Reverend Antonio Fest being Superior-General of the congregation of the Mission and of the Daughters of Charity; the Very Reverend Alessandro Madino being Director of the Daughters of Charity in the United States of America, and Euphemia Hinkenhop being visitor; Amelia Covray being Superior of the hospital in this city; Chester A. Arthur being President of the United States of America; G. E. Stoneman being Governor of the State of California; C. E. Thom being Mayor of the city of Los Angeles. The civil and benevolent societies being also present and a great assemblage of people to whom the Very Rev. J. Adam, V. G., preached, the oration being afterward delivered by Mr. John Godfrey, the Most Illustrious and Right Reverend Tomas Mora, Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, with solemn rite blessed and laid built Ite ophimo nacimo under the invocation of St. Vincent de Paul.

VERY REV. J. ADAM, V. G.,

Then delivered an address in the Spanish language, of which the following is a translation:

Why has our dear Bishop blessed this corner stone? Are we going to erect a temple to God here on this lonely hill? No. Why then bless a thing that is not going to be consecrated to the worship of the Almighty? I answer by asserting that the Catholic Church starts from the belief that everything that God has created is good, and that God the Creator blessed everything he had created. So the Church, after the example of her Divine Master, blesses everything and consecrates them to His honor and glory. Besides, she knows that all things were created by the evil one when he tempted our first parents, saying them shall be as gods, knowing good and evil. Our Mother, the Catholic Church, by her blessings, exorcisms and prayers, takes all things from the power of Satan and re-establishes them to the end for which they were created, namely, to lofty man to serve his God and Him only to adore!

But though this corner stone is not to serve for a building consecrated to the worship of God, still the purpose for the sake of which it will be erected are not less sacred, since that very Divine Legislator that has taught us has also impressed upon us to love our neighbors as ourselves. Benevolence and charity to wards our brethren have increased or diminished in proportion as our love for our Lord has been more or less intense. Of Christ's mortal state we are found recorded in the Gospel that "He passed by, doing good to all and curing the sick," and the Catholic Church, that has followed in every century her Divine Master, instructed, preached to the poor, doing good to all and attending to the sick. Religious men and women, in every age, have attended to the wants of the unfortunate. They are as two sisters that, embracing one another, have passed by, pointing up with their finger to Heaven, for which we want to build this edifice, the virtues of charity and consolation to the poor and afflicted.

TO LOVE GOD ABOVE ALL THINGS,

AS MARTA AS THE APOSTOLIC LIKE

we can clearly towards all according to the

THE CLOISTERS FAST OF THEIR DOUBTS

tells us what they shall do in time to come. Let then the builders hurry and give us soon a house for the infirm. Let us now see the site well attended with a modern care. Let us see those Angels of Charity whispering words of consolation to the dying and opening eyes of the infidel to the true faith at the moment he closes them to this world, bringing back the erring child unto the bosom of the Church; making penitents all to all, as another St. Paul; putting in practice that saying of the psalmist: "Whomsoever shall do the will of God, he is my brother and my sister and mother."

Mark 3:35; and these Sisters of Charity do the will of God, attending to the sick and being to them instead of brother and sister, they do the will of God taking care of the orphans, and Christ considers them as his own mother, and what is in store for them. No less than a glorious crown do his than, "Come, blessed of my Father, for I was sick and you visited me; I was naked, and you clothed me."

COLONEL JOHN P. GODFREY

Was then introduced and delivered the following beautiful and appropriate address:

It is not an unpleasant task at the present time, amid the strife of political parties, not with the partisan and stimulating Press of Southern California, at a time when all speech making has more or less reference to politics, to find a subject of great interest, not far beyond the pale of political contention and yet so near that it touches the hearts of kind and humane dispositions of all and every party, sect and creed. And as I stand here before a multitude of those who have assembled here together to witness the ceremonies, and feel that sympathy and love have a large place in human hearts, much larger, as history tells, than in those days before the dawn of Christianity inspired the kindness and sympathy and love of mankind for one the other; that first gave to the world asylums and hospitals for the suffering and sick, hospitals for the sick and wounded, and also those for the poor and aged, and also those for the orphan before the advent of Christianity. Among the ancients in Athens, a man who had suffered in the service of the public, were fed in a public place; but there was no asylum for them in case of sickness. In Sparta, where all the citizens ate together, there was no institution for the sick. Among the ancient Nemi, nor Servius. Neither the conquests nor the emperors thought proper to provide for the sick and the infirm. And be it said to the unfading glory of Christianity that the first establishment of hospitals were by Christians. Among the first hospitals ever established in one by a pious Christian Roman woman by the name of Fabiola, at about the end of the fourth century. It was an establishment for receiving poor and sick persons, and after the establishment of Christianity, the Roman emperors at Constantinople built many hospitals for the poor, for aged people, for orphans and for strangers.

THE EMPEROR JULIAN,

who repudiated the Christian religion, attributed the rapid progress of Christianity in great part to these charitable institutions and endeavored to imitate the example of the Christians in this respect in his attempt to restore paganism in Greece. In Constantinople the hospitals, I repeat, are generally attended by women, and I believe that it is the divinity of Christ and a sacrifice at the Christian altar, which gives that tender and nobler than the sight of delicate females attending to the wants of the sick, the youth and beauty that can to devote themselves to the relief of human misery, and attendance on the most revolting forms. And hospitals, first making their appearance in the Christian light of a Christian civilization, are to day an honor to the nations of Europe and the Christian Religion.

WE ARE HERE, THEN, TO-DAY to assist in laying the corner stone of a hospital; a hospital to take the place of the one established here in the spring of 1857, and from which time to the present time 5000 men and women and children, suffering from disease and wounds, have been washed and cleaned and healed, and cared for by the tender hands of Christian women, who, that with that sympathy for suffering humanity—with that love which bespeaks divinity—have left behind them the ordinary pleasures of life to live the self-begging, self-sacrificing life which belongs to the status of the duties of a "Sister of Charity."

THE GROSS SENSE AS SISTERS OF CHARITY

in the United States was founded by Mrs. Seton in June, 1809, at Emmitsburg, Md., and which has since been called to the society founded by St. Vincent de Paul in Paris for the relief of the sick. The society starting with one establishment in 1809 now attend to the occupants of 103 establishments in the United States alone. These establishments are divided into hospitals, orphan asylums, schools, industrial schools, insane and infant asylums; and of the 103 establishments twenty-two are hospitals. And living in a certain danger by contact with disease in its worst and most contagious forms, never shunning duty, never fearing death, young and delicate women facing disease sometimes so loathsome and sorrowing as to cause strong men to falter and turn sick. Poverty, chastity and obedience comprise the vow taken by these noble women who so conscientiously do their duty as nurses in the hospitals of the Sisters of Charity.

WE READ OF HEROES, AS THEY ARE CALLED, who face death bravely in battle, and courage which can endure unflinchingly a storm of bullets is respected; but, after all, this is only one kind of courage and is but rare. It is really the few who do not have it. A man who, for opinion's sake, does face the storm of public denunciation and the contempt of his fellow citizens, is often possessed of a higher order and purer quality of courage than he who faces the leaden ball. But in each of these cases there is something of selfishness, of worldly pride, something that partakes of the poor clay and thoroughly cleansed by the refining and purifying element. The one expects, if he lives, the praise and the honor and the reward which man gives to the survivors of battle. The other, looking ahead and believing in his final victory, sees in the future a never-fading crown of glory attendant on his name. But the young woman standing on the verge of womanhood and viewing the prospect of life entered by the imaginations and generous sentiments of youth and health, sees beckoning her towards them all the pleasures of love and affection, and the endearments and happiness of domestic life. But looking again she sees passing away beyond all this a silent procession moving on. In it are many with wounds and bruises; some reeling from battle, some in private combat; some by accident; some are sick with loathsome disease; some look wasted, some look wan, but all look suffering.

THERE ARE SOME OF LIFE'S UNFORTUNATES,

and she sees their pitiful, pleading faces turned beseechingly towards her, and she turns away from the pleasures and temptations of life and says to these pale, worn faces, as Ruth said to Naomi, "Whether thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. Where thou dieest, will I die, and there will I be buried. The Lord do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me."

Here is courage which only looks for reward in heaven—the truest and finest courage of these all. And now, here we make a new commencement, as it were, in the interest of the suffering and the sick. Here, within these walls about to be erected, will soon be found many poor and helpless people; and here within the walls the kind sisterhood will with light tread and tender hands and soft, kind voices, cheer the hopes of none and soothe the last moments of others. Here will be seen the light of the portals of this new hospital will waft many a man and woman with health regained to their homes, and to the care bestowed by the Sisters of Charity.

"Faith hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

A goodly opinion will invariably be given as to the probabilities of a cure, and no case will be accepted for treatment which does not offer a reasonable chance of success.

Dr. Lightbill takes pleasure in submitting to those interested the following letter, which speaks for itself:

FROM THE RIGHT REV. TH. F. HENDRICKEN, BISHOP OF PROVIDENCE R. I.

My dear Doctor Lightbill:

Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no expectation when I consulted you on Sister Dominica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back her hearing; but she tells me that she hears now even better than ever before. For this, and for your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you.

Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me, for I can recommend you as a surgeon and physician, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice.

Very truly and very sincerely yours

+TH. F. HENDRICKEN,
Bishop of Providence.

Office Hours from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Sundays from 10 to 12.

Deafness, Catarrh,

And Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

Scientifically & Successfully Treated by

DR. E. B. LIGHTHILL,
(Of New York City,)

AT HIS OFFICE,

121 POST ST., SAN FRANCISCO,
Rooms 7 and 8 (Front.)

For upwards of thirty years Dr. Lightbill's professional attention has been exclusively devoted to the study and investigation of these important ailments, and it is with pardonable pride that he refers to the success which he has achieved in their treatment and cure. His appliances are confessedly the most perfect of anything of the kind yet devised, enabling him to rely on readily discover the exact nature of the complaint, but also to direct his applications to the diseased parts so effectual by that relief is experienced at once and permanent cures are often effected in the most stubborn and aggravated cases. And it is one of the happy features of his practice that the applications cause neither pain nor distress and can therefore be readily administered to the most nervous person.

A cordial opinion will invariably be given as to the probabilities of a cure, and no case will be accepted for treatment which does not offer a reasonable chance of success.

Dr. Lightbill takes pleasure in submitting to those interested the following letter, which speaks for itself:

FROM THE RIGHT REV. TH. F. HENDRICKEN, BISHOP OF PROVIDENCE R. I.

My dear Doctor Lightbill:

Permit me to thank you most heartily for your kindness to the Sisters of our Convent. I had no expectation when I consulted you on Sister Dominica's deafness that you could so quickly restore her back her hearing; but she tells me that she hears now even better than ever before. For this, and for your kind and successful treatment of my own deafness, I thank you.

Now I would be glad to have you refer your patients to me, for I can recommend you as a surgeon and physician, thoroughly accomplished in those departments of medicine in which you practice.

Very truly and very sincerely yours

+TH. F. HENDRICKEN,
Bishop of Providence.

Office Hours from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Sundays from 10 to 12.

Market Report.

Corrected Weekly by P. J. Daly 404 Battery street.

MONITOR OFFICE,
Sat. (Day St. Tuesday Evening, Sept. 23, 1884.

Wool—Quotations:
Fleece—Fine in selling at	1 (@1 12½
Fine medium	2 (@2 5 00
Coarse	1 (@1 50
Burry	50@50
Beef, fat, wholesale	15 (@18 00
Beef, fat, retail, Ft.	20 (@22 00
Middlings	19 (@20 21 00
Pork:
Hogs, d'ns, wholesale	6 00@7 50
Hogs, d'ns, retail, Ft.	5 00@6 00
Turkeys, U.S. wholesale	25 25
Turkeys, retail	1 50@2 00
Geese, P. pair	1 75@2 00
Ducks, P. pair	1 75@2 00
Young chickens	1 50@2 00
Old chickens	50@1 00
Hay:
Wheat	16@17
Barley	14@15
Oat	18@19
Alfalfa	15@16
Eggs:
Eggs, Oregon	25
Eggs, Ranch	25
Butter:
Butter, wholesale	19@21
Butter, retail	22@25
Butter, Fresh roll	25@30
Cheese:
Cheese, wholesale	12@13
Cheese, retail	15@16
Fruit:
Apples, P box	1 50@2 00
Apples, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Pears, P box	1 50@2 00
Pears, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Peaches, P box	1 50@2 00
Peaches, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Grapes, P box	1 50@2 00
Grapes, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Quince, P box	1 50@2 00
Quince, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Plums, P box	1 50@2 00
Plums, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Vegetables:
Potatoes, P ctl	1 00@1 25
Onions, P ctl	1 00@1 25
Beans, wholesale	3 00@3 25
Beans, retail	3 50@4 00
Cabbage, P 100 lbs	1 00@1 25
Cabbage, P doz	50@75
Celery, P doz	50@75
Cucumbers, P box	50@75
Tomatoes, P box	1 00@1 25
Tomatoes, P crate	1 00@1 25
Garlic, P lb	5@6
Garlic, P box	1 00@1 25
Garlic, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Green peas, P lb	5@6
Green peas, P box	1 00@1 25
Green peas, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Green beans, P box	1 00@1 25
Green beans, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Cucumbers, P box	1 00@1 25
Cucumbers, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Squash, P box	1 00@1 25
Squash, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Horse radish, P box	1 00@1 25
Horse radish, P bbl	3 00@4 00
Hides:
California dry, P lb	10@12
Oregon dry	12@14
Calif. salted	8@10
Oregon salted	8@10
Calif. kip	10@12
Calif. calf	15@20
Sheepskins, each, shearlings	25@50
Tallow:
Rendered	4@4½
Rough	2@2½
Wool:
Fresh Alpaca, P lb	1 00@1 50
Fresh Mexican, P lb	1 00@1 50
Fresh Lambs, P lb	1 00@1 50
Mexican Lambs	1 00@1 50
Cranberries, P barrel	6 50@7 00
Oil:
Coal	1 00@1 25
Castor	1 00@1 25
Olive	1 00@1 25
Olive, Lucca	1 00@1 25
Olive, Ex. Lucca	1 00@1 25
Olive, Ex. Lucca, Ex. Ex.

Poetry.

TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN.

What name for music can compare with thine?
Sweeter it falls of virgin purity,
Softly it breathes the full maternity
Of motherhood, love and joy to man.
Yet on us, that I every one say so
Thee in all ages, and to keep low down
Of my heart pure from hard by the dove
The moan for shame who have not kept the love.

The verse that wander round Cythera tell
A wonderous tale how fearly the rolling fame,
Fain as the hour when love first glide into a dream,
Upon earth, glorified with beauty's spell.
Mary, to whom the Highest made his home,
The empire of the goddess vanish and fell
Before thy brightness. Lo! by heaven's sign,
Man now is thine a beauty more divine.

Thrice blessed Maid, who, like a lily, wore
Upon thy brow the purity of heaven,
Which allusions of grace to thee was given,
Where virgin body, a rich casket, lore
Thy Son! Not in thee alone are we drives
By the small cords of love, to their outpouring
Thy graces upon us, humanity, your balance,
That we may worthily receive thy then.

ADVANCED THOUGHTS.

Men don't believe in the Devil now, as their fathers use to do;
They've found the door of the broadest road to Hell
Is the Devil's door, I know.
There isn't a point of hell above foot or a fury
Don't look his love
To be found on earth or in air to-day, for the Devil is dead, they say.
But who is he, do the fools ask, and what is his heart and home?
And where is the seat of such passing heart with Who blights the blooms of the land to-day with the fiery breath of hell.
If the Devil don't and never was? Won't someone do our bell!
Who shape the stage of the toiling mind and dig the pit for his foe?
Who sends the blight on the field of Time, whenever God sows his seed?
The Devil is ruled not to be too, and, of course, the thing is true;
But who is doing the kind of work the Devil
these should do?
We are told that he don't go about as a roaring
Not whom shall we hold responsible for the Devil's work we Have to do with the world, home, and State, to be, a man's remorse bound,
If the Devil, by no manner vote, is nowhere to be found.
Won't somebody step to the front forthwith,
Take the blame upon their bow, and show
How the frauds and crimes of a single day
Can be laid at his door? Why, I know
The Devil was lately voted out, and, of course,
But simple people would like to know who carries his business on?

Literary Miscellany.

After Sorrow, Joy.

BEAUTIFUL CATHOLIC STORY IN SIX CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER I.

Esther looked pale and sad as she entered the dining-room in response to the tingle of the little silver bell that summoned her tardily to an early breakfast. Her general appearance indicated loss of sleep and great mental anxiety; not lightness, but rather, for a smile and greeted the family in her accustomed way, but the forced smile and a blushing, and very soon inquired after the health of his daughter, and ended by hoping that her rest through the night had been undisturbed.

Scarcely had the words escaped his lips, than a flush exhibited itself in the face of Esther, and a low voice replied rapidly from each; her effort to suppress emotion proved a choking sensation, and she set down with her eyes resolutely fixed on the tempting food on the plate.

Mrs. Martin, who at near her, interrupted the silence by suggesting that a cup of good fresh coffee would soon obviate the trouble, and urged Esther to comply with the request, but Esther, in a sudden access of indignation, which she hoped was trivial, [illegible]

Mr. Martin loved Esther dearly, and knew that a strained much uneasiness at her apparent illness, to be had, and never was he to seek an unhappy condition, and, having made a hasty and meagre meal, hastened to the library, to ponder in his leisure hours on a remedy to his daughter, asking her permission to retire.

Meanwhile the mind of the anxious father busied itself in surmising the cause of his daughter's extraordinary behaviour, for, so deeply, indeed of all times, she was the idol of his heart, and the consider the sad step of joy upon all who had the good fortune to come in contact with her.

Esther was the child who was unusually beyond her husband to entertain Mr. William Hamilton, who had visited at an early hour, and had given no intimation through the medium of a lady, Esther's friend, Miss Hamilton, also, that only yesterday he had proposed to her hand, and was, in fact, the accepted lover of the young Miss Hamilton, perhaps, after all, some vexatious misunderstanding had arisen between her and William Hamilton.

Esther's mind was in a state of perplexity, and, after his departure, she had hoped, for after the disappointment, she had seemed herself at the place. Yesterday, she had, indeed, [illegible] the sudden change. The return was with her there or light on this subject, and only left her further in a state of sorrow and unhappiness, for reasons known to her alone.

Three long weeks passed, and Esther was [illegible] of improvement. Morning and evening drives, under the care of Mrs. Martin, in the fresh air, and a good nourishing food, and complete rest, [illegible] her pale cheeks, and the colour returned to her lips, and the doctors [illegible] the time for her to be [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of the

THE MONITOR.

PAST. ARCHBP. ORD. OF PUBLICATION

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1884.

MISSION OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

May God bless and direct through the intercession of St. Francis de Sales, patron of Catholic journalists, the Catholic press, the efficiency of Catholic journals with defined a message to explore, to reflect and blow at the full the divine truth, and to bring to the surface and present with devotion and fidelity.

Journalism in the present world is a power, and a power in the closet sense, in popularizing issues, and propagating ideas, making opinion, and influencing the world. In our view, religious journalism is not only essentially Christian, but essentially Catholic, and is accordingly in harmony with the spirit of Christ, and a part of apostolic work. Hence we hold that the Catholic press, the Catholic journalist, has its apostolic office and duties to perform, whenever it may be—where all, the Divine truth.

—Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Bonacum, Vicar Apostolic, Nebraska.

The Month of the Holy Rosary.

The beautiful Encyclical Letter of our Holy Father, together with the Pastoral Letters of the various Prelates who rule over the Ecclesiastical Province existing on this coast, has already conveyed the information to every Catholic home that the month of October has been dedicated to the Holy Rosary—one of the most potent forms of prayer known in the Church.

In these times, when the minds of the Church are great, when the open free of infidelity is being planted in every community, when even among Christians—the faithful are few and the unfaithful are many, in such a season of open revolt against God, against religion, against morality, the "Year of Christ" has called upon the Children of Mary in every clime to unite their voices and to beg of God—through the intercession of His Immaculate Mother—that peace may prevail for the Church, that the fatal epidemic which affects some Christian Nations may be stayed; and that the mission of the Sovereign Pontiff may be realized.

All Catholics who love God and His Blessed Mother will cheerfully acquiesce in this request, in the spirit of obedience to the visible Head of the Church, and for the good of their own souls.

Few Catholics among the laity have any real conception of the grandeur, the excellence and the power of the Rosary. Many Catholics think it merely a formula of prayer that has come down to us from former times when "education" was not so universally diffused as it is in this "enlightened" age. Some persons who could not read were obliged to use "the beads" in order to say their prayers. And also that we should be compelled to say it! There are Catholics in this degenerate day who are ashamed of the Rosary! Yes, actually ashamed to be seen with "the beads" in their hands, through human respect, because some non-Catholic or infidel, seated in the Church, might think they could not read!

Do such timid triflers with God's mercy know that an insult to the Mother of God is one of the most malignant among the sins more can commit? Do they realize that the Rosary was designed in heaven? Do they know that the Queen of Angels when presenting the Rosary to St. Dominic then addressed that glorious Saint:

"Know, my son," said the Blessed Virgin, "that the Angelic Salutation is the means employed by the most Holy Trinity for the regeneration of the world. This prayer is the foundation of the new alliance."

Ashamed of the Rosary! Do such insulters of the Blessed Trinity realize the awful fact that this address is the Eternal Father—for the love of Jesus? And to lose the faith means the loss of heaven! What a price to pay for that necessary to the Queen of the Most Holy Rosary!

If there is a single reader of the MONITOR who has even a shadow of feeling of shame concerning the Rosary, let him or her go at once and procure a pair of beads and on bended knee ask God to pardon the insult committed to His holy Mother; and then, by their example in using the Rosary openly in the face of a sneering world, let them make some small atonement for the social crime they committed.

In order that our readers may realize the real value of the Rosary, we ask each of them to pause slowly and carefully the following tributes given to that ministry and powerful form of prayer by even the Sons of God Himself by His Blessed Mother, by whom it was established; by the saints of God who now reign gloriously in heaven through its regular recital; by the Popes themselves, all the ages of time; through which the Church has passed; and by the learned men of all countries throughout Christendom.

Read these testimonials regarding the Rosary, and then reflect that the wonderful works performed by this form of prayer in the past, can again be accomplished if it is said in the proper spirit. Here: God who gave it to the world still lives: The Blessed Mother still reigns as Queen of Heaven! But man, degenerate man, too often loses sight of these truths and then turns away from such potent means of obtaining God's mercy because of their very simplicity.

Let no one be so debased as to scoff at the Rosary. But rather let every Catholic treasure in his heart of hearts those tributes to the powerful ancillary for gaining God's grace, and instead of being ashamed of this sweet and salutary devotion, let us rather thank the bountiful God of heaven and His holy Mother for having created us so many favors and blessings for so slight a return as simply saying the Rosary.

In these tributes to the Rosary let us recognize the voice of the past—the voice of God, and the voice of our forefathers, for the faith have done, and the same benign results will follow the repetition of the same form of prayer.

OUR LORD'S PRESENT TO THE ROSARY.

The Psalter (or Rosary) is the crown of glory I intend from the beginning of merits and from the gift of charity. My mother is crowned each time that the Rosary is said by my son. (Le Lord to Blessed Alida, St. Cecilia Alano, C. 1. 1219).

Whatever thou request ask through the Rosary, thou shalt obtain. (Our Lord to a penitent, St. Benedict Rip).

THE BLESSED VIRGIN'S TESTIMONY TO THE ROSARY.

French the Rosary, which is a beehive against the shafts of the enemy, the rampart of the Church of God, and the Book of Life. (The Blessed Virgin to St. Dominic, Fr. Cuin, Chpters 6, 10 et Chapter 1. 1. 1. 1.)

Exhort every one to be devout to my Rosary. (The Blessed Virgin to St. Alfonsus, Fr. Cuin, Chpters 1. 1. 1.)

Devotion to the Rosary is a sign of election and of predestination to glory. (The Blessed Virgin to Blessed Alida, Ed. Cit., Al. p. 2.)

I desire that my Psalmists (Rosarians) have both in life and death, light, plenitude of grace and liberty. (Ibid. p. 2. c. 15).

Those who recite my Rosary are my children, and are the brethren of Jesus Christ, my only Son. (Ibid.)

I have asked of my Son that all the members of the Confraternity of the most holy Rosary may have as their footstool, both in this world and the next, all the blessed in heaven. (Ibid. c. 15).

After the Mass, the Rosary is the devotion that is most acceptable to me. (Ex Ord. de dignitate, Pseb. c. cvii).

As long as my Rosary shall be kept up in all its vigor, the Order of Friars Preachers, so long to shall wisdom, observance, the holiness of religious, and the glory of God and man continue in that Order. (Ex Ord. lib. II, de Ill Temp.)

Persevere my daughter, in devotion to my Rosary. I will assist thee in all thy necessities, and not only thee, but all others, who shall serve me in this exercise of devotion. (The Blessed Virgin to Mary Sanchez, Fr. Fran. Ch. Mendoza, Chpter 1. 1. 1.)

Who recommends his soul to my Rosary, shall not perish. (St. Dominic, Fr. Cuin, Chpter IV, ed. Epist. Syrac).

The Rosary has been established for the glory of the Omnipotent God, and for the honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary. (Pope Sixtus IV, ed. Epist. Syrac).

The Rosary has been established against heresies which threaten the world. (Pope Leo X, ed. Epist. Sac).

The Rosary corrupts the devil. (Pope Adrian VI, ed. Cuin, Ibid.)

The devotion of the Rosary is the salvation of Christians. (Pope Clement VII, Consist. Ibid).

By the Rosary of the Dominicans has been saved the cause of God on France and Italy. (Pope Paul III, ed Mag. Gen. O. S. D.)

The Rosary is the honor of the Roman Church. (Pope Julius III, Consist. Cum Romano).

By the Rosary the destruction of heresy has been effected, and the Church of God has been restored in all its brilliancy. (S. P. V. Consist. Cum Romano).

Through the Rosary the anger of God given by our sins is mitigated, and judgments of justice is tempered. (Pope Gregory XIII. Monet Apostolicus).

The Rosary has been established in Italy, Spain, under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, for the utility of the Catholic Religion. (Pope Sixtus V, Duis Ineffabilis).

The Rosary has been established in Italy, the city of Rome and the glory of Christ. (Pope Sixtus V, Duis Ineffabilis).

The Rosary is the treasury of grace. (Pope Sixtus V, ed. Epist. Turrib).

The Rosary is the number of the faithful. (Pope Urban VIII, ed Lugat. gens).

We will go to St. Mary on the Rosary to offer our Rosaries for the victory of the Christian. (St. Pius V, Pope).

VIRTUES OF ROSARIES TO MAN'S BODY.

God, through the merits of the Rosary of His Mother, has relaxed our faults. (Our Lord to Blessed Alida, C. 1. 1. 1.)

My son, in order to guard thy kingdoms and preserve them in peace, always have the Rosary with you. (Pope Sixtus, King of Spain in Fr. Ed. Cuin).

Let us entreat the Blessed Virgin to govern through her Rosary, our Hapdoms. (Alphonsus, King of Portugal and Juan II, King of Castile, Ibid.)

My Rosary, O Blessed Dominic, has established my kingdom. I am, therefore, and return thanks to him. (Louis IX, King of France).

I venerate your holy habit. I bless your sacred beads and implore you to have a great regard for the Rosary, that they may reform my people. (Casimir the Great, King of Poland, to the Venerable Dominican).

The Rosary is the whole hope of my salvation. (John, King of Bohemia).

SALVATION AND HEALTH TO THE LIVING AND DEAD.

It is not generally, but it is true, an arma that brought us victory; it was Our Lady of the Rosary. (The Senate of Venice).

We attest under oath that the greatest portion of our beloved France has been preserved from the plague of heresy through the Rosary of St. Dominic. (The Sorbonne).

The Rosary of the Royal Order of Preachers has conferred the Kingdoms of Spain to the Catholic faith. (The Cortes of Spain).

God has delivered us from plague, famine and wars through Our Lady of the Rosary; as an act taken her be our Sovereign and Patroness. (The University of Bologna).

We pledge ourselves forever to the Virgin of the Rosary, because the world has prospered through her from the plague. (Letter of the Magistrate of the Rosary in Pavia).

Enemies have fought against us, but our Lady of the Rosary has been our victory. (Hist. spud P. M. Usary. O. P. La theologie des Saints Lonaire Dom. 1. page 157-161.

The "Monitor's" Twenty-Eighth Volume.

This week the MONITOR enters on its Twenty-eighth volume, and we are proud to say that the prosperity of the paper keeps pace with its increasing years. Our range of circulation, too, is widening each year, and with the kind assistance of good friends in every portion of the world, we hope to largely increase our circulation from another year rolls round. Our Surveyor, Postal Clerk appreciates the large number of the Catholic press, as over his own signature, as Bishop of Perugia, he thus emphasized its importance: "I regard a Catholic paper as a perpetual Mission in my Diocese." In like manner the Prelates in every portion of the world are lending their influence to build up the press that defends and propagates the faith, and the Mary Clergy are seconding their efforts to place Catholic literature among the people so they may not only preserve their faith intact from an infidel world, but also be armed with arguments and proofs for its defence against the assaults of all enemies.

In the battle which the Church is maintaining against the machinations of an evil world, the MONITOR's ambition is to be in the foremost ranks of the fray. And we are gratified to know that the Catholics of the Pacific Coast are fully in accord with us in the struggle for the supremacy of Catholic truth over non-Catholic error.

In the cause of God's Church we are united, and in that cause will we continue, and we look to all our co-religionists to help us in diffusing the light of God's truth throughout the length and breadth of not only this land, but in every country where the MONITOR is a welcome visitor at Catholic firesides.

We are not in the habit of presenting the many favorable expressions which the Hier, Clergy or our contemporaries bestow upon our labors, but in order that our readers may have a slight idea of the appreciation in which the MONITOR is held even in the tant Australia, we quote the language of a well-known priest in that distant land who sends his name to a subscriber in Oregon:

"From what I am told of his Catholic zeal, I should be glad to have the MONITOR for distribution amongst Catholics here gratis." The devoted missionary understands thoroughly the true value of a Catholic paper in his parish, although little populously entering the priest in his labors by its influence in building up the faith in the hearts of pretend Catholics, reviving the faith in the hearts of the indifferent, and opening the eyes of those beyond the pale of the Church to the dangerous pitfalls which surround religious error.

This is the mission of the MONITOR, and for the success of our labors in this holy Catholic crusade against error, we ask the prayers of all our patrons.

Can we have a Catholic Club on this Coast.

We are glad to notice that the spirit of unity is spreading among the Catholic element in the larger cities throughout the Union. A society of Catholics was recently formed in Boston which possesses some new features that are calculated to promote the social intercourse of the members and to help the work of Catholic education. Following is an outline of its objects and its special features which might be advantageously introduced into this city:

The new organization is designated "The Catholic Club in Boston," and comprises, in addition to the city members, who form the bulk of its membership, residents of Cambridge, Chelsea, Somerville, Dedham, Hyde Park, Woburn and other cities and towns. Its declaration embodies the following objects: "In the spirit of loyalty to the Roman Catholic Church, and that it for the school of "Other the moral and intellectual advancement of its members; the observance thereof of Catholic interests, and the incorporation of members that will contribute to the social welfare of the community, the Catholic Church, the State and Country, in sufficiently liberal and comprehensive manner to secure the co-operation and helpful from the vigor and earnestness the for discipline, and the Catholic Church, and the Catholic Church, most useful and most progressive organizations.

The Club will also provide for a weekly dinner at some leading hotel, and on each evening a Catholic lecture, or have present, and at means dining-tabled members of the clergy and laity, to be held in the Club rooms, after the club will be held in December, and it is intended that the Club will be formed Hon. Edward F. Dunne, LL.D., as Chief Justice of Catholic Knights of Honor.

The enrollment of the club on the subject of Catholic Knights of Honor, and Knights and are, according to the by-laws, as follows:

Sec. 1. Recognizing the value and importance of the Catholic Knights of Honor, and the benefits of this corporation traditionally approved by the Catholic Church, and the Catholic Church, and the great work, and, as an incidental, to the Catholic Knights of Honor, the Catholic Knights of Honor, in January, April, July, and October, in the city of the Catholic Religion. (Pope Sixtus V, Duis Ineffabilis).

The Rosary has been established in Italy, the city of Rome and the glory of Christ. (Pope Sixtus V, Duis Ineffabilis).

The Rosary is the treasury of grace. (Pope Sixtus V, ed. Epist. Turrib).

The Rosary is the number of the faithful. (Pope Urban VIII, ed Lugat. gens).

We will go to St. Mary on the Rosary to offer our Rosaries for the victory of the Christian. (St. Pius V, Pope).

VIRTUES OF ROSARIES TO MAN'S BODY.

God, through the merits of the Rosary of His Mother, has relaxed our faults. (Our Lord to Blessed Alida, C. 1. 1. 1.)

My son, in order to guard thy kingdoms and preserve them in peace, always have the Rosary with you. (Pope Sixtus, King of Spain in Fr. Ed. Cuin).

Let us entreat the Blessed Virgin to govern through her Rosary, our Hapdoms. (Alphonsus, King of Portugal and Juan II, King of Castile, Ibid.)

My Rosary, O Blessed Dominic, has established my kingdom. I am, therefore, and return thanks to him. (Louis IX, King of France).

I venerate your holy habit. I bless your sacred beads and implore you to have a great regard for the Rosary, that they may reform my people. (Casimir the Great, King of Poland, to the Venerable Dominican).

The Rosary is the whole hope of my salvation. (John, King of Bohemia).

SALVATION AND HEALTH TO THE LIVING AND DEAD.

It is not generally, but it is true, an arma that brought us victory; it was Our Lady of the Rosary. (The Senate of Venice).

We attest under oath that the greatest portion of our beloved France has been preserved from the plague of heresy through the Rosary of St. Dominic. (The Sorbonne).

The Rosary of the Royal Order of Preachers has conferred the Kingdoms of Spain to the Catholic faith. (The Cortes of Spain).

God has delivered us from plague, famine and wars through Our Lady of the Rosary; as an act taken her be our Sovereign and Patroness. (The University of Bologna).

We pledge ourselves forever to the Virgin of the Rosary, because the world has prospered through her from the plague. (Letter of the Magistrate of the Rosary in Pavia).

Enemies have fought against us, but our Lady of the Rosary has been our victory. (Hist. spud P. M. Usary. O. P. La theologie des Saints Lonaire Dom. 1. page 157-161.

The "Monitor's" Twenty-Eighth Volume.

This week the MONITOR enters on its Twenty-eighth volume, and we are proud to say that the prosperity of the paper keeps pace with its increasing years. Our range of circulation, too, is widening each year, and with the kind assistance of good friends in every portion of the world, we hope to largely increase our circulation from another year rolls round. Our Surveyor, Postal Clerk appreciates the large number of the Catholic press, as over his own signature, as Bishop of Perugia, he thus emphasized its importance: "I regard a Catholic paper as a perpetual Mission in my Diocese." In like manner the Prelates in every portion of the world are lending their influence to build up the press that defends and propagates the faith, and the Mary Clergy are seconding their efforts to place Catholic literature among the people so they may not only preserve their faith intact from an infidel world, but also be armed with arguments and proofs for its defence against the assaults of all enemies.

In the battle which the Church is maintaining against the machinations of an evil world, the MONITOR's ambition is to be in the foremost ranks of the fray. And we are gratified to know that the Catholics of the Pacific Coast are fully in accord with us in the struggle for the supremacy of Catholic truth over non-Catholic error.

In the cause of God's Church we are united, and in that cause will we continue, and we look to all our co-religionists to help us in diffusing the light of God's truth throughout the length and breadth of not only this land, but in every country where the MONITOR is a welcome visitor at Catholic firesides.

We are not in the habit of presenting the many favorable expressions which the Hier, Clergy or our contemporaries bestow upon our labors, but in order that our readers may have a slight idea of the appreciation in which the MONITOR is held even in the tant Australia, we quote the language of a well-known priest in that distant land who sends his name to a subscriber in Oregon:

"From what I am told of his Catholic zeal, I should be glad to have the MONITOR for distribution amongst Catholics here gratis." The devoted missionary understands thoroughly the true value of a Catholic paper in his parish, although little populously entering the priest in his labors by its

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1884.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 18.

Sunday—18th Sunday after Pentecost. Nativity of the B. V. Mary.
Monday—St. Edward the Confessor.
Tuesday—St. Pulliter, Pope and Martyr.
Wednesday—St. Teresa, Virgin.
Thursday—Mass all office of the Sacred Heart.
Friday—St. Hedwige, widow.
Saturday—St. Luke Evangelist.

OCTOBER DEVOTIONS.

In order that the readers of the MONITOR may hear at what hour—daily during the month of October—devotions will be held in the principal churches, we send postal cards asking such information from the respective pastors. Following are the returns thus far received:

CITY CHURCHES.

ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL.—Rosary, Litany and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament every evening at 7:30.

ST. IGNATIUS CHURCH.—Mass on week days 6:30, 7:45, 8, 9:30, 7:15 and 8; Masses on Sundays and Holy Days of obligation 8, 9:45, 10:30, 11:30, 8:45, 9:30, High Mass at 10:30; evening devotions and Vespers at 7:30.

ST. JOSEPH'S.—Mass, Sunday's instructions and Benediction, 10:30 and 7:30; week days 7:30, 8; evening devotions 7:30.

ST. PETER'S.—Mass at 7:30 and 8; Rosary and Benediction every evening at 7:30; Sunday's Mass at 10:30; Vespers at 7:30; evening devotions 7:30; week days 7:30, 8.

ST. PATRICK'S.—Masses at 7:30, 8, 9:30, 10:30, 7:30; Rosary and Benediction every evening at 7:30; Vespers at 7:30; week days 7:30, 8.

ST. PAUL'S (Vallejo street).—Mass at 7 and 8; Rosary, Litany and Benediction at 7:30.

ST. PRESENTATION (Convent, Powell street, Rosary, Litany and Benediction at 7:30; Mass and Holy Communion at 8; week days 7:30, 8.

ST. PETER'S (Gough street).—Rosary and Library are said after Mass in the morning, and at 7:30 on Sunday; Vespers at 7:30; Mass on week days at 7:30 and 8; evening devotions 7:30.

ST. DOMINICK.—Devotion of the Rosary, Litany and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament every evening except Saturday at 7:30; Mass at 8.

Country Churches.

SANTA ROSA.—Mass on week days at 8. Rosary and Rosary at 7:30 every evening. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN RAFAEL.—Mass on week days at 8. Rosary and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

PETALUMA.—Rosary and Litany at 7:30. Second Vespers and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN JOSE.—Rosary and Litany at 7:30. Second Vespers and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN LEANDRO.—Rosary and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

HOLLISTER.—Services every morning during October at 7 and 8.

Nevada.

CARSON CITY.—The devotions consisting of the Rosary and Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary, are held every evening at 7:30 in the Church of Holy Father, take place immediately after the Rosary.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Half past seven in the morning and half past seven in the evening are the hours in Virginia Church during the month of October.

ROSARY SUNDAY CELEBRATIONS.

Crowded Congregations and Impressive Ceremonies in the City Churches.

The love which Catholics have for the Mother of God was unanimously manifested on last Sunday, when the Rosary was recited in all the churches of the diocese, and the large congregations in the City Churches.

At St. Mary's Cathedral the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Ignatius Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Peter's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Patrick's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Paul's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Presentation Convent, Powell street, Rosary, Litany and Benediction at 7:30; Mass and Holy Communion at 8; week days 7:30, 8.

ST. PETER'S.—Rosary and Library are said after Mass in the morning, and at 7:30 on Sunday; Vespers at 7:30; Mass on week days at 7:30 and 8; evening devotions 7:30.

ST. DOMINICK.—Devotion of the Rosary, Litany and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament every evening except Saturday at 7:30; Mass at 8.

Country Churches.

SANTA ROSA.—Mass on week days at 8. Rosary and Rosary at 7:30 every evening. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN RAFAEL.—Mass on week days at 8. Rosary and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

PETALUMA.—Rosary and Litany at 7:30. Second Vespers and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN JOSE.—Rosary and Litany at 7:30. Second Vespers and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

SAN LEANDRO.—Rosary and Benediction at 7:30. Mass on week days at 8. Mass on Sundays at 8 and 10:30.

HOLLISTER.—Services every morning during October at 7 and 8.

Nevada.

CARSON CITY.—The devotions consisting of the Rosary and Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary, are held every evening at 7:30 in the Church of Holy Father, take place immediately after the Rosary.

VIRGINIA CITY.—Half past seven in the morning and half past seven in the evening are the hours in Virginia Church during the month of October.

ROSARY SUNDAY CELEBRATIONS.

Crowded Congregations and Impressive Ceremonies in the City Churches.

The love which Catholics have for the Mother of God was unanimously manifested on last Sunday, when the Rosary was recited in all the churches of the diocese, and the large congregations in the City Churches.

At St. Mary's Cathedral the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Ignatius Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Peter's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Patrick's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

At St. Paul's Church the church was literally visited by St. Dominic's Church in the morning, and in the evening the church was crowded to the doors, and the large congregation was unable to find seats.

Editorial Notes.

It is announced in one of the Eastern papers that Mgr. Capel will visit the Southern States and also the Pacific Coast during the coming winter. We predict for him a warm welcome if he comes to California, as there are thousands of people both Catholic and non-Catholic, who are anxious to hear the learned and eloquent divine.

From the Journal de Bruxelles we learn that Madame de Hesse-Wartegg, a Protestant, and wife of the Chevalier de Hesse-Wartegg, the celebrated Austrian traveller, was so impressed by the solemnity and grandeur of the recent procession in connection with the Blessed Sacrament, that she requested to be instructed in the doctrines of the Church, with a view to conversion.

—Baron de Manteuffel, Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, has promulgated a law ordering adult sons of French families in those provinces to become naturalized Germans or else quit the country. Honorable sons of French nationality are under the law allowed to remain until married, when, if they refuse to become Germans, they will be notified that their sons are liable to conscription or expulsion.

—Intelligence has been received from Berne, to the effect that the negotiations which have been going on between the delegate of the Holy See and the two representatives of the Federal Council have come to a successful conclusion. Mgr. Ferrata, on behalf of the Pope, and Mr. Appli and Peterelli for the Federal authorities, have affixed their signatures to the resolutions in embodying the proposals of the Federal Council. So far, therefore, all has proceeded prosperously.

—Rev. Mother Mary Francis Clare announces in the English Press, a new work, "A Visit to Rome and to the Principal Shrines of Italy and France," with the "Life of His Holiness Pope Pius IX." This valuable work will be published in twelve monthly parts, at 2s. 6d., each part in order to place it within the reach of all classes. Those who wish to subscribe for the work, are requested to send, as quickly as possible, to Rev. Mother Francis Clare, St. Francis Xavier's Convent, Great Germain, Lancashire, England.

—A memorial cross five feet in height has just been erected in Mount Olivet over the grave of Rev. J. B. Hecquard. It is of white marble, beautifully proportioned, on each of the two sides are inscriptions giving in compact form the age and date of death, together with the eventful priestly service of the deceased. The memorial is the work of Mr. M. C. Flannery, and has been furnished by the Bureau of Catholic Italian Missions of which Father Brouillet was so long the controlling spirit.

A non-Catholic gentleman was so well pleased with the masterly replies made to Robert Ingersoll's infidel lecture, that he called upon the modern apostle of infidelity at the Palace Hotel, prior to his departure, and presented him with a copy of Father Gleeson's reply, with a wager on the cars while journeying along. Mr. Ingersoll signified his intention of carefully perusing the documents which would entirely destroy the Christian faith, if it not for the fact that the fools are not all dead yet, and as long as he can get crowds of people at a dollar a head, he will never forsake error that pays, for the truth in which there is no money.

The forwarding of the pallium to Archbishop Ryan is anxiously awaited by the faithful of Philadelphia. It is probable that no action concerning it will be sent until the latter part of this month, when the Consistory meets. Father A. S. Sollitter, procurator of the American College in Rome, will then make a formal request for the pallium. Friends of the Archbishop are sanguine that he shall receive the pallium at the next provinces to his attendance at the Plenary Council, which begins its session in Baltimore in November. A special messenger from Rome will convey the pallium to the Archbishop.

The late Father Domenech Hilliard, who died at Miremar a few weeks ago, was distinguished naturalist, and superintended the Jesuit Observatory at Cordova, Mexico, and has a fine meteorological collection. When that ill-fated nobleman came to Mexico the First accompanied him as confessor, and clung to him to the end. When Hilliard died he was sent Father Domenech returned to Europe with various relics of his companion, among which was a Mexican, holding the post of librarian. He has left a manuscript volume of members on Maximilian's reign, which will be published subject to the Emperor of Austria's approval.

The Director of the choir in the Baltimore Cathedral, the Joseph Graf, is making great preparations for the music to be performed at the public ceremonies of the third Plenary Council to be held in that city in November. The music in vogue at Palestrina's great Mass of Pope Marcellus; Gretch's Missa Solemnis for chorus and orchestra, and Mozart's Mass in C for chorus, organ and orchestra. The famous offertory piece of the Sistine choir, O Sanctissima, has been recently published in suitable form by Father Graf, and will be rendered by the choir on the first Sunday of the Council.

—Lest the Note to the Italian movement explaining away Senor Fidel's speech should be interpreted as an abandonment on the part of Spain of the temporal rights of the Holy See, a counter demonstration has been organized in every church and parish in Spain, in the shape of a petition addressed to his Holiness. The first signatures to the address are those of the Cardinal Moreno, Archbishop of Toledo, and Primate of Spain, (who, we regret to say, has since died of apoplexy) and of the Patriarch of the Indies, together with many members of the statistocracy. The Archbishops of Santiago, Burgos, Saragossa, and Valencia have issued strong pastoral letters in support of it.

Whose Fault is It?

A correspondent in another column complains that the Catholic societies organized in this city do not endeavor to establish similar societies among Catholics in other portions of the State. But our friend forgets that it is those who are to be benefited by Catholic organizations that should move in the matter. It is a well known fact that ever since the organization of the Catholic Mutual Association, its President, Rev. J. H. McNally, has been willing at any little time, talent and money in order to establish similar societies elsewhere. But neither priest nor Catholic layman can be expected to force the societies they represent upon their co-religionists. We are free to say that if an invitation was sent to the proper officer of any Catholic society in San Francisco, to go to any given point and establish any particular Catholic society, that it would be properly answered in person.

Catholics desirous of forming branches of the Catholic Mutual Aid Association will find Father McNally of Wat Oakland, ever willing to accommodate their desires. He is designed to establish Branches of the Catholic Knights of America, address Dr. J. P. Schmitz, 1002 Market street, and he will go any reasonable distance to accommodate the Catholic brethren. The addresses of the president of all Catholic societies will be published in the MONITOR in a few weeks, and from them can be gained all the information necessary to establish similar organizations in other parts of the State. But it will not avail to sit down and growl and do nothing. God helps those who help themselves, and this season is nowhere more appropriate than in the formation of Catholic Beneficial Societies.

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

Address from the California State Convention.

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
NO. 1 ASTOR PLACE, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
OCT. 6, 1884.

Fellow Countrymen of Old Ireland, Citizens and Members of the Irish National Leagues.—Your Catholic and patriotic convention for the Pacific Coast, represents a wealthy province to the great Pacific Ocean, and comprises the Catholic Bishops of the Pacific Coast, and the Catholic Clergy. The platform of principles of the Irish National Leagues of America, was unanimously ratified by the latter. The same splendid unanimity was manifested in sentiment and feeling, and the unfailing enthusiasm devotion to the Holy Cause of Ireland. Of all the provinces represented, perhaps none made more work, or more generous sacrifices than the Pacific Coast. Its Catholic population is comparatively small, but its Catholic Clergy and its laity are of the Irish race, and the Irish Catholic Clergy and people are the most generous and devoted to the cause of Ireland

Farm and Home.

MY BABY AND I.

Byoty, byoty-bye!
Lie baby,
Mery as may be,
Singing and sailing at one
While you're been sleeping
In sleep beauty,
I have been happy
Watch, beside bed of my pretty
Lie baby,
Lie baby, lie baby,
Quietly reading, or silently seeing,
In sleep, while outside the bright sun has been glowing,
Come from your nest, dear!
Leave it all alone—
Come to my breast, dear!
Cuddy rest down
In loving delight!

Byoty, byoty, byoty-bye!
I love baby, and baby loves me
Byoty, byoty, byoty-bye!
We are so happy—and God knows why!

Happy! Happy-happy!
Happy baby,
Mere pure life's way be
Bright as a life-pale can be;
And when I'm sleeping
In breathless security
Lie baby, lie baby,
Rich harvest of golden grain ripened is pretty!

Sweet! as I fold you
And tenderly hold you
Close to the heart that with love's glowing,
My cup of happy pleasure is filled to overflowing!
Dear! you have heard of love
All the poets have
Sing, their little lives of love
Sit, whenever they may
Byoty, byoty, byoty-bye!
Lie baby, lie baby, go to sleep!
Then, with a whispery, byoty-by!
We'll sing together, my baby and I!

What Die Lewis Says.

Dr. Die Lewis says in the Golden Age: "At all seasons of the year I think woolen the best dress; woolen inside and outside; woolen altogether. It is a simple fact that, compared with other textile materials used in dress, it is a bad conductor of heat, and so gives a more equable temperature of the body, which is the great object of dress. The superiority of flannel to a baby's dress is much greater in hot than in cold weather. A baby is very comfortable in the warmest days with a single thickness of this, soft flannel, while, in wearing linen or cotton, the garment next the skin is soon damp, and outside of it there must be two or three more thicknesses, if it is to serve to furnish the proper protection against a breeze, which a single thickness of flannel will afford. Give the little one flannel clothes for the coldest of the year. Besides the considerations named, woolen serves, by its mechanical irritation, to keep up a better circulation of the skin."

Burning of Barns.

It is noticeable that a larger number of the burnings of barns is mentioned by the periodical press in the summer than at any other time. Some of the fires are undoubtedly caused by lightning, the moist vapor from the ground by day making a favorable conductor for the electric fluid. But there are barn fires which cannot be attributed to lightning, to lighting of matches, to light tobacco, or to the carelessness of careless tramps. It may be that the quotes, most mischievous of boy's toy, the popular and dangerous firing of cotton waste. A fibrous material, when moist, and compressed, and protected from the cooling influence of the outward air, is subjected to a heating similar to that of fermentation and in some instances the degree of heat is sufficient to cause actual, visible combustion. The amount of recently "tossed" hay this danger is as great as, in similar circumstances, other materials may be. Frequently the grass is cut in the early morning, while it is with dew; is turned twice during the day, and gathered and packed in the "mow" or the "hay" before nightfall, with perhaps a sparse sprinkling of salt. Such a compressed mass, under favorable circumstances, either materials may be. Frequently the grass is cut in the early morning, while it is with dew; is turned twice during the day, and gathered and packed in the "mow" or the "hay" before nightfall, with perhaps a sparse sprinkling of salt. Such a compressed mass, under favorable circumstances, other

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

Parnell's Vindication.

It is reported by cable that on the opening of the extra parliamentary session at London next month, Mr. Parnell will demand of the Gladstone government a full and public inquiry into the Maamtrasna affair; the result of Lord Spencer and Mr. Trevelyan from Ireland; and upon the inquiry, if it should not be conducted in an impartial manner, he will demand a vote of censure against Mr. Parnell, the Gladstone ministry. If it is granted then Mr. Parnell and his fellows are will oppose every government measure.

A Constitutional Question.

The Pesty London cable says: "The Daily, author of the well known book "Years Ireland," which witnessed a good deal of attention in America four years ago, has written a long article for the Pall Mall Gazette, in which, although himself a No-four Liberal, he protests against the Gladstone's determination, saying that it would be an invasion of the Constitution to dissolve Parliament because the House of Lords disagree with the House of Commons. Daily Telegraph's leader thinks that there is really a constitutional question in all which as the present time is based upon other ground. The interest in this line in the Pall Mall Gazette's answer that a dissolution would be an acceptable solution seems to not for the fact that an election would give Parnell and his party the power to dictate to Gladstone. This fear is vastly the worst of all the English feeling against the outline of the proposed bill. The most one day comes to the Commons, the Irish members are sure to force a debate on the Land question, and the Gladstone ministry will be left to fall it is worth. They are playing a relentless game and have no quarter for the ordinary courtesies of political strife.

Dublin Streets to be Renamed.

DUBLIN, Oct. 4.—At a meeting of the Corporation of Dublin to-day, discussion was renewed on the proposal to substitute Irish names for those of the present English and foreign names of streets in the city. The Liberal and Home Rule members of the corporation opposed the proposition in the most violent manner possible. A majority of the board being Nationalists, eliminated passed the resolution requiring the committee to prepare a plan for renaming the streets.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Armagh.—On Sept. 12th, an old man, named John McDonald, after partaking of his dinner, was laid down to rest on a bed in the Holy Family Reading Rooms, in Lurgan. He had scarcely ever forty years when he was seen to fall lifeless on the ground. His was carried home in his own residence, and was subsequently interred in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, which was opened for the burial of the dead. He was 77 years old, and had been 55 years in the employment of Lord Malmesbury, J. P. D. L., from whom he had a pension for the last two months.

The remains of Richard Coulan, who is at present in Kilmainham Jail, on the charge of being, recently received Christian burial, on Sept. 19th, at Ballymacnab, Armagh, the funeral being by the Rev. Mr. McNulty, C.C., Armagh. The coffin was followed by a large number of people, who had come from Armagh, in order to show the respect in which he was held by the people.

Cork.—Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P., will deliver the lecture to be conferred by the Parnell Society. Mr. Barton, M. P., has also promised to deliver a lecture in Cork, but it is not generally known that Mr. Barton, the gentleman who is to be the Parnell candidate for Cork, is the nephew of the late Sir John Barton, the author of Downpatrick, and he has many relations in the city of Cork.

It is understood that Mr. Wm. O'Brien, M. P., will be the Parnell candidate for Mallow, Cork, Clare in October, and the second or third Sunday in that month it is likely to be fixed for the day for the meeting, which it is already anticipated will be attended by thousands.

During his recent visit to Millstreet, as the Wheat was pushing the boxes of an evening on which were posted the several cartoons of Parnell, Dillon and other leaders, Mr. Parnell in Fawn, exclaimed shows were asked for Parnell, for which the Lord Lieutenant has proclaimed band. After luncheon he proceeded to inspect the Tenantry of Mr. Mahony, M. P., and it is remarked that the importance noticed the address, in the reply to which he spoke of the best payments on the following day, when they paid Lieutenant of Ireland; but it need not be told that the journey of the Parnell, and the cheers and address of home.

Clare.—Mr. Patrick McMahon, paid nominee in the Kilfenny Female National School, Ennis, on the occasion of the commencement of the present examination of pupils, and in the course of the proceedings, he said that the class of teachers, and especially of the low security, had been awarded to Miss M. Parnell, the second to Miss Mary Ryan, and the third to Miss Mary Ryan, and the fourth to Miss Mary Ryan, and the fifth to Miss Mary Ryan, and the sixth to Miss Mary Ryan, and the seventh to Miss Mary Ryan, and the eighth to Miss Mary Ryan, and the ninth to Miss Mary Ryan, and the tenth to Miss Mary Ryan.

Dublin.—In the Bankruptcy Court, on Saturday last, an order was made for Mr. John Miller, granting leave to the assignee of his estate Jane Carty to apply to the Lord Lieutenant for a sum of £50, advanced in the London case, to be paid to the creditors.

A sum of £50 has been taken by the Nationalists to pay the Parnell candidate, Mr. Barton, in the view of a general election, that Mr. Moore, Mr. Healy, and Mr. Sexton, will be the candidates for Monaghan, has been taken specially, in the metropolis, for the purpose of the National Party. Mr. Healy is one of the most popular men in the city.

It is stated that the latest arrest of Jane Ellen Francis's manuscript has been found to be correct fond.

On the 12th, the funeral observation of the Rev. Michael Berry, P. P., took place. The funeral was the largest and most imposing ever witnessed with the Church of St. Andrew, Dublin, and the cortege was formed of the clergy, which had been joined by a great number of people, who had come from the country to attend the funeral. The deceased was a native of Tipperary, and had been ordained in Dublin. He was a man of great popularity among the people, and was a great friend of the Parnell Fund and Land Leagues, and did much to the cause of the Land Leagues. It is reported that the parishes of Carlingford and Walsh, will shortly and Mr. Michael Berry, P. P., will be in making the collection worthy of the people's gratitude.

Meath.—The magnificent church recently finished in Castlerahan was dedicated to Divine worship, on Sept. 7th, by the Most Rev. Dr. Nulty.

Mayo.—Rev. Neal Devine, P. P., Claudy, Derry, died recently under circumstances of a peculiar character. Rev. Neal Devine, P. P., Claudy, Derry, died recently under circumstances of a peculiar character. The deceased was a native of Mayo, and was ordained in Dublin. He was a man of great popularity among the people, and was a great friend of the Parnell Fund and Land Leagues, and did much to the cause of the Land Leagues. It is reported that the parishes of Carlingford and Walsh, will shortly and Mr. Michael Berry, P. P., will be in making the collection worthy of the people's gratitude.

Meath.—The magnificent church recently finished in Castlerahan was dedicated to Divine worship, on Sept. 7th, by the Most Rev. Dr. Nulty.

Mayo.—

PRECISION TRADE MARK MICROSTAT REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. MICROFILM ROLL NO.
12"

PRECISION TRADE MARK MICROSTAT REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. MICROFILM ROLL NO.
12"